And the redde sea diddest thou drye in sunder befoze them, so that they wente thzough the middes of the sea by ffood: and their persecuters thzeuelt thou into the deepe (as a stone) in the mighty waters: and leddest them on the daye time in a cloudy pillar, and on the night season in a pillar of fyze, to shewe them light in the way that they wente. Thou cammest downe also vppon mount Sinai, and spakest vnto them from heauen, and gauest them right iudgements, true lawes, good commaundementes and statutes, & declaredst vnto them thy holpe Saboth, and commaundedst them preceptes, ordinaunces and lawes, by the hand of Moses thy seruant, and gauest them breade from heauen when they were hungry, & broughtest forth water for them out of the rock when they were thirlyste: and promisedst the, that they shoulde go in and take possession of the lande: ouer which thou haddest lift vp thine hande for to geue them. But they and our fathers were proud and hardnecked: so that they followed not the commaundements: and would not obeie, neither were myndfull of the wonders that thou diddest for them: but became obstinate and heide, in so much that they turned backe to their bondage for their disobedience. And thou my God forganest, and was gracious, mercifull, patient, and of great goodnesse, and forsokest them not. And though they made a monition calle (and said: This is thy Gods

Ex. 16. d. that broughte thee out of the lande of Egypt) and did great blasphemies, yet forsookest thou them not in the wilderness, accordinge to thy greatesse mercy. And the cloudy pillar departed not from them on the daye time to leade them the waye, neyther the pillar of fyze in the night season, to shewe them lighte in the waye that they wente. And thou gauest them thy good spirite, to informe them, and withheldst not thy Hanna from their mouthes, and gauest them water when they were thirlyste. For the yeres longe madest thou provision for them in the wilderness, so that they lacked nothinge, their cloathes waxed not olde, and theyr fete swelled not. And thou gauest them kingedomes and nations, and partedste them accordinge to their portions: so that they possessed the lande of Schon kinge of Hesebon, and the lande of Og, the kinge of Basan. And their childezenne multipliedst thou as the starrs of heauen, and broughtest them into the lande wherof thou hadst spoken vnto their fathers, that they shoulde goe into it, and haue it in possession. And the childezenne wente in, and possessed the lande, and thou subduedst befoze them the inhabitants of the lande, even the Cananites, and gauest them into their hande, with their Kinges and the people of the lande, that they mighte doo with them what they woulde. And they wanne theyr stronge Cities, and a fatte lande, and tooke possession of houses that were full of all manner of gooddes, welles digged oute, vineyardes, oilegardens, and many fruitfull trees, and they did eate, and were filled, and became fat: and lined in wealth thzoughe thy greatesse goodnesse. Furthermore they were disobediente, and rebelled against thee, and caste thy lawe behinde their backes, and slew thy prophets (which exhorted them earnestly, that they might bring them agayne vnto thee) and did great blasphemies.

Exo. 3. d. 2. u. Ther=

Therefore thou gaueſt them ouer into the hande of their enemies, that vexed them. And in the tyme of their trouble when they cryed vnto thee, thou hearest them from heauen: and through the thy great mercy thou gaueſt them ſauours, which helped them out of the hand of their enemies. But when they came to rest they turned backe againe, to do euill beſore thee: therefore leſteſt thou them in the hande of their enemies, ſo that they had the dominion ouer them. And when they conuerted and cryed vnto thee, thou hearest the from heauen, and manye tymes haſte thou deliuered them according to thy great mercy, and teſtifiedſt vnto them that thou mighteſt bringe theym againe vnto thy lawe. Therefore gaueſt thou them into the hande of the nations in the landes. And for thy great mercyes ſake, thou haſte not vterly conſumed them, neither ſoſaken them: for thou art a gracious and mercyfull God. • Nowe therefore oure God, thou great God, mightye and terrible, thou that keepeſt couenant and mercy, regard not a little all the trauaple that hath happened vnto vs and oure kinges, oure princes, our prieſtes, our Prophetes, and oure fathers, and all the people, ſence the tyme of the kinges of Aſſur, vnto this day. they, kingedome, and in thy great goodnes that thou gaueſt them, and in the large and plenteous lande which thou gaueſt beſore theym, and haue not conuerted fro their wicked workings. Beholde, we are in bondage this daye: and ſo is the lande that thou gaueſt vnto oure fathers to enioye the fruites and goodnes thereof: beholde, there are we bondemen. And great is the increaſe of it vnto the kinges, whom thou haſte ſet ouer vs, becauſe of our ſinnes, and they haue dominion ouer our bodies and catell (euen as they will them ſelues) and we are in great trouble. And in all this make we a ſure conenaut and wyte it, and oure Princes, Leuites, and Prieſtes, ſeale vnto it.

The .x. Chapter.

The ſcalers were: Nehemiah, (that is) Hathirſatha, the ſon of Hathaliah, and Zedekia, Sarai, Aſariah and Jeremie, Phathur, Amaria, Malchia, Hatus, Serebania, Malluc, Harim, Merimoth, and Obadia, Daniell, Zenthon, and Baruch, Meſulam, Abia, and Mianim, Maſia, Belgai, and Semeia, theſe were Prieſtes. The Leuites were: Jeſua, the ſonne of Azania, Weni amonge the children of Henadab, and Cadmiell. And their brethren: Serchania, Hodia, Celita, Pelcia Haman, Michah, Rehob, and Halebah, Sachur, Serebia, Sabania, Rodia, Sani, and Beninu. The heades of the people were Phares the captayne of Moab, Elam, Zathu, Benoni, Boni, Aſgad, Webat, Adania, Be-goat, Adin, Ater, Hezekia, Aſur, Rodia, Maſum, Beſai, Harip, Anathoth, and Nebai, Magphias, Meſulam, Meſur, Meſelabell, Zadoc, Jaddua, Phalaria, Hanan, Anai, Holi, Serebania, Maſub, Maloth, Malcha, Sobek, Rehun, Aſebna, Maſia, Abia, Haana and Anan, Malluth, Harim, and Baana. And the other people, the prieſtes, Leuites, porters, ſingers, ſcrutinings: & all they that had ſeparate them selues from the people in the landes vnto the lawe of God, with their wiues, their sonnes, and their daughters, and as many as could vnderstand, and their lordes that had rule of them, receaued it for their brethren. And they came to sweare, and to bind them selues with an othe to walke in Goddes lawe, whiche was geuen by Moyses the seruante of God, and that they woulde obserue and do according vnto all the commandementes, iudgementes, and statutes of the Lord our God: and that we wolde not geue our daughters vnto the people of the lande, neyther to take their daughters for our sonnes. And yf the people of the lande brought ware on the Sabbath, and all manner of viayles to sell, that we would not take it of them on the Sabbath, and on the holpe dayes, and that we would let the senenth yere be free, concerninge all maner of charge. And wee caste the lotte among the priestes, Levites, and the people for the offeringe of the woode to be brought vnto the house of our God, from yere to yere, after the houses of our fathers, that it might be yente at times appoynted, vpon the sulter of the Lord our God, as it is written in the lawe: and to bringe the firstlinges of our land, and the firstlinges of our frutes of all trees, yere by yere vnto the house of the Lord: and the firstlinges of our sonnes and of our cattell, as it is written in the lawe: and the firstlinges of our oxen and of our sheepe, whiche we shoulde bringe to the house of our God, vnto the priestes that minister in the house of our God: and that we shoulde bringe the firstlinges of oure doughe, and oure heauie offeringes, and the frutes of all maner of trees, of wine also & of oyle, vnto the Priestes, to the chertres of the house of our God. And the tythes of our lande vnto the Levites, that the Levites, myght haue the tithes in all the cyties of oure ministration. And the priestes the sonne of Aaron shal with the Levities haue also of the tythes of the Levites: so that the Levites shal bring vpon the tythes of their tythes vnto the house of our God, to the store houses, and to the treasure houses. For the children of Israel and the children of Levi, shal bring vpon the burnt-offerynges of the corne, wyne, and oyle, vnto the store houses, there as are the vessels of the sanctuary, and the priestes that minister, and the porters and singers, that we forsake not the house of oure God.

The. xi. Chapter.

And the Rulers of the people dwelt at Ierusalem. The other people also caste lottes, that amonge ten, one parte shoulde goo to Ierusalem into the holy citie to dwell and nyne parts to be in the cyties. And the people thanked the men, that were willyng to dwell at Ierusalem. These are the heades of the lande, that dwelte in Ierusalem, and in the cyties of Iuda, every one in his possession, and in theyr cyties: they of Israel, the priestes, Levites, the Rechabims, & the children of Salomons seruantes. And at Ierusalem dwelt certayne of the children of Iuda, and of Ben Jamin. Of the childrenne of Iuda: Athahiah, the sonne of Asa, the sonne of Zachary, the sonne of Amaria, the sonne of Shaphria: the sonne of Mahalaicel, of the children of Phares. And Maasia, the sonne of Baruch, the sonne of Chal, Hosi, the son of Hosaia, the sonne of Iudai, the sonne of Ioiarib, the sonne of zachary, the sonne Hiloni. All these were the children of Phares that dwelt at Ierusalem, euen foure hundred, thre score and eyght valiant men. These

These are the children of Ben Jamin: Salu the sonne of Mesullam, the sonne of Joed; the sonne of Bedaia, the sonne of Calata, the son of Masia; the sonne of Jehiell, the sonne of Isai, and after him Gabai, Seia, nine hundred and eight and twenty. And Joel the sonne of Zichri had the oversight of them: and Juda the sonne of Senua was next ouer the citie. • Of the Priestes: Jedatiah the sonne of Joiarib, Jachin Saratah the sonne of Melkia, the son of Mesullam, the sonne of Zadoc, the sonne of Meraioth, the sonne of Ahitob, was prince in the house of God: and his brethren, that performed the worke in the temple, epghte hundred and two and twenty. And Maia the sonne of Jeroram, the sonne of Palatuel, the sonne of Amzi, the sonne of Zachari, the sonne of Palthur, the sonne of Alchya, and his brethren, these amonge the fathers, two hundred and two and forty. And Anasai the sonne of Arael, the sonne of Ahafu, the son of Moselemoth, the sonne of Immer, and his brethren, were ballant men, an hundred and epghte and twentie. And their ouerscar was zabbetell a son of one of the great men. • Of the Levites, Semeia the sonne of Hasib, the sonne of Halerikam, the sonne of Hasabat, the sonne of Bunni, and Sabathai, and Josabad of the chiefe of the Levites, had the oversight of the outward businesse of the house of God. And Hatharia, the sonne of Micha, the sonne of zabdi, the sonne of Asaph was the principall to begin the thanksgewinge and prayer. And Bakbukia the seconde amonge his brethren, and Abda the sonne of Samua, the sonne of Galail, the sonne of Jeduthan. All the Levites in the holy city wer two hundred, foure score & foure. • And the porters Acub and Calmon, and their brethren that kept the portes, wer an hundred, and two and seuentye. As for the residue of Israhell, the priestes and Levites, they were in all the cities of Juda, euerye one in his inheritance. And the Bethinians dwelt in Opheth and Ziba and Gilpa, were set ouer the Bethinians. The ouerscar of the Levites at Jerusalem, was Asu, the sonne of Baani, the sonne of Malabia, the sonne of Mithanania, the sonne of Mitha. Of the children of Asaph there were singers about the busines in the house of God, for it was the kinges commandment concerning them, that the singers shoulde deale saythfullie euerye daye as was accordyng. And Bethania the sonne of Mesebabel of the children of Zerab, the sonne of Juda, next the kinge in all matters concerning the people, and their villages, and landes. And some of the children of Juda, that were without in the towynes of their lande dwelt at Bariath Irie, and in the villages thereof, at Didan, and in the villages thereof, and at Jerabzeell, and in the villages thereof, at Ietua, Moladath, Bethphalei in the Towne of Suall, Berriba and in their villages, at Sikeleg, and Meconath, & their villages. And at Eremmon, Sarah, Jerimuth, zonoa, Odoilam, and in their villages, at Achis, and in the fieldes thereof, at Zich, and in the villages thereof: and they worke from Bersabe vnto the valley of Hinnon. The children also of Ben Jamin, of Ieba, dwelte at Machmas, Bia, Bethell, and in their villages. And at Anathoth, Nab, Anath, Hazor, Ramah, Gethaim, Hadid, Zebaim, Manalath, Rod, and Ono, the carpenters valley. And the Levites had possession both in Juda, and in Ben Jamin.

The .xii. Chapter.

These are the Priestes and Levites, that went vp with Zorobabell the sonne of Salathiel, and with Iesua, Sararia, Jeremi, and Elzas, Amaria, Malach, Netan, Sichania, Rehum, Meremoth, Iddo, Genthoi, Abia, Meamin, Maris, Belga, Semeia, and Joiarib, Jadau, Salu, Amob, Melkia, & Jadau.  Bactubia and Hymni, and their brethren were aboute them in the watches. Iesua begate Ioachim, Ioachim also begate Eliasib, and Eliasib begat Joiada, Joiada begat Jonathan, and Jonathan begat Iadua. In the dayes of Ioachim were these the chief fathers amonge the priestes: vnder Saraisa, Maraisa, vnder Ieremie, Hanania: vnder Esdras, Mesullam: vnder Ama-ria, Jehonnan: vnder Hilico, Jonathan: vnder Sebania, Ioseph: vnder Harim, Adna: vnder Maraioth, Melvnder Miniamin and Moadaia Hil-meia, Jehonathan, vnder Joiarib, Werthemia, vnder Iadada, Alsi, vnder Belai, Riat, vnder Amos, Cher, vnder Belkai, Hasabia, vnder Iaiada, Mathanai. And in the time of Eliasib, Joiada, Iohanan and Iadua wer the chiefe fathers amonge the Leuites and the priestes, witten vnder the rynges of Darius the Persian. The children of Leui, the principall fathers were witten in the Chronicles, vntill the time of Jonathan the sonne of Eliasib. And these were the chiefe amonge the Leuites, Hasabia, Serobia, and Iesua the son of Cad-meiel, and they brethren in their presence, to geue prayse and thanckes, ac-cordinge as Dauid the man of God had ordened it, one watch ouer against another, Mathania, Balbubia, Oba-dia, Mesullam, Calimon, and Akub, wer porters in the watch at the thyr-sholdes of the gates. These were in the dayes of Ioachim the sonne of Iesua, the sonne of Iosedec, and in the dayes of Nehemia the captayne, and of the Priest Esdras the scribe. And in the dedication of the wall at Jerusalem, they sought the Leuites out of all their places, that they mighte bee brought to Ierusalem, to kepe the dedication and gladnesse, with thankes-giving, and singing with tymbals, flatteries, and harpes. And the children of the singers gathered them selues together from euery side out of the playne country about Ierusalem, and from the villages of Bethphathi from the house of Elgal, & out of the countreys of Geba, and Ismauth: for the singers had builded them villages rounde about Ierusalem. And the Priestes and Leuites were purified, and censed the people, and the gates, and the wall. And I broughte the princes of Iuda vpon the wall, and appoynted two great queres of men to geue thanckes, whiche wente on the righte hande of the wall toward the Dongegate, and after them went Hasaia, and halfe of the princes of Iuda, and Asaria, Esdras, and Me-sullam, Iuda, Ben Iamin, Hemia, Ieremie, and certayne of the priests children with trompettes: name-lye zachari the son of Jonathan, the sonne of Hemia, the son of Mathania, the sonne of Machaia, the sonne of Saur, the sonne of Asaph, and his brethren, Hemeia, Asarai, Melchis, Gilalai, Maat, Nathanacil, and Iu-da, and Hanani, with the muscral instruments of Dauid the man of god.

 And Esdras the scribe went befoze them, and belyde the well gate, they went vpon the wall agaynst them vpon the keys of the citie of Dauid: at the going vpon the wall beyonde the house of Dauid, vnto the water gate Eastward. The other quere of them that gaue thanckes went ouer agaynst the, and I after them, and the half part of the people vpon the wal, beyonde the soznacegate, vntill the brode wall, and beyond the port of Ephzaim, & beyond the olde gate, beyond the silbe gate, and the tower of Hanancil, and the tower of Mea, vntill the sheepegate.
 And they stode stil in the pylon gate: and so stode the two queres (of them that gaue thanckes) in the house of God: and I, and the half of the rulers with mee, and the Priestes, name-lye Eliakim, Maasia, Miniamin, Mi-chata, Elioenai, zachari and Hanania, with

With trumpets: and Maasia, Semi-ah, Eliazar, Ussi, Jehohanan, Mel-chiah, Elam and Ser. And the singers sange loude, hauinge Ieshiah, for their overscar. And the same daye, they offered great sacrifices, and re-ioyled: for God had geuen them great gladnesse, so that both the wities and childzen were ioyfull, and the mirth of Ierusalem was hearde farre of. At the same time were their men appoy-ned ouer the tresure houses (wherein were the heaucofferinges, the firstelings and the tithes) that they should gather them out of the fieldes aboute the cities: to distribute them vnto the Priestes and Leuites accordinge to the lawe: for Iuda was gladde of the Priestes and Leuites, and they stood and wayped vpon the office of their God, whiche is a pure office. And the singers and porters stode after the commandemente of Dauid, and of Salomon his sonne: . for in the time of Dauid and Asaph were the chiefe singers founded, and the Songes of praise and thankesgeuing vnto God.
In the time of Iozobabel and Nehemias, did all they of Israel geue portions vnto the singers and porters, eue-ry daye his portion, and they gaue tithes vnto the Leuites, and the Leui-tes gaue tithes againe vnto the children of Aaron.

The .xiiij. Chapter.

And that daye did they reade in the booke of Moyles, and the people hearkened therto, and there was founde writen, that the Ammonites and Moabites shoulde neuer come into the congregation of God, because they mette not the children of Israel with bread and water, . but hyred Balaam against them that he shoulde curse them, and oure God turned the curse into a blessing.
Nowe when they heard the lawe, it fortuned, that they separated fro Israel euery one that had mixte him self therein. And before this had the Priest Eliashb the oversight of the treasure of the house of oure God, & he was kinne vnto Tobia: & he had made him a great chaber: & there had they a soze time layed the offeringes, frane-hencence, vessel, and the tithes of corn, wine, and Oyle (accordinge to the commandemente geuen to the Le-uites, singers, and Porters,) and the heaucofferings of the Priestes. But in all this time was not I at Ieru-salem: for in the two and thirtie yeres of Artaxerxes king of Babylon cam I vnto the kinge, and after certayne dayes obtayned I licence of the kinge to come to Ierusalem. And I gaue knowledge of the euill that Eliashb did vnto Tobia, in that he had made him a chawmber in the court of the house of God, and it greened me soze, and I cast forth all the vessels of the house of Tobia out of the chambze, & commanded them to cleanse the chambers. And thither broughte I agayne the vessels of the house of God, with the meate offering and the incense.

And I perceyued that the portions of the Leuites were not geuen them, and that euery one fled to his lande, euen the Leuites and singers that executed the woorkes. Then reioyced I the rulers, and saide: why is the house of God forsaken? And I gathered the together, and set them in their place.
Then brought all Iuda the tithes of corne, and wine and oyle vnto the tresure. And I made treasurers ouer the treasure: euen Helemiah the Priest, and Zadoc the scribe, and of the Leui-tes, Iahobania, and vnder their hande was Hanan the sonne of Zacar, the sonne of Mathania: for they were counted saythfull, and their Office was to distribute the portions vnto their brethren. . I thinke vpon me, .
O my G O D herein, and wipe not oute my mercye that I haue shewed on the house of my God, and on the officers thereof. And the same time saue I some treadinge wine pressed on the Sabbathes, and bringinge in sheues, and asses laden with wine, grapes, figges, and bringinge al maner of burthens vnto Ierusalem, vpon the Sabboth day. And I rebuked theym earnestly the same day that they solde the viaples. There dwelte manne of Tyre also therein, whiche broughte fish and all maner of ware, and solde on the Sabbath vnto the children of Iuda in Ierusalem. Then reprovod I the rulers in Iuda, and sayde vnto theym: What euill thinge is this, that ye doo, and breake the Sabbath daye? Didde not your fathers euen thus, and our G O D broughte all this plague vpon vs, and vpon this Citie? And ye make the wrath more yet vpon Irael, in that ye breake the Sabbath. And it fortuned, that whenne the portes of Ierusalem begonne to be darke in the evening, beside the Sabbath, I commaunded to shut the gates, and charged that they shoulde not bee opened till after the Sabbath: and some of my seruantes sette I at the gates, that there should no burthen bee brought in on the Sabbath day. Then remayned the chappenne and merchautes once or twise ouer night withoute Ierusalem, with all manner of wares. Then reprovod I theym sove, and sayde vnto theym: Why tarpe ye all night aboute the wall? If ye doo it once agayne, I will laye handes vpon you. From that time forth came they no moze on the Sabbath. I sayde vnto the Levites, that they shoulde cleanse theym selues, and that they shoulde come and keepe the gates, to hallowe the Sabbath daye. Thinke vpon me (O my G O D) concerninge this also, and spare me, according to thy greates merite. And at the same time sawe I Jewes that married wiues of Asdod, of Ammon, and of Moab: and the children spake halfe in the Speech of Asdod, and coulde not speake in the Jewes language, but by the tongue myghte a man perceyue euery people. Then I reprovod them, and curled theym, and smote certayne men of them, and made theym bare, and tooke an othe of theym by G O D: Ye shall not geue youre daughters vnto their sonnes: Neyther shall pee take theys daughters vnto youre sonnes, or for your selues. Did not Salomon the king of Irael sinne for such? And yet among many heathen was there no kinge like him, whiche was deare vnto his God: and God made him kinge ouer all Irael: and yet neuerthelesse outlandishe womenne caused him to sinne. Shall we then obey vnto you, to doo all this greates euill, and to transgresse agaynst oure G O D, and many straunge wiues? And one of the children of Jehoiada, the soonne of Eliaf the high priest, hadde made a contracte with Sana-balat, the Mozonite: But I chased him from me. (O my God) thinke thou vpon theym that desyle the Priesthoode, and the covenannt of the Priesthoode, and of the Levites. Thus cleansed I them from all such as were outlandish, and appoynted the courses of the Priestess & Levites euery one in his office, & to offer the wood at times, appoynted, and the first frutes. Thinke thou vpon me O my

for the best

The first Chapter.

A fortunèd, in the dayes of Ahasuerus, which reigned from India vnto Ethiopia (ouer an hundred and .xxvij. landes) euen in those dayes when the king Ahasuerus sat on his seate royall, which was in Susan the chiefe Citie, in the thirde yere of his reygne, he made a feast vnto all his princes and seruantes. And the mightie men of Persia and Media, the captains also and rulers of his countreys were before him, and he shewed the richesse and gloype of his kingdome, and the glorious worship of his great tricke many dayes longe: euen an hundred and foure score dayes. And when these dayes were expired, the Kinge made a feast vnto all the people that were in Susan the chiefe Citie, both vnto great and small, seuen days long in the court of the garden by the kings palace: where there hanged white greene and yelow cloathes, fastened with cordes of fine silke, and purple in siluer ringes, vpon pillars of marble stones. The benches also were of golde and siluer, made vpon a pavement of greene, white, yelow & blacke marble. And they dranke in vessels of gold, and changed vessel after vessell. And the kings wine was muche according to the power of the kinge.
And the drink was so appointed that none shoulde compell any man: for so the king had commaunded by the officers of his house, that euery one shuld doe as it liked him. And the Queene Vashti made a feast also for the women in the palace of Ahasuerus. And on the seuenth daye when the kinge was mery after the wine, he commaunded Nehuman, Biztha, Harbona, Bigtha, Abagthan, Zethar, and Carchas, the seuen chamberlains that did seruice in the presence of king Ahasuerus, to fetch the queene Vashti with the crowne regall into the kinges presence, that he might shewe the people and princes her faynfull, for she was beautifull. But the Queene Vashti would not come at the kinges wooordes by his chamberlaynes. Then was the king very wroth, and his indignation kindled in him. And the kinge spake to the wise men that had vnderstandinge in the ordinaunces of the land: for the kinges matters muste be handled before all suche as haue knowledge of the lawe & iudgement.

And (the chiefe and) nexte vnto him wer Carshena, Sethar, Admata, Ther-sis, Mares, Marfena, & Memucan, the seuen princes of Persia and Media, which sawe the kinges face, and sat aboute in the kingdome. What lawe (sayth the kinge) shoulde be created vpon the Queene Vashti, because she did not according to the wooordes of the king Ahasuerus, which her commaunded by his chamberlaynes? And Memucan answered before the kinge and the princes: The queene Vashti hath not onely done euill against the king, but also against all the princes, and against all the people, that are in all the lands of king Ahasuerus: for this orde of the queene shal come abrode vnto all women, so that they shal despise theyr hus bandes before their eyes, and shall say: The king Ahasuerus commaunded Vashti the Queene to be brought in before him, but she woulde not come.
And so shall the princesses in Persia and Media, say likewise vnto all the kinges Princes, when they heare of this dede of the queene: thus shal there arise to muche despitfullnes & wrath.
If it please the king therfore, let there go a commaundement from him, and lette it be written, accordinge to the lawes of the Persians & Medians, (and not to be transgressed) that Vashti come no more before kinge Ahasue-rus, & let the king geue her kingdome vnto another, that is better then she.
And when this commaundement of the kinge (which shal bee made) is published throughth out all his

his empire (which is great) all women shall holde their husbands in honour both among great and small. This pleased the kinge, and the princes, and the king did according to the woide of Meneucen. For he sent letters forth into all the kings lands, into every lande, according to the writing thereof, and to every people after their language, that euery manne should be lord in his owne house. And this caused he to be spoken after the language of his people.

After these actes, whē the displeasure of kinge Ahasuerus was nowe layed, he thought vpon Mithi, and what she had done, and what was concluded against her. Then saide the kinges seruantes that ministered vnto him: Let there be saye ponge virgins soughte for the king, and the king appointed certayne men in all the landes of his empire, whom he charged that they shoulde bringe together all the saye pounge virgins vnto Susan the head citie, to the womens burying, vnder the hand of Hagei, the kinges chamberlayne, that kepte the women, to geue them their apparell, (and other thinges necessarye to be had.) And that the damosell which pleased the king should be quene in Mithis stede. And this pleased the king, and he did so. In the citie of Susan ther was a Jew, whose name was Hardocheus, the sonne of Jair, the sonne of Simei, the sonne of Elia, a man of Ieremi, which was carried awaye from Ierusalem, when Ieremias the kinge of Iuda was lead awaye, (whom Nabuchodonosor the kinge of Babylon caried thence) and had married Madassa (that is Esther) his vnckles daughter: for she had neither father nor mother, and she was a saye and bewtifull damosell, whom Hardocheus (when her father and mother was deade) receyued for his owne daughter. So it fortunied, that when the kinges commaundemente and commission was published, and many damoselles were brought together in the citie of Susan, vnder the hande of Hagei, Esther was brought also vnto the kinges house vnder the hande of Hagei the keeper of the women, and the damsell pleased him, that she founde fauoure in his sighte. And he caused oznamentes to be geuen her, and such thinges as belonged to her, and appointed her seuen comely damosels out of the kinges house, and fauoured both her and her gentle women singularly in the house of the women. But Esther shewed not her people and her kinned: for Hardocheus had charged her, that he should not tell it. And Hardocheus walked euery day before the court of the womens house, that he mighte knowe howe Esther did, and what should become of her. And when the appointed time of euery damsell came, that she should go in to kinge Ahasuerus, after that she had bene twelue monethes in the decking of the women (for their decking must haue so muche time, namely six monethes with Balme and Myre, and sixe monethes with good spices, so were the women bewtifified) then wente there one damosell vnto the kinge, and whatsoever she required, (so that it were comelye) that muste be geuen her to goe with her oute of the womens building vnto the kinges palace. In the evening she went, and on the morowe agayne, into the seconde house of the women, abyding vnder the hande of Saalgas the kinges chamberlayne, whiche kepte the concubines. And she came in vnto the kinge nomore, except it pleased the king to haue her, and that he called her by name. Now when the time cam of Esther, the daughter of Abihon, the vnckle of Hardocheus (which had receyued her as his owne daughter) that she shoulde come into the kinge, she desired nothinge, but what Hagei the kinges chamberlayne, the keeper of the womenne saide. And Esther founde fauoure in the sighte of all theym that looked vpon her. And Esther was taken vnto the kinge Ahasuerus into his house royal.

In the tenth moneth, which is the moneth. • Tebeth, in the seventh yere of his reigne. And the kinge loued Esther aboue al the women, and she found grace and fauour in his sighte before al the virgins, so that he set the crowne of the kingdome vpon her head, and made her queene in steede of Aasthi. And the kinge made a great feast vnto all his princes and seruantes (whiche feast was because of Esther) and caused the landes to be in quietnesse, and gaue giftes, as became the royaltie of a king. And when the virgins were gathered together the seconde time, Harbocheus sat in the kinges gate. And as yet had not Esther shewed her kintred and her people, accordinge as Harbocheus had bidden her: for Esther did after the word of Harbocheus, like as if she had ben yet vnder his goneruance. At the same time while Harbocheus sat in the kinges gate, two of the kinges chamberlains Bitan and Theres, which kept the doze, were woorth, and soughte to laye their handes on the kinge Hasuerus. Wherof also Harbocheus gat knowledge, and told it vnto quene Esther, and Esther certified the king thereof in Harbocheus name. And when inquisition was made, it was found so. And they were both hanged on tree: and it was written in the Chronicles before the kinge.

After these actes did kinge Hasuerus promote Hamon the sonne of Amadatha, the Agagite, and set him on hye, and set his seate aboue all the princes that he had with him. And all the kinges seruantes that wer in the kinges gate bowed their knees & worshipped Haman: for the king had so commaunded, concerning him. But Harbocheus bowed not the knee, and worshipped him not. Then the kings seruantes which wer in the kings gate said vnto Harbocheus: why transgrestest thou thy kinges commaundements? And whe they spake this dayely vnto him, hee solo-wed them not; and they told Haman, that they might see how Harbocheus matters would endure, for he had told them, that he was a Jewe. And when Haman sawe that Harbocheus bowed not the knee vnto him, nor worshipped him, he was full of indignation, and thoughte it to litle to laye handes onely on Harbocheus: for they hadde shewed him the nation of Harbocheus: wherefore he soughte to destroye all the Jewes, that were throughtoute the whole empyre of Hasuerus, and that were of the nation of Harbocheus. In the first moneth (that is the moneth Nisan) in the tweluth yere of king Hasuerus, they calle Phur (that is a lot) before Haman from daye to daye, and from moneth to moneth, to the tweluth moneth, that is the moneth Adar. And Haman saide vnto kinge Hasuerus: There is here a people scatered abroad & disperfed among all people in all the landes of thine empire, and they haue their lawes contrary from all people, and do not after the kings lawes: neither is it the kinges profite to suffer theym after this maner. If it please the kinge, let it be written that they may be destroyed, and so will I paye down ten thousand talentes of siluer, by the handes of the woorkemen, to be brought into the kinges treasure: and the king toke his ring from his hand, and gaue it vnto Haman the sonne of Amadatha, the Agagite, the Jewes enemye. And the king saide vnto Haman: Let the siluer be geuen thee, and do with that people as it pleaseth thee. Then were the kinges scribes called on the thirteenth daye of the first moneth (Nisan) and there was written (accordinge as Haman commaunded) vnto all the kinges officers, and to the captaynes that were in all the landes, and to the rulers of euerye people in the countreys on euery syde, accordinge to the writinge of euery nation, and after their language: in the name of kinge Hasuerus was it written, and sealed with the kinges ring. And the writings were sent by postes into all the kinges landes, to roote oute, to kill and to destroye all Jewes, both yonge and old, children and women in one daye (namelye, vppon the thirtieth daye of the twelfth month, whiche is the moneth . Adar) and to spoyle their gooddes. This was the sum of the writinge, that there shoulde be a commandement geuen in al landes, and published vnto all people, that they shoulde be ready against the same day. And the postes went in all the hast, according to the kinges commandement. And in Susan the chiefe citie was the commandement deuys-ed. And the kinge and Haman satte and dranke, when in the meane time the Citie of Susan was disquieted.

The. iij. Chapter.

Vhen Hardocheus perceiued all that was doone, hee rente his cloathes and put on sackcloth, with ashes, and went out into the middes of the Citie, and cry-ed loude and lamentablie, and came before the kinges gate: but he mighte not enter within the kinges gate, because he had sackcloth on, and in all landes, countreys and places as farre as the kinges wynde and commaun-dement extended, there was greate lamentation amonge the Jewes, fastinge, weeping and mourninge, and many lay in sackclothes, and in ashes.
So Esthers damoysles and her chamberlaynes came and tolde it her. Then was the Queene exceedingly astonished. And she sente rayment, that Har-docheus shoulde put on, and loyde the sackcloth from him. But Hardoche-us woulde not take them. Then called Esther Hathath, one of the kinges chamberlaines (whiche stood befoze her) and gaue him a commandement vnto Hardocheus, that hee mighte know what it were, wherefoze he did so. So Hathath went forth to Har-docheus vnto the strete of the Citie, whiche was befoze the kinges gate.
And Hardocheus tolde him of all that had happened vnto him, and of the summe of siluer that Haman had promised to weye down into the kinges treasure.

because of the Jewes, if he woulde destroye theym, and hee gaue him the coppe of the kinges commaundement, that was deuysed at Susan, to destroy them, that he might shewe it vnto Hester: and to speake to her, and charge her, that she shoulde go into the king, and make her prayer and supplicatio vnto him for her people. And when Hathath came in, hee tolde Esther the wordes of Hardocheus. And againe, Esther spake vnto Hathath, and commaunded him to say vnto Hardocheus: al the kinges ser-uantes, and the people in the landes of the kinge, knowe that whosoener commeth within the courts vnto the kinge, whether it be man or woman, which is not called, the commandement is, that the same shall die, except the kinge holde oute the golden sep-ter vnto him (in token of gracioufnes) for then he shall liue. As for me I haue not bene called to come into the kinge nowe this thirtie dayes.
And they certified Hardocheus of Esthers wordes, and Hardocheus bad saye agayne vnto Esther: thinke not to save thyne owne life while thou arte in the kinges house, befoze al Je-wes: for if thou holdest thy peace at this time, then shall the Jewes haue helpe and deliuerance oute of an other place, and thou and thy fathers house shall bee destroyed. And who knoweth whether thou arte come to the kingedome, for this causes sake?
Esther bad theim geue Hardocheus this answer: Go thou thy way, & gather together all the Jewes together that are founde at Susan, and fast ye for me, that ye eate not and drinke not in thre dayes, neyther daye nor night.
I and my damoysles will faste likewise: and so will I go into the kinge which thing yet is contrary vnto the commandement: and yf I perishe, I perishe. So Hardocheus wente his waye, and did all that Esther had commaunded him.

The. ii. Chapter.

The booke of Esther.

And on the third day it fortuned, that Esther put on her royal apparel, and stode in the court of the kinges palace within, ouer against the kinges house. And the kinge sat vpon his royall seate in the kinges palace, ouer agaynst the gate of the house. And when the king sawe Esther the Queene standing in the courte, shee sounde grace in his sighte. And the kinge helde oute the golden scepter that was in his hande towarde Esther. So Esther kneepte forth, and touched the top of the scepter. Then sayde the kinge vnto her: What wilt thou queene Esther? and what requirest thou? aske euen the halfe of the empire, and it shalbe geue thee. And Esther answered: If it please the kinge, let the king and Haman come this day vnto the banket, that I haue prepared for him. And the king sayde: cause Haman to make haste that he maye do as Esther hath sayde. So the kinge and Haman came to the banket that Esther had prepared, and the kinge sayde vnto Esther at the banket of wine: What is thy petition: that it maye be geuen thee. And what requirest thou? If it be euen the halfe of the empire, it shall be done. Then answered Esther, and sayde: My petition and desire is, if I haue sounde grace in the sight of the king: and if it please the king to geue me my petition, and to fulfill my request, then let the kinge and Haman come to the banket that I shall prepare for them, and so will I do to morowe, as the kinge hath sayde. Then went Haman forth the same daie sorrowfull and mery in his mind. And when the same Haman sawe Haradocheus in the kinge gate, that he stode not vp and kneled before him, he was full of indignation at Haradocheus. Neuerthelesse, Haman refrayned him selfe: and when he came home, he sente and called for his frendes, and Zares his wife: and Haman tolde them of the gloire of his richesse, and the multitude of his childezen, and all together howe the kinge had promoted him so greatly, and howe that he had set him aboue the princes and seruantes of the kinge. Haman sayde moreover: Yea, and Esther the Queene did let no man come in with the king vnto the banket, that she had prepared, excepte me. And to morowe am I bidden vnto her also with the kinge. But in all this am I not satisfied as long as I see Haradocheus the Jewe, sitting at the kinges gate. Then sayde Zares his wife, and all his frendes vnto him: Let them make a gallows of fiftie cubites hye, and to morowe speake thou vnto the kinge, that Haradocheus maye be hanged thereon, and go thou in meryly with the kinge vnto the bankette. And Haman was well content withall, and caused the gallows to be made.

The same nighte coulde not the kinge sleepe, and he commaunded to bringe the Chronicles and stoyes: which when they were read before the kinge, they happend on the place where it was wyitten, howe Haradocheus had tolde that Bigthana, and Theres, the kinges two chamberlaynes (which kepte the threholdes) sought to lay handes on kinge Achasuerus. And the king sayde: what worship and good haue we don to Haradocheus therefore? Then said the kinges seruantes that ministred vnto him: there is nothing at all done for him. And the king sayd: Who is in the court? for Haman was gone into the court without before the kinges house, that he might speake vnto the king to hange Haradocheus on a tree (that he had prepared for him.) And the kinges seruantes said vnto him: behold, Haman standeth without in the courte. And the kinge sayde: Let him come in. And when Haman came in, the king sayd vnto him: What shalbe done vnto the man, whom the kinge wold saue bring vnto worship? Haman thought in his hert: whom desireth the king to bring vnto worship, more then me? And Haman answered the king: Let the man whom the king pleaseth to bringe unto woollshyp, bee brought hither that he may be arrayed with the royall garments: which the kynge shal to weare: and the horse that the kynge rydeth vpon, and that the crowne royall maye bee sette vpon his head. And let this rayment and horse be deliuered vnto the hande of one of the kynges princes, that he may arraye the man wythall (whom the king is disposed to bringe to honour) and carry hym vpon the horse thowse the strete of the cite, and proclaime before him: thus shal it be done to the man, whom the king pleaseth to bringe to honour. And the kynge sayde: Make haste, and take as thou hast saide, the rayment and the horse, and do ruen so vnto Hardocheus the Jewe, that sitteth before the kinges gate: and let nothing fayle of all that thou hast spoken. Then toke Haman the rayment and the horse, and arrayed Hardocheus, and broughte hym on horsebacke thowse the strete of the cite, and proclaimed before him: Euen this shal it be done vnto the man whom the king is disposed to honour. And Hardocheus came againe to the kinges gate: but Haman gate hym home in all the haste mournynge bare headed, and tolde Jares his wife, and all his frendes every thing that had happened hym. Then sayde his wife men, and Jares his wyfe vnto hym: If it be Hardocheus of the seede of the Jewes, before whom thou hast begun to fall, thou shalt not preuaile agaynst hym. And whyle they were yet talking with him, came the kynges chamberlaynes, and caused Haman to make haste, to come vnto the banket that Esther had prepared.

And the king & Haman came in to the banket: & quene Esther had prepared: & the king saide vnto Esther on the seconde daye at the bankette of wine: What is thy petition (quene Esther) that it maye be given thee? And what desyreste thou? For, aske enen halfe the empire, and it shall be done. And Esther the

Quene answered and sayde: If I haue found grace in thy sight (o king) and if it please the king, then graunte me my lyfe at my desyre and my people, for my petitions sake: for we are solde, I and my people to be destroyed, to be slayne, and to perishe. And woulde God that we were solde to be bondmen and bondwomen, then wold I holde my tongue. For the enemye pondereth not the kinges harme. Then king Hasuerus answered, and sayd vnto Quene Esther: who is he? And where is he, that dare presume in his minde to doo after that manner? And Esther said: the enemye and aduersary is this wicked Haman. Haman was exceedingly afrayde before the kynge and the Quene. And the kinge arose from the banket, and from the wine, in his displeasure, and wente into the palace garden. And Haman rode by, and besought Quene Esther for his lyfe, for he sawe that there was myschiefe prepared for hym of the kynge all ready. And when the kinge came agayne oute of the palace garden, into the place where they drank wyne: Haman had layde hym vpon the bed, that Esther late vpon: & then sayde the kynge: wil he force the Quene also before me in the house? & loone as that wooorde went oute of the kinges mouth, they couered Hamans face. And Harbona one of the chamberlains that stode before the kinge, saide: Behold, there standeth a galowse in Hamans house, fifty cubites hie, which he had made for Hardocheus, & spake good for the king. The king said: hang him there on. So they hanged Haman on the galowes, that hee hadde made for Hardocheus. Then was the kinges wrath pacified.

The. viij. Chapter.

The same daye did king Hasuerus gene the house of Haman the Jewes enemy, vnto quene Esther. And Hardocheus came before the king: for Esther told how that he beloged vnto her. And the king put of his finger ring, which he had take from Haman, & gaue it vnto Hardocheus. And

And Esther sette Hardocheus ouer the house of Haman. And Esther spak yet moze befoze the king, and fel down at his feete weeping, and besoughte him that he would put away the wickednesse of Haman the Agagite, and his deuise that he hadde ymagined against the Jewes. And the king (ac-B cording to the maner) healde oute the golden scepter toward Esther, (wher by was declared a token of gracionnesse.) Then rose Esther, and stoode befoze the king, and saide, if it please the king, and yf I haue founde grace in his sight, and yf it be acceptable befoze the king, then let it bee wozitten, that the letters of the deuise of Haman, the sonne of Hamadatha the Agagite may be called agayne, whyche letters he wrote to destrope the Jewes, which are in all the kinges landes. For how can I suffer and see the euill that shall happen vnto my people? Or howe can I looke vpon the destruction of my kindrede. And the kynge Asauerus saide vnto Queene C Esther, & to Hardocheus the Jewe: Beholde I haue geuen Esther, the house of Haman, whom they haue hanged vpon a tree, because he layde hande vpon the Jewes. Wryte ye also for the Jewes, as it lyketh you, in the kinges name, and seale it with the kinges ringe, for the wrytinges that were wrytten in the kings name, and sealed with the kinges ring, durst no man disanull. Then were the kinges Scribes called at the same time, euen in the third moneth, that is the moneth. Siuan, on the thye & twentieth day. And it was wrytten (ac-M ay. cording to all as Hardocheus commanded) vnto the Jewes, & to the princes, to the debities and captaynes in the lands, which are from India vnto Ethiopia, namely an. C. and seven and twenty landes vnto euery one, according to the wryting thereof, & vnto euery people after their spech, & to the Jewes according to their wrytinge & language. And he wrote in the kinge Asauerus name, & sealed it with the kinges ryng, And by postes that rode vpon the horses and swifte yonge mules sente he the wrytinges, where in the king graunted the Jewes (in what citie soener they were) to gather them selues together, and to stand for their life, and for to roote oute, to slaye, and to destrope all the power of the people and lande that would trouble them, with childzen and women, and to spoile their good vpon one day, in all the landes of king Asauerus, namely vpon the thirtieth day of the thirde moneth, which is the moneth. Adar. f. The sum of the wryting was, howe there shoulde bee a commandement geuen in all landes, and published amonge all people, and that the Jewes shoulde be ready against that day, and to auenge them selues on their enemies. And so the postes that rode vpon the swift horses and mules, made haste wryth all speede, to execute the kinges woide, and the commandement was deuised in Susan the cheit Citie. And Hardocheus wente oute (from the place, and) from the kinge in royal apparel, of yelow and whitt, and with a great crowne of golde, being araped with a garmente of spiche and purple, and the citie of Susan reioyced and was gladd: and vnto the Jewes there was come (a newe) light and gladnesse, ioye and worship. In all landes and Citie into what places so ener the kinges woode and commandement reached, there was ioye and mirth, prosperite and good dayes amonge the Jewes, in so much that manye of the people in the lande became of the Jewes beleefe, and the feare of the Jewes came vpon them.

In the twelvethe moneth, that is the thirde moneth Adar, vpon the thirtieth daye of the same, when the kinges woide and commandement shoulde be doone, euen vpon the same daye that the enemies shoulde haue destroyed the Jewes to haue oppressed them, it turned contrary wryth, so that the Jewes shoulde sabbatise them enjoyed. For they gathered the Jewes together in their citie within all the Landes of king Darius, to lay hands on such as would be to them euill, and no man could withstande them, for the feare of them was come ouer all people, and al the rulers in the landes, and princes, & debilities, and officers of the kinge, promoted the Jewes, by the feare of Haradocheus came vpon them. For Haradocheus was great in the kinges house, and the repute of him was nopsed in al landes, wher he increased and grewe. Thus the Jewes smote all their enemies with a sword slaughter, and slue and destroyed, vnto after their will vnto suche as were their aduersaries. And at Shushan they also slew the Jewes, and destroyed the hundred men, and slue Haradatha, Dathon, Alphatha, Phatha, Datha, Biddatha, Haradatha, Drist, Dridat, and Alazatha, the tenne sonnes of Haman, the sonne of Hamadatha the enemye of the Jewes: but on his goodes they laide no hand. At the same time was the king certified of the number of those that were slaine in the Citie of Shusan. And the king said vnto quene Esther: The Jewes haue slayne and destroyed four hundred men in the citie of Shusan, and the ten sonnes of Haman. What haue they doone? thinkest thou in other landes of the kinge? And what with petition, that it maye be given there? or what requirest thou more to be doone? Esther answered: If it please the kinge, let him suffer the Jewes to morowe also to do accordinge vnto this dayes commandment, that they maye hang Haman and his sonnes vpon the tree. And the king charged to do so: and the commandment was deuised at Shusan, and they hanged Haman and his sonnes. For the Jewes that were in Shusan gathered them selues together vpon the thirtieth daye of the moneth Ab, and slue their hundred enemies in Shusan, and destroyed them. And the king was certified of the number of those that were slaine in the citie of Shusan, and came together, and made for their friends that they mighte take rest from their enemies, & thus of those enemies were and slue the hundred men. And they layde no hands on their goodes. And they did on the thirtieth daye of the moneth Ab, and on the xlii. daye of the same moneth rested they, which daye they helde with feasting and gladnes. But the Jewes that were at Shusan came together both on the xlii. daye, and on the xlii. daye of the same they rested, & helde that daye with feasting and gladnes. And there were the Jewes that dwelt in the villages, and dwelted to townes, helde the xlii. daye of the moneth Ab, with gladnes and feasting, & kept holy day, and every one sent gifts vnto another. And Haradocheus wrote these actes, and sent the writings vnto all the Jewes, that were in al the landes of king Darius, both nye and far, that they should make a lawe amonge them selues, and hold the xlii. & xlii. daye of the moneth Ab, as the days wher in the Jewes came to rest from their enemies, and as a month wher in their paine was turned to ioy, & their sorowe into an holy day, and that in those daies they should make feastes and gladnes, and one to sende gifts vnto another, and to distribute vnto 7 poze. And the Jewes were content with it that they had begun to do, & that Haradocheus wrote vnto them, howe that Haman the son of Hamadatha all the Jewes enemye, had denised agaynst the Jewes, howe he mighte destroy them, and caused to cast Shur (that is a lotte) for to putte them in feare, and to bringe them to nought: and howe Esther went and spake to the kinge, that throughe letters his wold be deuised (which he ymagined agaynst the Jewes) might be turned vpon his owne head, and howe he and his sonnes were hanged on the tree. For the which cause they called this daye Purim, because of the name of the lotte, and because of all the wordes of this writing, and what they them selues had scene, and what hadde happened vnto them.

little, and touche all that he hath, and he shall curse thee to thy face. And the Lord sayd vnto Satan: All that he hath, be in thy power: onely vpon him selfe, see that thou lay not thine hande.
And Satan went forth from the presence of the Lord. And vpon the sayde day it fortuned, that his sonnes and daughters were eating and drink-inge wyne in their eldest brothers house, and there came a messenger vnto Job, and sayd: While the oxen were plowing, and the asses going in the furrowe beside them: The Sabees came violently, and tooke them away: yea, they kille daintie seruantes with the edge of the sword, and I onely ran my way to tell thee. While hee was yet speaking, there came an other, and sayd: The fyre of God is fallen from heauen, and hath burnt vp at thy shepe and seruantes, and consumed them: and I onely ran my way to tell thee.
And while he was yet speaking, ther came an other, and sayd: The Caldees broke thier armies, and fell vpon the camels, and haue carped them away: yea, and sayne thy seruantes with the sword, and I onely am gotten away to tell thee. And while he was yet spe-king, there came an other and said: Thy sheep and thy daughters were eating and drinking wyne in their eldest brothers house, and behold, there came a mighty gale of wynde out of the south, and smote the foure corners of the house, which stood vpon the children and they are dead: and I am gotten away to tell thee. Then Job rose vnto weeping, and mourning, and he scattered ashes vpon the ground, and he said: And where is my comforte now? and where is my comforte now?
And he said: I came thither agone. The Lord came, and the Lord hath taken away. (euen as it hath pleased the Lord, so is it come to passe.) Blessed be the name of the Lord. For at these things I did not offende, nor mistake to my selfe agone God.

AND the children of God came to Sodome before the Lord, and Satan came also amonge them, and stood before the Lord.
And the Lord sayde vnto Satan: Whence comest thou?
And Satan answered the Lord, and sayde: I haue gone aboute the lande, and walked vpon it. And the Lord sayde vnto Satan: Hast thou not considered my ser-uants Job, for there is none like him in all the lande? For hee is a perfect and a right man: such a one as feareth God, and escheweth euill. And Satan answered the Lord, and said: Will thou try me agayne with paine? Hast thou not made him for naught? And Satan answered the Lord and sayde: Skinne for skinner yea, a man will curse at thee euer her haire for his life. But I will touche once his bone and flesh, and he shall curse thee to thy face. And the Lord sayde vnto Satan: Behold, thou him in thy power: but spare his life. So went Satan forth from the presence of the Lord, and smote Job with mercurious sores vpon the sole of his foote, vnto his crowne, so that hee lay vpon the ground in the ashes, and scraped of the skin of his loyns with a postcard. And he said vnto his wife: Woe is vnto me, that I should be thus. And she answered and said: Thou speakest like a foolish woman.
Shall we receive prosperity at the hande of God, and not receive affliction?
For all these things did hee do vnto thee, and thou hast not sinned.
When thou serdest, thou didst not sow, and thou didst not knowe what it was to be sowne. And thou didst not knowe what it was to be harvested. And thou didst not knowe what it was to be cold, and what it was to be hot, and what it was to be winter, and what it was to be summer.
And thou didst not knowe what it was to be dry, and what it was to be wet, and what it was to be wind, and what it was to be calme. And thou didst not knowe what it was to be peace, and what it was to be warre. And thou didst not knowe what it was to be health, and what it was to be sickness. And thou
joy, and what it was to be sorrow.
was to be life, and what it was to be death. And thou didst not knowe what it was to be God, and what it was to be man.

rent his clothes, and sprinkled dust upon their heads in the ayre. They set them downe by him also, vpon the ground seven dayes, and seven nightes.
Neither was there any of them that spake one worde to him, for they sawe that his paine was very great.

The thirde Chapter.

After this opened Iob his mouth, and cursed his daye.
And Iob answered, and said:
Alas by the day wherein I was boyn, and the nighte, in the whiche it was sayd there is a man child: continued.
I be sorowful, be turned to darknes, and not regarded of God from aboue: neither let him shine vpon it with light, but let it be shayned with darknes, and the shadow of death. Let the dunne cloide fall vpon it, and let it be lapped in spith fogwe, on the daye tyme. Let the darke daye overcome that night, and let it not be tyned vnto so the dayes of theyr exhortation in the monethen. Let it be that night and without gladnesse let them that curse the daye, and that be readye to syle by morninge, geue is also they curse, let the starres of that night be dunne through darkness of it, let it loke for light, but it is in darkness, may-ther the risinge, by of the same morninge, because it was not by the mōde that bare me. For then should the sorrowes haue bene hid from my eyes.

Jer. 30.0 Alas, why dyed I not in the birth: why did not I perish, as some as I came oute of my mothers wombe: why let they me: vpon they knees? why gaue they me such a smoth they breast? Then should I now haue lyen still, I should haue slapt, and ben at rest, like as the huges and lordes of the earth, which haue builded them stronge speciall places. As as the princes that haue had great substance of golde, and theyr houses ful of siluer.
Why was I not hid, as a thinge barned out of sight, either as yong children, whiche neuer sawe the light: Here must the swiched cease from their tyranny, and there such as are ouer laboured be at rest: they are those let out free, which haue ben in prison, so that they heare nomore the voyce of the oppressoure. There are small and great, and the seruante is free from his master. Wherefore is the light geuen to him that is in miserie, and life vnto them that haue heauy heartes: which longe for death (and though it come not) would digge it oute of his places, whiche also would be exceeding glad, and reioyce if they coude finde their graue anye where. That should be joy to that man whose way is hid, and God kepeth it backe from him. For my sighes come before I eate, and my royringes fall out like the water. For the thing that I feare is come vpon me: and the thing that I was a fraide of, is happened vnto me.

Was I not happye? Had I not quietnesse? Was I not in rest? And now commeth such misery vpon me.

The foure Chapter.

Ad Eliphaz the Themanite answered and sayde: If I beginne to commun with thee, smite thou be discontent. But I canne withholde my selfe from speekinge. Beholde, thou hast bene a confession of many, and hast confuted the stronge handes. The wordes haue byde those that were fallen: thou hast refreshed the weake knees. But now that the plage is come vpon thee, thou art grieved. Now that it hath touched thy selfe, thou art silent. I feare this thy care, thy griefe, thy reuoltinge, the perfection of the wordes I haue sayd. (I saye this) because I was tribbled being an innocent. As I were the godly destroyed. For as I haue proued by experience, they that plowe iniquite, and sow sorow, they shall reape the same. With the blake of God they perish, & with the wrath of his mostrelles are they consumed awaye. The roaringe of the Lyon, and the voyce of the Lyon, and the teeth of the Lyons whelpes are pulled oute. The Lyon perissheth for lacke of pray, and the Lyons whelpes are scattered abroad. And vnto me came the woordes secretely, and myne eare hath receaued a litle thereof. In the thoughts and visions of the night (when sleepe commeth on men) feare came vpon me, and dreadd, which made all my bones to shake. The winde passed by, befoze my ptesence, & made the heates of my fleshe to stande vp. He stode there, and I knewe not his face, an ymage there was befoze mine eyes, and in the stilnes hard I a voyce: Shall man be moze iust then God? Or shall a man be purer then his maker? Beholde, he founde no truthe in his seruantes, and in his angelles there was folly. Howe much moze in them that dwell in houses of clay, and whose foundation is but dust: which shall be consumed as it were with a moth: & they shalbe smitten from the morning vnto the euening: yea, they shall perishe for euer, when no man thinketh thereon. Is not their royalte gone away with them, they shall dye cruelly, and not in wisdoine.

CHe (I praye thee) if happely there be any that will answer thee, and loke thou vpon anye of the hoipe men. As for the foolishhe man, displeasure killeth him, and anger slayeth the ignorant. I haue sene my selfe, when the foolishhe was depe roted, and suddenly I cursed his habitation. His childezen were without prosperitie, and they were slayne in the gate, and there was no manne to deliuer them. His haruest was eaten by of the hangry, and the weaponed man spoiled it, and the thirstie dronke by their labour. It is not the earth that bringeth forth iniquitie, neither cometh sorow out of the ground, but man is bozne vnto labour, like as the sparken flye by oute of the whose coales. But I will aske counsell at the Loyde, and will talke with God, whiche doth thinges that are vnsearchable, and maruelles withoute number. He geueth rayne vpon the earth, and poureth water vpon the founteyns, to let by them that be of low degree, and that those whiche are in beaunitie, maye come to prosperitie. He destroyeth the deuises of the subtle, so that their hands are not able to performe any stedfaste thinge. He cometh to passe the wise in their owne craftinesse, and eueryhoweth the counsell of the wicked. In so muche that they runne into darknesse by saye daye, and grope about theym at the noone daye, like as in the night. He shall deliuer the poore from the swearde, and from the threatninges of the vngodly, and from the violence of the mightie. He is the hope of the poore, and the mouth of the wicked shalbe stopped. Beholde, happye is the man, whom God punisheth: therefore refuse not thou the chastening of the almighty. For though he make a wound, he geueth a plaster, though he smite, his hande maketh whole agayne. He shall deliuer thee in syxe troubles, and in the seuenth, there shall no euill come to thee. In hunger, he shall save thee from death, and when it is war, from the power of the sweard. Thou shalt be kept from the euil tongue, and when trouble commeth, thou shalt not nede to feare. In destruction and deathe thou shalt be mery, and shalt not be afrayde of the beastes of the earth. For the stones of the land shalbe confederate with thee, and the beastes of the field shal geue thee grace. And thou shalt knowe that thy dwelling place shalbe in rest, and thou shalt goe and beholde thy habitation, and shalt not sinne. Thou shalt see also, that thy sede shall increase, and that thy posteritie shalbe as the grasse vpon the earth. Thou shalt come also to thy graue in a saye age, like as when they take by a coine these in due season. No, this we our selues haue proued by experience, and even thus it is. Harken thou to it also, that thou mayest take hede to thy selfe.

IOb answered also, and sayd: That the displeasure which I haue, were truely wared, and my punishmente layde in the balgunces together: for now is it heavier then the lande of the sea. And this is the cause, that my woordes are so sorrowfull. For the arrowes of the almightie are round about me, whose indignation hath vponke by my spi-rite, and the terrible feares of God are set agaynst me. I Woe the wilde Be roare when he hath grasse: Or creepeth

 That whiche is vnlawerie, shall it bee eaten without salte, or is there anye taste in the white of an egge? The thinges that sometime I might not away withall, are now my meate for verpe sorrowe. That I might haue my desyre, and that God wold graunt me the thing that I long for. That God woulde beginne and smite me, that he woulde let his hande go and take me cleane awaye. Then shoulde I haue some comforte: yea, I shoulde desire him in my payne, that he woulde not spare: for I will not be against the woordes of the holpe onc. For what power haue I to endure? And what is mine ende, that my soule might be patient? Is my strength the strength of stones? Or is my fleshe made of brasse? Is it not so, that there is in me no helpe, and that my substance is taken from me. He that is in tribulation ought to be comforted of his neighbor, but the feare of the Lorde is cleane awaye. Mine owne brethren passe ouer by me, as the water broke, & as the ry-uers of water, do hastily go awaye.
 But they that feare the Lorde, the snow shall fall vpon them. When their time cometh, they shalbe destroyed and perishe, when they be set on fyre, they shalbe remoued out of their place for the pathes that they go in, are cro-ked: they hast after bayne thinges, and shall perishe. They turne them to the pathes of the man, and to the waies of Saba, wherein they haue put their trust. Confounded are they that putte anye confidence in them. For when they come to obtayne the thinges that they loke for, they are brought to confusion. Euen so are ye also come vnto me: but now that ye see my misery, ye are afraide. Did I desire you to bring vnto me, or to geue me anye of your substance? To deliuer me from the enemies hande, or to save me from the hande of tyrantes? Teach me, and I will holde my tounge, and when I do erre, shewe me wherin. How steadfast iudges, turne agayne, and ye shall see mine vngiltinesse, whether there be anye vnrighteousnesse in my tounge or bayne woordes in my mouth.

The. vii. Chapter.

Hath man any certayn time by pon earth? Are not his daies also like the daies of an hired seruant? For like as a bond seruant desireth the shadowe, and as an hireling would sayne haue an ende of his worke. Euen so haue I labored whol moneths long (but in bayne) and many a carefull night haue I told. Whise I laide me downe to slepe, I saide: When shall I arise? I sayde: I longged sore for the night. And in the meane time am I full of sorrowe vntill the twylghte. My fleshe is clothed with wormes and duste of the earth: my skinne is withered and become horrible. My dayes passe out more speedelye, then a weauer can weaue out his web, and are gone: I am aware. Oh remember that my life is but a winde, and that mine eye shall no more see pleasures therof: yea, and that none other mans eye shall see me any more. For yf thou falsen thine eye vpon me, I come to naught. The cloud is consumed and banished awaye, euen soo hee that goeth downe to the graue shall come no more by, nor turne agayne into his house, neither shall Chis place know him any moze. Therfore I will not spare my mouth, but will speake in the trouble of my spi-rite, and muse in the bitternesse of my minde. Am I a sea or a whale fishe, that thou kepest me so in prison? Whē I saye: my bed shal consozt me, I shal have some refreshinge by talkinge to my self vpon my couch. • Then troublest thou me with dreames, and ma-dest me so asrayde through visions, that my soule willereth rather to perishe and dye, then my bones to re-moyne. I can see no remedye, I shall finde no moze. O spare me then, for my days are but bayne. What is man that thou hast him in such reputation, and settest so much by him? Thou visitest him euerye daye, and euerye daye, sodenlye doest thou trye him. Why goest thou not fro me, noz letttest me alone, so long till I maye swallowe downe my spittle? I haue offended, and what shal I do vnto thee? O thou preseruer of me: why hast thou made me to stande in the waye, and am so heauye a burthen vnto my self? Why doest thou not forgeue me my sin? wherfore takest thou not away my wickednesse? Wchoide, now must I sleepe in the dust: and yf thou seekest me to moze in the mozening, I shalbe gone.

The. viij. Chapter.

Then answered Biluad the Shutte, and saide: Howe long wilt thou talke of suche thin-ges? How long shal thy mouth speke so proude wordes? Doeth God peruerre the thinge that is lawefull? O both the almighty destroye the thinge that is right? For seeing that thy son-nes sinned against him, did not he punische them for their wickednesse. If thou wouldest nowe resort vnto God brynging and make thine humble prayer to the almighty, if thou wouldest finde a pure and a godly life, shuld he not awake vp vnto thee immediatly and geue thee, the bewtulle of righteousnesse agayne: In so muche, that wher in looner thou haddest little afoze, thou shouldest haue nowe greate abundance. Enquire (I praye thee) of theym that haue bene before thee, and searche diligentely amonge their fathers. For we are but of yesterdaye, and consider not, that oure days vpon earth are but a herpe shadowe. Shall not they thewe thee, and tell thee, yea, and gladlye confesse the same? May a rishe be grene without moylines? Maye the grosse growe without water? No, but of euer it be shot forth, & of euer it be gathered, it withereth before any other herbe. • Then so goeth it with al them that forget God, and euen thus also shall the hypocrites hope come to naught. His confidence shall be destroyed, and his trust shalbe a spyders web. He shall leane vpon his house, but it shall not stand: he shall hold him fast by it, yet shall it not endure. It is euen as a grene tree before the sunne, and shoo-teth forth the bzaunches in his garden. It taketh manye rootes by a well side, in so muche that it is like an house of stones. But if it bee taken out of his place, euerye man denyeth it, sayinge: I knowe thee not.

Lo, thus is it with him, that relye-th in his owne doinges: and as for other, they grow out of the earth. We hold, God will not caste away a ver-tuous man, neither will he helpe the vngodlye. Thy mouth shall hce fill with laughinge, and thy lippes with gladnesse. They also that hate thee shalbe confounded, and the dwellinge of the vngodly shall come to naught.

The. ix. Chapter.

Ib answered and sayde: I knowe it is so of a truth. For howe maye sand that can answere him. Concerning such as be wise of hert, or migh-

What doest thou? He is God, whose worth no man may withstande: but the proudest of all must stoupe vnder hym? Or what wordes shoulde I finde out agaynst him? Yea, though I were righteous, yet myght I not geue him one worde again: but mekely submit my selfe to him as my iudge.

If I had called vpon him, and he had aunswered me: yet woulde I not beleue, that he heard my voyce: he troubleth me so wryth the tempeste, and woudeth me out of measure, without a cause. He will not let my spirite bee in rest, but filleth me with bitternes.
If men will speake of strengthe, lo, he is stronge: yf men will speake of righteousnes, who dare be my recorde?

If I will iustify my selfe, mine own mouth shall condemne me. If I wil put forth my selfe for a perfect man, he shall proue me a wicked doer. For though I be an innocent, and my conscience cleare: yet am I sweare of my life. One thing it is, and therefore I sayd: He destroyeth bothe the righteous and vngodly. And though he slea sodeinly with the scourge: yet will he laugh at the punishmente of the innocent. As for the world, it is geuen ouer into the hande of the wicked, and he shall couer the faces of the iudges thereof. Is it not so? wher the Eagle that flyeth to the pray, why I am purposed to forget my complaininge, to leaue off fro my sorow, and to comfort my selfe, then am I afraid of all my sorowes: for I knowe, that thou wilt not iudge me innocent. If I be then a wicked doer, why labour I in bayne? If I wash my self with snowe water, and make mine handes neuer so cleane at the well, yet shalt thou dippe me in the mire: and myne owne cloathes shall defyle me. For he that I must geue aunswere vnto, and with whom I go to the lawe, is not a man as I am. Repthor is there anny dayelman to lay his hand betwene his. Let him take his rodde awaye fro me: yea, let him make me no moze afraid of him, & the shall I answer him without any feare. For as long as it is thus, I can make no aunswere.

The x. Chapter.

I greueth my soule to liue. I will make my complaint, and will speake out of the very heynes of my soule. I will saye vnto God: I do not condemne me, but shewe me the cause, wherefore thou contendest soo with me? Thinkest thou it well doon, to oppresse me, to taste me off, being the workes (of thy handes) and to mayntayne the councill of the vngodly? Hast thou steeely eyes? doest thou loke as a man looketh? Or are thy days as the dayes of man, and thy yeres as mans yeres? that thou makest suche inquisition for my wickednes, and searchest out my sinne? where (as not withstandinge) thou knowest, that I am no wicked person, and that there is no man able to deliuer me out of thine hande. Thy handes haue made me, and fashioned me all together rounde aboute: wherfore thou then destroy me sodeinly? Or membze (I beseeche thee) howe that thou madest me of the mould of the earth, and shalt bringe me into duile agayne. Hast thou not couered me as it were milke, and couered me crubben like chester? Thou haste covered me with skynne and felle, and topped me together with bones and sinewes. Thou haste granted mee life, and done me good, and the diligent heede that thou tookest vpon me, hath perserued my spirite. Thou hast hid these thynges in thine hert. I am sure, that thou remembrest this thyng. If I did sinne, thou haddest aneye vnto me, and shalte not declare me innocent because of mine offence. If I haue done wickedlye, wo is me therfore. If I haue done righteously, yet dare I not lift by my head: so full am I of confusion, and see mine owne miserie. Thou hastent me out (being in heauyness) as it were a Lyon, and troubledst me out of measure. Thou byngest fresh witnes against me, and thy wrath increaseth thou vpon me: very many are the plagues that I am in. Wherefore haste thou brought me out of my mothers wombe? That I had perished, and that no eye hadde seene me. If they had caried me to my graue as soone as I was borne, then should I be now, as though I had neuer bene. Are not my days few? Let him then leaue off from me, and let me alone, that I may ease my selfe a litle sfoze I go thither, from whence I shall not turne againe, euen to the land of darknes and shadow of death: yea, into that dark cloudy land and deadly shadow, wher as is no order, but terrible feare as in the darknesse.

Chapter. xi.

Then answered Sophar the Naamathite, and sayd: Shold not he that maketh many wordes, be answered? Shoulde he that babbleth much be commended therein? Shoulde men geareare vnto thee onely? Thou wilt laughe other men to scorn, and shal no body mocke thee againe: Wilt thou say vnto God: The thynges that I take in hande is perfect, and I am chaine in thy sight? That God would speake, and open his lippen against thee, that hee mighte shew thee (out of his secret wisdome).

Why he rewardeyth thee double as he was appoynted to doo: then shouldest thou knowe, that God had forgotten thee because of thy sinne. Wilt thou able to finde out the secretes of God? Wilt thou attayne to the perfecti- nesse of the almighty? He is hyer then heauen, what art thou able to do? Deeper then the hell, howe wilt thou then knowe him? His length exceedeth the length of the earth, and his bredth the bredth of the sea. Though he tourne all thynges vpside downe, close theym in, gather theym together, who will tourne him from his purpose? (Who maye saye vnto him, whye doest thou so?) For it is he that knoweth the vanitie of men: he seeth their wickednesse also, should he not then consider it? I dayne body exalteth himselfe, and a man newe borne is like a wilde asses colde. If thou haddest nowe a righte heart, and liftedst by thine handes toward him: if thou shouldest put away the wickednes which thou hast in hande, so that no vngodlynesse dwell in thy house: Then mightest thou lifte by thy face without shame, and then shouldest thou be sure, and haue no nede to feare. Then shouldest thou forget the miserie, and thinke no moze vpon it, then vpon the waters that tourne by. Then should the residue of thy life be as cleare as the none daye, and springe sooth as the morninge. Then mightest thou haue comforte, in the hope that thou haste: and sleepe quietlye, when thou art buried. Then shouldest thou take thy rest, and no man make thee as trayde: yea, manye one shoulde set manche by thee. As for the eyes of the vngodly they shall bee consumed, and not escape: their hope shalbe miserie and sorowe of minde.

Chapter. xij.

So Job answered and sayd: The (no doubt) ye are the men alone, and wisdome shall perishe with you. But I haue vnderstandinge as well as ye, and am no lesse then ye. Yea, who knoweth not these thynges? Thus he that calleth vpon God, and not the eares pleasure in hearing, and the mouth in talkinge the thing that it eateth? Among olde persons there is wisdom, and in age is vnderstandinge. Yea, with God is wisdom and strength, it is he that hath counsel and knowledge. Behold, If he breake downe a thinge, who can lett it vpagayne? If he shut a thinge, who will open it? Behold, • If he withhold the waters, they drye vp. If he let them go, they destroye the earth. With him is strength and wisdom, he knoweth bothe the disceauer, and him that is deceaued. He carpeth away the wise men, as it were a spoyle, and bringeth the iudges oute of their swittes. He taketh awaye the subiection of the people from their kynges: and girberth their loynes with a band. He leadeth awaye the great men into captiuitie, and turneth the myghtie by side downe. • He taketh the heritie from out of the mouth, and disapointeth the aged of their reason. He pouereth the confusion vppon princes, and comforteth them that haue bene oppressed. Loke. What lyeth hid in darkness, he declareth it openly: and the very shadowe of death bringeth he to light. He both increaseth the people, and destroyeth them. He maketh them to multiplie, and bringeth them awaye.

He chaungeth the heartes of them that rule the people of the earth, and disdaineth them: so that they go wandering out of the way, and grope in the darke without light: he maketh them also to flacker to and fro like vponken men.

The xij. Chapter.

L All this haue I seene with mine eye, heard with mine eare, and vnderstand it. Looke what ye knowe, that same doo I knowe also: neyther am I inferiour vnto you. Neuerthelesse, I talke with the mighty, and my desire is to commen with God. As for you, ye are workemasters of lyes, & vnprofitable phisicians altogether. Would God ye kept your tongue, for then might ye be taken for wise men. Howe heare my chydinge, and ponder the sentence of my lippes. Doe ye speake iniquitie againste God, and talke against him with disceate? Will ye not accept the person of him? Or will ye contende with God? Shall that helpe you when he calleth you to reckninge? For as one man mocketh an other, so do ye mocke him. He shall punish you, and repproue you, if ye do secretly accepte anye personne. Shall he not make you afraide, when hee sheweth him selfe. Shall not his terrible feare fall vpon you? your remembrance is like vnto a sparke, and your bodies like the clays. Holde your tongues, for my sake, that I also maye speake, and my sorow shall be the lesse. Wherefore do I beare my flesh in my teeth, and put my soule in my handes? Lo, though he slaye me, yet will I put my truste in him. But • I will repproue mine owne wates in his sight, he shall make mee whole: and there maye no ypocrite come before him. Heare my wordes, and ponder my sayings with youre eares. Behold, now haue I prepared my iudgement, and know that I shall be found righteous. What is he that will go to law with me? (Let him come) that I may now holde my tongue, and speake.

Y Heretofore, graunte me two things and then wilt I not hide my selfe from thee. Withdraw thine hande from me, and let not the fearefull dread of thee make me afraid. And then call me, and I will answere: or els let me speake, and geue thou me an answer. Howe manie are my misdoes and sinnes?
Let me knowe my transgressions and offences: whereto hidest thou thy face, and holdest me for thine enemy?
Wilt thou be so cruell and extreme vnto a sipping lease, and soloowe vpon drie skubbe: for thouapest sharply to my charge, and punishest me for the spymes of my youth. • Than puttest my feet also in the stocks, and lookest narrowly vnto all my pates, and mar-kest the steps of my feet, wheretoas I (notwithstanding) must cōsume like as a fowle carpyon, and as a cloathe that is mothaten.

¶ The. xliij. Chapter.

In that is bozne of women, hath but a shoyt time to liue, and is full of miserie. He cometh vp, and is cutte doونه like a flower, and dyeth, as it were a shadowe, and neuer continueth in one state. Woe it thou open thine eyes vpon suche a one, and bringest me in thy iudgement: who can make it cleane, that cometh of an vnclane thing? No body. • The dayes of man surely are determined, the number of his monethes are only knowne vnto thee. Thou haste appoynted him his boubdes, which he can not go beyond.
Go from him, that he may rest (a lit-tel) vnto his daye come: whiche he lokethe for, like as an hyzelinge doth.
If a tree be cutt doونه, there is some hope yet, & it will sprout & shote forth the brounces agayne. For though the roote of it be wahren old, and the stock therof be dead in the ground, yet when it getteth the sente of water, it will budde, and bringe forth bowes, lyke as a tree that is planted: But as for man, when he is dead, perished, and consumed away, what becommeth of him? The floods when they be dyed in: and the riuers, whē they be empy-tie, are fylled agayne, thowsoe the fleshyng waters of the sea: but when man reapeth, he riseth not agayne (of his owne strength). • buttill the heauen perishe: he shall not wake vp, nor rise oute of his sleape. • That thou wouldest kepe me, and hide me in the hell, buttill thy wrath were stilled: and to appoynte me a tyme, whereto thou mightest remembre me. • Waxe a deade man liue agayne? • All the dayes of my life will I waite still, till my chaunging shall come. • Thou shalt call me, and I shall answer thee, • despise not thou the worke of thine owne handes. For nowe thou numberest all my goynges, yet be not thou to extreme vpon my sinnes. My iniquittie is sealed vp, as it were in a bag, but be mercifull vnto my wickednes.

The mountaynes fall awaye at the laste, the rockes are remoued oute of their place, the waters pearce thowsoe the very stones by little and little, the fluddes walke awaye the grauell and earth. And destroyest thou the hope of man? Thou preuaylest still agaynst him, so that he passeth awaye: thou chaungest his estate, and putttest him from thee. And whether his children come to worship or no, he can not tell, and yf they be men of lowe degree, he knoweth not. While he liueth his fleshe must haue trauayle, and while the soule is in him, he must be in sor-rowe.

kednes teacheth thy mouthe, and so shape an answer agaynst thee. For thou the first mā that euer was borne? Or wast thou made befoze the hilles? Hast thou heard the secrete counsell of God, that all wisdome is to little for

W thee? What knowest thou that we knowe not? And what vnderstandest thou, but we can the same? With vs are both olde and aged men: yea, such as haue luyed longer then thy father. Thinkest thou it a small thing of the consolations of God? With thee is a lying worde. Why doeth thyne heart so bewitch thee? And wherfoze winkest thou with thyne eyes, that thy minde is so puffed vp against God, and letteste suche wordes go oute of thy mouth? What is man, that he should be cleane? What hath he (whiche is borne of a woman) wherby he might be righteous? Beholde, he doth not trust his saintes: yea, the very heathens are not cleane in his sight. How much more then an abhominable and vile man, whiche drinketh wickednesse like water? I wil tel thee, heare me, and I wil shewe thee that I haue sene, whiche wise men haue tolde, and hath not bene hid from their fathers, vnto whom onely the earth was geuen, and no straunger went amonge them.

Che vngodly soroweth at the dayes of his life, as it were a woman with a child, and the number of a tyrantes yeres is vnknown. I fearefull sounde is euer in his eares, and whē it is peace, yet feareth he destruction. He belongeth neuer to be deliuered out of darkenesse, for the swearde is alwaye befoze his eyes. When he goeth forth to get his liuing, he seeth playnely, that the daye of darkenesse is at hande. Sorowe and carefulnesse will make him afrayde, and compasse him rounde aboute, like as it were a kinge, with his hooke readye to the battayle. For he hath stretched out his hande agaynst God, and armed him selfe agaynst the almightie. He runneth proudly vpon him, and with a stiff necke fighteth he agaynst him, where as he couereth his face with fatnesse, and maketh his body well ty-kinge. Therefore shall his dwelling be in desolate cities, and in houses which no man inhabiteth, but are become heapes of stones. He shall not be riche, neyther shall his substance continue, nor encrease vpon the earth. He shall neuer come out of darknesse, the flame shall brye vp his braunches with the blaste of the mouth of God, shall he be taken awaye. He belongeth not that he is in vanitie, and yet he is out of the waye, and vanitie shall be his recompence. He shall perishe, afoze his time be worne out, & his braunches shall not be grene. He shall be plucked of as an vntimely grape fro the vine, and shall let his floure fall, as the olive doeth. For the congregation of hypocrites shall be desolate and vnfruitful, and the fire shall consume the houses of such as are greedy to receaue gifts. He conceaureth trasayle, and beareth vanitie, and their bodye bringeth forth disceate.

The .xvi. Chapter.

Iob answered, and saide: I haue ofte times heard such things. Miserable geners of comfort are ye, al the sort of you. Shall not payne wordes come yet to an ende? Or hast thou yet any more to saye? I could speake as ye do also. But wouldest thou that your soule were in my soules steede, then shouldest thou heape vp wordes agaynst me, & shake my head at me. I shouldest comforte you with my mouth, and release your payne, with the talking of my lippes. (But what shall I doe?) For all my wordes, my sorowe will not cease: and thoughte I holde my tongue, yet will it not departe from me. But nowe that God hath sent me aduersitie, thou hast troubled all my congregation. And that thou hast fylled me with wrinkles, my flesh is recorde, and my leanness telleth by agaynst me, and beareth witness agaynst me. He is angry at me, he hateth me, and gnaweth vpon me with his teeth. Mine enemye sheweth vpon me with his eyes. They haue opened their mouthes wide vpon me.

Job. 14. and smitten me upon the cheke despitefully, they gather them selues together against me. God hath put me in pence with the vngodly, and deli-uered me into the hands of the wicked.
I was in welth, but he hath brought me to naughte. He hath taken me by the necke, he hath rent me, and set me as a morhe for him selfe. His archers compasse me round about: he wounded my loymes, & doth not spare. My bowels hath he poured vpon & ground he hath given me one wound vpon an other, and is fallen vpon me, like a giant. I haue sowed a sackcloth vpon my layn, and lye with my heare in the dust. My face is swollen wyth weeping, & in mine eyes is the shadow of death. Howbeit, there is no wyckednesse in my handes, but my prayer is cleane. O earth, couer not thou my blood, and let my crying finde no ryme for lo, my witness is in heauen: and he that knoweth me, is aboue in the height. My frendes geue me manie woordes to scoyne: and myne eye poureth out teares vnto God. O that a body myght please with God, as one man doth with an other: yet the number of my peares is come, and the way that I muste goe, is at hande, frome whence I shall not turne againe.

Ch. xliij. Chapter.

My breath stinketh, my dayes are shortned, I am harde at deathes doze. Froward men are with me, & mine eye must continue in the bitterness of theym.
O deliuer me, and loke out one to be my suretie in thy syghte: what is he that knoweth who will promise for me? For thou hast withholde they beries from vnderstanding: therefore shall thou not let (them) vpon me.
He promysed his frendes part of his good, but his owne children spend it.
He hath made me as a beast: I was of the people, where as now I am like a beast. My hope is dimme for here heynesse, and all my strength is become like a shadow. Vertuous men therefore shall well consider this, & the innocent shall take part against the hiporrite. The righteous also will kepe his waye, and he that hath cleane han-des, will ener bee stronger and stronger. As for you, turne you, and get you hence (I praye you) seeing I can not find one wise man amonge you: My dayes are past, and my counsailes and thoughtes of my hearte are banished asway, chaunging the night into daye, and the light into darkenes. Though I tary neuer so muche, yet the graue is my house, and I haue made my bed in the darke. I call corruption my father, and the wormes call I my mother and my sister. What helpeth them my long taryng? O who hath considered the thing that I loke for? All that I haue, shall go downe into the pit, and lye with me in the dust.

Ch. xliij. Chapter.

Then answered Baldad the Shuhite, and sayde: when will ye make an ende of your woozdes? Marke well, and then we will speake. Wherefore are we counted as beastes, and reputed so vyle in youre sight? He destroyeth him selfe with his anger. Shall the earth bee forsaken, or any stone remoued out of his place, because of this. Yea, the lighte of the vngodly shall be put out, and the sparks of his fire shall not burne. The light shall be darke in his dwellinge, and his candell shall be put oute with him. His presumptuous goings are kepte in, and his owne counsaile shall cast him downe. For his feete are taken as it were in the net, and he is at his wittes ende. His foote shall be holden in the snare, & it shall catche them that he thirde of bloude. The snare is layde for him in & ground, & a pitfall in the waye. Fearefulness shall make him astrayde on euery syde, that he shall not knowe where to get out.
Hunger shall be his strength, misfortune shall hang vpon him. He shall eate the strength of his owne skinne, euen the first borne of death shall eate his strength. His hope shall be rooted out of his dwellinge, verpe feareful-nesse shall bying him to the King.
Other men shall dwell in his house:

(but shalbe none of his) & bymstone shalbe scattered vpon his habitation.
His rotes shalbe dried vp beneth, and about shal his bzaunch be cut doſome.
D His remembrance shall p:riſhe from the earth, and he shall haue no name in the ſtrete: they shal drie him from the light into darkenelle: and caſt him cleane out of the woꝝlde. He shal neither haue children noꝝ kinſfolkes among his people, no, noꝝ any poſteritie in his dwellings. & they that come after him, shalbe aſtonied at his day, and they that go befoze, shalbe aſtraide.
Suche are now the dwellinges of the wicked, and this is the place of him that knoweth not God.

Che. xxi. Chapter.

I Ob answered Sopha the ſon of amathit, and ſaide: For the ſounde do my thoughtes compell me to anſwere. And to hye my minde is redy within me. I heare the cheerynges and reppell, therfore am I purpoſed to anſwer ſwer, after mine vnderſtanding: but well thou not this, namely I from the beginninge (euer ſince the creation) men vpon earth) the gladnesse of the doggely hath bene spott, and that the tope of ppoctyes continued, but the smirking of an eye: Though he be magnified vnto the heauen, so that his hande reacheth vnto the cloudes, yet at aturne he perisheth for ever.

 In somuch that they which haue sene him, shall say: Where is he? He shall vanishe as a dreme, so that he can no more be founde, and shall passe awaye as a vision in the night. So that the eye which sawe him before shall haue no more sight of him, & his place shall knowe hym no more. His childeren shalbe fayne to agree with y^e poze, & his handes shall restore them their goods.
 From his poutch his bones are full of pleasures, but now he shall it lye down within him in the earth. When wydernesse was swete in his mouth, he hid it vnder his tongue. That he sa-uourd, that woulde he not forsake, but kept it close in his throte. The bread that he did eate, is turned to the poison of the serpent, within hym dore. The riches that he deuoured, shall he perbake againe, for God shal drawe them out of his belye: he shall sucke the gall of serpentes, and the adders tongue shall slay hym: so that he shall no more see the ryuers and brookes of honey and butter. The thing that other men hope laboured for, shal be restore agayne, and shall not eate it vp. Great tranayle shall he make for ryches, but he shall not enioye them.
 And wher he hath oppressed the poze, and not helped them: houses hath he spoiled, and not builded them. Hys braiue could neuer be fylled: therefore shall he greepe in his couctousnesse.
 There shall none of his meate: & leste he hym, therefore shall no man loke for hys prosperite. When he had plenteousnesse of every thing, yet was he poze, though he was helped on every syde. For though the wicked haue neuer so much sayd his help: yet God shall sende his wrath vpon hym, and cause his indignation to reigne ouer him: so that if he see the wrath come, he shall be spotte with the flebowe. The arrowe is taken forth, and gone out of the quiver, and a glysteryng sword thoroowe the gall of him, feare shall come vpon him. There shal no darkenesse be hable to hide him. An vnkinled fire shall consume him, and loke what remayneth in his house, it shall be destroyed. The heauen shall declare his wickednesse, and the earth shall take part against him. The substance that he hath in his house, shal be taken awaye and perishe, in the day of the Lordes wrath. • This is the position that the wicked man shall haue of God, and the heritage that he may loke for of god, because of his wordes.

The xxi. Chapter.

Job answered, and sayde: • heare my wordes, and that shall be my comforte of you.
 Suffer me a litle, that I maye speake also, and then laugh my wordes to scoone (yf it lyke you.) Is it for mans sake that I make this disputa-tion: which if it were so, shuld not my spete then be in soze trouble? Marke me well, and be abashed, and lay your hande vpon your mouth. For when I consider my selfe I am ashyed, and my fleshe is smitten with feare. • Wherefore doo wycked men lyue in healthe and prosperite, come to their old age, and encrease in riches? • Their children lyue in their sighte, and their generation before their eyes. • Their houses are safe from all feare, and the rodde of God doeth not smyte them.
 Their bullocke gendereth, and that not oute of time: their cowe calueth, and is not vnfruitefull. • They sende forth their chyldren by flockes, and their sonnes leade the daunce. • They beare with them tabernacles and harpes, and haue instrumentes of musyke at their pleasure. • They spend their dayes in welthynges, but sodaynly they go down to hell. • They say also vnto god: Go from vs: we desyre not the knowledge of thy wayes. • Who is the almighty, that we shoulde serue him?
 And what profit shuld we haue to submit our selues vnto him? • Lo there is utterly no goodnesse in them, therefore

Will not I haue to do with the coun-sailer of the vngodly. Howe ofte shall the candle of the wicked be put oute?
Howe oft commeth their destruction vpon them? What sorow shal God geue them for their part in his wrath?

Carrye away. And though God saue their children fro such sorow, yet will he so rewarde the selues, that they shal knowe it. Their own destruction and misery shall they se with their eyes, & drinke of the fearful wrath of the almighty. For what careth he what be-cometh of his household after his deeth.
When the number of his monethes is cut shor? In as much then as God hath the best power of all, who can teach him any knowledge? One dieth now, when he is mightie & at his best, rich, & in prosperitie: euen whē his bowels are at the fullest, & his bones full of marrow. Another dyeth in sorow and heauinesse, and neuer had good dayes.
They shall sleepe bothe a lyke in the earth, & the wormes shall couer them.
Behold, I know what ye think: yea, & the subtilty that ye pmargin against

D me. For ye say: Where is the princes palace? and where is the dwelling of the vngodly? haue ye not asked them that go by the waye? Doubtlesse, yee can not denye their tokens, that the wicked is kept vnto the day of destruction, & that the vngodly shalbe brought forth to the day of wrath. Who dare reproue him for his waye to his face?
Who will rewarde him for the vngratiousnesse that he doeth? Yet shall he be brought to his graue, and dwell amonge the heape of the dead. Then shall he be sayne to be buried amonge the stones of the playne. All men also muste follow him, and there are innumerable gone before him. Howe vaine then is the comforte that ye geue me?
Doeth not falshed remaine in al your answers?

The .xxij. Chapter.

S Eliphaz the Themanite gene saunswere, and sayd: May a man be profitable vnto god, as he that is wise, may be profitable vnto hym selfe? Is there any advantage to the almighty that thou art righteous? Or shal it profite him that thou makest thy wayes perfecte? Is he astrayd to re-proue thee, and to step forth with thee into iudgement? Is not thy wickednesse great and thy ingrations daye innumerable? For thou hast taken the pledge from thy brother for naught; and robbed the naked of their clothing.

To suche as were weary, haste thou geuen no water to drinke, and hast withdrawen bread from the hungry.
Should suche one then as dieth die lonely, wrong, and oppression (doing aithing of partialitie, and having no spect of persons) dwell in the land?
Thou hast sente widowers away empty, and oppressed the poore fatherlesse. Therefore art thou compassed about with snares on every side, and sodenlye vexed with feare: shouldest thou then see no darkenesse? Shouldst not the water flood runne ouer thee?

Howe because that God is higher then the heavens, and because thou seest that the starres are so hye, wilt thou therefore say: Cusse, how shouldest God knowe? Doeth his dominion reach beyond the cloudes? Cusse, the cloudes couer him that he may not see, and he dwelleth aboue heauen. Doest not thou keepe the olde wayes, that buye men haue gone, which wer cut down out of time, & whose foundation was as a running water, which sayd vnto God: go from vs. And what did the Almighty with them? He filled their houses with good thinges. But the counsell of the vngodly is far frome.
The righteous sawe it and wer glad, and the innocents laughed hym to scorne. In our increase betweene buye thou wilt come to the almighty, thou shalt stand fast, and put al thynges out of thy dwelling: Then shalt make golde as plentifull as the duste, and the golde of Ophir as the dintes of the riuers. Yea, Almighty God his owne selfe shalbe thy defence, and thou shalt haue plenty of siluer. The shall thou haue thy delight in the Almygh-tye, and lyfte vp thy face vnto God.

Then shalt thou make thy prayer vnto him, and hee shall heare thee, and thou shalt kepe thy promises. Then loke what thou takest in hand, hee shall make it to prosper with thee, and the light shall shine in thy wayes. For who so humblyeth him selfe, him shall he set vp, and who so loberth meekely, shalbe healed. If thou be innocent, thou shalt deliuer the countrey because of the bngiltynesse of thine handes.

I Ob answered, and sayd: My sayinge is yet this daye in bit-ternesse, and my hande dryp because of my groning. O that I might see him, and finde him: O that I might come befoze his seate to pleade my cause befoze him, and to fyll my mouth with argumentes. That I might knowe, what answer he would geue me: and that I myghte vnderstande, what he would say vnto me. Will he pleade againste me with his greates power and strength? No, but he will make me stronger. He that is iuste, shall enter disputation with hym, and my iudge shall deliuer me for euerr. Beholde, though I go befoze, I finde him not: If I come behinde, I can get no knowledge of him: yf I go on the lefte syde where he doeth his worke, I can not attaine vnto him.
Againe, if I go on the right side, he hy-deth himselfe, I can not se him. But as for my waye, he knoweth it: & try-eth me as the gold in the fyre. My softe both hepe his pathe, his waye haue I holden, and will not go out of it. I will not forsake the commaundement of his lippes, but loke what he chargeth me with his mouth, that haue I put vp in my heart. He is still at one point, and who will turne him backe?
He doeth as him lyeth, and bringeth his pathe vnto his sayll. He perforce meth the thing that is appoynted for me, and many suche thinges doeth he.

This is the cause that I shrinke at his presence: so that when I consider him, I am astrayed of him. For in so muche as he is God, he maketh my heart soft: & seeing that he is Almighty he putteth me in feare. Thus can not I get out of darkenesse, neyther hath he conered the cloude from my face.

Considerynge then that there is no tyme hyd from the Al-myghtye, howe happeneth it, that they whiche knowe hym, do not regarde his dayes? For some men ther be, that remoue other mens landemarkes: that rob them of their cattell, and keepe the same for theyr owne: that dync away the alle of the fatherles: that take the widowes oxe for a pledge: that thruste the poxe out of the waye, and oppresse the symple of the worlde together. Behold, euen as the wyld ass in the deserte, goe they forth to their worke, and ryle betimes to spoile: Yea the very wyldernesse ministrereth foode for theyr chyldren. They reape the corne fildes that is not their owne: and let the vyneparde of the vngodly alone. They are the cause that so many men are naked and bare, hauinge no clothes to couer them, and to kepe them from cold: So that when the shoures in the moun-taynes haue rayned vppon them, and they be all wet, they haue none other succoure, but to kepe them among the rockes. They spoyle the suckynge satherlesse chylde, and take the pledge from the poore. In so much that they let him go naked without clothinge, and haue taken away the sheafe of the hungrye. The poore are sayne to laboure in their oyle mylles: yea, and to tread in their wyne plesses, and yet to suffer thirste. The men of the cite cryeth vnto the Lord with syghynge, the soules of the slayne also make their complaynt: but God destroyeth them not for all this, where as they among them that abhorre the lyyghte:

they knowe not his waye, nor continue in his pathes. • Tymely in the morning do they arise, to murder the simple & poze: and in the night they go a slealyng. The eye of the aduonterer wayterth for the darkenesse, and sayeth thus in him selfe: Tulle there shal no eye se me, and so he disgiseth hys face.
In the nigh: season they seache the houscs, and hide them selues in the day tyme, but will not knowe the light.
For as sone as the daye breaketh, the shadow of death commeth vpon them and they goo in horrible darkenesse.
The vngodly is swifter then the water: their portion shalbe cursed in the earth, and he shall not behold the way of the bynepardes. • That they (for wickednesse which they haue done) were drawen to the hell, soner then knowe melteth as the drouth & heate.
• That all compassion vpon the were forgotten: that their dapnties were wozmes, that they were cleane putte out of remembraunce, and vngodlynesse bitterly heuen down like a tre.
He hath oppressed the barrein, that he can not beare, and vnto the widdowe hath he doone no good. He drowe the mighty after him with hys power, & when he was gotten by, no man was without feare, as long as he liued.
And though they myghte be safe, yet they will not receaue it: for their eyes loke vpon their owne wayes. They are exalted for a litle, but shortlye are they gone, brought to extreme povertye, and taken out of the way: yea, and bitterly pluckt of as the eares of cozne.
Is it not so? who will then reppone me as a lyer, and saye that my wordes are nothing woorth?

The .xxv. Chapter.

Then answered Byddad the Suhite, and sayde: Is there power and feare wyth hym aboue, that maketh place, settinge in his highnes, whose men of warre are innumerable, and whose sight ariseth ouer all? But howe maye a manne be compared vnto God? he is iustified? • Howe can he be cleane, that is voyde of a woman? Beholde, the moone shyneth neth nothings in comparison to hym, and the starrs are vncleane in hys sight. Howe much more then, man: that is but corruption: and the forme of man, which is but a woyme?

The .xxvi. Chapter.

Job answered, and said: What hast thou helped? him that is without strength? what com-forte geueste thou vnto hym that hath no strength? Where is the counsailer that thou shouldest gra-tyfy hym, which hath no wisdom? Hast thou shewed the wayes of righte lyuinge? To whom hast thou spoken those wordes? Who made the way to come oute of thy mouth? Art not dead thynges shapen vnder the waters: and thynges by the waters shal hell is naked before him, and the eye destruction it selfe, can not be out of his sight. He stretcheth out the north ouer the emptye, and bureth the earth vpon nothing. He by-deth the • water in his cloude, & the cloude is not broken vnder them. He holdeth backe hys floode, that it can not be sene: and spretheth hys cloude before it. • He hath compassed the waters wyth certayne boundes, whyle the daye and nyghte come to an ende.
The very pillars of heauen tremble and quake at his reppose. • He stillith the sea with his power: and stoppeth his wisdom. • Sayeth he the strength thereof. • He hath garnished the heauens, and hath made the rebellious. • No, this is not shorte sum of his wayes. But who is habile sufficient to reche his works? Who can erreane and vnder-stand the thynke of his power?

The .xxvii. Chapter.

Ad Job proceeded and saith in hys commynsayinge: He is true as meth (whiche hath beene indgement) & the almighty ward my mind: My lips shall talke of no vanitie, and my tongue shall speke no disceyfe, while my breath is in me, and as long as the winde (that God hath geuen mee) is in my nostrilles.

God forbid, that I shoude graunte your cause to be right. As for me, vntill mine ende come, will I neuer goo from mine innocencie. My righteous dealinge keepe I faste, whiche I will not forsake: my heart shall not reprove me of my dayes. Therefore mine ene-mie shall bee founde as the vngodlye: and hee that taketh parte agaynst me, as the vnrighteous. For what hope hath the hypocrite thoughe hee haue gret good, and though God geue him riches after his heartes desire? Doth God heare him the sooner, when hee cryeth vnto him in his necessitie?

Hath hee suche pleasure and delite in the almightie, that hee dare alwaye trust vpon God? I will teache you in the name of God, and the thinge that I haue of the almightie, will I not hype from you. Beholde, ye stand in your owne conceite, as though ye knewe all thinges. Wherefore then do ye go aboute with such vaine wordes, saying: • This is the portion that the wicked shall haue of God, & the heritage that tyrants shall receiue of the al-mightie. If he get many children, they shall perish with the sword, and his posteritie shall haue fearnes of bread.
Like vnto whom hee leaueh behind him, they shall dye, & be buried, and no man shall haue pittie of his widowes.

Though he haue as muche money as the dust of the earth, & raiment as redy as the claye, he maye well prepare himselfe: the godly shall put it vpon him, and the innocente shall deale oute the money. His house shall endure as the rocke, and as a boothe that the watche man maketh. When the riche man dyeth, he carryeth nothinge with him: he is gone in the twinklinge of an eye, and hath nothing. Destruction taketh him vpon him as a waterflood, and the tempest scattereth him awaye, in the night season. A vehement eastwinde sweepeth him hence, and departeth: a storme plucketh him out of his place.

It rusheth in vpon him, and sparcth him not, he maye not escape from the power thereof. Then clap men their handes at him, yea, and teale of him, when they looke vpon his place.

I Here is a place where siluer is brought out of: and where gold is tryed, • where yron is digged out of the ground, and stones resolued to metall. The darkenes shall once come to an ende, he can seeke oute the ground of all thinges, the stones the darke, and the shadowe of death.
With the riuier of water parteth he a sondye the straunge people that knowe no good neyghbourhood, suche as are rude, vnmanerly and boystrous. Hee bringeth fooode oute of the earth, and that which is vnder, consumeth hee with fire. There is founde a place whose stones are all cleane Saphirs, and where the clothes of the earth are all gold. There is a way also that the birdes knowe not, that no vulturs eye hath seene: wherin the lions whelpes walke not, and wher no lion cometh.
There putteth he his hande vpon the stonye rockes, and ouerthroweth the mountaines. Riuers flow out of the rockes, and looke what is pleasant, his eye seeth it. Out of droppes bringeth hee great floudes together, and the thing that is hid, bringeth he to light.

Howe cometh a man then by wis-dome? • Where is the place that men finde vnderstandinge? Werelpe no man can tell howe worthie a thinge she is, neither is she found in the lande of them that liue (at their owne pleaure.) The deepe sayeth shee is not with me. The Sea sayeth shee is not with me. Shee can not bee gotten for (that moste pure) golde, neyther may the price of her be brought with anye siluer. No wedges of gold of Ophir, no precious onix stones, no Saphirs may be compared vnto her: no, neither gold nor chrystal, neither sweete odours nor golde plate. There is nothing so worthy of so excellent as once to be sa-med vnto her: for perfect wisdom goeth

The. xxix. Chapter.

I S Job proceeded and went forth in his communication, saying: D that I was as I was in the monethes by past, and in the dayes when God preserved mee: when his lighte shyned vpon my heade, when I went after the same lighte and shyninge, euen throughte the darkenesse. As it stode with me when I was yonge, when God prospered my house: whethe almightie was yet with me: whe-my childzen stode about me: when my wayes ranne ouer with butter, and when the stonie rockes gaue me riuers of oyle, when I wente throught the citie vnto the gate, and when they B sette me a chaire in the streete, when the yong men (as soone as they sawe me) hidde them selues, and when the aged arose, and stode vpp vnto mee: when the princes left of their talking and layed their hande to their mouth: when the mighty kept stil their voice and when their tongue cleaued to the roofof their mouth. When all they that hearde me, called me happie: and when all they that sawe me, spake good of me. For I deliuered the poore when he cryed, and so didde I the satherlesse, and him that hadde none to helpe him. He that shoulde haue bene loste, gaue me a good woorde: and the widowes heartes praysed me. And whyp, I put vpon me righteconfesse, which couered me as a garment, & re-quitie was my crowne. I was an eye to the blinde, and a fore to the lame: I was a father vnto the poore: and whi-I knewe not the cause, I soughte it oute diligentely. I brake the chawes of the vnrighteous man, and plucked the spoyle out of his teeth. Therefore I thought verely, that I should haue died in my nestle, and that my dayes shuld haue ben as many as the sandes of the sea. For my roote was spreade oute by the water side: and the deue laye vpon my cozne. My honour en-creased moze and moze, and my bowe was euer the stronger in my hande.

Vnto me men gaue eare, me they regarded: & with silence they taried for my counsaile. If I had spoken, they woulde haue it none other waies, my woordes were so well taken amonge them. They wayted for me as for the rayne: and gaped vppon me, as the grounde doeth to receyue the latter shoure. When I laughed, they knewe well it was not earnest. And the light of my countenance woulde they not putte out. When I agreed vnto they waye, I was the chiefe, and sat as a king with his armie about him. And when they were in heavines, I was their comfortour.

The. xxx. Chapter.

B Ut nowe they that are yonger the I, haue me in derision, yea, euen they whose fathers I woulde haue thought soone to haue set with the dogges of my cattel. The power and strength of their handes might do me no good, for the time is but lost among them. For very mil-ery and hungr, they fled into the wil-dernes a darke place, horrible & wast, plucking by nettles amonge the bus-shes, and the Juniper rootes for theyr meate. And when they were thus forth, men cryed after them, as it had bene after a sheefe. Their dwelling was besyde foule brookes: yea in the caves and dens of the earth. Among the bushes went they aboute cpyng, and vnder the thrones they gathered themselves together. They were the children of soles and villaynes which are vexed out of the world. Nowe am I their song, and am become their te-sing stocke: they abhorre me, and styfar from me, and stayne my face with spittle. For the Lord hath loosed the strength of my body, and brought me lowe. The hyddle haue they cast out of my sight. Upon my right hand rise the young men agaynst me: they haue hurt my fete treading vpon me, as vpon the wayes that they woulde de-stroye. My pathes haue they cleane marr'd. It was to easie for them to do me harme, that they needed no man to helpe them. They fell vpon me, as it had bene the breaking in of waters, and came in by heapes to destroye me.

Fearfulnesse is turned agaynst me.
Mine honour banissheth awaye more swiftly then the winde, & my prosperitie departeth hence, like as it were a cloude. Therefore is my mind poured full of heavines, and the dayes of my trouble haue taken hold vpon me. My bones are perled through in the night season, and my sinowes take no reste, for the vehemencie of sorowe is my garment chaunged, and according to the diuersitie of heavinesse an I gir-ded with my cote. He hath cast me into the mire, and I am become like ashes and dust. When I crye vnto thee, thou dost not heare me: and though I stand before thee, yet thou regardest me not. Thou art become min enemy, and with thy violent hand thou takest part agaynst me. In times past, thou biddest let me vpon hye, as it were above the winde: but nowe halste thou geuen me a very soxe fall. Sure I am that thou wilt deliuer me vnto death, euen to the lodging that is due vnto all men liuing. Nowe vse not men to doe violence vnto thep, that are destroyed already: but where hurt is done, therese they to helpe. Did not ble? Had not my soule compassion vpon the poore: yet neuertheless, where as I looked for good, euill hapned vnto me, & where as I waited for light, there came darkenesse. My bowelles sethe within me, and take no reste, for the dayes of my trouble are come vpon me. He helpe and lowely came I in, yea, and without any displeasure. I rode vpon in the congregation, and communed with them: But now I am a companion of Dragons, and a selowe of Estriches. My skin vpon me is turned to blacke, and my bones are burnt with heate: my harpe is turned to sorow, and my pipe to weeping.

The .xxxi. Chapter.

Made a couenaunt with mine eyes, that I would not loke vpon a damosell. For howe greate a portion shall I haue of God: and what enheritaunce from the almightie on hie? As for the ben-godly, and he that topneth himselve to the companie of wicked doers, shall not destruction and misery come vpon him? Doeth not he see my wayes, and tell all my goynges? yf I haue walked in vanitie, or yf my feete haue runne to deceaue, let me be wayed in an euen balance, that God maye see my innocencie. If so be that I haue withdrawen my foot out of the right waye, and yf my heart hath folowed mine eye sight: If I haue stayned or defiled my handes: then shall I sow, and an other eate: yea, my generation and posteritie shalbe cleane roted out.
If my heart hath lustred after my ney-bours wife, or yf I haue laide wayte at his doore: Or then let my wife grind vnto an other man, and let other men lye with her. For this is a wickednes and sin, that is worthy to be punished: yea, a fyre that biterlye should consume and rote out al my substance.
Did I euer thinke scoyne to do righte vnto my seruantes and maidens whē they had any matter agaynst me? But seeing that God will sit in iudgement, what shal I do? And for so muche as that I geue him: he that fashioned me in my mothers wombe, made he not him also: were we not both shapē alike in our mothers bodie: when the poze desired any thing at me, haue I denied it them: haue I caused the widowe to stande waytinge for me in dayne: haue I eaten my portion alone, that the fatherlesse hath had no parte with me: for merce grewe by with me fro my yowth, and compassio from my mothers wombe. haue I sene any man perishe thowowe nakednesse, and want of clothing: or any poze man for lacke of rayment, whose sides thanked me not, because he was warmed with the woll of my shepe: Did I euer lifte vpp mine hande to hurte the fatherlesse: yea, in the gate where I sawe my selfe to be in auctoritie, then let mine arme fall fro my shoulder, and mine arme holes be broken from the ioyntes. For I haue euer feared the vengeance and punishment of God, and knewe very well, that I was not hable to beare his burthen. haue I put my trust in gold: or haue I sayde to the fynest gold of all: thou arte my confidence. haue I reioyced because my power was great and because my hande gat so muche:

 that the fozowes therof make any com-playnte: If I haue eaten the frutes ued any of the plowmen: then let this and cockle for my barley.

¶ Here ende the wordes of Job.

¶ The xxxij. Chapter.

Somowze with Job, because he had him selfe a righteous man. But Elihu the sonne of Barachell, the Bussite of the kindred of Ram, was very soze displeased at Job, because he called himselfe iuste before God. And with Jobs three frendes he was angrye also, because they had founde no reasonable answer to overcome Job.
 Howe tarped Elihu, tyll they had ended their cōmunication with Job: for why: they were elder then he. So when Elihu the sonne of Barachell the Bussite sawe that these three men were not hable to make Job answer: he was discontent: Elihu the sonne of Barachell the Bussite answered him selfe, and sayde: • Consideringe that I am yong, and ye be men of age: I was afrayde and durste not shewe foorth my mynd. For I thought that within my selfe. It becometh olde men of speake, and the aged to teache wisdome. Every man (no doubt) hath to mynde, • but it is the infirmitie of the flimzy that groweth out of deridinge. • Great was the swaye wyse, neyther doeth enery aged man vnderstande the thinge, that is sayfull. Therfore will I speake also (heare me) and I will shewe you also mine vnderstandinge. For when I had wayped tyll ye made an ende of your talking, and herd your wisdom what argumentes ye made in youre communication: yea, when I had diligentely pondred what ye sayde, I found not one of you that made anye good argument against Job, that directly coulde make answer vnto his wordes, lest ye should saye: We haue found out wisdom. God shall caste him downe, and no man. He hath not spoken vnto me, and I will not answer him as ye haue done (for they were so abashed, that they coulde not make answer, nor speake one word) but in so much as ye wyl not speake, standing styll lyke dunne men, and making no answer: I haue a good hope for my parte, to shawe hym an answer, and to shewe hym my meaning. For I am full of wordes, and the spirite that is within me, compelleth me. Beholde my belly is as the swyne, which hath no venter, and burleth the new belles in sonder. Therfore wyl I speake, that I maye haue a vent: I will open my lippes, and make answer. I will regard no manner of person, no man will I spare. For if I wold go aboute to please men: I knowe not howe sone my master woulde take me away.

The xxxij. Chapter.

Utherfore, heare my wordes (O Job) andarken vnto me all that I will saye: Beholde, I haue nowe opened my mouth, my tongue hath spoken in my rage. My herte doeth order my wordes a right, and my lippes talke of pure wisdom. The spirite of God hath made me, and the blyth of the Almighty hath geuen me my lyfe. If thou canst then geue me answer: prepare thy selfe to stande before me, face to face. Behold, before God am I cūst. For I am fashioned and made even of the same mould. Therfore thou needest not to be afrated of me: neyther needest thou to feare that my auctoritie shall be to heavy for thee. Nowe haste thou spoken in mine eares, and I haue heard the voyce of thy wordes: I am cleane without any fault, I am innocent, and there is no wickednesse in me. But lo, he hath picked a quarel against me, and taketh me for his enemy: he hath put my soke in the shokes, and loketh narrowly vnto all my pathes. Behold, in this hast thou not done right. I will make answer vnto thee: that God is moze then man. And whye doest thou then stryue against him: for he shall not geue thee accomptes of all his wordes. For when God doeth once commaunde a thing, there should no man be curious to seache whether it be righte. In dreames & visions of the night (when slombering commeth vpon men, that they fall a sleepe in their beddes) he roundeth them in the eares, he enfourmeth them and sheweth them playnly that it is he, which wythdraweth man from euill, deliuereth him from pride, kepeth him from the graue, and his lyfe from the sword. He challeth him with sicknesse, and byngeth hym to his bedde: he layeth soke punishment vpon his boones, so that his life may away with no bread, and his soule abhorreth to eat any dayntye meate. In so much that his body is cleane consumed awaye, and his bones appeare no moze. His lyfe draweth vnto the graue, and his lyfe to death. Nowe, yf there be a messenger (one amonge a thousand) sente for to speake vnto man, and to shewe hym the right waye: then the Lord is mercifull vnto him, and sayeth: He shall be deliuered, that he fall not downe to the graue, for I am sufficientely reconciled. Then shall his fleshe bee as well lykinge as it was afore, and he shall be as it was in his yowthe. For if he submytte him selfe vnto God he shall be gracious vnto him, and shewe hym his countenance ioyfull, and rewardeth man for his righteousnes.

The Booke

Shewe a respecte hath he vnto men.
 Therefore, let a man confesse (& sape:) I haue offended, I did vnrighteously, and it hath done me no good. Yea, he hath deliuered my soule from destruction, and my lyfe shall se the light. So, thus woeketh God alway with man, that he keepeth his soule from per-shinge, and letteth hym enioye the lyght of the lyuing. Marke well (O Job) and heare me: hold thee still, and I will speake. But if thou hast anye thinge to sape, then answer me, and speake, for thy answer pleaseth me.
 If thou hast nothinge, then heare me, and holde thy tongue, so shall I teach thee wisdom.

The xxxiij. Chapter.

E Ihu proceedinge forth in hys answer, saide: Heare my wodes (O ye wyse men) harken vnto me ye that haue vnderstandynge, for the eare proueth and dyscerneth the wordes: and the mouth tasteth the meates: As for iudgemente let vs seke it out among our selues, that we may know what is good. And why?
 Job hath sayde: I am righteous, but God doth me wronge. I must nedes be a lyer, though my cause be righte: and violently I am plagued where as I made no faulte, where is there such a one as Job, that drinketh by scozne-fulnesse like water? which goeth in the company of wicked doers, and watketh with vngodly men? For he hathe sayde: Though a man be good, yet is he naught before God. Therefore her-ken vnto me, ye that haue vnderstandyng. Farre be it from God, that he shoulde meddle with wychednesse: and farre be it from the Almightye, that he shoulde meddle with vnrighteous dealing: For he shall reward the woekes of man, and cause euerye man to finde accordyng to his wayes.
 For sure it is, that God condemneth no man wrongfullye, and the iudge-ment of the Almightye is not vnrighteous. Who ruleth the earth in hys throne? Or whom hath he set to gouerne the whole worlde? Can he know hath he gotten his heart, for to drawe spirite and breath vnto him? If these shal come together vnto nought, and all men shall turne agayne vnto dust.

 If thou now haue vnderstandinge, heare what I say, and herken to the voyce of my wordes. Maye he be a ruler that loueth no right? Or maye he that is a very innocent man, do vngodly? Is it reason that thou shouldest sape to the kinge: Thou art witked, or thou art vngodly, and that before the princes? He hath no respecte vnto the personnes of the lordes, and regardeth not the riche more then the poore. For they be al the woekes of his hands. In the twinkling of an eye shall they dye: and at midnight, when the people and the tyrants rage, then shall they perishe, and be taken awaye without handes. And why? his eyes looke vpon the wayes of man, and he seeth al his goings. There is no darknes, nor shadowe of death, that can hyde the wicked doers from him. For no man shalbe suffered to go into iudgment with God: Many one: yea, innumerable doeth he punish, and lets teth other in their steades. Therefore shall he declare their woekes, he shall turne the night, and they shalbe destroyed. They that were in the steede of sears dealt like vngodly men: & therefore he punished the, because they turned backe from him, and woulde not consider all his wayes. In so muche that they haue caused the voyce of the poore to come vnto him: and now he heareth the complaint of suche as are in trouble. If he graunt pardon, who will condemne? And if he hyde awaye his countenance, who shalbe able to se it? Whether it be to the people, or to any man, thus will he do. For the vngodlinesse of the people doeth God make an hypocrite to repnye ouer them.
 For so muche then as I haue begun to talke of God, I will not hynde thee. If I haue done amysse, entreate thou me: if I haue done wronge, I wil leane. Can he be do nothinge out thee? For thou hast repnyed judgements. Thou also haste thynne owne mind, and not I. But speake on what thou knowest. Let men of vnderstanding tell me, and let a wise man hearken vnto me. As for Job, he hath neyther spoken to the purpose, nor wisely. O father, let Job be wel tryed, because he hath answered for wicked men: yea, aboue his sinne he doeth wickedly, triumpheth amonge vs, and multiplyeth his woordes agaynst God.

The. xxxi. Chapter.

Elisha spake mozeouer, and said: Thinkest thou it righte, that thou saiest: I am righteous before God. For thou sayest: What advantage will it bee vnto thee, and what profite haile thou haue of my sinne. Therefore will I geue answer vnto thee: and to thy companions with thee: looke vnto the heauen, and beholde it: consider the cloudes, which are hyer then thou. If thou haste sinned, what haste thou done agaynst him? If thine offences be many, what haste thou done vnto him? If thou be righteous, what geuest thou him? Or what will he receaue of thine hand? Of such an vngodly person as thou and of the sonne of man that is righteous, as thou pretendest to be: there is a great crye and complaint made by them that are oppressed with violence: yea, euery man complayneth vpon the crueltie of tyrants. For suche a one neuer sayth: where is God that made me: and that geneth vs occasion to walke him in the night: which geneth vs moze vnderstanding then he doeth the brackes of the earth, and teacheth vs moze then he doth foules of heuen. If aspe suche complayne, no man geueth answer, and that because of the wickednesse of proude tyrantes. But if a man call vpon God, doeth not he heare him? Doeth not the Almighty except his crye: When thou speakest then, shoulde not he pardon thee, if thou open thy self before him, and put thy trust in him? Then bleth he no vnto in his wrath, neyther hath hee pleasure in curious and depe inquisitions. Therefore doeth Job open his mouth but in bayne, and foolishly doth he make so many woordes.

The. xxxi. Chapter.

Elisha proceeded forth in his tal- king, and sayde: Hold thee still a little, and I shall shewe thee what I haue yet to speake on Gods behalfe. I will open vnto thee yet moze of mine vnderstanding, & proue my matter righteous. And truly, my woordes shall not be bayne, seing he is with thee that is perfect in knowledge: behold, the great god casteth away no man: for he him selfe is mighty in power & wisdom. As for the vngodly, he shall not perserue him, but shall helpe the poore to thier right. He shall not turne his eyes away fro the righteous, but as kinges shall they be in their trone: he shall stablish them for euer, and they shall be exalted. But if they be layde in prison and chaynes, or bounde with the bondes of trouble, then wil he shewe them thier woike, and the sinnes wherewith they haue bled cruell violence. He with punishment and nurtering of them roundeth them in the eares, warneth them to leaue off from thier wickednesse, and to amende. If they nowse will take heede and serue him, they shall weare out thier dayes in prosperitie, and thier yeares in pleasure and ioye. But if they will not hearken, they shall go through the swearde, and perishe or euer they be aware. As for suche as bee sayned wycrites, they shall heape by wrath for them selues: for they call not vpon him, though they bee his prisoners. Thus shall their soule perishe in foolishnesse, and thier life shalbe condemned amonge the fornicatores. The poore shall he deliuer oute of his affliction, and round them in the care when they be in trouble. Euen so shall he keepe the (yf thou wilt be contente) from the bottomlesse pitte that is beneath: and yf thou wilt holde thee quiete, hee shall fill thy table with pleasantnesse.

Euerthelesse, thou hast condemned the iudgement of the vngodly, yea, euen such a iudgemente and sentence shalt thou suffer. For then shall not thy cause be filled with crueltie, nor pacified with many gifts. Thinkest thou that he will regarde thy riches? he shall not care for golde, nor for all them that excell in strength. Prolong not thou the time, till there come a night for thee, to sette other people in thy steade. But beware that thou turne not aside to wickednes and sin, which hitherto thou hast chosen more then mekenes. Beholde, God is of a might: yee hye power: Where is there such a guide and lawe geuer as he?

Who will reprove him of his waye? Whoe will saye vnto him: thou hast done wronge? Consider how great and excellent his workes bee, whom all men loue and prayse: yee wonder at him, and yet they see him but a farre off. Behold, so great is God, that he passeth our knowledge, neither are we able to come to the experience of his wayes. • Hee tourneth the water to small droppes, he driueth his cloudes together for to rayne, so that they pour downe and drop vpon menne. He can spreade out the cloudes (a coueringe of his tabernacle) and cause his light to shine vpon them, and to couer the bottome of the sea. By these thinges gouerneth hee his people, and geueth them abondaunce of meate. With the cloudes hee hideth the light: and at his commaundement it cometh againe. The rising vp therof sheweth he to his frendes, and to the cattell.

At this my heart is astonied, and moued oute of his place. Heare then the sounde of his voyce, and the noyse that goeth out of his mouth. He gouerneth euery thing vnder the heauen, and his light reacheth vnto the ende of the world. A roaring voyce foloweth him: for his glorious maiestie geueth such a thunder clappe, that (though a man heare

it) yet maye he not perceaue it afterwarde. It cometh on horrible sounde when God sendeth oute his voyce: great thinges doeth he, which we can not comprehend. • When he commaundeth the snowe, it falleth vpon the earth. As soone as he geueth the rayne a charge, immediatly the flowers haue their strength, and fall downe. He sendeth feare vpon euery manne, that they might knowe their owne workes. The beastes creepe into their dennes, and take their rest. Out of the South cometh the tempeste, and colde out of the North. At the breath of God, the frost cometh, and the waters are shed abroade. He maketh the cloudes to do their labour, in geuing moystnes: and agayne, with his light he driueth away the cloudes. Hee distributeth also on euery side, according as it pleaseth him to deale oute his workes, that they maye doo whatsoeuer he commaundeth them through the whole world, whether it be to punish anye lande, or to doo good vnto them that seke him. Herken vnto this (O Job) stande still, and consider the wonderous workes of GOD. Arise thou of counsell with God when he doth these thinges? When he causeth the light to come forth of his cloudes: Arise thou of his counsell, when he spreadeth out the cloudes? Hast thou the perfecte knowledge of his wonders: and how thy clothes are warme when the lande is still thorough the South winde? Hast thou helped him to spreade out heauen, which is to loke vpon, as it were cast out of cleere metall? Teache vs what wee shall saye vnto him: for we are dumme because of darkenesse. Shall it be tolde him what I saye? Should a manne speake, or should hee keepe it backe? For euery manne seeth not the light that hee keepeth cleare in the cloudes which hee cleareth when he maketh the wind to blowe. Colde is brought oute of the North, but the warme and honour of GODDEs face, cometh from GOD himselfe. It is not we that can finde oute the mightie: for in power, equitie, and righteousness, he is hier then can be expessed. Let men therfore feare him, for there shall no man see him that is wise in his owne conceite.

Then answered the LORD vnto Job out of the storme and sayde: what is hee, that hideth his minde with foolishhe wooordes? Job. 11.8 • Gyde vp thy loynes like a manne, for I will question with thee, see thou geue me a directe answer. Where wast thou when I layde the foundations of the earth? Tel plaine-ly, if thou haste vnderstanding. Who hath measured it, knowest thou? Or who hath spreadde the line vppon it? Where vppon stande the pillars of it? Or who laide the corner stone there- of? Where wast thou when the moyn- ninge starres praped me together, and all the chyldren of God reioysed Job. 16.8 a triumphante? • Who shutte the Job. 5.8 sea with doores when it brake forth, Job. 10.4 as a childe out of his mothers wombe? When I made the cloudes to be a co- ueringe for it, and swaddled it with the darke: when I gaur it my com- mandemente, makinge doores and barres for it, saying: Hitherto shalt thou come, but no further: and here shalt thou lye downe thy proude and hye waues. Hast thou giuen the moyninge his charge (as soone as thou wast bozne) and shewed the daye springe his place, that it mighte take holde of the coryners of the earth, and that the vngodlye mighte be shaken out. Their tokens and weapons are turned like claye, and sette vp agayne: Job. 16.8 as the chaunginge of a garment. The vngodlye shalbe disapoynted of their light, and the arme of the proude shal- be broken. Camest thou euer into the grounde of the sea: or walkedst in the lowe coryners of the deepe? Hast thou gates of death ben opened vnto thee, or hast thou sene the doores of the shad- dowe of death? Hast thou also perceay- ned howe broad the earth is? Yf thou had knowledge of all this, then speke me where light dwelleth, and where darkenesse is, that thou mayest bringe vs vnto their quarters, yf thou canst tell the waye to their houses. Knowest thou (afoze thou wast bozne) howe olde thou shouldest be? Wentest thou euer into the treasures of the snowe, or hast thou scene the secrete places of the hable, • whiche I haue prepared agaynst the time of trouble, agaynst the time of battayle and warre? By what way is the light parted, and in- to what land breaketh the east winde? Whoe deuydeth the aboundaunce of waters into riuers, or who maketh a waye for the lighteninge and thunder, and it watereth and moistreth the dry and barren ground: to make the grasse growe in places where no body dwel- leth, and in the wildernesse, where no man remayneth? Who is the father of rayne, or who hath begotten the drop- pes of dewe? Dute of whose wombe came the yse? Whoe hath genozed the coldnesse of the ayre? that the waters are as harde as stoness, and yce conge- led aboue the depe. Wilt thou hynde the swete influens of the seuen star- res? Or arte thou hable to breake the circle of heauen? Canst thou bringe forth the moynning starre, or the eue- ninge starre at convenient time, and conueye them home agayne? Knowest thou the course of heauen, that thou mayest set vp the ordinaunce thereof vpon the earth? Whereouer, canst thou lifte vp thy voyce to the cloudes, that they maye poure downe a great rayne vppon thee? Canst thou thunder also that they maye go their waye, and be obedient vnto thee, saying: Lo here are we? Whoe geueth sure wisdomes or stedfast vnderstanding. Who nambyeth the cloudes in wisdomes? who stilleth & bechemet waters of the heuen? who turneth the clothes to dust, and then to be clothes agayne? Wilt thou hunte the pray fro the AIO, or fede his whel- pes lping in their dens, & lurking in their couches? Who prouideth meate for the rauen when his yong ones cry vnto god, & fly about for lack of meate?

Knowest

Knowest thou the time when the wilde goates bringe forth their yonge, amonge the stonpe rocks? Or layest thou wayte when the hinds vse to fawne? reckonest thou the monethes after they engendre, that thou knowest the time of their bearing? Or when they lye downe, when they calke their yonge ones, and when they are deliuered of their traunple and payne? How their yonge ones growe vp, and waxe great thorow good feeding? When they go forth, & returne not againe vnto them?

Who letteth the wilde Ass goe free, or who loseth the bonds of the mule? Euen I whiche haue geuen the wilderness to be their house, and the vntilled lande to be their dwelling place. That they maye geue no force for the multitude of people in the cities, neyther regarde the crying of the dyuer: but seeke their pasture about the mountaynes, and folowe greene grasse. Will the Unicorn be so tame as to do thee seruice, or to abide still by the cribbe? Canst thou binde the yoke about the Unicorn in the forow to make him plowe after thee in the balleyes? Mayest thou truste him (because he is stronge) or commit thy labour vnto him? Mayest thou beleue him, that he will bringe home thy coyne, or to carpe anye thinge into thy barne? Canst thou the saye wings vnto the Decoakes, or winges and feathers vnto the Storkes? For he leaueth his egges in the earth and layeth them in the duste. He remembereth not, that they mighte bee troden with feete, or broken with some wilde beast. So hard is he vnto his yonge ones, as though they were not his, and laboureth in vaine, without any feare. And that because God hath taken wisdom from him, and hath not geuen him vnderstandinge. When his time is that he flyeth vppon hye, he careth neyther for hysle nor man. Hast thou geuen the hysle his strengthe, or learned him to bowe downe his necke with feare, that he letteth him selfe be dynen forth lyke

a greshopper, where as the skote neynging that he maketh, is fearefull? hee breaketh the grounde with the hoofes of his feete cherefullye in his strength, and runneth to mete the battelle men. He layeth asyde all feare, his stomache is not abated, neyther starteth he abacke for anye swearde. Though the quiuers rattle vppon him, though the speare and shield glisten, yet russeth he in fierly, and beateth vpon the ground. He feareth not the noyse of the trumpets: but as fast as he heareth the shawmes blowe, thus he (sayeth he) for he smelleth the battayle as farre of, the noyse, the captaynes, and the shewing. Commeth it through thy wisdom, that the Goshawke flyeth towarde the South? Doth the Eagle mount vp, and make his nest on hye at thy commaundement? He abideth in stonpe rocks, and vpon the hye tops of harde mountaynes, where no man can come. From thence sekerh he his praye, and loketh farre about with his eyes. His yonge ones are fed with bloud: and where anye deade bodie lyeth, there is he immediately.

Moreouer, God spake vnto Job, and sayde: can he that striveth with the almighty, be at rest? Should not he which disputeth with God, geue him an answer? Job answered the Lord, saying: Beholde, I am to vile a person to answer thee: therefore will I lay my hande vpon my mouth. Ones of wise haue I spoken, but I will saye no more. Then answered the Lord vnto Job out of the storme, and said: • Gyrd by thy loynes now like a man, and tell me the thinges that I will aske thee. Wilt thou disannul my iudgement? Or wilt thou condemne me, that thou thy selfe maist be made righteous? Is thy power then like the power of god? Maketh thy voyce such a sound as his doth? Canst thou arme thy selfe with thine own power: vp, beate them in thy toly aray, poure out a flood of thy wrath: see that thou downe all the ppynde : looke well, that thou makest all suche as be stub-borne, to obey: treade downe all the yngodlye in their place, caste theym downe into the duste, and couer their faces with darkenesse: Then wilt I confesse vnto thee also, that thyne own right hand shall saue thee. We-hold, the beast Behemoth (whom I made with thee) which eateth hay as an Ox: lo, howe stronge he is in his loynes, and what power he hath in the nauell of his bodye. He spre-deth out his taylor like a Cedre tree, all his baynes are stiffe. His shinnes are like pyres of brasse, his ridge bones are like stanes of yron. Firste, when God made him, he ordeyned the wildernes for him, that the moun-taines should geue him grasse, where all the bestes of the fildes take theyr pastime. He lyeth amonge the reedes in the molles, the fennes hide him with their shadowe, and the willowes of the brooke couer him rounde about. lo, without any laboꝝ, mighte he drinke out of the whole floud, and suppe of Jordan withoute anye trauelle. who dare lay hande vppon him

 Darest thou drawe out . . . Leuitathan with a snare? Canst thou put a ringe in the nose of him, or boare his iawe through with an aule. Will he make many saye wooddes with thee (thinkest thou) or flatter thee? Will he make a couenant with thee? O: art thou able for to compell him to do thee continuall seruice? Wilt thou take thy pastime with him, as with a birde, or geue him vnto thy maydens that thy companions maye make a refection of him: or that he maye bee parted amonge the marchant menne?

 Canst thou fill the basket with his him? It is better for thee to consider what harme might happen therethpon, and not to touche him. For when thou thinkest to haue holde vpon

A man is so cruel, that he is able to stirre him vp. . . who is able to stande before me?
 O: who hath geuen me any thing afoze hande, that I maye re-warde him agayne? All thinges vnder heauen are mine: I feare him not, whether hee threaten or speake saye.
 Who listeth him vp, and strippeth him out of his clothes, or who taketh him by the bit of his bydle? Who openeth the doore of his face? for he hath horrible teeth round about. His bodye is couered with scales, as it were with sheldes lockt in, kept, and well compact together. One is so toynted to another, that no ayre can come in: Yea, one hangeth so vpon another, and sticketh so fast together, that they can not be sondred. His nefing is like a glistering fire, and his eyes like the morninge shine. Out of his mouth goe torches, and out of his nostrils, there goeth a smoke, like as out of an whor seething pot. His breath maketh the coales burne, and the flame goeth out of his mouth. In his neck remaineth strength, and nothinge is to laborious for him. The membes of his bodye are toynted so strayte one to another, and cleaue so fast together, that he can not be moued. His heart is as harde as a stone, and as false as the lithye, that the smith smiteth vpon. When he goeth, the mightye are asrayde, and feare troubleth theym. If any man drawe out a swerde at him, it shall not hurt him: There maye neyther speare, Javelin, nor best plate abide him. He setteth as muche by a strawe as by yron: And as muche by a rotten stocke, as by brasse. He starteth not awaye for him that bendeth the bow: and as for sling stones, he careth as much for stubble, as for theym. He counteth the darters no better then a strawe: he laugheth

 He treadeth the golde in the mire: like

Esa. 28. c
I. Re. 16
Then Job answered the Lord, and sayde. • I knowe that thou haste power ouer all thinges, and that there is no thoughte hid vnto thee. For who can keepe his owne counsaile so secrete, but it shalbe knowne? Therefore haue I spoken that I vnderstoode not the thinges that are so hye, and passe mine vnderstandinge. O hearken thou vnto me also, and let me speake: aunswere vnto the thinge that I will aske thee. I haue geuen diligent eare vnto thee: & nowe I see with mine eyes. Wherefore I geue mine owne selfe the blame, and take repentance in the dust and ashes. Nowe when the Lord, had spoken these wordes vnto Job, it fortuned, that the Lord sayde vnto Eliphaz the Themanite: I am displeased with thee, and thy two frendes: for ye haue not spoken of me the thinge that is right, like as my seruauant Job hath done. Therefore take you nowe seuen Oxen, and seuen rammes, and go to my seruauant Job, • and offer vp for your selues a burnt offering, and my seruauant Job shall praye for you. Him will I accept: and not deale with you after your foolishnes, in that ye haue not spoken the thing which is right, like as my seruauant Job hath doone. So Eliphaz the Themanite, and Bildad the Shuhite, and Sophar the Naamathite wente they: waye, and did accordyng as the Lord commaunded them. • The Lord also accepted the person of Job, and the Lord turned the Captiuitie of Job, when he prayed for his frendes: Yea the Lord gaue Job. twice as muche as he had afore. And then came there vnto him all his brethren, all his sisters, & al they that had bene of his acquaintance afore, and did eate breade with him in his house, wondring at him, and comfortyng him ouer all the trouble, that the Lord had brought vpon him. Euery man also gaue him a certayne summe of money, and a Jewell of golde. And the Lord made Job richer then he was afore: for he hadde fourteene Myllysheepe, sixe thousand camels: a thousand yoke of Oxen, and a thousand Asses. He had seuen sonnes also, and thre daughters. The firste daughter called he Remima, the seconde Rezia, and the thirde Kerubabuch. In all the lands were no women founde so fayre, as the daughters of Job: and theyr father gaue them enheritance amonge their brethren. After this liued Job an hundred and forty yeares, so that he sawe

As for the vngodly, it is not so with them: but they are like the chaffe whiche the winde scattereth awaye (from the face of the earth.)

Therefore the vngodly shall not be able to stande in the iudgement, neither the synners in the congregation of the righteous.

of the righteous, and the waye of the vngodly shall perishe.

ously rage together: and why do the people imagine a hayne his wrath: and breke them in his force displeasure.

Yet haue I set my kinge, vpon my holy hill of Sion.

I will preache the lawe, wherof the Lord hath saide vnto me: thou art my son, this day haue I begotten thee.
Desyre of me, and I shall geue thee the heathen for thyne emperitance, & the the most partes of the earth for thy possession.

Thou shalt breake them with a rodde of yron, and breake them in pe-ces: like a potters vessel.

We wise knowe therfore, O ye kinges: be learned, ye that are iudges of the earth.

Serue the Lord in feare, & reioyce (vnto him) with reuerence.

Kisse the sonne lest he be angry, and so ye perishe from the (right) way, of his wrath be kindled (yea but a little) blessed are all they that put their trust

They are corrupt, and become abominable in their doings: there is not one that doth good, no not one.

The Lord looked downe from heauen vpon the chyldren of men, to see if there were anye that woulde stande and seke after God.

But they are all gone oute of the waye, they are altogether become abominable: there is none that doeth good, no not one.

Their throte is an open sepulchre: with their tonges they haue disceyued, the poison of asps is vnder their lippes.

Their mouth is full of cursinge and bitterness, their feete are swifte to shed blood.

Destruction and unhappynesse is in their wayes, and the waye of peace haue they not knowen: there is noo feare of God before their eyes.

Haue they not knowedge that they are all suche workers of mischief, eating vpon my people as it were breade.

And call not vpon the Lorde, there were they brought in great feare.

Euery where no feare was,

All my deliue is vpon the Saintes that are in the earth, and vpon suche as excell in vertue.

But they that runne after an other God shall haue great trouble.

Their drinke offeringe of bloude will not I offer, neither mention of their names within my lippes.

Shewe thy mercayous louinge kindnesse, thou that art the saviour of them which put their trust in thee.

From suche as resist thy right hande. Keep me as the apple of an eye, hyde me vnder the shadow of thy winges.

From the vngodly that trouble me. Mine enemies compass me round about, to take away my soule.

They are enclosed in their stone fat, and their mouth speaketh proudly things.

They lye waytinge in oure waye on euery syde, tounning their eyes downe to the ground.

Like as a lyon that is greedy of his praye, and as it were a lions whelp lurking in secret places.

Up Lord, disapoint him and cast him downe: deliuer my soule from the vngodly, whiche is as a sworde of thyne.

From the men of thy hand, O Lord from the men I saue, and from the euill world, which haue their portion in this life: whose helpe thou filled with thy hid treasure.

They haue chyldren at their desire: and leaue the reste of their substance for their babes.

But as for me, I will beholde thy presence in rightousnesse: and when I awake vp after thy likenes, I shall be satisfied with it.

The.xviii. Psalme.

Diligam te domine.

I will loue thee, O Lord, my strength.

The Lord is my stronge rocke and my defence, my saluoure: my God, and my might, in whom I will truste, my buckler, the horne also of my saluation, and my refuge.

I will call vpon the Lord, which is woorthye to be prayled, so shall I be safe from mine enemies.

The sorowes of death compassed me, and the ouerflowing of vngodlynesse made me aspre.

The pangs of hell came about me, the snares of death ouerooke me.

In my trouble will I call vpon the Lord, and complayne vnto my God.

So shall he heare my voyce out of his holpe temple, and my complaynt shall come before him: is shall enter euery into his eares.

The earth trembled and quaketh, the very foundations also of the world shoke and were remoued, was forth.

There wente a smoke oute of his presence, and a consuminge fyre oute of his mouth, so that coales wer kindled at it.

He bowed the heauens also, & came downe: & it was darke vnder his fete.

He rode vpon the Cherubines, and hid hys, he came flyinge vpon the wynges of the wynde.

He made darknes his secreete place: his pavilion rounde about him, with darke water, and thicke cloudes to couer him.

At the brightnesse of his presence his cloudes remoued, hyle stoness and coales of fyre.

He also thundred out of heauen, and the hyst gaur his thunder, hyle stoness and coales of fyre.

He sente out his arrowes and scattered them: he cast soorly lightnings and destroyed them.

The springes of waters wer sene, & the foundations of the round world were discovered at thy chidinge, O Lord at the blasinge of the breath of thy displeasure.

Hee shall sende downe from the height to fetch me, and shall take me oute of many waters.

He shall deliuer me from my strongest enemy, and fro them whiche hate me: for they are to myghty for me.

They persecuted me in the daye of my trouble: but the Lord was my vpholder.

He brought me forth also into a place of libertie: he brought me forth, euen because he had a sauoure vnto me.

The Lord shall rewarde me after my righteous dealinge: accordinge to the cleanness of my handes shall he recompence me.

Because I haue kepte the wayes of the Lord: and haue not forsaken my God as the wicked doeth.

For I haue an eye vnto all his lawes: and will not cast out his commandementes fro me.

I was also vncorrupt before him, and refused none of his wickednes.

Therefore shall the Lord rewarde me after my righteous dealinge: and accordinge vnto the cleanness of my handes in his eye sight.

With the holge thou shalt be holpe, and with a perfect man thou shalt be perfecte.

With the cleane thou shalt be clene: and with the srowarde thou shalt learne srowardnes.

For thou shalt saue the people that are in aduersitie, and shalt brynge downe the hye lookes of the proude.

Thou also shalt light my candell, the Lord my God shall make my darkenes to be light.

For in thee I haue disconfit an host of men, and with the helpe of my God I shall leape ouer the wall.

The waye of God is an vndefiled waye, the waye of the Lord also is tryed in the fire, he is the defender of all them that put their trust in him.

For who is God but the Lord? Who hath any strength except our God?

It is God that girdeth me with strength of warre, and maketh my waye perfecte.

He maketh my feete like hartes Abac. 3. d. feete: and setteth me vp on hye.

He teacheth mine handes to fight, and mine armes shall bryake euen a bowe of Steele.

Thou hast geuen mee the defence of thy saluation: thy right hande also shall holde me vp, and thy louing correction shall make me great.

Thou shalt make roome ynoughe vnder me for to go, that my fote stepes shall not slyde.

I will folowe vpon mine enemyes, and ouertake them, neyther will I turne agayne, till I haue destroyed them.

I will smite them, that they shall not be habile to stande: but fall vnder my feete.

Thou hast girded me with strength vnto the battayle, thou shalt throwe downe mine enemyes vnder me.

Thou hast made mine enemyes also to turne their backs vpon me, and I shall destroye them that hate me.

Thou shalt deliuer me fro the strynges of the people: and thou shalt make me the head of the Heathen.

I people whom I haue not known, shalt serue me.

As soone as they heare of me they shall obrey me: but the straunge children shall dissemble with me.

Let me not be confounded, O Lord, for I haue called vpon thee: lette the vngodly be put to confusion, and be put to silence in the graue.

Lette the lying lippes be put to silence, whiche cruelly, disdainfully, and dispitefully speake agaynst the righteous.

O howe plentiful is thy goodness, whiche thou hast layde vp for them that feare thee: and that thou hast prepared for them, that put their truste in thee, euen before the sonnes of men.

Thou shalt hyde them pryncipally thine owne presence from the prouoking of all men: thou shalt kepe them secretly in thy tabernacle, from the strife of tongues.

Thanks be to the Lord: for he hath shewed me marueylous great kindness in a strong citie.

And when I made hast, I sayd: I am cast out of the sight of thine eyes.

Nevertheless, thou heardest the voyce of my prayer, when I cryed vnto thee.

O loue the Lord, all ye his sayntes, for the Lord preserveth them that are saythfull, and plentifully rewardeth he the proude doer.

Be stronge, and be shall stablish your heart, all ye that put your trust in the Lord.

The xliij. Psalme.
Iudica me deus.

Goe sentence with me, O God, and defende my cause against the vngodlye people: Oh deliuer me from the deceiptfull and wicked man.

For thou art the god of my strength whye hast thou put me from thee: and whye go I so heuilly, while the enemye oppresseth me?

Oh sende out thy light & thy truth that they may leade me, and bringe me vnto thy holy hill, and to thy dwelling And that I maye go vnto the altar of God, euen vnto the God of my ioye and gladnesse.

And vpon the harpe will I geue thanks vnto thee, O God my God.

Psal. 42. • Whye arte thou so heauye (O my soule) and whye art thou so disquieted within me?

O put thy trust in God, for I will yet geue him thanks, whiche is the helpe of my countenance, & my God.

The xliij. Psalme.
Deus auribus nostris.

Morning
Prayer.

Deu. 6, b

We haue herd with our eares O God, • our fathers haue told vs, what thou hast done in their time of olde.

How thou hast giuen out the heathen with thy hand, and planted them in: how thou hast destroyed the nations, and cast them out.

Deu. 9. a • For they got not the lande in possession throughte their owne swearde, neither was it their owne arme that helped them.

But thy righte hande, and thyne arme, & the light of thy countenance, because thou haddest a fauoure vnto them.

Pla. 97 b

• Thou art my kinge, O G O D

The ix. day.

sende helpe vnto Iacob:

Throught thee, will we overthrowe our enemies, and in thy name will we trade theym vnder, that rise vp against vs.

For I wil not trust in my bow: it is not my swearde that shal helpe me. But it is thou that sauest vs from our enemies, and putteth them to confusion that hate vs.

We make our boast of God all the daye longe: and will praise thy name for ever. Glos.

But now thou art farre of, and putteth vs to confusion, and goest not forth with our armies.

Thou makest vs to turne our backs vpon our enemies: so that they which hate vs, spoile our goodes.

Thou lettest vs bee eaten vp like shepe: and hast scatterred vs amonge the heathen.

Thou sellest thy people for naught: and takest no money for them.

Thou makest vs to bee rebuked of our neyghbours, to bee laughed to scoone, and had in derision, of them that are round about vs.

Thou makest vs to be a byword amonge the heathen, and that the people shake their heads at vs.

My confusion is dayely before me, and the shame of my face hath covered me.

For the voyce of the slanderer & blasphemers: for the enemy & auenger.

And though all this be come vpon vs, yet doo we not forget thee: nor haue our selues forwarde in thy countenance.

Our hert is not turned backe, neither our steps gone out of thy waye.

No not when thou hast smitten vs into the place of dragons, and covered vs with the shadowe of death.

If we haue forgotten the name of our God, and holden vp our hands to any strange God.

Shal not God search it out: for he knoweth & very secrets of the heart.

• For thy sake also are we killed all the daye long, and are counted as shepe appointed to be slayne.

My Lord, why sleepest thou awake and be not absent from vs for euer.

Wherefore hidest thou thy face, and forgettest our misery and trouble?

ph. 119 • For our soule is brought to we euen vnto the dust, our healy cleanneth vnto the ground.

Trise and helpe vs, and deliuer vs by thy mercyes sake.

The .xix. Psalme.

Exultauit cor meum.

My heart is inditing of a good matter: I speake of the thinges which I made vnto the king.

My tongue is the penne of a ready writer.

Thou art fairer then the childe of men, full of grace are thy lips: because God hath blessed thee for euer.

Giue thee with thy swerde vpon thy thigh (O thou most mightie) according to thy worship and renoume.

Good lucke haue thou with thyne bow, ride on because of the word of truth, of mekeness, and righteousnes: and thy right hande shall teache thee terrible thinges.

Thy arrows are very sharpe, and the people shall be subdued vnto thee, euen in the middes amonge the Kinges enemies.

ph. 119 • Thy seate, O God, endureth for euer: the scepter of thy kingdome is a right scepter.

Thou hast loved righteousnesse, and hated iniquitie: wherefore God euen thy God hath annoynted thee with the oyle of gladnesse aboue thy felowes.

All his garmentes smell of myrr bloes, and Cassia, out of þe pnyss pale-as, wherby they haue made thee glad.

Kinges daughters were amonge thy honorable women: vpon thy righte hand did stand the queene in a besture of golde (wrought aboute with di-uers colours.)

Hearken (O daughter) & consider and incline thyne eare: forget also thyne owne people, and thy fathers house.

So shall the king haue pleasure in thy beaultie, for he is the Lord (God) and worship thou him.

And the daughter of Tyre shall be there with a gifte, like as the riche also amonge the people shall make thei supplication before thee.

The kings daughter is al glorious win, her clothing is of wrought gold.

She shall be brought vnto the king in raiment of noble work: the virgins that be her felowes, shall beare her copany, and shall be brought vnto thee.

With ioye and gladnesse shall they be brought: and shall enter into the kings Palace.

In stede of thy fathers, thou shalt haue childe, whome thou mayest make princes in all landes.

I will remembre thy name from one generation to an other: therefore shall the people geue thanks vnto thee, for euer without ende.

The .xixi. Psalme.

Deus noster refugium.

God is oure hope and strength:
a very present helpe in trouble.

Therefore will we not feare

The riuers of the floudde thereof, shall make gladde the Citie of God, the holpe place of the tabernacles of the most highest.

God is in the midd of her, therefore shall she not bee remoued: God shall helpe her, and that right early.

The heathen make much ado, and the kingdomes are moued: but God hath shewed his voyce, and the earth shall melt away.

The Loyde of hostes is with vs, B the god of Iacob is our refuge. Selas.

vnto God with the voyce of melodye.

Pla. 96. a For the Lord is hye, and to be feared, he is the great kinge vppon all the earth.

He shall subdne the people vnder vs, and the nations vnder our feete.

He shall choose out an heritage for vs: euen the worship of Jacob whom he loued. Sela.

God is gone by with a mery noyse: and the Lord with the sounde of the trumpe.

We sing prayles, singe prayles vnto (oure) God: & sing prayles, singe prayles vnto our king.

For God is kinge of all the earth, sing ye prayles with vnderstandinge.

God reygneth ouer the Heathen:
God sitteth vpon his holy seate.

The princes of the people are top-ned vnto the people of the God of Abraham: for God (which is verye hye exalted) doeth defende the earth, as it

The. xlvij. Psalm.
Magnus dominus.

Great is the Lord, and hightye to be prayled in the citie of oure God, euen vpon his holpe hill.

The hill of Sion is a faire place, and the ioye of the whole earth: vpon the northside lyeth the Citie of the great king.

God is well knowne in her palaces, as a sure refuge,

For lo: the kinges (of the earth) are gathered, and gone by together.

They marueled, to see such things:

they were astonied, and sodenlye cast downe.

Fear came there vpon them, and sorrowe as vpon a woman in her tra-uaille: thou shalt breake the shippes of the sea, throught the east winde.

Like as we haue heard, so haue we sene in the citie of the Lord of hostes, in the citie of our God: God behol-deth the same for euer. Sela.

We maye for thy louinge kinde-nesse, (O God) in the midst of thy temple.

(O G O D) accordinge vnto thy name, so is thy prayle vnto the worl-des ende: thy righte hande is full of righteousnes.

Let the mounte Sion reioyce, and the daughters of Iuda be glad, because of thy iudgementes.

Walke about Sion, and go rounde about her: and tell the towyes thereof.

Marke well her bulwarkes, let by her houses, that ye may tell them that come after.

For this God is our God for euer: ouer, he shalbe our gyde vnto death.

The. xlix. Psalm.
Audite hac gentes.

Hear this, all ye people: ponder it with youre eares, all ye that dwell in the world.

Hy and lowe, riche and poore, one with another.

My mouth shall speake of wisdom, and my heart shal muse of vnderstan-dinge.

I will encline mine eare to the parable, and I shewe my darke speche by pon the harpe.

Wherefore shoulde I feare in the dayes of wickednesse, and when the wickednesse of my heeles compasseth me round about?

There be some that put their trust in their goodes: and boast them selues in the multitude of their riches.

But no man maye deliuer his brother, nor make agreement vnto God for him.

For it cometh moze to redeme their soules, so that he muste be that alone for ever.

Yea, though he live longe, and see not the grave.

• For he seeth, that wise men also dye, and perishe together, as well as the ignorant and foolish, and • leave their riches for other.

And yet they thinke, that their houses shall continue for ever: and that their dwelling places shall endure from one generation to another, and call the landes after their owne names.

Nevertheless, man will not abide in honour, seeing he may be compared unto the beastes that perishe: this is the way of them.

This is their foolishnes, and their posteritie puple their saying. Sela.

They lye in the hell like sheepe: death gnaweth upon them.

And the righteous shall have dominion of them in the morning: their beautie shall consume in the sepulchre out of their dwelling.

But God shall deliuer my soule from the place of hell, for he shall receive me. Sela.

Be not thou afrayde though he one be made riche, or of the glorie of his house be increased.

• For he shall carry nothing away with him wh. he dyeth, neither shall his pompe followe him.

For while he lived, he counted him self an happy man: and so long as thou doest well unto thy selfe, men will speake good of thee.

He shall followe the generations of his fathers, and shall neuer see light.

Man being in honour hath no understanding: but is compared unto the beastes that perishe.

The .i. Psalm.

Deus deorum dominus

The Lord, even the most mighty God hath spoken, and called the worlde.

From the risinge by of the sunne: unto the goinge downe thereof.

Out of Zion hath God appeared in perfect beautie,

Our God shall come, and shall not kepe silence.

There shall go before him a consuming fire, and a mightie tempest shall be stirred by round about him.

He shall call the heauen from above, and the earth, that he maye iudge his people.

Gather my sayntes together vnto me, those that haue made a covenante with me with sacrifice.

And the heauens shall declare his righteousness, for God is iudge him selfe.

Hearc O my people, and I will speake, I my selfe will testifie agaynst thee O Israell: for I am God, euen thy God. Sela.

I will not reprove thee because of thy sacrifices, or for thy burntofferings, because they were not alwaye before me.

• I will take no bullocke out of thy stable, nor he goe out of thy foldes. Amo. 5. d.

For all the beastes of the forest are mine, and so are the cattel upon a thousand hilles.

I knowe all the foules upon the mountaynes, and the wilde beastes of the field are in my sight.

If I be hungry I wil not tell thee: for the whole worlde is mine, and all that therein is.

Thinkest thou that I wil eat bulles flesh: and drinke the blood of goates.

Offer vnto God thanksgueing, and pay thy bowes vnto the most high.

And call vpon me in the time of trouble: so will I heare thee, and thou shalt prayse me.

But vnto the vngodly saide God: why dost thou preache my lawes, and takest my covenante in thy mouth.

Where as thou hatest to be inforced: thou hast cast my wordes behind thee.

When thou sawest a theefe, thou consentedst vnto him: and hast bene partaker with the aduoucers.

Thou hast lette thy mouth speake wickednes: and with thy tongue thou hast set forth discente.

Thou satest and spakest agaynst thy brother: yea, and hast slandered thyne thine owne mothers sonne.

These thinges hast thou done, and I held my tongue: and thou thoughtest (wickedly) that I am euen such a one as thy selfe: but I will reprove thee, and let before thee the thinges that thou hast done.

Consider this, ye that forgette God: leaste I plucke you away, and there be none to deliuer you.

Who so offereth me thanks and prayse, he honoureth me: and to him that ordereth his conuersation righte will I shewe the saluation of God.

The .ii. Psalme.

Miserere mei deus

Have mercy vpon me, O God, after thy great goodnes. According vnto the multitude of thy mercies, do away mine offences.

Wash me thorowly fro my wickednes, and cleanse me from my sinne.

Job. 25 For I knowledg my faultes, Luk. 15 and my sinne is euer before me.

Rom. 3 I gaynst thee onely haue I sinned, and done this euill in thy sight, that thou mightest be iustified in thy saying, and cleare when thou art iudged.

Beholde, I was shapen in wickednesse: and in synne hath my mother conceived me.

But lo, thou requirest truth in the inward partes, and shalt make me to vnderstande wisdom secretly.

Ps. 13 Thou shalt pouрге me with hope, and I shalbe cleane: thou shalt wash me, and I shalbe whiter then snow.

Thou shalt make me heare ioye and gladnesse: that the bones whiche thou hast broken may reioyce.

Turne thy face from my synnes, and put out all my misdoedes.

Exe. 29 Make me a cleane heart, O God, and renue a right spirite within me.

Cast me not away from thy presence, and take not thy holy spirite from me.

O geue me the comfort of thy helpe agayne, and stablish me with thy free spirite.

Then shall I teach the wayes vnto the wicked, and synners shalbe converted vnto thee.

Deliuere me from bloud guiltinesse, O God, thou that arte the God of my health: and my tonge shall singe of thy righteousness.

Thou shalt open my lips, O Lord, and my mouth shall shewe thy prayse.

For thou despayst no sacrifice, els would I geue it thee: but thou despayst not in burntofferings.

The sacrifice of God is a troubled spirite, a broken and a contrite heart, O God shalt thou not despise.

O be fauourable and gracious vnto Syon, buylde thou the walles of Ierusalem.

Then shalt thou be pleased with the sacrifice of righteousness with the burntofferings and oblations: then shall they offer yonge bullockes vpon thyne altier.

The .iii. Psalme.

Quid gloriaris in malitia.

Vhy boastest thou thy selfe, thou tyrant, that thou canst do mischief.

Where as the goodnesse of God endureth yet dayly.

Thy tongue imagineth wickednesse, and with iyes thou cuttest iyes a sharpe rasoure.

Thou hast loued vngenerosities more then goodnes, & to talke of iyes more then righteousness. Heia.

Thou hast loued to speake al words that may do hurt, O thou false tonge.

Therefore shal God destroy thee for euer, he shal take thee & plucke thee out of thy dwelling, and rote thee out of the lande of the liuing. Heia.

The righteous also shal see this, & feare, and shall laugh him to scorn.

Lo, this is the man, that toke not God for his strength, but trusted in the multitude of his riches, and strengthened him selfe in his wickednesse.

As for me, I am like a greene ioye tree in the house of god: my trust is in the tender mercies of God, for euer and euer.

I will alwaies gene thanks vnto thee, for that thou hast done: and I will hope in thy word, for thy sayings thyke it well.

The .ii. Psalme.

Dixit Insipiens.

The foolish booke hath layde in his heart: there is no God.

Corrupt are they, and become abominable in their wickednesse, there is none that doth good.

God looked downe from heauen vpon the children of men, to see if there were anye that would vnderstande and seke after God.

But they are all gone oute of the way, they are altogether become abominable: there is also none that doth good, no not one.

Ye nor they withoute vnderstandinge that woike wickednes, eatinge by my people as if they would eate bread, they haue not called vpon God.

They were affraide where no feare was: for God hath broken the bones of him that beleeged thee: thou hast put them to confusion, because God hath despised them.

O that the saluation were geuen vnto Israel out of Zion: O that the Lord would deliuer his people out of captiuitie.

Then should Jacob reioyce, and Israel should be right glad.

The .liii. Psalme.

Deus in nomine dñi.

Surme, O God, for thy names sake: and auenge mee in thy strength.

Hear my prayer O God, and hearken vnto the wordes of my mouth.

For draungers are risen by against me, and tyrannies which haue not God before their eyes: seeke after my soule.

Beholde GOD is my helper: the Lord is with them that vpholde my cause.

He shall rescue me from mine enemies: and thou shalt bring me out of the hand of mine oppressors.

In offeringe of a free heart with I gene thee: and praye thy name (O Lord) because it is so conforable.

For he hath deliuered me out of all my trouble: and mine eye hath seene his desire vpon mine enemies.

The .lv. Psalme.

Exaudi deus.

Hear my prayer (O God) and hide not thy selfe from my petition.

Take heede vnto me, and heare me, how I mourne in my prayer and am vexed.

The enemy cryeth so, and the vngodly commeth on so fast, for they are minded to do me some mischief, so maliciously are they set against me.

My heart is disquieted within me, and the feare of death is fallen vpon me.

Fearfulnesse and tremblinge are come vpon me: and an horrible dreade hath ouerwhelmed me.

And I sayde, O that I had wings like a dove: for then would I flye away and be at rest.

Lo, then would I get me awayne farre off: and remaine in the wilderness. Sela.

I would make haste to escape, because of the stormy wind and tempest.

Destroye their tongues (O Lord) and deuide them: for I haue spied vnrighteousnes and strife in the Citie.

Day and night go they about with in the walles thereof: mischief and al so sorrowe are in the midst of it.

Wickednes is therein, disceate and gyle go not out of her stretes.

For it is not an open enemy that hath done this dishonour, for then I should haue doone it: neither was it my aduersarye, that did magnifie himselfe against me, for then (peraduenture) I would haue hid my selfe from him.

But it was euen thou, my companion, my gyde, and mine owne familie: thou art frende.

My soule truly sayeth still vpon God, for of him cometh my saluation.

He beareth is my strength and my saluation: he is my defence, so that I shall not greatly fall.

Howe longe will ye ymagyne mischiese againste euery man, ye shall be slayne all the sorte of you: yea, as a tottering wall shall ye be, and lyke a broken hedge.

Their deuice is onely howe to put him out whom God will exalt, their delite is in lyer: they geue good wordes with their mouth, but curse him with their herte. Sela.

Nevertheless, my soule maye trust vpon God: for my hope is in hym.

He truly is my strength, and my saluation: he is my defence, so that I shall not fall.

In God is my health and my glory, the rocke of my myght: and in God is my trust.

O put your trust in his name.

The. lxxii. psalme.

Quam bonus Israel.

Truly God is louing vnto Israel: euen vnto such as are of a cleane heart.

Neuerthelesse, my feete were almost gone, my treadings had well ny slipt.

And why, • I was greened at the wicked: I do see also the vngodly in suche prosperitie.

For they are in no perill of death: but are lustye and strong.

They come in no misfortune like other folke, neyther are they plagued like other men.

And this is the cause that they be so holden with pryde, and ouerwhelmed with crueltie.

Their eyes swell for fatnesse, and they do euen what they list.

They corrupt other, and speake of wicked blasphemie: their talking is against the most highest.

For they stretch forth their mouth vnto the heuen, and their tonge goeth through the woilde.

Therefore sal the people vnto them, and therout sucke they no small advantage.

Thus (saye they) howe shoulde God perceyue it: is there knowledge in the most highest?

Lo, these are the vngodly, these prosper in the woilde, and these haue riches in possession. (And I saide.)

Then haue I cleansed my heart in baine, and washed my handes in innocencie.

Al the day long haue I bene punished, and chastened every morning.

Yea, and I hadde almost sayde euen as they: but so, then shoulde I haue condemned the generation of the children.

Then thought I to vnderstande this, but it was to harde for me.

Unill I went into the Sanctuary of God: then vnderstode I the end of these meane.

For howe thou dost set them in slippery places: and castest them downe, and destroyest them.

Howe suddenly do they consume perishe, and come to a fearfull ende? Esa. 19 b

Yea, euen like as a dreame, when one awaketh, so shalt thou make their image to vanishe out of the Citie.

Thus my heart was greued, and it went euen through my repnes.

So foolish was I and ignorant, euen as it were a beast before thee.

Neuerthelesse, I am alwaies by thee: for thou hast holden me by my right hande.

Thou shalt guide me with thy counsell, and afterwarde receiue me with gloype.

Whom haue I in heauen but thee: and there is none vpon earth, that I desire in comparison of thee.

My fleshe and my heart faileth, but God is the strength of my heart, and my porton for euer.

For so, they that forsake thee, shall perishe: thou hast destroyed all them that commit fornication against thee.

But it is good for me, to holde me fast by God, to put my truste in the Lord God, & to speke of al thy works, in the gates of the daughter Sion.

Esa. 27.1 • Thou broughtest out fountaynes and waters out of the harde rockes: thou driedst by mightie waters.

The daye is thine, and the nighte is thine: thou hast prepared the light and the sunne.

Thou hast set all the borders of the earth, thou hast made summer and winter.

D Remember this, O Lorde, howe the enemye hath rebuked, and howe the foolish people hath blasphemed thy name.

Deliver not the soule of the turtle doue vnto the multitude of the enemies: and forget not the congregation of the poore for euer.

Looke vpon the couenaunt, for all the earth is full of darknes, and cruell habitations.

Let not the simple go awaye ashamed, but let the poore and needye geue prayse vnto thy name.

Set not by your hozne on hye: and speake not with a stiffe necke.

For promotion cometh neither from the East, nor from the west, nor yet from the South.

And whye? God is the indge, he putteth downe one, & setteth by another.

For in the hand of the Lord ther is a cup, and the wine is red: it is full mixt, and he poureth out of the same.

As for the dregges thereof, all the vngodlye of the earthe shall drinke them, and sucke them out.

But I will talke of the God of Jacob: and prayse him for euer.

All the hoynes of the vngodlye also will I breake: and the hoynes of the righteous shalbe exalted.

I haue considered the days of olde: and the yeres that are past.

I call to remembraunce my songe:
and in the night I commune with mine

Will the Lord absent him selfe for prayer.

Hear my lawe, O my people: encline your eares vnto the wordes of my mouth.

I will open my mouth in a parable: I will declare harde sentences of olde.

Whiche we haue hearde and knowen: and suche as our fathers haue tolde vs.

That we shold not hide them from the childezen of the generations to come, but to shewe the honour of the Lord: his mighte and wonderfull woorkes that he hath done.

He made a couenaunte with Jacob, and gaue Israel a lawe, which he commaunded oure forefathers to teache their childezen.

That their posteritie might knowe it: and their childezen which were yet unborne.

To thintent that when they came vp, they might shewe their childeren the same.

That they might put their trust in God, and not to forget the workes of God, but to keepe his commaunde-mentes.

Exo. 24e And not to be as their forefathers De. 32.a a fapthlesse and stubbozne generation: a generation that set not their hert a right, and whose spirite cleaued not stedfastly vnto God.

Like as the childe of Ephraim, which being harnessed, and carping bowes, turned them selues backe in the day of battayle.

They kepte not the covenannt of God: & wold not walke in his lawe.

But forgot what he had done, and the wonderfull workes that he had shewed for them.

Maruelous thinges did he in the sight of our fathers in the lande of E-gipte, euen in the field of Zoan.

Exo. 14d He deuided the sea, and let them

Exo. 17c He claue the harde rocks in the deapth.

He broughte waters out of the 1 Co. 17c stonye rocks, so that it gushed oute like the riuers.

Yet for all this, they sinned moze against him, and prouoked the moste hyest in the wildernes.

They tempted God in their hartes: and required meat for their lust.

Exo. 16b They spake against God also, say-Nu. 11.b ing: Shall God prepare a table in the wildernesse.

He smote the stonye rocke in deede, that the water gushed oute, and the streames flowed withall: but can he geue breade also? or prouide fleshe for his people?

When the Lord heard this, he was wroth: so the fire was kindled in Jacob, and there came vp heauye displeasure against Israel.

Because they beleued not in God, and put not their trust in his help.

So he commaunded the cloude aboue, and opened the doores of heauen.

He rayned downe Manna also vpon them, for to eate, and gaue them foode from heauen.

So man did eate angels foode, for he sent them meate ynough.

He caused the East wynde to blow vnder the heuē, & throughe his power he brought in the south west wynde.

He rayned fleshe vpon them, as thicke as duste: and ferthered soules lyke as the sande of the sea.

He let it fall among their tentes, euen round about their habitation.

So they did eate and were well filled, for he gaue them their owne de-syre: they were not disapointed of their lust.

But while the meat was yet in their mouthes: the heauy wynd of God came vpon them, and blew the welthiest of the: yea, and smote downe the chosen men that were in Israel.

But for all this, they sinned yet moze, and beleued not his wonderous workes.

Herfore their days did he consume in vanitie, and their yeres in trouble.

When he blew them, they sought him, and turned them earlie, and enquired after God.

And they remembred that God was their strength: and that the hye God was their redeemer.

Nevertheless, they did but flatter him with their mouthes, & dissembled with him in their tongues.

For their heart was not whole with him: neyther continued they stedfast in his covenannt.

But he was so mercifull, that he forgaue their misdoedes, and destroyed them not.

Yea, many a time turned he his wroth away, and wold not suffer his whole displeasure to arise.

For he considered that they were but fleshe: and that they were, euen a wynde that passeth away, with not agayne.

¶ Many a time dyd they prouoke him in the wilderness, and greened him in the desert.

They turned back, & tempted God, and moued the holy one of Israel.

They thought not of his hand, and of the day when he deliuered them from the hande of the enemye.

Howe he had wrought his myracles in Egypt, and his wonders in the side of Ioan.

En. 7. d. • He turned their waters into bloud: so that they might not drinke of the riuers.

En. 8. d. • He sent lye among them, and deuoured them by • and frogges to destroy them.

En. 9. d. • He gaue their fruites vnto the caterpillar: and their laboure vnto the grethopper.

En. 9. f. • He destroyed their bynes with hyle stones, and their mulberry trees with the frost.

En. 9. g. • He smote their cattell also with hyle stones; and their flockes with hote thonderboltes.

He cast vpon them the furionsnes of his wrath, anger, displeasure and trouble, and sent euil angels among them.

En. 9. f. • He made aswape to his indignation: and spared not their soule from death, but gaue their life ouer to the pestilence.

En. 12. e. • And smote all the firste bozne in Egypt, the most principall and mightiest in the dwellinges of Ham.

But as for his owne people, he led them forth lyke shepe: and caried them in the wilderness like a flocke.

He brought them out safely, that they should not feare, and ouerwhelmed their enemies with the sea.

And brought them within the borders of his sanctuary: euen into this mountayne which he purchased with his right hande.

En. 3. a. • He caste out the Heathen also before them; caused their land to be deuided among them for an heritage, and made the tribes of Israel to dwell in their tentes.

So they tempted and displeased the most hye God, and kept not his testimonies.

But turned their backs, and fell away lyke their forefathers: starting asyde like a broken bowe.

For they greued him with their hill aulters, and prouoked him to displeasure with their ymages.

When God herd this, he was wroth, and toke soze displeasure at Israel.

So that he forsoke the Tabernacle in Silo, euen the tente that he had pitched among them.

He deliuered their posuer into captiuitie, and their beantie into the enemies hande.

He gaue his people ouer also into the sword, and was wroth with his inheritance.

The fyre consumed their pongomen, and their maidens were not geuen to marriage.

Their priestes were slayne with the sword, and there were no widowes to make lamentation.

So the Lord awoke as one out of slepe: and like a gyaunt refreshed with wine.

• He smote his enemyes in the hynder partes, and put them to a perpetuall shaine. I. reg. 5 b

He refused the tabernacle of Joseph and chose not the tribe of Ephraim.

• But chose the tribe of Iuda: euen Psal. 87 a the hill of Sion which he loued.

And there he buylded his temple on hye, and layde the foundation of it lyke the grounde, whiche he hath made continually.

• He chose Dauid also his seruant, and toke him away from the shepe foldes. I. re. 16 c

As he was folowinge the ewes gret with pongons: he toke him, that he might feede Jacob his people, and Israel his inheritance.

So he fed them with a saythfull and true hearte, and ruled them prudently with all his posuer.

Vnto thee haue I cried, O Lord, and early shall my prayer comme before thee.

Lord, why abhorrest thou my soule? and hidest thou thy face from me?

I am in mysery, and like vnto him that is at the point to dye (euen from my youth by) thy terrors haue I suffered with a troubled minde.

D Thy wrathful displeasure goth ouer me, & the feare of thee hath vndon me.

Psal. 101

My song shall be alway of the louing kindnes of the Lord. With my mouth will I neuer be shewing thy trueth from one generation to another.

For I haue sayd: mercy shall be set by for euer, thy trueth shalt thou stablish in the heauens.

• I haue made a couenaunt with my chosen, I haue swoyne vnto Dauid my seruaunt.

• Thy seede will I stablish for euer, and set by thy throne from one generation to another. Sela.

O Lord, the verpe heauens shall prayse thy wonderous workes, and thy trueth in the congregation of the saintes.

For who is he among the cloudes, that shall be compared vnto the Lord?

And what is he among the goddes, that shall be lyke vnto the Lord?

God is very greatly to be feared in the counsell of the saintes, and to be had in reuerence of all theym that are about him.

O Lord God of holles, who is like vnto thee? thy trueth (most mightie Lord) is on every syde.

• Thou rulest the raging of the sea, thou stillest the waues therof, when they arise.

Thou hast subdued Egypt and destroyed it, thou hast scatted thine enemies abrode with thy mightie arme.

The heauens are thine, the earth also is thine: thou hast layd the foundation of the round world, and al that therein is.

Thou hast made the South and the North, Tabor and Hermon shall reioyce in thy name.

Thou hast a mightie arme, stronge is thy hand, and hie is thy right hand.

Righteousnesse and equitye is the habitation of thy seate, mercy and truth shall go before thy face.

Blessed is the people (O Lord) that can reioyce in thee: they shall walke in the light of thy countenance.

Their delight shall be dayly in thy name, and in thy righteousness shall they make their boast.

For thou art the gloze of their strength, and in thy louing kindnesse thou shalt lye by our boyes.

For the Lord is our defence: the holy one of Israel is our king.

Thou hast sometime in visions unto thy saintes, and saydest: I haue loved helpe vpon one that is mightie, I haue exalted one chosen out of the people.

I haue founde Dauid my Seruant: with my holy oyle haue I anointed him.

My hand shall holde him fast, and mine arme shall strengthen him.

The enemye shall not be able to do him violence, the sonne of wickednes shall not hurt him.

I shall smite downe his foes befoze his face, & plage them that hate him.

My trueth also and my mercy shall be with him, and in my name shall his home be exalted.

I wil set his dominion also in the sea, and his right hand in the floudes.
He shall call me, thou art my father my God, and my strong saluation.

And I will make him my first borne, hier then the kings of the earth.

My mercy will I keepe for him for evermore, and my couenaunt shall stand fast with him.

His seed also will I make to endure for euer, and his throne as the dayes of heauen.

But if his children forsake my law, and walke not in my iudgements,

If they breake my statutes, and keepe not my commaundementes.

I will visite their offences with the rod, and their sin with scourges.

Nevertheless, my louing kindnes will I not utterly take from him, nor suffer my trueth to faile.

My couenaunt will I not breake: nor alter the thing that is gone out of my lippes.

I haue sworne once by my holynes, that I will not faile Dauid.

His seed shall endure for euer, and his seate as like as the sunne befoze me.

He shall stand fast for evermore as the moon, and as the faithful witnes in heauen. Psalm.

But thou hast abhorred and forsaken thine anointed, and art displeased at him.

Thou hast broken the couenaunt of thy seruaunt, and cast his crowne to the ground.

Thou hast onerthrowen all his Psalm. 20 b hedges, and broken downe into his strong holdes.

All they that go by, spoyle him: and he is become a rebuke vnto his neighbours.

Thou hast set by the right hande of his enemies, and made all his ad-uersaries to reioyce.

Thou hast taken away the edge of his swerde: and geuest him not victory in the battayle.

Thou hast put out his glozy: and cast his throne downe to the ground.

The daies of his youth hast thou shortened, and couered him with disho-nour. Sela.

Howe longe wilt thou hyde thy selfe for euer: and shall thy wrath burne like fyre?

Remember howe short my time is: wherefoze hast thou made all men for naught?

What man is he that liueth, and Gen. 2. c shall not see death: and shall he deliuer his owne soule from the hand of hell?

Sela.
Howe, where are thy olde louing kindneses, which thou swarest vnto Dauid in thy trueth?

Remember (Howe) the rebuke that thy seruantes haue: and howe I doe beare in my bosome the rebukes of many people.

Where with thyne enemies haue blasphemed thee, and slandered the foote-

Ps. 105 a

Praise the Lord, O my soule: O Lord my God, thou art become exceeding glorious, thou arte clothed with maiestie, and honour.

Thou deckest thy selfe with light as it were with a garment, and spreadest out the heauens like a curtayne.

Which layeth the beames of his chambers in the waters, and maketh the cloudes his charret, and walketh vpon the winges of the winde.

Heb. 1. c.

He maketh his angels spirites, and his ministers a flaming fire.

He layde the foundations of the earth, that it shoulde not moue at any time.

Thou couerest it with the deepe like as with a garment: the waters stand in the hilles.

Thou hast set them their bondes, whiche they shall not passe, neyther tourne agayne to couer the earth.

He sendeth f springes into the rivers, which runneth among the hills.

All beastes of the fielde drinke thereof: and the wilde asses quenche their thirst.

Beside them shall the fowles of the ayre haue their habitation, and singe among the bryanches.

He watereth the hilles from boue, the earth is filled with the fruit of thy workes.

He bringeth forth grasse for the cattell, and grene herbe for the ser vice of men: that he may bring foode oute of the earth: and wine that maketh glad the hearte of man, and oyle to make him a chearefull countenance, and bread to strength mans heart.

The trees of the Lord also are full of sappe, euen the Cedars of Libanus which he hath planted.

Wherein the birdes make their nestes, and the furre trees are a dwelling for the stoake.

The hye hilles are a refuge for the wilde goates, and so are the stony rocks for the conyes.

He appointed the Moone for certayne seasons, and the Sunne knoweth his going downe.

Thou makest darknesse, that it may be night, wherein all the beastes of the forest do moue.

The Sunne ariseth, and they get them away together, and laye them downe in their denues.

Man goeth forth to his worke, and to his labour vntill the evening.

O Lord, howe manyfolde are thy workes: in wisdome haste thou made them all: the earth is full of thy riches.

So is the great and wide sea also, wherein are things creeping innumerable, both small and great beastes.

There go the shippes, and there is that Leviathan, whom thou haste made, to take his pastime therein.

They wait al vpon thee, that thou mayest geue them meat in due season. When thou givest it them, they gather it: and when thou openest thine hand, they are filled with good.

When thou hidest thy face, they are troubled: when thou takest away their breath they dye, and are turned agayne to their dust.

When thou lettest thy breath go forth, they shall be made, and thou shalt renew the face of the earth.

The glorious maiestie of the Lord shall endure for ever: the Lord shall reioyce in his woꝝkes.

The earth shall tremble at the looke of him: if he do but touche the hilles, they shall smoke.

I will sing vnto the Lorde, as long as I liue: I will prayse my G O D while I haue my being.

And so shall my woꝝdes please him: my ioye shall be in the Lorde.

As for sinners, they shall be consumed out of the earth, and the vngodly shall come to an ende: • prayse thou the Lorde, O my soule. • Prayse the Lorde.

O Gene. thanks vnto the lord, for he is gracious: and his mercye endureth for ever.

Who can expresse the noble actes of the Lord: or shewe forth all his prayse.

Blessed are they that alway keepe iudgement, and do righteousness.

Remember me, O Lord, according vnto the fauoure that thou bearest vnto thy people: O visite me with thy saluation.

That I may see the felicitie of thy cholen, and reioyce in the gladnes of thy people: and geue thanks with thine inheritance.

We haue sinned with our fathers: we haue done amisse & delt wickedly.

Our fathers regarded not thy wonders in Egypt, neyther kept thy great goodness in remembrance: but were disobedient at the sea, euen at the red sea.

Nevertheless, he helped them for his names sake, that he might make his power to be knownen.

• He rebuked the red sea also, and it was dried vp: so he led them through the depe as throug a wilderness.

And he saved them from the aduersaries hand: and deliuered them from the hande of the enemye.

• As for those that troubled them, the waters ouerwhelmed them, there was not one of them left.

• Then beleued they his wordes, and sang prayse vnto him.

But within a while they forgot his wordes, and would not abide his counsell.

But luste came vpon them in the wilderness, and they tempted God in the deserte.

And he gaue them their desire, and sent leannesse withall into their soule.

They angred Moses also in the tentes, & Aaron the saint of the Lord.

• So the earth opened, and swallowed vp Dathan, and couered the congregation of Abiram.

And the fire was kindled in their company: the flame brened by the vngodly.

• They made a Calfe in Horeb, and worshipped the molten ymage.

• Thus they turned their glasse into the similitude of a calfe that eateth haye.

And they forgotte God their Saviour: whiche hath done so great thinges in Egypt.

Wonderous wordes in the land of Ham: & fearful thinges by the red sea.

So he said: he wolde haue destroyed them, had not Moses his cholen stand before him in that gap: so turne away his wrathfull indignation, lest he shoulde destroy them.

• Yea they thought scoone of that pleasant lande, and gaue no credence vnto his word.

But murmured in their tentes.

and harkened not vnto the voyde of the Loyde.

Then yfte he by his hande agaynst them, to ouerthrowe them in the wilderness.

To cast out their seede among the nations: & to scatter the in the lands.

• They toynd them selues vnto Beel Deoz: and ate the offerings of the dead.

Thus they prouoked him vnto anger with their owne inventions: and the plague was great among them.

• Then stroke by Shynches and prayed, and so the plague ceased.

And that was counted vnto him for righteousness: among all posterities for evermore.

• They angered him also at the waters of strife, so that he punished them for their fakes.

Because they prouoked his spirit: so that he spake vnadvisedlye with his lippes.

Neither destroyed they the Heathen: as the Loyde commaunded them.

But wer mingled among the Heathen: and learned their workes.

In so muche that they worshipped they: ydoles, whiche turned to their owne decaye.

• Yes, they offered their sonnes and they daughters vnto deuils.

• And shed innocent blood, etien the blood of their sonnes and of their daughters: whom they offered vnto the ydols of Canaan, and the lande was defyled with blood.

Thus were they slayned with their owne workes, and went a whoring with their owne inventions.

Therefore was the wrath of the Loyde kindled agaynst his people: in so much that he abhorred his owne inheritance.

• And he gaue them ouer into the hand of the Heathen, and they that hated them, were lordes ouer them.

Their enemies oppressed them, and had them in subiection.

Many a time did he deliuer them, but they rebelled, agaynst him with their owne inventions, and were brought downe in their wickednes.

Nevertheless, when he sawe their aduersitie, he heard their complayne.

He thought vpon his conuauite, and pitied them, according vnto the multitude of his mercies.

Yea he made all those that had led them away captiue to pitie them.

Welpuer vs (O Loyde our God) and gather vs from among the Heathen: that we maye geue thanks to thy holy name, and make our boaste of thy prayse.

Let them geue thanks whom the Loyde hath redeemed: and deliuered from the hand of the enemye.

And gathered them out of all the landes: from the East, and from the West, from the North, and from the South.

They went astray in the wilderness out of the waye, and found no rest to dwell in.

Hungrye and thirstie: they soule fainted in them.

So they cryed vnto the Loyde in they trouble: and he deliuered them from their distresse.

He led them forth by the right waye: that they might go to the citie where they dwelt.

woordes of the Lorde, and lightly regarded the counsaile of the moost highest.

He also brought downe their heart through heavynesse: they fell downe, and there was none to helpe them.

So when they cried vnto the Lorde in their trouble: he deliuered them out of their distresse.

For he brought them out of darknesse, and out of the shadow of death, and brake their bandes in sunder.

That men would therfore prayse the Lorde for his goodnesse, and declare the wonders that he doth for the children of men.

For he hath broken the gates of brass, and smytten the barres of yron in sunder.

Forlik the men are plagued for their offence, & because of their wickednes.

Their soule abhoyred all maner of meate, and they were euen harde at deathes doore.

So when they cried vnto the Lorde in their trouble: he deliuered them out of their distresse.

They reele to and fro, and stagger like a drunken man, and are at their wittes ende.

So when they crye vnto the Lorde in their trouble: he deliuereth them out of their distresse.

For he maketh the storme to cease, so that the waues thereof are still.

Then are they glad, bicause they be at rest, and so he bringeth them vnto the hauen where they would be.

That men would therfore prayse the Lorde, for his goodnes, and declare the wonders that he doth for the children of men.

That they would exalt him also in the congregation of the people, & loue him in the seate of the elders.

Whiche turned the foudes into a wildernesse: and dyeth by the water springes.

A frutesfull lande maketh he barren, for the wickednes of them that dwell therein.

Agayne, he maketh the wildernes a standing water, and water springes of a drye grounde.

And there he setteth the hangrye, that they maye builde theym a Citie to dwell in.

That they maye sowe their lande, and plant vineyardes, to yelde them frutes of increase.

He blesteth them, so that they multiply exceedingly, and suffereth not their cattell to decrease.

And agayne, when they are minished and brought lowe thoroow oppres- sion, thoroow any plague or trouble.

Though he suffer them to be euill intreated thoroow tyrantes, and let them wander out of the waye in the wildernesse.

Yet helpeth he the poore out of misery, and maketh him householdes like a flocke of sheepe.

The xxiij. day.

Psal. 9. a in the Lord: he is their succour and defence.

Ye house of Aaron put your trust in the Lord, he is their helper and defendour.

Ye that feare the Lord, put your trust in the Lord: he is their helper and defendour.

C The Lord hath bene mindfull of vs, and he shall blesse vs: euen he shall blesse the house of Israel, he shall blesse the house of Aaron.

He shall blesse them that feare the Lord, both small and great.

The Lord shall encrease you more and more: you and your children.

Ye are the blessed of the Lord, which made heauen and earth.

D All the whole heauens are the Lordes: the earth hath he geuen vnto the children of men.

Psal. 9. a The dead prayse not thee (D Lord) neither all they that go downe into the scilence.

Esa. 38. d But we will prayse the Lord, from this time forth for evermore.

Prayse the Lord.

The. Cxvi. Psalme.

Mornig prayer.

I Am wel pleased that the Lord hath heard the voyce of my prayer.

That he hath enclined his eare vnto me: therefore will I call vpon him as long as I liue.

Psal. 18. a The snares of death compassed me round about: and the paynes of hell gat holde vpon me.

1. Re. 22 I shall fynde trouble and heavynesse, and I shall call vpon the name of the Lord, (D Lord) I beseech thee deliuer my soule.

Gracions is the Lord and righteous: yea our God is mercifull.

The Lord preserveth the simple: I was in misery, and he helped me.

Turne agayne then vnto thy rest, O my soule: for the Lord hath rewarded thee.

And why? thou hast deliuered my soule from death, myne eyes from teares, and my fete from falling.

Psal. 59. c

I will walke before the Lord, in the lande of the living.

I beleued, and therefore will I speake, but I was sore troubled, I sayd in my hart: all men are liars.

What rewarde shall I geue vnto the Lord, for all the benefytes that he hath done vnto me?

I will receaue the cup of saluation: and call vpon the name of the Lord.

I will paye my bowes none in the presence of all his people, right deare in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saintes.

Behold (D Lord) how that I am thy seruant: I am thy seruant, and the sonne of thy handmayde, thou hast broken my bones in sunder.

I will offer to thee the sacrifice, of thankesgiving, and will call vpon the name of the Lord.

I will paye my bowes vnto the Lord in the sight of all his people, in the courtes of the Lordes house, euen in the middes of thee, O Ierusalem.

Prayse the Lord.

The. Cxviij. Psalme.

Laudate dominum.

D Prayse the Lord all ye hea- then, praise him all ye nations

For his mercifull kindnes is ever more & more towarde vs, and the truth of the Lord endureth for ever. Prayse the Lord.

The. Cxviij. Psalme.

Confitemini domino.

O Geue thanks vnto the Lord for he is gracions, because his mercy endureth for ever.

Let Israel now confesse (that he is gracions, and) that his mercy endureth for ever.

Let the house of Aaron now confesse, that his mercy endureth for ever.

Yea, let them now that feare the Lord, confesse that his mercy endureth for ever.

I called vpon the Lord in trouble, and the Lord heard me at last.

The Lord is on my side, I will not feare what man doeth vnto me.

The Lozde taketh my parte with them that helpe me: therfore shall I be my desyre upon mine enemies.

It is better to trust in the Lozde: then to put any confidence in man.

It is better to trust in the Lozde, then to put any confidence in princes.

All nations compassed me rounde about: but in the name of the Lozde will I destroy them.

They kepte me in on euery syde: they kepte me in (I saye) on euery syde: but in the name of the Lozde, I will destroy them.

They came about me like bees, and are extincte, euen as the fyre among the thornes: for in the name of the Lozde I will destroy them.

Thou hast thynt soze at me, that I might fal, but the Lozd was my help.

The Lozd is my strength, and my song, and is become my saluation.

The voyce of ioye and health is in the dwelling of the righteous: the righte hande of the Lozde byyngeth mightie thinges to passe.

The righte hande of the Lozde hath the preeminence: the right hand of the Lozde byyngeth mightie thinges to passe.

I will not dye, but liue: and declare the woorkes of the Lozde.

The Lozd hath chastened and corrected me: but he hath not geuen me ouer vnto death.

Open me the gates of righteousness, that I maye go into them, and geue thanks vnto the Lozd.

This is the gate of the Lozde: the righteous shall enter into it.

I will thanke thee, for thou haste heard me: & art become my saluation.

The same stone whiche the buylders refused, is become the head stone in the corner.

This was the Lozdes dayng, and it is marcurious in our eyes.

This is the daye whiche the Lozde hath made: we will reioyce and be glad in it.

O Beloue me now O Lozd: O Lozd I praye thee make me prosperite.

O Lozd be that cometh in the name of the Lozde: we haue wished you good lucke, ye that be of the house of the Lozde.

God is the Lozde which hath shed vs lyghte: bynde the sacrifice with cordes, yea euen vnto the hornes of the altier.

Thou arte my God, and I will thanke thee: thou art my God, and I will prayse thee.

O geue thanks vnto the Lozde, for he is gracious: and his mercy endureth for euer.

The. Cxix. Psalme.

Pla. I. a

Blessed are all those that be vndefyled in the way: and walke in the lawe of the Lozde.

Blessed are they that keepe his testimonies: and seke him with their whole heart.

For they which do no wickednes, walke in his wayes.

Thou hast charged that we shal diligently kepe thy commaundementes.

O that my wayes were made so direct, that I might kepe thy statutes.

So shall I not be confounded, whyle I haue respect vnto all thy commaundementes.

I will thanke thee with an vnfeigned heart, when I shall haue learned the iudgements of thy righteousness.

I will kepe thy ceremonies: O forsake me not bitterly.

Blessed arte thou, O Lozde: O teache me thy statutes.

With my lips haue I bene telling of all the iudgements of thy mouth.

I haue had as great desyre in the waye of thy testimonies, as in at manner of riches.

Memor esto.

O Thinke vpon thy seruāt, as concerning thy worde, wherein thou hast caused me to put my trust.

The same is my comfort in my trouble, for thy word hath quickened me.

The proude haue had me exceedingly in derision: yet haue I not shyn-ked from thy lawe.

For I remembered thine over-ruling iudgements (O Lorde) and re-ceaued comfort.

I am horribly aſtrayde for the vigodly, that forsake thy lawe.

Thy statutes haue ben my songes, in the house of my pilgrimage.

I haue thought vpon thy name, O Lorde, in the night season, and kept thy lawe.

This I had, because I kepte thy commandementes.

Portio mea.

Thou art my portion, O Lord: I haue promised to keepe thy lawe.

I made myne humble petitiō in thy presence & my whole hert: O be merciful vnto me according vnto thy word.

I call mine owne wayes to remembrance, and tourne my fete into thy testimonies.

I made hast, and prolonged not the time: to keepe thy commandementes.

The congregation of the vngodly haue robbed me, but I haue not forgotten thy lawe.

At midnight will I rise, to geue thanks vnto thee: because of thy righteous iudgementes.

I am a companion of al them that feare thee, & keepe thy commandementes.

The earthe, O Lord, is full of thy mercy, O teache me thy statutes.

Bonitatem fecisti.

O Lord, thou hast delt graciouslly with thy seruaunt, according vnto thy worde.

O learne me true vnderstanding, and knowledge: for I haue beleued thy commandementes.

Before I was troubled, I wente wydg: but now haue I kept thy word.

Thou art good and gracious, O teache me thy statutes.

The proude haue ymagined a lye against me: but I will keepe thy commandements with my whole heart.

Their hert is as fat as brawn: but my delite hath bene in thy lawe.

It is good for me: & I haue bene in trouble: that I may learne thy statutes.

The lawe of thy mouth is derer vnto me, then thousands of gold and siluer.

Manus tue fecerunt.

Thy hands haue made me, & fashioned me: O geue me vnderstanding, that I may learne thy commandementes.

They that feare thee, will be glad, when they see me, because I haue put my trust in thy worde.

I know, O Lord, that thy iudgements are right, and that thou of verie saythfulnesse haste caused me to be troubled.

O let thy merciful kindnes be my comforte: according to thy worde vnto thy seruaunt.

O let thy louig mercies com vnto me: & I may liue: for thy lawe is my delite.

Let the proude be confounded, for they go wickedlye aboute to destrope me, but I will be occupied in thy commandementes.

Let such as feare thee, & haue knowen thy testimonies: be turned vnto me.

O let mine heart be sound in thy statutes, that I be not ashamed.

Defecit anima mea.

My soule hath longed for thy Caph. saluation, and I haue a good hope because of thy worde.

Myne eyes long sore for thy worde, saying: O when wilt thou comfort me.

For I am become like a bottell in the smoke: yet do I not forgette thy statutes.

How many are the days of thy seruaunt: when wilt thou be auenged of them that persecute me?

The proude haue digged pittes for me, which are not after thy lawe.

All thy commandements are true: they persecute me falsly, O be thou mi help.

They had almost made an ende of me vpon earth: but I forsooke not thy commandementes.

O quicken me after thy louing kindnesse: and so shal I keepe the testimonies of thy mouth.

In aeternum domine.

O Lord: thy worde endureth for euer: & is named.ouer in heauen.

Thy trueth also remaineth from one generation to an other: thou haste layde the foundation of the earth, and it abideth.

Memento domine David.

Lorde remember David, and all his trouble.

Howe hee swove vnto the Lord: and bowed a bowe vnto the almighty God of Jacob.

I will not come within the Ci-bernacle of my house: nor climbe vp into my bed.

I will not suffer myne eyes to sleepe, nor mine eye liddes to slumber: neyther the temples of my heade to take any rest.

Until I finde out a place for the temple of the Lord: an habitation for the mighty God of Jacob.

So, we heard of the same at Ephrata, and found it in the wood.

We will go into his tabernacle: and fall lowe on our knees before his foot stool.

Arise, O Lord into thy resting place: thou & the arke of thy strength.

Let thy Priestes be clothed with righteousnesse: and let thy sayntes sing with ioyfullnesse.

Ps. 138. Of the fruite of thy bodye, shall I sit vpon thy seate.

If thy childzen will keepe my covenante, and my testimontes that I will learne theym: their childzen also shall sit vpon thy seate for evermore.

For the Lord hath chosen Sion, to be an habitation for him selfe hath he longed for her.

This shall be my rest for ever: here will I dwell, for I have a delice therein.

I will blesse her vitayles with increase: and will satisfie her pooze with breade.

I will decke her with precious health: and her sayntes shall reioyce and singe.

Thou art about my path and about my bed: and spiest out all my wayes. For lo there is not a word in my tongue, but thou O Lord, knowest it altogether.

Thou haste fashioned me behinde and before, and layde thyne hande vpon me.

Suche knowledge is to wonderfull and excellent for me: I can not attayne vnto it.

Whither shall I goe then from Amos. 9. thy spirite: or whither shall I goe then from thy presence?

If I clyme vp into heauen, thou art there: if I go downe to hell, thou art there also.

If I take the winges of the morninge, and remayne in the vtmoste partes of the sea: euen there also shall thy hande leade me, and thy righte hande shall holde me.

If I saye, peradventure the darknesse shall couer me, then shall my night be turned to daye.

Yea, the darkenes is no darkenes with thee, but the night is all clere as the daye: the darkenes and light (to thee) are both alike.

I looked also vpon my right hande and see, there was no man that would knowe me.

I had no place to see vnto: and no man careth for my soule.

I cryed vnto thee, O Lord, and said thou art my hope and my portion: in the land of the liuing.

Consider my complainte: for I am brought very lowe.

O deliuer me fro my persecutours: for they are to strong for me.

The Proverbes of Salomon.

The first Chapter.

Proverbes of Salomon the sonne of David, Kinge of Israel, to lerne wisdom, and to perceine the instruction, and to perceue the wordes of understanding: and thereby to receive prudence, righteousness, iudgement and equitie. That the very simple might have wit, and that the pong men might have knowledge and true understanding. By hearing, the wise man shal come by moze wisdom: and he that is endued with understanding, shall obtayne wit to perceue a parable, and the interpretation therof, the wordes of the wise, and the darke wordes of the same. • The feare of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom.

But foolen despise wisdom and instruction. My sonne, hear thy fathers doctrine, and forsake not the lawe of thy mother: for that shall bring grace vnto thy head, and shalbe as a cheyne about thy necke. My sonne, consente not vnto spynners, yf they entyse thee, and saye: come with vs, we will laye wyfte for bloud, and lurke pryncely for the innocent withoute a cause: we shall swalow them by like the hell, and deuoure them quicke and whole, as those that go downe into the pitte. So shall we spnde all maner of costly riches, and sell our houses with spoyle. Call in thy lot among vs: and let vs haue all one pitte. My son, walke not thou with them: refrayne thy fote from their way. For their fete runne to euill, and are hastie to shed bloud. But in dayne is the net laid forch before the birdes eyes: yea, they theym selues lay wait one for anothers blud, and one of them would slaye another. These are the wayes of all suche as be covetous, the one would ranishe the another his life. • wisdom crieth without, and putteth forth her voyce in the streets. She calleth before the congregatis in the open gates, and sheweth her wordes through the citie, saying: O ye children, howe longe will ye loue childishnes: howe longe will the scooners delite in scoining, and the vnwise be enemies vnto knoweledge: O turne you vnto my correction: lo, I wil expresse my mind vnto you, and make you vnderstande my wordes. • I haue called, and ye refused it: I haue stretched out my hande, and no man regarded it: but all my counsels haue ye despised, and set my correction at naught. Therefore shal I also laughe in youre destruction, and mocke you, when that thinge that ye feare commeth vpon you: euen when the thinge that ye be asfayde of, falleth in suddenly like a storme, and your miserie like a tempest: yea whē trouble and heauines commeth vpon you. Then shall they call vpon me, but I will not heare: they shal seke me carlye, but they shall not finde me. And that because they hated knowledge, and receyued not counsaile, and despised all my correction. Therefore shal they eate the fruytes of theyr owne waye, and be filled with their owne inventions: for the turning awaye of the vnwise shall slepe them: and the prosperitie of foolen shalbe their own destruction. • But who so harkeneth vnto me, shall dwell safelye, and be sure from any feare of euill.

My sonne, if thou wilt receiue my wordes, and kepe my commandementes by thee, that thou wilt encline thine eare vnto wisdom, applye thyne heart then to vnderstanding. For yf thou cryest after wisdom, and callest for knowledge: yf thou sekest after her, as after money, and diggest for her as for treasure, then shalt thou vnderstande the feare of the Lord and fynde the knowledge of God. For it is the Lord that geueth wisdome, out of his mouth cometh knowe-ledge and vnderstanding. he byddeth by health for the righteous. He preserueth the welfare of the righteous, and defendeth the that walke sincerely: he kepeth them in the right path, & preserveth the way of such as serue him with godlines. Then shalt thou vnderstand righteousness, iudgement and equitie: yea, and every good path.

 Whē wisdome entred into thyn heart and thy soule delite in knowledge: the that counsel preserveth thee, & vnderstanding shall kepe thee, that thou mayst be deliuered from the euil way, and from the man y^e speaketh froward thinges.
 From such as leane the hye steepe, and walke in the wayes of darkenes: whiche reioyce in doing euill, and de-lite in the wicked thinges whose wayes are croked, and they frowarde in their pathes. That thou mayest be deliue-red also. from the straunge woman, and from her that is not thyn owne: whiche geueth swete wordes, forsaketh the husband of her yowth, and forgetteth the couenaunt of her God.
 For her house is enclined vnto death, and her pathes vnto hell. All they that go in vnto her, come not agayne, neyther take they holde of the waye of lyfe. Therefore, walke thou in the way of such as be vertuous, and kepe the pathes of the righteous. For the iuste shall dwell in the land: and they that be perfecte, shall remayne in it: but the vngodly shalbe roted oute of the lande: and the wicked doers shall be roted out of it.

The. lvi. Chapter.

My sonne. forget not thou my lawe, but se that thine heart kepe my commaundementes.
 For they shall prolong thy dayes and yeres of thy life, and bring thee peace.
 Let mercy and saythfulness, neuer go from thee: bind them about thy necke, and wryte them in the tables of thyn heart. So shalt thou fynd fauour and vnderstanding in the sighte of God & men. Put thy truste in God with all thyn heart: and leane not vnto thine owne wytte. In all thy wayes haue respect vnto him: and he shall order thy goynges. Be not wile in thyn owne conceipt: but feare the Lord, and depart from euill: so shall thy name be hole, and thy bones strong. Honour the Lord with thy substance, and with the firstlinges of all thyn increase (geue vnto the poore:) so shall thy barnes be filled with plenteousnes, and thy presses shall flowe ouer with swete wyne. My sonne, despayre not the chastening of the Lord, neither saynt when thou arte rebuked of him. For whē the Lord loveth him he challeneth, and yet deliuereth in him, euen as a father in his owne sonne.

 Well is him that fyndeth wisdom, and obtayneth vnderstanding: for the getting of it is better then any marchandise of speler, and the profite of it is better then golde. Wisdome is more worth then precious stones, and al the thinges that thou canst desire, are not to be compared vnto her. Vpon her right hande is longe life, and vpon her left hande is riches and honour. Her wayes are pleasant wayes, and al her pathes are peaceable. She is a tree of lyfe to them that laye holde vpon her, & blessed is he that kepeth her fast.
 With wisdom hath the Lord layde the foundation of the earth: and therefore vnderstandinge hath he stabi-shed the heauens. Therefore his wis-dome the depthes bryake vp, and the cloudes droppe downe the dewe. My sonne, lette not these thinges departs from thine eyes: but kepe my lawe and my counsell, that thou mayst haue the pleasure of longe life and vnderstanding: for they shall be lyfe vnto my soule, and grace vnto my mouth.
 Then shalt thou walke safelye in the waye, and thy fote shall not stumble.
 If thou sleepest, thou shalt not be frayd: but shalt take thy rest, and sleepe sweetely. Thou needest not to be af-fayed of any sodayn feare, neither for the violent rushing in of the vngodly, when it commeth. For the Lord shall stande by thy side, and kepe thy fote, that thou be not taken. Withoute good thing from them that haue new, so long as thine hande is able to do.

Go not into thy neyghbour, go thy way and come agayne, to morrow wil I geue thee, where as thou hast nowe to geue him. Intende no hurte vnto thy neyghbour, seing he doth dwell in rest by thee. Strike not lightly with any man withoute a cause, whereas he hath done thee no harme. • Folow not a wicked man, and choose none of his wayes: for the Lord abhorreth the frowarde: but his counsell is amonge the righteous. The curse of the Lord is in the house of the vngodlye: but he blesseth the dwellinges of the righteous. As for the scoyneshall doeth not he haue them to scoyn: but he geueth grace vnto the lowly. The wile shall haue honour in possession: but shame to the promoued that foolen shal haue.

The. iij. Chapter.

Hear, O yee childyen, the fatherly exhortation, and take good heed, that ye may learne wisdom. For I haue geuen you a good doctrine, forsake not ye my law. For when I my self was my fathers deare sonne, and tenderly beloued of my mothr, he taught me also, and said vnto me: Let thine heart receaue my wordes, keepe my commandementes, and thou shalt liue. Get thee wisdom, and get thee vnderstanding: for get not the wordes of my mouth, and thinke not from thyrm. Forsake her not, and she shall preserue thee. Love her, and she shal kepe thee. The chiefe poynt of wisdom is, that thou be willing to obtayne wisdom: and befoze all thy goodes to get thee vnderstanding. • Make much of her, and shee shall promote thee: Yea, if thou embrace her, she shall bring thee vnto honour. Shee shall make thee a gracious heade, and garnishe thee with a crowne of glory. Heare my sonne, and receiue my wordes, and the peaces of thy life shalbe manye. I haue shewed thee the waye of wisdom, and ledde thee into the right pathes. So that if thou goest therein, there shall no braynes hinder thee: and when thou runnest, thou shalt not fall. Take faste hold of doctrine, and let her not goo:

keepe her, for she is thy life. • Come thou not in the path of the vngodlye: and Psal. 1.8 walke not in the way of the wicked. and. 27.8 Abhorre it, and go not therein: depart asyde, and passe ouer by it. For they can not sleepe, excepte they haue spylle done some mischief: neyther take they anye rest, excepte they haue spylle done some harms. For they eate the breade of wickednes, and drinke the wyne of robbery. The pathe of the righteous shineth as the light, that is eter bright and bright vnto the perfect day. But the waye of the vngodlye is as the darkenesse: they knowe not where they fall. • My sonne, marke my wordes, and encline thine eare vnto my sayings. Let them not departe from thine eyes, but keepe them euen in the midst of thine heart. For they are lyfe vnto all these that finde them, and health vnto al their bodie. Kepe thine heart with all diligence, for thereupon hangeth lyfe. But awaye from thee a frowarde mouth, and lette the lippes of flander bee farre from thee. Let thine eyes beholde the thing that is right, and let thine eye liddes loke straight befoze thee. Ponder the path of thy feete, and let all thy wayes be ordred a right. • Tourne not asyde neyther to the right hande, nor to the lefte, but withholde thy fore fro euill. For the Lord knoweth the wayes that are on the right hande. As for the wayes that be on the lefte hande, they be frowarde. For he shall direct thy goynges, and thy wayes hee shall guyde in peace.

The. v. Chapter.

My sonne, geue heed vnto my wisdom, and bowe thine eare vnto my prudence: that thou maist regarde good counsel, and that thy lippes maye speake knowledge. • (Applye not thou thy selfe to the disceitfulnesse of a woman) • For the lippes of an harlotte are a droppinge honye combe, and her throte is moze glisteringe then oyle: But at the laste she is as bitter as woode: woodde, and (her tongue) as sharpe

The Proverbs

B as a two edged sworde, her feete go downe vnto death, and her stepps peare thyngh vnto hell. Perchance thou dwelling with her, wilt ponder the path of life: so vnkedefast are her wayes that thou canst not knowe them. Heare me now therfoze (O my sonne) and depart not fro the wordes of my mouth. Keepe thy way far from her, and come not nere the doores of her house. That thou gette not thy strēgthe vnto other, and thy yeares to the cruell. That other men be not filled with thy goods, and that thy labour come not in a strange house. Yea, that thou mourne not as the laste (when thou hast spent thy bodye & lusty ygrene youth) and then say: I las, why hated I mynourour? why did my hert despise correctio? wherfoze was I not obedient vnto the voyce of my teachers, and hearkened not vnto them that en-fourmed me: I am come almost into all misfortune, in the midst of the multitude & congregation. Drinke of the water of thine owne well, of the rivers that runne out of thine owne springes. Let thy welles flowe out abode, that there may be rivers of waters in the stretes: but let them be on-lye thine owne, and not strangers with thee. Let thy well be blessed, and be glad with the wise of thy youth.
Louing is the hind, and friendly is the Ree: let her bysses alway satisfy thee, and hold thee euer contente with her loue. My sonne, why wilt thou haue pleasure in an harlot, and embrace the bosom of another woman? For euery mans wayes are open in the sight of the Lord, and he pondereth all their go-inges. The wickednesse of the vngodly shall catch him selfe, and with the snates of his owne sinnes shall he be trapped. He shall dye without a mendment, and for his greate foolish-nesse he shall be castrope.

The vii. Chapter.

My sonne: if thou be swertye for thy neighbour, and haste fastened thine hand for another man, thou art bound with thine owne wordes, and taken with thine owne speech. Therfoze my sonne, doe this, and thou shalt be discharged when thou art come into thy neighbours danger. See thy wayes then soone, humble thy selfe, and with thy frendes intreate thy creditour: let not thine eyes sleepe, nor thine eye liden slumber. Hane thy selfe as a doe, from the hand of the hunter, and as a bypde from the hand of the fouler. Go to the emmet (thou sluggarde) consider her wayes, and learne to bee wise. Shee hath no guide, nor ouersier, nor ruler: yet in the Summer she prouideth her meat, and gathereth her fode together in the harvest. How long wilt thou sleepe, thou sluggish man? when wilt thou arise out of thy slepe? Yea, sleepe on still a little, slumber a little, folde thine handes together yet a little, that thou mayest sleepe: so shall pouertie come vnto thee, as one that tranyleth by the way, and necessitie like a wep-poned man. (But if thou be not slothfull, thy hartest shall come as a springing wel, and pouertie shall flee farre from thee.) An vngodly person, a witked mā goeth with a frowarde mouth, he winketh with his eyes; he tokeneth with his feete, he poynteth with his fingers, hee is euer ymagininge mischiefe and frowardnes in his hert, and causeth discorde. Therfoze shall his destructio come hastily vpon him, sodenly shall he be all broken, and not be healed. These sixe thinges doth the Lord hate, and the seventh he detesteth abhorreth: A proud loke, a lying tonge, handes that shed innocent bloud, an heart that goeth about with wicked imaginations, a feete that be swift in running to doo a mischief, a false witness that bringeth by lies, and such a one as soweth discorde among brethren. My son keepe thy selfe thers commaundement, & forsake not the law of thy mother. But them by-together in thine hert, and binde them about thy necke. That they may leade thee where thou goest, preserve thee whē thou art a slepe: & that wē thou awakest, thou mayest talke of them.

For the commaundement is a law.

and the lawe a lyght: yea chasteninge and noutrour is the waye of lyfe, that they may kepe thee from the euil woman, and from the flattering tonge of the harlot: that thou lust not after her besoyne in thine heart, and least thou be taken with her saye looks. An harlot will make a man to begge hys brende, and a woman will hunt for the precious life. Whay a manne take fye in his bosome, and his clothes not be burnt? Or can one go vpon whote coles, and his fete not be hurt? When so, whosoever goeth into his neighbours wife, and toucheth her, can not be happy. When do not bitterly despise a thefe that stealeth to satisfie his soule, when he is hungre: but if hee may be gotten, he restoreth agayne seuen tymes as much, or els he maketh recompence with all the good of hys house. But who so committeth adou-terpe with a woman, he is a foole, and byngeth hys lyfe to destruction. Hee getteth him self also shame & dishonour, such as shall neuer be put out. For the gelousie and wozath of the man, will not be intreated, no though thou wol-dest offre him great giftes to make a-mendes, he will not receaue them.

The vij. Chapter.

My sonne. Kepe my woordes, and lay by my commaundements by thee. Kepe my comaundementes and my lawe, euen as the apple of thine eye, and thou shalt lyue. Wynde them vpon thy fingers, and wyte them in the table of thine hart. Say vnto wisdome thou art my syster, & call vnderstanding thy kynswoman: that they may kepe thee from the strange woman, and from the harlot which geueth swete woordes. For oute of the wyndowe of my house I loked through the lattise, and behelde the simple people: and amonge other simple folkes, I spied one yong foole goyng ouer the streetes, by the corner in the way toward the harlots house, in the twyghte of the evening, when it began now to be night and darke.
And behelde, there met him a woman with open tohens of an harlot, only her heart was hid. She was full of loude woordes, and readye to dallie: whose fete could not abide in y^e house now is she without, now in the stre-tes, and layeth a baite in euery corner, she caught the yonge man, kissed him, and was not ashamed, sayinge: I had a bove of peaceofferings to pay, and thys day I persourmed it. Therefore came I forth to mete thee, y^e I mighte seke thy face, and so I haue found the.

I haue deckt my bed with coverings and clothes of Egypte. My bedd haue I made to smel of Myrr, Aloes, and Cinamon. Come, let vs lye together, and take oure pleasure till it bee daye light: and we will enioye the pleasurs of loue. For the good manne is not at home, he is gone far of. He hath taken the bagge of money with hym. And he will returne home at the appoy-nted solempne feast. Thus with many swete woordes she ouercame him, and wyth her flattering lypes she enty-sed him sodenlye to folowe her: as it were an oxe led to the slaughter, and lyke as it were a foole that laugheth, when he goeth to the stocks, to be punished, so long till shee had wounded hys lyuer with her darte: lyke as yf a byrde hasted to the snare, not know-inge that the peryll of his lyfe lyeth there vpon. Heare me now therefore O my chyldren, and marke the wodes of my mouth. Let not thine heart wander in her wayes, and be not thou deceiued in her pathes. For many one hath she wounded and cast downe: yea, many a strong man hath bene slayn by the meanes of her. Her houses are the way vnto hell, and bring men downe into the chambers of death.

The viij. Chapter.

Doth not wisdome cry: doth not vnderstandinge put forth her voyce? Standeth she not in the hye places, in the streates and wayes? doeth she not crye besyde the whole cite, and in the gates wher men go out and in? It is you, O yee men (saith she) who I cal. Vnto the children of men, doe I lyfte by my voyce.

The Proverbes

Take heede vnto knowledge, O yee ignorant, be wise in heart O ye fooles. Give eare, for I will speake of great matters, and open my lippes to tell thinges that bee righte. For my throte shalbe talking of the trueth, and my lippes abhorre vngodlynesse. All the wordes of my mouth are righteoug, there is no frowardnes nor fall-hood therein. They are all playne to such as will vnderstand, and right to them that finde knowledge. Because my doctryne and not spluer: and my knowledge more then fine golde. For wisdome is more woorth then precious stones, yea al thinges that thou canst desyre, may not be compared vnto it. I wisdome haue my dwellinge wyth knowledge, and prudent coun-cell is myne owne. The feare of the Lorde abhorreth wickednes, pryde, dysoyane, and the euill waye: and a mouth that speaketh wicked thinges I bittrelye abhorre. I can geue coun-cell, and I conferre thinges: I haue vnderstandynge, I haue strengthe.
Pro. 17. • Though me, Kynges regne: thorough me counsailers make iuste lawes. Though me do princes beare rule: and all iudges of the earthe exercise iudgement. I am lounge vnto those that loue me: and they that seke me earlie shall fynde me. Riches and honoz are with me, yea excellent good des and righteoulnes. My fruite is better then golde and precious stone, and myne encrease more woorth then syne spauer. I will guide the in the way of righteoulnes, and in the strete of iudgement. That I may send prosperity to those that loue me, and to increase their treasure. • The Lord himselfe hadde me in possession in the beginning of his wayes, or euer he began his workes afoze time: • I haue bene ordeyned from everlastinge, and from the beginning or euer the earthe was made. When I was bozne, there were neither depthes nor springes of water. Befeore the foundations of the mountayns were layed, yea befoze all hilles was I bozne. The earth and al that is vppon the earthe was not yet made, no not the ground it selfe. For when hee made the heauens, I was present: when he set vp the depthes in order, when he hanged the cloudes as bone, when he fastened the springes of the depe. When hee shutte the Sea within certayne boundes, that the waters should not go ouer their markes that hee commaunded. When hee layed the foundations of the earth, I was with him, ordynng all thinges: delptinge depthe, and reioysynge as waye befoze him. As for the rounde compasse of this worlde, I make it ioyfull: for my deptye is to be amonge the chyldzen of men: Therefore barren vnto mee O yee chyldzen, blessed are they that kepe my wayes, O geue eare vnto nurture, be wise, and refuse it not. Blessed is the man that heareth me, watchynge dayly at my gates, and geuynge attendaunce at the postes of my doores for who so findeth me, fin-deth lyfe, and shall obtayne fauoure of the Lorde. But whoe so offendeth a-gainste me, hasteth his owne soule.
 All they that hate mee, are the louers of death.

The ix Chapter.

Visdomme hath builded her selfe an house, and hewen out seuen pillars, for she hath killed her vi-cialles, powred out her wyne, and prepared her table. She hath sent forth her maydens to cry vpo the hieft place of the cite. Whoso is ignorant, lette him come hither. And to the vnwise, she said: O come on your way, eat my bread, and drynke my wyne, which I haue powred out for you. Forlake ignorance, and ye shall lyue: and so shal ye go in the wayes of vnderstandynge.
 Who so reppoueth a scoznfull prision, getteth him selfe dishonoure, and hee that rebuketh the vngodlye stappeth him selfe. Reproue not a scozner, leaue hee owe thee euill will: but rebuke a wise mā, and he will looe thee. Geue a discret man but one occasion, and hee will be the wiser: teache a righteous man, and he will encrease in knowledge. • The feare of the Lord is the beginning of wisdome, and the knowledge of holpe thinges, is vnderstand-ing. For through me thy dayes shal be prolonged, and the yeris of thy lyfe shal be manye. If thou be wise, thy wisdom shall do thy selfe good, but if thou thinkest scoyne thereof, it shalbe thyne owne harme. A foolish retchles woman, full of wordes, and such a one as hath no knowledg, sitteth at the doore of her house and in the hye places of the citie to call suche as goe by, and that wilke strighte in their wayes.

Whoso is ignorant (sayeth she) lette hym come hither, and to the vnwise the sayth: stolen waters are swete, and the brende that is pryncly eaten hath a good taste. And he doeth not consider, that they are but dead which be there, and that her gestes are in the deepe of hell. (For he that wilbe toynd vnto her, shall go downe to hel: but he that auoydeth from her shalbe saued.

flaunder, is a foole.

Where much babbling is, ther must nedes be offence: and he that refraineth his lippes is wise.

An innocent tonge, is a noble treasure, but the hearte of the vngodlye is nothing woorth.

The lippes of the righteous fede a whole multitude, but foolis shal dye in their owne follye.

The blessinge of the Lorde maketh rich men, • as for carefull traualle, it doth nothing thereto.

A foole doth wickedly and maketh but a spoite of it, but wisdom ruleth therman that hath vnderstanding.

The thinge that the vngodly are afraid of, shal come vpon them, but the righteous shal haue their desire.

The vngodly passeth when the i-pest cometh, and the rightwile remaineth sure for euer.

- The wicked amendeth not for plague hyon plague, but the seede of the righteous shalbe preserved.
- A saye woman withoute discrete maners, is like a ringe of golde in a swynes snout.
- The desire of the righteous is acceptable, but the hope of the vngodlye is indignation.
- Some man geueth out his goods and is the richer: but the niggard (haueing ynough) will departe from nothing, and yet is exar in pouertie.
- He that is liberall in geuing, shall haue plenty: and he that watereth shalbe watered also him selfe.
- Who so hardeth by his coyn, shall be cursed among the people : but blessing shall light upon his head that getteth food.

He that laboureth for honestie, fineth his desire : but who so seeketh after mischief, it shall happen unto him.

Phl. 1.1 He that trusteth in his riches, shall have a fall, but the righteous shall flourish as the grene lease.

Who so maketh disquietnes in his owne house, he shall have wynde for his herpyng, and the foole shalbe seruant to the wise.

The frute of the righteous is a tree of life : and he that endoweth himself to winne mens soules is wise.

1. Pt. 4.10 • If the righteous be recompensed upon earth, how much more then the vngodly and the sinner.

Eccl. xij. Chapter.

Uho so loveth wisdom, will be contente to be reformed : but he that hateth to be reppoynd, is a foole.

Eccl. 4.1 • A good man is acceptable unto the Lorde : but the wicked ymaginer wyll be condempne.

A man can not endure in vngodlynesse : but the roote of the righteous shall not be moued.

A busyfely woman is a crowne unto her husbnde : but she that beareth her selfe vnholynesse, is a corruption in his bones.

The thoughtes of the righteous are ryghte : but the ymaginations of the vngodlye are deceitfull.

The talkinge of the vngodlye is, howe they may laye wayte for blood : but the mouth of the righteous wyll deliuer them.

Phl. 37.1 • God ouerturneth the estate of the wicked, & they stand not : but the house of the righteous, shall stand stedfast.

A man shalbe commended for his wisdom : but a foole shalbe despised.

Eccl. 10.10 • A simple man which laboureth and worketh, is better then one that is gorgious, and lacketh bread.

A ryghteous man regardeth the life of his cattell, but the vngodly haue cruell heartes.

Phl. 21.1 • He that tilleth his land, shall haue plenteousnes of bread, but he that soweth ydlenes, is a very foole.

(who so hath pleasure to continue at the wyne, leaueyth dishonesty in his owne dwelling.)

The desire of the vngodly hunteth after mischief, but the roote of the righteous bringeth forth fruit.

The wicked falleth into the snare through the malice of his owne mouth but the iust shal escape out of al perill.

Every man shall enioye good, according to the frute of his mouth, and after the workes of his handes shall he be rewarded.

Loke what a foole taketh in hande, he thinketh it well done : but he that is wise wilbe counseled.

A foole berreth his wrath in all the hast, but a discret man couereth wrong.

A iuste man will tell the truth, and shewe the thing that is right : but a false witnesse disceaueth.

A slanderous person picketh like a swearde : but a wise mannes tongue is wholsome.

A true mouth is euer constant : but a dissembling tonge is sone chaunged.

They that ymagine euill in theyr mind, wil disceau, but the counselors of peace shal haue top folowing them.

There shall no misfortune happen unto the iust, but the vngodlye shalbe filled with misery.

no death.

A wise soonne will hearken to his fathers warninge, but he that is scornefull, will not heare when he is repproued.

A good man shall enioye the fruite of his mounthe: but he that hath a frowarde minde, shall be spoyled.

He that keepeth his mouth keepeth his life: but who so openeth his lips, goes to euill, destroperh himselfe.

The sluggard wold sayn haue, and can not get his desire: but the soule of the diligent shall haue plenty.

A righteous man abhorreth lyes, but the vngodlye shameth both other and him selfe.

Righteousnesse keepeth the innocent in the way, but vngodlynesse doeth ouerthrow the sinner.

Psa. 17 b • Some men are riche, though they haue nothinge: agayne, some men are poore, hauing great riches.

Pro. 11. c With goods euery mā deliuereth his life, & the poore will not be repproued.

Ps. 24 a The light of the righteous maketh topfull, but the candle of the vngodlye shalbe put out.

Amonge the proude there is eny strife, but among those y do all thyngs with aduise ment, there is wisdom.

Vainely gotten gooddes are soone spent: but they that be gathered together with the hande, shall encrease.

Longe taryng for a thyng that is differred, greueth the heart, but when the desire commeth, it is a tree of life.

Who so despiseth any thyng, shalbe hurte for the same: but he that feareth the commendemente, shall haue the rewarde.

A discretful son shal haue no good, but a discret seruant shal do full well, and his way shall prosper.

The lawe is a well of life vnto the wise, that it maye kepe him from the snares of death. Good vnderstanding geneth fauour, but harde is the waye of the dispisers.

A wise mā doth al thyngs with discretion, but a foole will declare his folp.

An vngodly messenger selleth into mischiefe, but a faithfull ambassadour is wholesome.

He that thinketh scoyne to be reformed, commeth to pouertie and shame: but who so regardeth correction, shall come to honoure.

When a desire is brought to passe, it delecteth the soule: but foolen count it an abomination to depart fro euill.

He that goth in the company of wise men, shall bee wise: but who so is a companion of foolen, shall be hurte.

Mischiefe foloweth vpon sinners, but the righteous shall haue a good rewarde.

He that is vertuous, leaueth an inheritance vnto his children, and the riches of the sinner, is layde by for the rust.

There is plenteousnes of foode in the fieldes of the poore: but the fielde not well ordred, is withoute fruite.

He that spareth the rodde, hateth his sonne, but who so loueth him, chastiseth him betimes.

The righteous eateth, and is satisfied, but the belly of the vngodlye hath neuer ynough.

The .xv. Chapter.

A wise woman vpholde her house, but a foolish wife plucketh it downe.

Hee that walketh in the right path of the Lord, feareth him: but he that turneth him self from his waye, despiseth him.

In the mounthe of the foolish is the rodde of pyrde, but the lippes of the wise will preserve them.

Where no open are, there the cribbe is emptie: but where the open labour there is muche fruite.

A faithfull witnes will not dissemble, but a false recorde will make a lye. A scornful body seeketh wisdom, & findeth it not: but knowledge is easy to come by, vnto him y will vnderstand.

He that thou medle not with a foole in whom thou perceuest to bee no knowledge.

The wisdom of him that hath vnderstandinge, is, to take heed vnto his waye, but the foolishnesse of the but wife disceateth.

Fooler make but a spoote of sinne, but there is a sayable ioue among the righteous.

The heart feleth his owne lyues bitternesse, neyther shall the straunger be partaker of his ioye.

The house of the vngodlye shall be ouerthrowen, but the tabernacle of the righteous shall flourish.

Pl. 16b
Eccl. 12b
Eccl. 5b
There is a way whiche some men thinke to be right, but the ende thereof leadeth vnto death.

The heart is sorrowful euen in laughter, and the end of mirth is deuines.

A backebidinge heart shalbe fylled presumptuously.

An vnpacient man dealeth folithe-ly: but he that is well aduised is hated of the foole.

The ignorante haue foolishness in possession, but the wise are crowned with knowledge.

The euill shall bowe them selues before the good, and the vngodlye shall wape at the doores of the righteous.

The poore is hated euen of his owne neyghbours, but the riche hath many frendes.

Who so despiseth his neyghbour, doth amisse, but blessed is he that hath pittie of the poore.

(He that putteth his truste in the Lorde, loueth to be mercifull.)

Without doubt they erre that prayse wickednes, but they that muse

Riches are as a crowne vnto the wise, but the ignorance of fooler is very foolishnesse.

A saythfull witnesse deliuereth soules, but a disceitfull witnesse byn-geth forth lyes.

The feare of the Lorde is a strong holde, and his chyldren are vnder a sure defence.

The feare of the Lorde is a well of life, to auoyde the snares of death.

The encrease and prosperitie of the commons is the kinges honour; but the decaye of the people, is the confusion of the prince.

He that is patient, hath muche vnderstanding, but he that is soone displeased, prouoketh foolishnes.

A mery heart is the lyfe of the bo-dye, but rancoure consumeth awaye the bones.

He that doeth a poore manne wzonge, blasphemeth his maker: but who so hath pittie of the poore, doeth honour vnto God.

The vngodlye is cast awaye for his iniquitye: but the righteous hath a good hope euen in death.

Wisdomes relecth in the harte of him that hath vnderstandinge, and is vnlarned.

Righteousnesse setteth vp the people, but the sacrifice of the heathen is sunnefull.

A discret seruant is a pleasure vnto the king: but one that is not honest prouoketh him vnto wzath.

The xv Chapter.

A soft answer putteth down displeasure, but froward woordes prouoke vnto angre.

The tongue of such as be wise, vseth knowledge aright, as for a foolish mouth it babbleth out nothing but foolishnesse.

The eyes of the Lorde loke on euery place, beholding both the good & bad.

A wholesome tongue is a tree of lyfe, but he that abuseth it, hath a by-ken minde.

A foole despiseth his fathers correction, but he that taketh hede when he is repproued, shal haue the more vnderstanding.

Pro. 15a

• An angry man stereth by strife, but he that is patient stilleth discorde.

The way of a slothfull man, is as it were hedged with thornes, but the strete of the righteous is well clenfed.

Pro. 10a

• A wise sonne maketh a glad father: but an vndiscrete bodie shames his mother.

A foole refoseth in foolish thin-ges, but a wise man looketh well to his owne goings.

Unadvised thoughtes shal come to naught, but wher as men are that can geue counsell, there is steadfastnesse.

A topfull thing is it to a man, when his counsell is folowed: and very pleasant is a word spoken in due season.

The waye of life leadeth vnto heauen, that a man should beware of hell beneath.

The Lord will breake downe the house of the proude, but he shall make fast the borders of the widowe.

The Lord abhorreth the imaginations of the wicked, but pure ways of innocentes are pleasaunt vnto to him.

The contentious man roterh by his owne house: but who so hateth rewardes, shall lue.

Thowow mercy and faith are the sin-nes purged, and thowowe the feare of the Lord doth euery one eschue null.

The heart of the righteous studieth his answer afoze: but the wicked

The eare that harkeneth to the reformation of yfse, shall dwell among the wise.

He that refuseth to be reformed, despiseth his owne soule: but he that submytteth hym selfe to correction, is wise.

The feare of the Lord is the right science of wisdom, and lowlyness goeth before honour.

The xvi. Chapter.

A Man maye well purpose a thing in his heart: but the an-swere of the tonge cometh of the Lord.

• A man thinketh all his wayes to be cleane, but it is the Lord that iudgeth the mindes.

Commit thy wayes vnto the Lord, and loke what he deuiseh, it shal prosper.

The Lord doth all thinges for his owne sake, yea and when he heareth the vngodly for the day of wrath.

The Lord abhorreth all suche as be of a poudre heart, his hand is agaynst their hande, and they shall not escape as innocentes.

(The beginning of a good lyfe is to doo righteousnes: for that is moze accepted vnto God, then to offer vp sacrifices.)

With louing mercy and faithfulness finnes be forgotten, and who so feareth the Lordescheweth euill.

When a mans ways please the lord he maketh his verpe enemyes to be his frendes.

Better it is to haue a little thinge with righteousnes, then great rentes wrongfully gotten.

Mat. 23. A man deuileth a way in his hert: but it is the Lord that ordereth his goings.

When the prophete is in the lips of the king, his mouth shall not goe wrong in iudgement.

Mat. 23. A true measure and a true balancer we the Lordes iudgement, he maketh all weyghtes.

It is great abhominacion, when kinges are wicked: for a kings seat shuld be holden by with righteousnesse.

Righteous lips are pleasant vnto kinges: and he that speaketh trueth, shalbe beloued.

The kings displeasure is a messenger of death: but a wise man will pacifie him.

The cherefull countenance of the king, is life, and his louinge fauoure, is as the euening dewe.

Ps. 112. To haue wisdom in possession, is better then to haue gold: and to get understanding, is rather to be chosen then to haue silver.

The pathe of the righteous is to eschue euill, and who so looketh well to his wayes, keepeth his owne soule.

Presumptuousnes goeth before destruction: and after a poudre stomacke there foloweth a fall.

Better is it to be of humble minde with the lowlye, then to deuise the spoyle with the poudre.

He that handleth a matter wisely, obtayneth good: and blessed is he, that putteth his trust in the Lord.

Who so hath a wise understanding shall be called to counsell: and he that can speake saye, shall haue the moze learning.

Understanding is aewel of life vnto him that hath it: as for the chattering of fooles, it is but foolishnesse.

A wise hert ordereth his mouth wise lyfe, & amendeth y doctrine in his lips.

Faire wordes are an hony combe, a refreshing of the minde, and health of the bones.

Where no discretion is, there the soule is enclined to the thinge that is not good, and is swifte on foote, and offenderth.

Foolishenes maketh a man to goe out of his waye, and then is his herte vnpatient agaynst the Lord.

Riches maketh many frends: but the pooze is forsaken of his neyghbour.

A false witness shall not remayne unpunished: and he that speaketh lies, shall not escape. Deu. 19.

The multitude hangeth vpon great men: and euerye man saoureth him that geueth rewardes.

As for the pooze, he is hated among all his owne brethren: yea his owne frendes withdraw from him, and yf he aske them the cause, they disdayne to answer him.

He that is wise, loveth his owne soule, and keepeth vnderstanding, that he may prosper.

A false witness shall not remayne unpunished: and he that speaketh lies shall perishe.

Plesure becometh not a foole, much more vnseemly is it, a bonde manne to haue the rule of princes.

C He that hath pitie vpon the poore, lendeth vnto the Lorde: and loke what he layeth out, it shalbe payed him a gayne.

Hasten thy sonne whyle there is hope, but let not thy soule be moved to slape him.

A man of greates wrathe beareth a payne: and though thou once deliuer him, thou must agayne do as much for him.

W gene eare vnto good counsell, and be content to be reformed, that thou mayest be wise in thy latter dayes.

Pro. 16 b • There are many deuices in a mans heart, neuerthelesse the counsell of the Lorde shall stande for ever.

It is a mans worship to do good, and better it is to be a poore man then a dissembler.

The feare of the Lorde bringeth a man to life, and he shall rest the whole night in plentiousnes, without visitation of any plague.

Pro. 16 b • A slouthfull manne shutteth his handes into his bosome, as into the pot: and will not take payne to put it to his mouth.

Pro. 21 b • If thou smitest a scozefull person, the ignorant shal take better hede, and yf thou repponest one that hath vnderstanding, he will be the wiser.

He that hurtech his father, or shutteth out his mother, is a shamefull and an vnworthy sonne.

My sonne heare no moze the doctrine that leadeth thee vnto errours, from the wordes of vnderstanding.

A false witnes laugheth iudgment to scozne, and the mouth of the vngodly eateth wickednes.

Whymmentes are ordeyned for the scozefull: and stryppes for foolen backen.

The .xx. Chapter.

A lyne maketh a manne to be scozefull: and strong drinke causeth a man to be vngodly, who so deyleth therein, shal neuer be wise.

• The kinge oughte to be feared as the roaring of a lyon: who so prouoketh him vnto angre, offendeth against his owne soule.

It is a mans honoure to kepe him self from strife: but they that haue pleasure in brawlinge, are foolen euerie one.

A slothful body will not go to plowe for colde of the winter, therefore shall he go a begging in sommer, and haue nothing.

Wise counsell in the heart of man, is like a water in the depe of the earth and a man that hath vnderstandings bringeth it forth.

A presumptuous loke, a proud stomache, and the ploswing of the vngodlye is sinne.

The deuices of one that is diligent bring plenteousnes, but he that is vnduised cometh vnto povertie.

Who so hoordeth by riches with the discreetfulnes of his tonge, he is bayne and a foole, and like vnto them that seke their owne death.

The robberies of the vngodly shall be their owne destruction, for they will not do the thing that is right.

The wayes of the frowarde are strange, but the wayes of him that is cleane are right.

It is better to dwell in a corner vnder the house toppe, then with a bawling woman in a wide house.

The xxiiiij. Chapter.

BE not thou gelous ouer wicked men, and despye not to be among them. For their heart imagineth to doo hurt, and their lips talke of mischief.

Thorough wisdom is an house builded, and with vnderstandinge is it set vp. Thorough discretion shall the chambers bee filled with all costlie and pleasant riches.

A wise man is cuer stronger: yea, a manne of vnderstandinge increaseth of strength.

For with discretion muste warres be taken in hande, and wheras are manye that can geue counsell, there is the victory.

Wisdom is to hie a thing for a foole for he dare not open his mouth in the gate.

He that ymagineth mischief, maye well be called an vngacious person.

The thought of the foolishhe is sin, and the scozefull is an abomination vnto men.

BIf thou be ouersene and negligente in time of neede, then is thy strength but small.

Deliver them that go vnto death, and are led awaye to be slayne, and bee not negligente therein yf thou be able to do them good.

If thou wilt saye: I knowe not of it: Thinkest thou that he which made the heartes, doeth not confidze it: and that he which regardeth thy soule, seeth it not? Shall not he recompence every manne according to his woordes.

My soonne, thou eatest honey and the sweete honey combe, because it is good and sweete in thy mouth. Earnest thou the knowledg of wisdom be due to thy soule, as sone as thou hast gotten it: And thou shalt haue longe dayes, yea, thy hope shall not be in vayne.

Laye no priuie wayte (O wicked man) vpon the house of the righteous and disquiet not his resting place. For a iust man falleth seuen times, and riseth vp agayne, but the vngodlye fall into wickednes.

Reioyce not thou at the fall of thyne enemye, and let not thine heart be glad when he stumbleth: Least thou also (when he seeth it) be angry, and turne his wrath from him vnto thee.

Let not thy wrath and gelousie mone thee, to folowe the wicked and vngodly: And whye the wicked shall haue no posteritie, and the candle of the vngodlye shalbe put out.

My sonne, feare thou the Lorde, and the kinge, and keepe no companye with them that styde backe from his feare: for their destruction shall come sodeinly, and who knoweth the aduersitie that may come of them bothe.

These are also the sayings of the wise.

It is not good to haue respecte of any person in iudgement.

He that sayeth vnto the vngodlye: thou art righteous, him shall the people curse, yea, the communalte shall abhorre him.

But they that rebuke the vngodlye, in them doeth God helpe, and a rych blessing shall come vpon them.

Every man shall kisse his lippes, that geueth a good answer.

First make vp thy woordes that is without, and looke wel to that which thou hast in the fildes, and then builde thine house.

Be not a false witnes agaynst thy neyghboure, and speake no falsehood with thy lippes.

The .xxv. Chapter.

It is the honour of God to keepe a thinge secrete, but the kinges honour is to searche out a thinge.

The heauen is hye, the earthe is drye, and the kinges herte is vnsearceable.

Take dyssolte from the siluer, and there shalbe a cleane vessel thereof.

Take away vngodlinesse from the kinge, and his seate shalbe stablished with righteousnes.

Put not footth thy selfe in the pryence of the kyng, and pryce not into the place of greates men. • Better is it that it be sayd vnto thee: come vp hie, then thou to be put lower in the pryence of the prynce, whom thou seest with thine eyes.

• Be not hastye to go to the lawe, lest happie thou do some offence after the stryke be ended; whereby thy neyghbour putteth thee to shame.

Handle thy matter with thy neyghbour him selfe, and discouer not another mans secret: lest when men heare thereof, it turne to thy dishonour, and least thine euill name do not cease.

(Grate and frendshipp doeth delecter, which see that thou kepe for thy selfe, least thou be repoynded.)

Like as one prou whetteth another, so doth one man comfort another.

Who so keepeth his fig tree, shal enjoy the fruites therof: euen so he that waiteth vpon his master shal come to honoure.

Like as in one water there appeare diuers faces, euen so diuers men haue diuers heartes.

Like as hell and destruction are neuer full, euen so the eyes of men can neuer be satisfied.

Silver is tried in the moultre, and golde in a soynace, and so is a manne when he is openly praised to his face.

The hart of a wicked man seeketh after mischief, but a true hearte seeketh for knowledge.

Though thou shaldest buye a foole with a price in a moyle like firmen- tation, yet wil not his foolishnesse

See that thou knowe the number of thy cattel thy selfe, and loke well to thy flockes.

For riches abideth not alwaye, and the crowne endureth not for euer.

He labours shall clothe thee, and for the goies thou shalt haue money to thy husbandrye.

Thou shalt haue goates milke y- nough to feede thee, to bpholde thy houshold, and to susteine thy maidens.

C Chapter
The vngodly fleeth wher no man c halet him: but the righteous standeth stille as a lion.

Because of sinne the land both ofte chaunge her prince: but thorough men of vnderstandinge and wisdom, a Realme endureth longe.

One pooze manne oppressinge ano- ther by violence, is like a continuall rayne that destroyeth the fruit.

They that forsake the lawe, prayse the vngodly: but suche as keepe the lawe, abhorre them.

Wicked menne discerne not the thing that is right: but they that seeke after the Lord, discusse all thinges.

A pooze man leadinge a godly life, is better then the riche that goeth in frowarde wayes.

Who so keepeth the lawe, is a childe of vnderstanding: but he that is a companion of ggotous men, shameth his father.

He that by vsury and vniust gaines gathereth riches, he shal laye them in those for a manne that will pittie the pooze.

He that tourneth away his care from hearinge the lawe, his prayer shalbe abhominable.

Who so leadeth the righteous into an euill waye, shal fall into his owne pit, but the iust shal haue the good in possession.

He riche man thinketh him selfe to be wise, but the pooze that hath vnderstanding can perceane him welly- nough.

The Proverbs

When the righteous menne are in prosperitie, then doth honour flourish, but when the vngodlye come by, the state of men chaungeth.

Pla. 22 b He that hideth his sinnes, shall not prosper: but • who so knowledgeth them: and forsaketh them, shall haue mercy.

Well is him that standeth a way in awe, as for him that hardeneth hys heart, he shall fall into mischance.

Like as a roaring lion and an hungry beare, euerso is an vngodly prince ouer the poore people.

Where the prince is withoute vnderstanding, there is great oppression and wronge: but if he bee suche a one as hateth couctousnes, hee shall longe reigne.

Gen. 4 b • He that by violence sheddeth any mannes blood, shall be a runagate vnto his graue, and no man shall be able to succour him.

Pro. 1 od • Who so leaferth a godly and an innocent lyfe, shall be saued: but he that goeth in frowarde wayes, shall once haue a fall.

Eccl. 20 b • He that tilleth his lande, shall haue plenteousnes of bread: but he that followeth violence, shall haue pouertie ynough.

A man that dealeth faithfully, shall be filled with blessings, and • he that maketh to much haste for to be ryche shall not be vngiltye.

To haue respect of persons in iudgement is not good, and why, a man wil do wrong, yea, euen for a peece of bread.

He that will be rich al to soone, hath an euill eye: and considereth not, that pouertie shall come vpon him.

He that folowing my preceptes rebyleth a man, shall finde more fauour at the last, then he that flattereth him.

mat. 23 a • Who so robbeth his father and mother, and sayeth it is no sinne: the same is like vnto a destroyer.

He that is of a proude stomack and withoute feare, strereth by strife: but he that putteth his trust in the Loyde, shall be well fed.

He that trusteth in his owne heart is a foole, but he that dealeth faithfully shall be safe.

• Hee that getteth vnto the poore, shall not lacke, but he that turneth away his eyes from such as be in necessitie, shall suffer greate pouertie him selfe.

• When the vngodlye are come by men are sayne to hyde theym selues, but when they perishe, the righteous increase.

The xxix. Chapter.

He that is skinned, and with not be reformed: shall sodenly be destroyed without any helpe.

• When the righteous haue the ouer hand, the people are in prosperitie: but when the vngodly beareth rule, there the people mourne.

Whoe so loueth misdeome maketh his father a glad manne: • but he that kepeth company with harlots, spendeth away that he hath.

With true iudgement the king seteth by the land, but if he bee a manne that oppresseth the people with garthe rings, he tourneth it vpside downe.

Who so flattereth his neyghbour, layeth a net for his feete.

The sin of the wicked is his owne snare, but the righteous doeth singe and reioyce.

The righteous considereth the cause of the poore: but the vngodlye regardeth no vnderstanding.

Wicked people bringe a title in decap, but wise men set it by agayne.

If a wise man go to lawe with a foole (whether he deale with him frendly or roughly) he getteth no rest.

The bloudthirstie hate the righteous, but the iust seeke his soule.

A foole powreth out his spirite altogether, but a wise man kepeth it vntill afterwarde.

If a prince desire in lyen, al his seruantes are vngodly.

The poore and the lender mete together, and the Loyde lighteneth both their eyes.

The seate of the kinge that setteth fully iudgeth the poore, shall continue sure for enemoze.

The rod & correction minister wisdom, but if a child be not looked vnto, he bringeth his mother to shame.

When the vngodly come by, wickednes encreaseth: but the righteous shall see their fall.

Purture thy son with correction, and thou shalt be at rest: yea he shall do thee good at thine heart.

When the word of God is not preached, the people perish, but wel is him that keepeth the lawe.

A seruant will not bee better for woordes, for though he vnderstande: yet wil he not regard them.

If thou seekest a man that is hasty to speake vnadvisedly, thou mayest trust a foole more then him.

He that delicately bringeth by his seruant from a childe, shall make him his master at length.

D An angry man stirreth by strife, and he that beareth euill will in his mind, doth much euill.

Job. 22 After pride commeth a fall, • but a lowly spirit bringeth great worship.

Who so keepeth compaignie with a theefe, hateth his owne soule: hee heareth blasphemies, and telleth it not forth.

He that feareth man shall haue a fall, but who so putteth his trust in the Lord, is without daunger.

Many there be that trust in Princes fauoure, but euerie mans iudgemente commeth from the Lord.

The righteous abhorreth the vngodly: but as for those that be in the right way, the wicked hate them.

A child that keepeth the word, shall be without destruction.

2 The wordes of Agur, the sonne of Iakel and the prophesie that the same man spake vnto Jethiel, euen vnto Jethiel and Achai.

hath holden the winde faste in his hande: & who hath comprehended the waters in a garment: & who hath sette all the endes of the world: & what is his name, or his sonnes name: Canst thou tell?

All the wordes of God are pure and cleane, for he is a shilde vnto all psal. 19.8 them that put their trust in him.

Put thou nothing vnto his wordes, least he reprove thee, and thou bee found a lyer.

Two thinges haue I required of thee, that thou wilt not denye me because I dye. Remove from mee vanities and lyes: geue mee neyther pouertie, nor riches, onely graunt me a necessa-ry liuinge. At least if I be to fall, I deny thee, and say: who is the Lord? And least I bringe constrained thorough pouertie fall vnto stealing, and take the name of my God in vayne.

me: as for the fowrth, that passeth my knowledge. The way of an Eagle in the ayre: the way of a serpent ouer a stone, the way of a thyppe in the sea: and the way of a manne wyth a yonge woman.

Suche is the way also of a wyfe that breaketh wedlocke, whiche wypereth her mouth, lyke as whenne she hath eaten; and saich: As for me, I haue doone no harme.

Thowowe thre thynges the earthe is disquieted, and the fowrth may it not beare. Thowow a seruant that beareth the rule: Thowowe a soole that hathe to muche breadde. Thowowe a wyfe woorthye harkene, whenne she is marryed, and thowowe an hand-mayden that is hye to her may-stresse.

There bee fower thynges in the earthe, the whiche are verpe lytell: but in wysedome they excede the wyse. The emmets are but weake people, yet gather they their meate together in the harurste. The Conyes are but a feeble folke, yet make they theyr couches amonge the rocks. The Greshoppers haue not a gypde, yet goe they sooth together by heapes. The Spyder laboureth wyth her handes, and so in kynges palaces.

There be thre thynges that go stiffly: yea fower are comely in going. A Lyon which is strongest amonge beastes, and getteth place to no manne. A greye hounde stronge in the hynder parten. A Ramme also, and a kyng, agaynst whome no manne aryeth vp.

O Lammeil, it is not for kinges, it is not (I saye) for kinges to drinke wyne, nor drinke stronge drinke: (for there is no secret where dronkenesse reigneth) leasse they being dronken, forget the lawe, and peruert the iudgement of all good men's chyldren.

Geue strong drinke to suche as be condemned to death, and wyne vnto those that mourne, that they may drinke it, and forget their mysery and aduersitee.

Be thou an aduocate for the dowe and stande in iudgement thy selfe, to speake for all suche as be succourlesse in this transitorie worlde.

Open thy mouth, defend the thinge that is lawfull and right, and the cause of the poore and helpelesse.

Whoso findeth an honest faithfull woman, she is muche more woorth then pearles.

The heart of her husband may safely trust in her, so that he shall fall in no pouertie.

She will doo him good, and not euill, all the dayes of her life.

She occupieth woell and flax, and labourereth gladdelye with her handes.

She is like a Marchauntes ship, that bynggeth her vittayles from a farre.

She is wyse in the night season: to prouide meate for her householde, and foode for her mayden.

She considereth lande, and byeth it, and with the fruite of her handes she planteth a vineyarde.

Shee girdeth her loynes with strength, and couergeth her armes.

And yf the perceptie that her huswiferye doeth good, her candle doeth not out by night.

She layeth her synger to the spynde, and her hande taketh holde of the distaffe.

She openeth her hand to the pooze, yea, she stretcheth oute her handes to such as haue nede.

She feareth not that the colde of wynter, shall hurte her house, for all her houtholde folkes are clothed with scarlet.

She maketh her selfe saye ozname-tes, her clothyng is white silke and purple.

Her husband is marche let by in the gates, when he sitteth among the rix-lers of the lande.

She maketh clothy of silke, and sel-the marchaunt.

Strength and honoure is her clothyng, and in the latter daye she shall reioyce.

She openeth her mouth with wis-grace.

She looketh well to the wayes of

The Booke of the Preacher: ortherwise called Ecclesiastes.

The fyrst Chapter.

These are the wordes of the Preacher, the son of David kinge of Ierusalem. • Nil is but most vaine va-nitie (saith the preacher) and all is most vayne (I say) and but playne vanitie.
For what els hath a manne of all the laboure that he taketh vnder the sun?
One generation passeth awaye, another commeth: but the earth abydeth still. The sunne goeth downe, and retourneth to his place, that he maye there ryse by agayne. The winde goeth towarde the South and tourneth vnto the north, fetcheth his compasse, whirleth about, and goeth forth, and his circuit retourneth agayne to him selfe. • All floudes runne into the sea, and yet is the sea it selfe not fylled: for loke vnto what place the waters runne, thence they come to flowe againe. All these thinges are so harde to be knowen that no man can expresse them. • The eye is not satisfied with sight, the eare is not fylled with heering. • The thing that hath ben, commeth to passe agayne, and the thinge that hath bene done, shall be done a-gayne: there is no newe thinge vnder the sunne. Is there anye thinge wherof it maye be sayde: lo this is newe? for it is long ago in the times that haue bene before vs. The thinge that is past, is out of remembraunce: Euen so the thinges that are for to come, shall no moze be thoughte vpon amonge them that come after. I my-selfe the preacher was king of Israel at Ierusalem, and did apply my mind to seke out and search for knowledge of all thinges that are doone vnder heauen. Suche transple and labour hath God geuen vnto the chyldren of men, to exercise them selues therin.

The booke of

Thus haue I considered all the thinges that come to passe vnder the sun: and lo they are all but vanitie & vexation of minde. The crooked can not be made straight, nor the thing that is vnperfect, can not be accompted with thinges that are perfect. I communed with mine owne heart, saying: Lo, I am come to a great estate, and haue gotten moze wisdome, then all they that haue ben before me in Ierusalem. Yea my heart had great experience of wisdome and knowledge, for there vnto I applied my mind, that I might know what were wisdome and vnderstanding, what were errour and foolishnesse: and I percepued that this was also but a vexation of minde, for where muche wisdome is, there is also great trauaile and vniquietnes: and the moze knowledge a manne hath, the moze is his care.

The .ij. Chapter.

Then sayde I thus in my heart: Howe go to, I will take mine ease, and haue good daies. But lo, that is vanitie also: in so muche, that I sayde vnto the man giuen to laughter: Thou art mad, and to mirth what doest thou? So I thought in my heart, to geue my flesh vnto wine: and agayne, to applye my minde vnto wisdome, and to comprehend foolishnesse vntill the time that (among all the thinges which are vnder the Sun, I might see what were best for men to doo, so long as they liue vnder hea-

3. Re. 3.
4. 5. 6.

I builded me houses & planted vineyards. I made me orchardes and gardens of pleasure, and planted trees in them of all maner of fruytes. I made pooles of water, to water the greene and fruiteful trees withall. I boughte seruantes and maydens: and hadde a greate householde. As for cattell and sheepe, I hadde moze substance of them, then all they that were before me in Ierusalem. I gathered spicer & golde together: euen as a treasure of kinges and landes. I prouided me singers and women, which coult play on instrumentes, to make men mirth and pastime. I gat me psalteries and songes of musike. And I was greater and in a moze worship then al my predecessors in Ierusalem. For wisdom remained with me: & loke what soeuer mine eyes desyred, I let them haue it: and where in soeuer my heart delited of had any pleasure, I withheld it not from it. Thus my heart reioyced in all that I did: and this was my portion of all my trauell. But when I considered all the workes that my hands had wrought, and all the labour that I had taken therein, lo, it was but vanitie and vexation of mind, and nothing of any value vnder the Sunne. Then turned I me to consider wisdom, errour, and foolishnes: (for what is he among men, that might be compared to me the king in such workes?) and I sawe that wisdome excellith foolishnes, as far as light doth darkness. For a wise man hath his eyes in his head, but the foole goeth in the darkness. I perceiued also that they both had one ende. Then thought I in my minde: If it happen vnto the foole, as it doth vnto me: what needeth me then to labour any moze for wisdome. So I confessed within my heart, that this also was but vanitie. For the wise are euer as little in remembrance as the foolish: for the dayes that come when all shall be forgotten: yea the wise man dieth as well as the foole. Thus began I to be swerpe of my life, in so much, that I could awake with nothing that is pon vnder the sunne, for al was but vanitie and vexation of mind: yea I was swerpe of al my labours which I had taken vnder the sonne, because I should be sayne to leaue the vnto another man that cometh after me. And who knoweth whether he shall be a wise man or a foole? And yet shall he be the lord of al my labours, which I with such wisdome haue taken vnder the sun. This is also a vayne thing. So I turned me to refrayne my mind from al such trauaile, as I toke vnder the sun: for so much as a man should wryte himselfe such a sentence, with vnderstanding, that he is but a vaine man, and yet he sayne to leaue his labour vnto an other, that neuer sweet for them. & his is also a dayne thing and great miserye. For what getteth a man of al the labour and trauell of his minde, that he taketh vnder the sunne, but leauynesse, sorrowe, and disquietnesse all the dayes of his life? In so much that his heart can not reste in the night: this is also a paynfull thinge. • As it not better then for a man to eate & drinke, and his soule to bee merie in his labour? Yea, I sawe that this also was a gift of God. For who will eate or go moze lustily to his worke then I? And why? God geueth to the man that is good before him, wise dome, vnderstanding and gladnesse. But vnto the sinner he geueth wearynesse (and superfluous care) that hee maye gather and heape together the thing that afterwarde shalbe geuen vnto him, who it pleaseth God. This is now a dayn thinge: yea, a verie disquietnesse and vexation of minde.

The. iij. Chapter.

Every thing hath a time: yea, all that is vnder the heauen hath his conueniente season.

There is a time to be borne, and a time to dye. There is a time to plant, and a time to plucke by the thinge that is planted. A time to laye, and a time to make hole. A time to bryake downe, and a time to builde by. A tyme to wepe, and a time to laugh. A time to mourne, and a time to daunce. A tyme to cast away stones, and a tyme to gather stones together.

A time to embrace, and a time to re-frayne from embracing. A tyme to winne, and a time to lese. A tyme to spare, and a time to spende. A tyme to cut in peces, and a time to sowe together. • A time to keepe silence, and a time to speake. A time to loue, and a tyme to hate. A tyme of warre, and a tyme of peace. What hath a man els that doeth any thing? but weari-nesse and labour? For as touching the trauell and carefollnes, which God hath geuen vnto men. I see that he hath geuen it them, to be exercised in it. All this hath hee ordeyned many a plous goodlye, to euery thing his due time. He hath planted ignoraunce also in the heits of men, that they should not comprehend the ground of his workes which he doeth from the beginninge to the ende. So I perceaued, that in these thinges there is nothing better for a man, then to be merie, and to doo well as longe as he liueth. For all that a man eateth and drinketh: yea, whatsoeuer a man entiopeith of all his labour, that same is a gifte of God. I considered also that whatsoeuer God doeth, it continueth for euer. And that nothing can be put vnto it, nor taken from it, and that God doeth it to the intent, that men shoulde feare him.

• The thing that hath bene, is nowe, and the thing that is for to come, hath bene afozetime: for God restozeth agayne the thinge that is paste. Mozeouer, I sawe vnder the sunne vngodlynesse in the steede of iudgement, and iniquitie in steade of rightousnesse. Then thought I in my minde: God shall separate the righteous from the vngodlye, and then shall be the tyme and iudgement of all counceiles and woorkes, I communed with myne owne heart also, concerninge the children of men: howe God hath chosen them, and yet letteth them appeare, as though they were beastes: for it happeneth vnto men, as it doeth vnto beastes, & as y one dieth, so dieth the other: yea, they haue both one maner of breath: so that (in this) a man hath no preeminence aboue a beaste, but all are subdued vnto vanitie. They go all vnto one place, for as they bee all of dust, so shall they all turne vnto duste agayne. Who knoweth the spirite of man that goeth bywarde, and the breath of the beaste that goeth downe to the earth? Wherefore I perceaued that ther is nothing better for a man, then to be ioyfull in his labour: for that is his portion. But who shall bringe him to see the thing that shall come after him?

with money: and who so delighteth in riches, shall haue no profite thereof.

This is also a vayne thing. Where as mucheriches is, there are manye also that spend the away. And what pleasure hath he moze that posselleth them saying that he maye loke vppon them with his eyes? A labouring man slepeth sweteipe whether it be little or much that he eateth: but the aboun- dounce of the rich, will not suffer him to slepe. Yet is there a sooze plague, whiche I haue sene vnder the sunne, (namely) riches kepte to the hurte of him that hath them in possession. For ofte times they perishe with his great miserie and trouble: and yf he haue a child, it getteth nothinge. • Like as he came naked oute of his mothers wombe, so goeth he thither agayne, and carteth nothinge awaye with him of all his labour. This is a miserable plage, that he shall go awaye enen as he came. What helpeth it him then that he hath laboured in the winde? All the dayes of his life also he dyd eate in the darke, with great carefulnesse, sickness, and sorowe. • Therefore me thinke it a better and a sapper thing, a man to eate and drinke, and to be refreshed of al his labour, that he taketh vnder the sonne all the dayes of his lyfe, which God geureth him, for this is his portion. For vnto whomsoever God geureth riches, goodes and power, he geureth it him to enioye it, to take it for his portion, and to be refreshed of his labour: this is the giste of God. For he thinketh not muche howe longe he shall lyue, for so muche as God spillet his heart with gladnes.

The. vi. Chapter.

There is yet a plague vnder the sunne, and it is a general thing among men: when God geureth a man riches, goodes, and honoure, so that he wanteth nothing of all that his heart can desyre: and yet God geureth him not leaue to enioye the same, but another man spendeth them. This is a vayne thinge and a miserable plague. If a man beget an hundred children, and lyue manye peres, so that his dayes are manye in number, and yet can not enioye his good, neyther be buried: as for him I saye, that an vntimelye birth is better then he. For he cometh to nought, and spendeth his time in darkenesse, and his name is forgotten. Moreover, he seeth not the sonne, and knoweth not of it: and yet hath he moze rest then the other. Yea, though he lyued a thousande peres, yet hath he no good lyfe. Come not al to one place? All the labour that a man taketh, is for him selfe, and yet his desyre is neuer fylled after his minde. For what hath the wise moze then the foole? What helpeth it the pooze, that he knoweth to walke with foolen before the lyuinge? The cleare sighte of the eyes is better, then that the soule shoulde walke after desyres of the lust. How be it, this is also a vayne thinge, and a disquietnes of minde. The thing that hath bene is named already, and knownen, that it is enen man him selfe, neyther maye he go to lawe with him that is mightyer then he. Manye thinges there be that increase vanitie, and what hath a man els? For who knoweth what is good for man lyuinge, in the dayes of his vayne lyfe, whiche is but a shadowe? Or who will tell a man what shall happen after him vnder the sunne?

The. vii. Chapter.

A Good name is moze worthe then • precious oymementes: and the daye of death is better then the daye of byth. It is better to go into an house of mourning, then into a banquettinge house. For there is the ende of all men: and he that is huinge taketh it to hearte. Grauitie is better then to laughe: for when the countenaunce is heauye, the heart is reformed. The hearte of the wyse is in the mournynge howse, but the heart of the foolyshe, is in the house of myathe. • It is better to geue eare to the chaffeninge of a wise man, then to heare the songe of foolen.

For the laughinge of fooles is lyke the crackinge of thornes vnder a pot. And that is but a dayne thinge. The wise man hateth wongre dealing, and abhoyreth the heart that couereth rewardes. Better it is to consider the end of a thing then the beginning. The patient of spirit, is better then the hie mynded. Be not hastily angry in thy minde, for wath resteth in the bosome of fooles. Say not thou: What is the cause, that the dayes of the olde time were better, then they that be now? for that were no wise question.

Wisdomes with enheritaunce is good: yet better is it with them that without care maye beholde the sunne. For wisdomes defendeth as well as money, and the excellent knowledge and wisdomes geueth lyfe vnto him that hath it in possession. Consider the wordes of God, howe that no man canne make the thing streight, which he maketh croked. Use wel the time of prosperitie, and remember the time of misfortune: for God maketh the one by the other, so that a man can synde nothing els. All thinges haue I considered in the time of my vanitie, that the iust man perisheth for his righteousness sake, and the vngodly lyueth in his wickednesse.

There-
for = be thou neyther to righteous, nor ouer wise, that thou perishe not: be neyther to vnrightheous also, nor to foolish, lest thou bye before thy time. It is good for thee to take holde of this, and not to let that go out of thy hande. For he that feareth God, cometh forth with them all. Wisdomes geueth more courage vnto the wise, then tenne mightye men of the citie:

1. reg. 8. c

for there is not one iuste vpon earth that doth good, and sinneth not. Take no hede vnto euery worde that is spoken, lest thou heare thy seruauent-curse thee: for thyne owne heart knoweth that thou thy selfe also hast ofte times spoken euill by other men. All these thinges haue I proued in wisdomes: for I thoughte to be wise, but she went farther from me, then she was before: yea, and so depe, that I might not reache vnto her. I applied my minde also vnto knowledge, and to seke and searche out science, wisdomes, and vnderstandinge: to knowe the foolishnes of the vngodly, and the error of dosing fooles. And I found, that a woman is bitterer then death, for she hath cast abrode her heart as a net that men fyche with, and her handes are cypressnes. Who so pleaseth God shall escape from her: but the spinner will be taken with her. Beholde (saythe the Preacher) this haue I diligently searched out & proued. One thing must be considered with another, that a man maye come by knowledge: which as yet I seke, and finde it not. Amonge thousande men I haue found one, but not one woman amonge all. Lo, this onely haue I found, that God made man iust and right, but they sought many inventions.

The. viii. Chapter.

VWhoe is wise? Whoe hath knowledge to make answer? I mans wisdomes maketh his face to shyne, but dishonourfastnes putteth it out of fauoure. I must kepe the kinges commaundement, and the othe that I haue made vnto God. Be not haste to go out of his sight, and see thou continue in no euill thing, for whatsoeuer it please him, that doth he. Lyke as when a king geueth a charge, his commaundement is mightie: Even so. Who maye saye vnto him. What doest thou? Who so kepeth the commaundement, shall fele no harme: but a wise mans heart discerneth the time and iudgement. For euery thinge will haue oportunitie and iudgemente: and this is the thing that maketh men full of carefulness and sorowe. And whye? a man knoweth not what is for to come: for who will tell him? Nether is there any man that hath power over the spirit, to kepe still the spirit, and to haue any power in the time of death: is it not he also that can make an ende of the battayle, neyther maye he lynne better them that medle with-all. In these things I have considered, and applied my minde vnto every worke that is vnder the sunne, howe one man hath lordship vpon another to his owne harme. For I haue sene often the vngodly brought to their graues: and yet they haue returned into the citie agayne, and came from the place of holy men, whiche in the citie were growen out of memory, as were those also that liued well.

This is also a vayne thing. Because now that euill workes are not bally punished, the heart of man geureth him selfe oter vnto wickednes. But though an euill person offend an hundred times, and God differre geuing him long life: yet am I sure, that it shall goe well with them, that feare God, because they haue him before their eyes. Agayne, as for the vngodly it shall not be well with him, neyther shall he prolong his dayes: but euen as a shadow so shall he be that feareth not God. Yet is there a vanitie vpon earth. There be iust men, vnto whom it happeneth, as though they had the workes of the vngodly. Agayne, ther be vngodly, with whō it goth as though they had the workes of the righteous.
This haue I called also a vayne thing.
Therefore I comend gladnes, because a man hath no better thing vnder the sunne, then to eate and drinke, and to be merry: for that shall he haue of his labour all the dayes of his life, which God geureth him vnder the sunne. And so I applied my mind to learne wise-dome, and to knowe the traueil that is in the worlde (and that of suche a fashon, that I suffered not mine eyes to sleep neyther day nor night.) I vn-derstode of all the workes of God, but it is not possible for a man to attayne vnto the workes that are done vnder the sunne: and though he bestow his labour to seeke them out, yet can he not reach vnto them: yea, though a wise man would undertake to knowe them, yet shall he not finde them.

The .x. Chapter.

For all these thinges, purposed I in my mind to seeke out. The righteous & wise; yea and their seruantes also, are in the bande of God, and there is no man that knoweth eether loue or hate, but all thin-ges are before them. It happeneth vnto one as vnto another: it goeth with the righteous, as with the vngodly: with the good and cleane as with the vncleane: with him that of-fereth, as with him that offereth not: like as it goeth with the vertuous, so goeth it also with the sinner: As it happeneth vnto the periured, so happeneth it also vnto him that is afraide to be forsworne. Amonge all thinges that come to passe vnder the sunne, this is a myserie, that it happeneth vnto all alike. This is a cause also that the hertes of men are full of wiskednesse, and madde foolishnesse is in their heartes as long as they liue, vntill they dye. And wyse? As long as a man liueth, he hath an hope: for a quicke dogge (say they) is better then a deade lyon: for they that be liuing, knowe that they shall dye, but they that be deade, knowe nothing, neyther deserue they any more. For their memoriall is forgotten, so that they be neyther loued, hated, nor enuyed: neither haue they anye more parte in the worlde, in all that is done vnder the sunne. So thou thy waye then, eate thy bzeade with ioye, and drinke thy wyne with a glad hearte, for thy workes please God. Let thy garmentes be alway white, and let thy head lacke none ointment. Use thy selfe to liue ioyfully with thy wife, whom thou louest, all the dayes of thy lyfe, which is but vayne, that god geureth thee vnder the sunne, all the dayes of thy vanitie: for that is the portion in this life, of all thy labour and trauaile that thou takest vnder the sunne.
Whatsoeuer thou takest in hand to do, that do with all thy power, for in the grane that thou goest vnto, there is neyther worke, counsell, knowledge, nor wisdom. So I turned me vnto other thinges vnder the sunne, and I saue, that in running, it helpeth not to be swifte: in battayle, it helpeth not to be strong: to feeding, it helpeth not to be wise: to ryches, it helpeth not to be futeill: to be had in fauoure, it helpeth not to be conning: but that all lieth in time and fortune.

Lub. 2. 10 For a man knoweth not his time, but Wylke as the fysh are taken with the angle, and as the birdes are caughte with the snare: Euen so are men taken in the perillous time, when it cometh suddenly vpon them. This wise dome haue I sene also vnder the sun, and me thoughte it a greate thinge. There was a litle citie, and a few men within it: so there came a great king and besieged it, and made greate bulwarkes agaynst it. And in the cite there was founde a poore man, (but he was wyse) whiche with his wisdom deliuered the citie: yet was there no body, that had any respect vnto suche a symple man. Then saide I: Wisdome is better then strength. Fewerthelesse, a symple mans wisdom is despised, and his wordes are not hearde. A wise mans counsell that is folowed in seilence, is farre aboue the crying of a captayne amonge fooles.

Sap. 6. a For wisdom is better then harnesse, but one buhuist alone destroyeth muche good.

The .x. Chapter.

A Deade flye doeth corrupte sweete oymntment, and maketh it to stinke. Euen so oftentimes he that is made of for wisdoms and honoure, is abhoyred because of a litle folyshenesse. A wise mannes heart is vpon the righte hande, but a foolies heart vpon the left. A foole will shew him selfe when he goeth by the way, yet thinketh he that euery man goeth as foolisshly as him selfe. If a principall spirite be geuen thee to beare rule, be not negligent then in thine office: for he that can take cure of him selfe, auoydeth great offences. Another place is there, which I haue sene vnder the Sunne: namely, the igno-

Ro. 12. b

When thou findest them in such manner, and also vpon the eighte raunce that is commonly among princes: in that a foole sitteth in great dignitie, and the riche are set downe beneath: I haue sene seruantes ride vpon horses, and prynces goyng vpon their sete as it were seruantes. But he that diggeth by a pitte, shall fall therein him selfe: and who so breaketh downe the hedge, a serpent shall bite him. Who so removeth stones, shall haue traiayle withall: and he that beweth wood, shall be hurte therewith. When an yron is blont, and the point not sharpened, it must be whet agayne, and that with might. Euen so doeth wisdom folowe diligence. A babler of his tonge is no better then a serpent that stingeth without hysing. The wordes out of a wise mans mouth, are gracious, but the lippes of a foole will destroye him selfe. The beginning of his talking is foolishnes: and the last worde of his mouth is harde madnesse. A foole is full of wordes, and a man can not tel what shall come to passe: who will then warn him of it that shall folowe after him? The labour of the foolishhe is greuous vnto them, whyle they knowe not howe to go into the citie. Who be vnto thee (O thou land) whose king is but a child, and whose princes are carely at their banquettes. But well is thee (O thou land) whose king is come of nobles, and whose princes eate in due season, for necessitie, and not for luste. Thorowe slouthfulnesse the balles fall downe, and thoroowe ydle handes it rayneth in at the house. Wealth maketh men to laughe, and wyne maketh them merre: but vnto money are all thinges obedient. With the kinge no erill in thy thought, and speake no hurt of the riche in thy private chamber: for a bynde of the eye shall betray thy voyce, and with her fetters shall she bewray thy wordes.

The .xi. Chapter.

Lye thy head vpon softe fawre, and so shalt thou finde them in ten dayes. Gene part in thou knowest not what misery shall come upon the earth. When the cloude is full, they pour out rayne vpon the earth, and when the tree falleth, (whether it be toward the South, or North) in what place soeuer it fall, there it lyeth. He that regardeth the winde shall not sow, and he that hath respect vnto clouds, shall not reape. How like as thou knowest not the way of the breath howe it encreth into the little body being yet in the mothers wombe: Euen so thou knowest not the workes of God, which is the worke master of all. Cease not thou therefore with thy handes to sow thy seed, whether it be in the morning or in the evening, for thou knowest not whether this or that shall prosper, and if they bothe take, it is the better.

C The light is sweete, and a pleasaunt thinge is it for the eyes to looke vpon the sunne. If a man liue many yeres, and be glad in them all, let him remember the dayes of darkenesse, which shalbe many: and that foloweth, all thinges shalbe but vanitie. Be glad then (O thou younge man) in thy youth, and let thine heart be merry in thy yonge dayes, folowe the hope of thine owne heart, & the lust of thine eyes: but be thou sure, that God shall bringe thee into iudgement for all these thinges.

Put away displeasure oute of thine heart, and remove euill from thy body: for childhoode and youthe is but vanitie. Remember thy maker, the souer in thy youth; or euer the dayes of aduersitie come, and of the yeres shalwe nre, when thou shalt saye: I haue not pleasure in them: before the sunne, the light, the moone and starres be darkned: and of the cloude shall rayne after the rayne, when the keepers of the house shall tremble, and when the strong men shall bowe themselves: when the millers stande still: because they be so fewe, and when the sighte of the windowes shall wepe dimme, when the doores in the streetes shall be shut, and when the voyce of the miller shalbe layde downe: when menne shall ryse vp at the voyce of the birde, and when all the daughters of musicke, shall be broughte loswe: when men shall feare in hye places, and be astrayde in the streetes: when the Almonds tree shall flourish and be laden with the gree-hopper: and when all luste shall passe (because Manne goeth to his longe home, and the mourners go about the streetes.) O: euer the silver lace be taken away, and O: the golden well be broken. O: the pottle be broken as the well, and the wheele vpon the chertie: Then shall the dust be turned againe vnto earth, from whence it came, and the spirite shall returne vnto God, which he gaue it. All is but vanitie (sayeth the preacher) all is but playne vanitie. The Preacher was yet more wise, and taught the people knowledge: he gaue good hede, sought out the grounde, and set forth many parables. His diligence was to finde out acceptable wordes, right Scripture, and the wordes of truth. For the wordes of the wise are like priches and nayles that go throughte, wherewith the staffe gathered is holden by: for they are greuen of one shepheard onely. Therefore beware (my sonne) of that doctrine that is beside this: for to make many bookes it is an endles woork, and to loud crying werpeth the bodye. Let vs heare the conclusion of all thinges: Feare God and kepe his commandementes: for that toucheth all men. For God shall iudge all workes and secrete thinges, whether they be good or euill.

Che. iij. Chapter.

By night in my bedde I soughte him, whom my soule loueth: yea diligently sought I him, but I found him not. I will get vp, (thought I) and goe about the Citie, in the wayes, in all the streates will I seke him, whom my soule loneth: but when I soughte him, I founde him not. The watchme also that go about the citie found me. Sawe ye not him whom my soule loueth: So when I was a lytle past them, I founde him whom my soule loueth. I haue gotten holde vpon him, and will not let him go untill I bring him into my mothers house, and into her chamber that bare mee. I charge you, O ye daughters of Ierusalem, by the Roses and hinders of the felde, that ye wake not vp my loue nor touche her, till she be content her selfe. Who is this that commeth by out of the wilderness like vapours of smoke, as it were a smell of Myrr, frankensence, and al maner spices of the apotecarpe? Beholde, about Salomons bedstede there stande lx. valeaunt men of the most mighty in Israel. They hold swordes euery one, and are expert in warre. Euery man also hath his swerde vpon his thighe, because of feare in the night: Kinge Salomon had made him selfe a Palace of the wood of Libanus, the pylers are of siluer, the couering of gold, the seate of purple, the ground is pleasantly paved with loue of the daughters of Ierusalem. Go forth (O ye daughters of Sion) and beholde king Salomon in the crowne: wherewith his mother crowned him in the daye of his marriage, and in the day of the glorie of his heart.

Thy lippes are like a rose coloured ribonde. Thy wordes are louely, thy cheekes are lyke a peece of a pomgranate within thine heares. Thy lippes, O my spouse drop as the hony combe, yea milke and hony is vnder thy tongue, and the smell of thy garmentes is lyke the smell of Libanus. A garden well locked is my syster, my spouse, a garden well locked, and a sealed well. The fruites that are planted in thee, are lyke a verve Paradise of Pomegranates with swete fruites: as Canyhyrre, Cardus, and Saffron, Calamus, and Sinamon, with all swete smelling trees: Myrr, Bloses, and all the beste spices: a well of gardens, a well of liuinge water, whiche ranne downe fro Libanus. My thou South winde, come thou South winde, and blowe vpon my garden, that the smell thereof may be carped on euery syde: yea that my beloued maye come into his garden, and eate of the sweete frutes that growe therein.

The. b. Chapter.

I Am come into my garden, O my syster, my spouse: I haue gathered my Myrr with my spyce. I haue eaten house with my honye combe, I haue dronke my wine with my milke. Eate, O ye frendes, drinke and be merie, O ye beloued. As I am a slepe, and my heart is waking, I heare the voyce of my beloued, when he knocketh. Open to me, O my syster, my loue, my doue, my dearling: for my heade is full of dewe, and the lockes of my heare are ful of the night droppes. I haue put of my cote, howe can I doe it on agayne? I haue washed my feete, howe shall I syle them agayne? My loue put in his hande at the hole, and my hearte was moued within me. I stode vp to open vnto my beloued, and my handes dropped with Myrr, and the Myrr ranne downe by my fingers vpon the locke. I opened vnto my beloued, but he was departed and gone his waye. Howe when he spake, my hearte was gone: I sought him, but I coulde not finde him: I cried vpon him, neuerthelesse, hee gaue me no answer. So the watchmen that went about the citie founde mee, smote mee, and wounded me: Yea, they that kept the wals tooke awaye my kercheafe fro me. I charge you therefore, O ye daughters of Ierusalem, yf ye fynde my beloued that ye tell him howe that I am sicke for loue. What manner of man is thy loue aboue other louers? O thou fairest amonge women? O what can thy loue do, more then other louers, that thou chargest vs so straghtlye? As for my loue, he is whyte and red coloured, a goddly person among ten thousande: his heade is as the moost fyne golde, the lockes of his heare are bushed, and blacke as a crowe. His eyes are as the eyes of dones by the water brookes, as though they were washed with milke, and are set lyke perles in gold. His chekes are lyke a garden bed, wherein the Apothecaries plant al manner of sweete thinges: His lippes are like roses that drop sweete smelling Myrr. His handes are like golde ringes hauing enclosed the precious stone of Charis. His body is as the pure yuoye, deckt over with Saphires: His legges are as the pillars of marbie, sette vpon sockettes of golde. His face is as Libanus, and as the bewtie of the Cedre trees. The wordes of his mouth are sweete, yea, he is altogether louely. Suche one is my loue, O ye daughters of Ierusalem, suche one is my loue.

The. bi. Chapter.

V Thither is thy loue gone then? (O thou sayest amonge women) whither is thy loue departed? We wil seeke him with thee. My loue is gone downe into his garden, vnto the sweete smelling beddes, that he maye refresh him selfe in the garden, and gather roses. My loue is myne, and I am his, which sedoth among the roses. Thou art bewittfull, O my loue, as is the place of Chirsa, thou art sayre as Ierusalem, fearefull as an armie of men with their banners. Turne away thine eyes fro me, for they haue sette me on fyre. Thy heary lockes are like a flocke of goats shorne vpon the mount of Gilead. Thy teeth are like a flocke of shorne shepe, whiche go out of the washing place, where euery one beareth swine and not one befruitfull among them. Thy chekes are like a peece of a pomegranat, within thy volupers. There are three scoye Queenes, foure scoye wyues, and damelles without number. One is my doue, one is my dearling, she is the only beloued of her mother, and deare vnto her that bare her. When the daughters sawe her, they said, she was blessed. Yea the Queenes and wiues playsted her. What is she this that looketh forth as the morning: faire as the moone, clere as the Sun, and fearefull as an army of men with their banners. I wente downe to the nut garden, to see what growe by the brookes, and to loke yf the vineyard flourished, or yf the pomgranates were shor forth. I knewe not that my soul had made me the chariote of the people that be vnder tribute. Turne againe, turne agayne, O thou perfect one, turne agayne, turne agayne, and we will looke vpon thee. What will you see in the Sulamite? She is like men of warre, singinge in a company.

The. vij. Chapter.

O howe pleasant are thy treasures with thy shoes, thou princes daughter: Thy thyghes are like a fayre Jewell, whiche is wrought by a cunning workman. Thy navel is like a round goblet whiche is neuer without drinke. Thy wombe is like a heape of wheat that is set aboute with roses. Thy two breasts are lyke two twinnes of younge Doves. Thy necke is as it were a tower of purytine eyes all soare like the water pooles that are in Hebron, beside the poze of Basethaim: thy nose is lyke the tower of Damascus, whiche looketh towarde upon thee, is like Carmell, and the beere of thy heade is like purple, and like a kinge goinge forth with his garde about him. O howe fayre and longy art thou my dearlinge in pleasure: Thy stature is like a Palme tree, and thy breasts are like grapes. I said: I will clyme vp into the Palme tree, & take hold of his hye braunches. Thy breasts also shalbe as the vyne clusters, the smell of thy nostrils is like the smell of apples, and thy fawces are lyke the beste wyne: which goeth out vnto my beloued, and thy musteth forth by the lippen of the aunciente elders. There will I turne me vnto my loue, and he shall turne him vnto me. Come on my loue, we will go forth into the fildes, and take our lodging in the villages. In the morning will we go see the vineyard: we will see yf the vyne be sprung forth, yf the grapes be growen, and if the pomgranates be shor out. There will I geue thee my breasts, the Mandagoras geue their sweete smel: and beside our dozes are all maner of pleasant fruits: both newe and olde: whiche I haue kept for thee, O my beloued.

The. viij. Chapter.

O that I might find thee with out, and kisse thee, whom I lone as my brother, whiche suckt my mothers breasts, & that thou shalt not be despised. I will lead thee and bring thee into my mothers house that thou mightest teache me, and that I might geue thee drinke of spiced wyne, and of the sweete sappe of my pomgranates. His lefte hand shalbe vnder my head, and his right hande shall embrace me. I charge you, O ye daughters of Ierusalem, that ye wake not vpon my loue, nor touche her, till she be contente her selfe. What is she this that commeth by from the wilderness, and leaneth vpon her loue? I waked thee by among the apple trees, where thy mother conceived thee, where thy mother (I saye) brought thee into the world. Set me as a seale vpon thine arme: for loue is mighty as the death, and gelousye as the hell. Her coales are of fyre, and a verie flame of the Roze: so that manye waters are not able to quenche loue, neyther may the streames drowne it. Yea, yf a man would geue all the good of his house for loue, he shoulde count it nothing. Our sister is but pong, & hath no breasts: what shall we do for our sister, when she shalbe spoken for? If she be a wall, we shall builde a silver bulwarke thereupon: yf she be an open doze, we shall fasten her with borders of Cedre tree, I am a wall, and my breastes like towres, thenne was I as one that hath founde fauor in his sight. Salomon hath a vineyard at Baal Hamon, and this vineyard deliuered he vnto the keepers: that every one for the fruite thereof, shoulde geue him a thousande pecies of siluer. My vineyard is in my sight, thou (O Salomon) muste haue a thousand, and the keepers two hundred with the fruite. Thou that dwellest in the gardens, O let me heare thy voyce, that my companions may hearken to the same. O get thee away, my loue, and be as a roe or a yong hart vpon the swete smelling mountaines.

The Booke of the Prophecie of Esay.

The first Chapter.

Ehe vision of Esaye the sonne of Amos, whiche he sawe vpon Iuda and Ierusalem: in the dayes of Azia and Joatham, Ahaz and Iehzekiah kinges of Iuda. Heare O heauen, and hearken, O earth: for the Lord hath spoken: I haue nourished & brought vp children, but they haue done wickedlye against me. The ore hath knowen his owne: & she alle his masters cribbe: but Israel hath receiued no knowledge, my people hath no vnderstanding. Alas, for this sinful nation, a people of gret iniquitie, a seede of vngacious people, corrupting their wayes. They haue forsaken the lord, they haue prouoked the holpe of Israel vnto anger, and are gone backward. Whereby shoulde ye be plagued any more, for ye are ener fallinge aswoye: The whole head is sicke, and the heart is heauye. From the soale of the foote vnto the head, there is no whole part in al your body, but all are woundes, botches, sores, and stripes, which can neyther be helped, bound vp, mollified, nor eased with any oymntment. Your land lyeth wast, your cities are bren vp, your enemies deuoure your land, & ye must be satine to stand, and loke vpon it, and it is desolate, as they were subuerted that were alienate from the Lord. Mozeouer, the daughter of Sion is lefte alone like a cotage in a vineyard, like a lodge in a garden of Cucumbers, like a wasted Citie. And excepte the Lord of hostes had lefte vs a remaine, we shuld haue ben as Sodoma & like vnto Gomorra. Heare the word of the Lord ye lordes of Sodoma: and herken vnto the lawe of our god, thou people of Gomorra. Whye offer ye so many sacrifices vnto me saith the Lord: I am full of the brennt offerings of sheethers, and of the fatnesse of fed beastes. I haue no pleasure in the blood of bullocks, lambes, and goates. Whye ye come to appere before me, who requireth this of you to treade within my porches. Therefore offer me no mo oblations, for it is but lost labour. Incense is an abhominable thing vnto me. I may not away w your newe moones, your Saboths & gathering together at the solemne dayes. I hate your newe holy dayes & solemne feastes, euen fro my very heart. I can not away with such vanitie, & holding in of the people. They lye vpon me as a burthen, & I am weary of bearing th. Whye ye hold out your hands, I will turne mine eyes fro you. And though ye make many prayers, yet will I heare nothing at all, seeing your handes are full of blood. Wash you therefore, & make you clean, put away your euil intent out of my sight, cease from doing of euill. Learn to do right, apply your selues to equitie, desire the opposite, helpe the fatherles to his right, let the widowes complaint come before you. Come I praye ye (saith the Lord) let vs reason oure matter together. Though your sinnes be as redde as scarlet, they shalbe as white as snow. And though they were like purple, they shalbe as white as wooll. If ye be louing and obedient, ye shall enioye the best thing that groweth in the lande. But yf ye be obstinate and rebellious, ye shalbe denured with the swerde: for thus the Lord hath promised with his owne mouth. How happeneth it then that the righteous Cirie (whiche was full of equitie) is become vnfaithfull as an whoore: righteousness dwelleth in it, but nowe murderers. Thy siluer is turned to dross, and thy wyne mixt with water. Thy princes are wicked and companions of thieues. They loue gyftes altogether, and gape for rewarde. As for the fatherlesse, they helpe him not to his righte, neyther will they lette the widows causes come before them. Therefore saith the Lord God of hostes, the mightie gouernour of Israel: Out vpon ye, I will ease me of mine enemyes, and I will auenge me of mine aduersaries, I shall laye my hand vpon thee, and burne out thy dross from the synest and purest, and put out all thy rime, and let thy iudges agayne as they were sometime, and the Senatours as they were from the beginning. Then shalt thou be called the righteous Ciry, the faythfull Citty. Sion shall be redeemed with equitie, and they shall turne agayne into her in righteousness. For the transgressours and vngodly, and suche as are become vnfaithfull vnto the Lord, must altogether be utterly destroyed. For they shalbe ashamed of the Gods that you longed for. And ye shalbe put to shame, for the Idols groue gardens that ye haue chosen: ye shall be as a tree whose leaues are fallen awaye and as a garden that hath no moystnesse. And as for the glozpe of youre grained Images, it shalbe turned to wyne stawe, and he that made them to sparke. And they shall both burne together, so that no man shalbe able to quenche them.

The .ij. Chapter.

This is the worde that was opened vnto Esaye the sonne of Amoz, vpon Iuda, and Ierusalem. It will be also in the last dayes that the hille where the house of the Lord is builded, shall be the chiefe among hilles, and exalted aboue all little hilles. And all nations shall praye vnto him, and the multitude of people shal go speaking thus one to another: Up, let vs go to the hill of the Lord, Psal. 32. and to the house of the God of Jacob: Mat. 4.8. that he may shewe vs his way, & that we may walke in his pathes. For the lawe shall come out of Sion, and the word of the Lord from Ierusalem, & shal geue sentence among the hethen, and shal reforme the multitude of people. They shall breake their sweardees also into mattocks, & their speares to make sythes. And one people shall not lift vp wepon against another, neyther shall they learne to fight from thence forth. Come ye (O house of Jacob) B. let vs walke in the light of the Lord. But thou hast forsaken thy people the house of Jacob: because they go farre beyond the east countreys in sorceries (whom they haue as the Whilistins had) and in strange childen: they think the selues to haue enough. Their lande is also full of siluer and gold, neither is there any ende of their treasure. Their land is also full of horses, & no end is there of their charrets. Their land is also full of baine gods, and before the work of their own handes haue they bowed them selues, yea euen before the thing that their own fingers haue made. Her kneleth the man, there falleth the man downe before them: but thou (O Lord) wilt not leaue them unpunished. And therefore C. get thee into some rock, and hide thee in the ground for feare of the Lord, & for the glozpe of his maiestie. Whiche casteth downe the high lookes of presumptuous persons, & bingeth lowe the pryde of man, and the Lord onely shalbe exalted in that day. For the day of the Lord of hostes shall come ouer: fff. b. all.

The Propheſye

all pryde and preſumption, vppon all them that exalt them ſelues, and ſhall bring them all downe: vppon all the high and ſtoute Cedre trees of Libanus, and vppon all the oaks of Baſan, vppon all high hils, and vppon all ſtoute mountaynes, vppon all coſtlye towres, and vppon all ſtrong walles, vppon all ſhippes of Chariſis, and vppon euerye thing that is glorious and pleaſant to looke vpon. And it ſhall bring downe the pryde of man, & lay mas preſumptionneſſe full lowe, and the Loyde ſhall onelye haue the victorie in that daye. But the Idols ſhall biterlye be rooted out. When ſhal crepe into holes of ſtone, and into caues of the earth, for feare of the Loyde, and for the glozy of his maieſtie: what time as he ſhall ariſe by to condemne the earth. Then ſhall man caſt awaye his gods of ſiluer, and his gods of golde (whiche he neuertheles had made to honoz them) vnto Idoles and Backes. And they ſhall creepe into the caues and rockes, and into the cliſtes of harde ſtones, for feare of God, and for the glozpe of his maieſtie, when he riſeth to condemne the earth. Fear not ye then any man, whoſe breath is in his noſtreils. For what is he of reputation,

The. iij. Chapter.

For lo, the Loyde God of Hoſtes doth take awaye from Ieruſalem and Iuda, all poſſeſſions and power, all meate and drinke, the captayne and the ſouldiour, the iudge & the prophet, the wiſe, and the aged man, the prince of ſiſte yere old, & the honorable: the Senators, and men of vnderſtanding: the maſter of craftes, and oratours. And I ſhall geue them children to be their princes, and babes ſhall haue the rule of you. The people alſo ſhall be pilled and pilled, and one ſhall euer be doing violence & wronge to another. The boye ſhall preſume againſt the elder, and the ydle perſon againſt the honorable. Yea, one ſhall take a frende of his owne kindred by the boſome, and ſaye: thou haſte clothing, thou ſhalt be our head, for thou mayeſt kepe vs from this fall and perill. Then ſhall he ſwore and ſaye: I can not helpe you. Whereouer, there is neyther meate nor clothinge in my houſe, make me no ruler of the people. For Ieruſalem is ouerthrowen, and Iuda muſt fall to the ground, becauſe that both their wordes and counſels are againſt the Loyde, to prouoke the preſence of his maieſtie vnto anger. The chaunging of their countenance bewrayeth them: yea, they declare their owne ſinnes them ſelues, as the Sodomites, and hide them not. Wo bee vnto their ſoules, for they haue returned euill vnto them ſelues. But the righteous do well, for they ſhall enioye the fruites of their ſtudies. But wo be to the vngodlye and vnrightheous, for they ſhalbe rewarded after their woorkes. Children are ex-torſioners of my people, and women haue rule of them, O my people, thoſe that call thee bleſſed, deceyue thee, and depraue the waye of thy footſteppes. The Loyde is riſen vppe to commen of the matter, and ſtanderth by (I ſaye) to geue iudgemente of the people. The Loyde ſhall come forth to reaſon with the Senators, and princes of his people. It is ye that haue burnt by my vineyards, the extorſion done to the poore is in your houſes. Wherefore do ye oppreſſe my people, and marre the faces of the poore: ſayth the Loyde God of hoſtes. Whereouer, thus ſayeth the Loyde: ſeinge the daughters of Sion are become ſo proude, and come in with ſtretched out neckes, and with bayne wanton eyes: ſeinge they come in trippinge ſo nicely with their feete. Therefore ſhall the Loyde haue the heades of the daughters of Sion, and ſhall diſcouer their ſhame. In that daye ſhall the Loyde take awaye the gozgiouſneſſe of their apparell, and ſpanges, cheynes, particettes, and collares, bracelettes, and boones, the goodly ſcourd, wide, and brodered raiment, & brooches, and headbandes, ringes and garelondes, holy daye cloches and boyles, kercheys and pinnes, glasse and cypelles, bonettes, and taches. And in seeke of good smell, there shall be stinke among them.

And for their gyddles, there shall be louse bandes. And for well set heare, there shall be baldnesse. In seeke of a stomacher, a lackclothe, and for their beautie, witherednesse, and sonne bur-ninge. Your husbandes and myghtie men shall perre the with the sword in battayle. At that time shall their gas-tes mourne and complayne, and they shall stur as desolate folke bypon the earth.

The. liij. Chapter.

Then shall seven wyues take holde of one man, and say: We will lape all our meate and clothyng together in common, onely that we may be called thy wyues, and that this shameful reproche may be taken from vs. After that time shall the branch of the Roide be beautifull and myghtie, and the fruit of the earth shall be saye and pleasant, for those Israelites that shal spring therof. Then shall the remnant in Syon and the remnant at Jerusalem be called holy.
Namely, all suche as are wytten among the living at Jerusalem: what time as the Roide shall walke away the synnyng of the daughters of Sion, and purge the blood out from Jerusalem with the wind of his iudge-ment, and with fyre. Moreover vpon all the dwellinges of the hill of Sy-on, and vpon their whole congregation, shall the Roide prouide a cloude, and smoke by day, and the shynynge of a flaming fyre by night: for all their glorie shall be preserved. And Jerusalem shall be a tabernacle for a shadowe, because of heate in the day time, a place and refuge where a man may keepe him from weether and rayne.

The. v. Chapter.

Nowe will I singe my beloved frende, a song of my fren-des, because of his vineyard.
My beloved frende hath a vineyard in a very fruitefull plenteous ground.

This he hedged, this he walled round about, & plated it with goodly grapes.
In the myddest of it builded he a toure and made a wine presse therein. And afterward when he looked that it shold byng him grapes, it brought forth thornes. Nowe therefore (O ye citizens of Jerusalem, and whole Juda:) Iudge I praye you, betwixte me and my vineyard. What more coude haue bene doone for it that I haue not done. Wherefore then hath it geuen thornes, where I looked to haue had grapes of it? Well, nowe I shall tell you howe I will doo. With my vineyard: I will take the hedge from it, that it maye perre the and breake downe the wall, that it maye be tro-den vnder foote. I will lape it wast, that it shall neyther bee dygged nor cutte, but beare thornes and byrses.
I will also forbide the cloudes that they shall not rayne bypon it. As for the vineyard of the Roide of holtes, is is the house of Israel, and whole Juda his saye planting. Of these hee looked for equitie, but so there is wyde for righteousness, so, it is but misfe-rie. Woe vnto theym that toyne one house to another, and bynge one lande so nyghe vnto another, that the poore can gette no more grounde, and that ye may dwell vpon the earthe alone. These thinges are in the cares of the Roide of holtes: shall not ma-nye greater and more gorgeous houses bee soo waste that no man shall dwell in them? And tenne acres of bynes shall geue but a quarte, and thirtie bushels of seede shall geue but an Epha. Woe be vnto theym, that ryse by early to folowe vpon kinnesse, and to them that continue so, vntill nighte, and till they be sette on fyre with wyne. In those compaignes are harpes and lutes, tabrets, and pyppes, and wine. But they regarde not the woorde of the Roide, and consider not the operation of his hands. Therefore D commeth my folke also into captiui-tie, because they haue no vnderstanding. They glorie is, sanctified saintly

With hunger, and their pride is marred for thirſte. Therefore gapeth hel, and openeth her mouth maruepous wide: that their pride, boaiſting and welthe, with ſuche as reioyce therein, may diſcende into it. Thus hath man a fall, and is brought lowe, and the high looke of the proude ſhalbe layde downe. But the Lord of hoſtes is exalted in iudgement, and God that is holy, is praiſed in righteouſnes. Then ſhall the ſhepe eate in order, and the ryche mennes landes that were layde waſte, ſhall ſtraungers deuoure. Wo be vnto them, that drawe wickednes vnto them with cords of vanitie and ſinne, as it were with a carte rope. Whiche ſhe to ſpeake on this maner: let him make haſte now, and go forth with his worke, that we maye ſee it. Let the counſell of the holy one of Iſraell come, and drawe npe, that we may knowe it. Wo be vnto them that call enill good, and good enill, whiche make darknes light, and light darkneſſe, that make ſower ſweete, and ſweete ſower. Wo be vnto them that are wyſe in their owne ſyghte, and thinke them ſelues to haue vnderſtanding. Wo be vnto them, that are ſtrong to ſuppe out wyne and experte men to ſet vp dyonkennes. Theſe gene ſentence with the vngodly for rewardes, but condemne the iuſte cauſe of the righteous. Therefore, like as fyre lyceth by the ſtrawe, and as the flame conſumeth the ſtubble: Euen ſo their roote ſhalbe as corruption: and their bloſſome ſhall vaniſh away like duſt: for they haue caſte away the lawe of the Lord of hoſtes, and blaſphemed the word of the holy maker of Iſrael.

Therefore is the wrath of the Lord kindled alſo agaynſt his people, and he ſhaleth his hande at them: yea, he hath ſmitten, ſo that the hillies did tremble. And their karcaſſes did lye in the open ſtreets, like mire. And in all this, the wrath of God hath not ceaſed, but his hande is ſtretched out ſtill. And he ſhall geue a token vnto a ſtraunge people: and cal vnto them in a ſarre countrey: and behold, they ſhall come haſtily with ſpede. There ſhall not be one ſaynt nor ſeble among them, nor not a ſluggiſhe nor ſlippery perſon. There ſhal not one of them put of the gyddle from his loynes, nor lowle the lachette of his ſhoor. His arrowes are ſharpe, and all his bowes bente. His hoſe hooves are lyke ſpynte, and his cartwheles lyke a ſtozmy winde. His crye is as it were a Lyon, and he roareth lyke lions whelpes. They ſhall roare and hanche vp the praye, and no man ſhall reconer it, or gette it from them, in that day they ſhalbe ſo ſcarle vpon them, as the ſea. And yf we loke vnto the lande, beholde, it ſhalbe all harkenes and ſorrowe. If we loke toward heauen: beholde, it ſhall be darke.

The .xl. Chapter.

In the ſame ycare that kinge Oziah died, I ſawe the Lord ſitting vpon a high and glorious ſeate, & his traine filled the temple. And about him ſtoode the Seraphins, whereof euery one had ſix winges. With ſwayne eche one covered his face, with ſwayne his ſete, and with ſwayne did he flye. They cried alſo eche one to other on this maner: holy, holy, holy, is the Lord of hoſtes. The whole world is full of his glorye. Yea, the ceaſtes and doyetches moued at his crying, and the houſe was full of ſmoke. Then I ſayde: Who is me. For I am loſte, in almuch as I am a man of vncleane lippes, and dwell amonge people that haue vncleane lippes alſo: for mine eyes haue ſcene the kinge and Lord of hoſtes. Then ſawe one of the Seraphins vnto me, haunges a hott cole in his hande, whiche he had taken from the aulter with the tonges, and touched my mouth, and ſaide: Lo, this hath touched thy lippes, and thyne vnrighteouſneſſe is taken awaye, and thy ſinne forgiven. Alſo I herde the voyce of the Lord, ſaying on this maner: to whom ſhal I ſende: and who will be our meſſenger? Then I ſayde: here am I, ſende me.

And he said: go, and tell this people: ^{11.3} Ye shall heare in deede, but ye shall ^{11.4} not vnderstand: ye shall playne lye see, ^{11.5} and not perceaue. Harden the heart of ^{11.6} this people, stop their eares, and shut ^{11.7} their eyes, that they see not with their ^{11.8} eyes, heare not with their eares, and ^{11.9} vnderstand not with their hertes, and ^{11.10} conuert and be healed. Then spake I ^{11.11} the Lorde, howe long: he answered: vn- ^{11.12} till the cities be utterly wasted with- ^{11.13} out inhabitours, and the houses with- ^{11.14} out men, till the land be also desolate, ^{11.15} and lye vnbuilted. For the Lorde shall ^{11.16} take the men farre awaye, so that the ^{11.17} land shall lye waste a long season, yet ^{11.18} in it shall succede ten kinges, and the ^{11.19} land shall returne and be layde waste. ^{11.20} And as the Cerebinte tree and oke in ^{11.21} winter cast their leaues, and yet haue ^{11.22} their sappe in them, so shall the holpe ^{11.23} seeke continue in their substance.

^{12.1} It happened in the time of Ithaz ^{12.2} the sonne of Iotham, which was ^{12.3} the sonne of Izziah kinge of Ju- ^{12.4} da, that: Razin the king of Siria, ^{12.5} and Bechah the sonne of Romeliah, ^{12.6} kinge of Israell, wente by towarde ^{12.7} Jerusalem to besiege it, but Razin ^{12.8} was not able to winne it. Nowe ^{12.9} when the house of Dauid (that is ^{12.10} Ithaz) herd word thereof, that Siria ^{12.11} and Ephraim were confederate toge- ^{12.12} ther: his heart quaked (yea and the ^{12.13} hertes also of his people) like as whe- ^{12.14} a tree in the field is moued with the ^{12.15} winde. Then sayde God vnto Clay: ^{12.16} go me: Ithaz (thou and thy son Sear ^{12.17} Jashub) at the heade of the ouer poie, ^{12.18} in the late path by the fullers ground, ^{12.19} and saye vnto him: Take heede to thy ^{12.20} selfe and be still, but feare not, neyther ^{12.21} be faint hearted, for these two tayles, ^{12.22} that is: for these two smokinge fye- ^{12.23} brandes, the wrath and furiousnes of ^{12.24} Razin, the Siria and Romelien ^{12.25} sonne, because that the King of Siria ^{12.26} Ephraim, and Romelien sonne haue ^{12.27} wickedly conspired against thee, say- ^{12.28} inge: we will go by againste Iuda.

bere them, and bring them vnder vs, ^{12.29} and set a king there, euen the sonne of B ^{12.30} Cabel. For thus sayeth the Lorde ^{12.31} God thereto: It shall not so go forth, ^{12.32} neyther come so to passe: for the head ^{12.33} Citie of the Sirians, is Damascus, ^{12.34} but the head of Damascus is Razin. ^{12.35} And after fure and threescore yere ^{12.36} shall Ephraim be no moze a people. ^{12.37} And the chiefe Citie of Ephraim is ^{12.38} Samaria, but the heade of Samaria ^{12.39} is Romelien sonne. If ye beleue not, ^{12.40} it commeth of this, that ye are vn- ^{12.41} faithfull to God. Whereouer G D D ^{12.42} spake once againe vnto Ithaz, saying: ^{12.43} Require a token of the Lorde thy god, ^{12.44} whether it be towarde the deapth be- ^{12.45} neath, or towarde the height aboue. ^{12.46} Then said Ithaz: I wil require none, ^{12.47} neyther will I tempt the Lorde. The ^{12.48} Lorde answered: Then heare to, ye of ^{12.49} the house of Dauid: It is not ynough ^{12.50} for you that ye be greuous vnto men, ^{12.51} but ye must greene my God also. And ^{12.52} therefore the Lorde shall gene you a to- ^{12.53} ken: Beholde, a virgin shall conceane ^{12.54} and beare a sonne, and thou (his mo- ^{12.55} ther) shalt call his name Emannell. ^{12.56} Butter and hony shall he eate, that he ^{12.57} maye knowe to refuse the euill, and ^{12.58} chole the good. For, or euer the childe ^{12.59} come to knowledg, to eschewe the ^{12.60} euill & chole the good: The lande (that ^{12.61} thou so abhorrest) shalbe desolate of ^{12.62} both her kinges. The Lorde also shall ^{12.63} send a time hyon the, vpon thy people, ^{12.64} and vpon thy fathers house (suche as ^{12.65} neuer came since the time that Ephra- ^{12.66} im departed from Iuda) through the ^{12.67} kinge of the Sirians. For at the ^{12.68} same time shall the Lorde whistle for ^{12.69} the flies that are aboute the waters ^{12.70} of Egipte, and for the Bees in the ^{12.71} Sirians lande. These shall come, ^{12.72} and shall lighte all in the desolate ^{12.73} valeys, in the holes of stones, vpon ^{12.74} all thorne and bushy places. At the ^{12.75} same time shall the Lorde shone the ^{12.76} heare of the head and the fete, and the ^{12.77} beard cleane of, with the rasour that ^{12.78} he shall hyer beyonde the water: ^{12.79} namely, with the kinge of the Sir- ^{12.80} ians. At the same time shall a manne line with a hoſe, and two ſheepe. Then, becauſe of the aboundance of milke, he ſhall make butter and eate it. So that every one which remaineth in the lande, ſhall eate butter and hoſe. At the ſame time all vineyardes (though there be a thouſande bynes in one, and were ſolde for a thouſande ſilverlinges) ſhall be turned to byers and thornes. Like as they ſhall come into the land with arrows and bowes, ſo ſhall all the lande become byers and thornes. And as for all hilles that are betweene doſone, there ſhall not come vpon them any feare of byers and thornes. But the cattell ſhall be driven thither, and the ſheepe ſhall feede there.

The. viij. Chapter.

Moſeour, the Lord ſayde vnto me: Take thee a great leafe, and write in it, as men do with a penne, make haſtie ſpeeche to robbe, and haſte to the ſpoyle. And I called vnto me ſaythfull witneſſes to recoorde: Uriah the prieſt, and Zachariah, the ſonne of Barachiah. After that wente I vnto the Propheſſe, that had conceived and borne a ſonne. Then ſayde the Lord to me: Geue him this name: a ſpeedye robber, an haſty ſpoyle. For whye, or euer the childe ſhall haue knowledge to crye Father and Mother: ſhall the riches of Damascus, and the ſubſtance of Samaria be taken awaye by the ſpoyle, before the kinge of the Affirians. The Lord ſpoke alſo vnto me, ſayinge: for ſo muche as this people refuseth the ſill rennings water of Silo, and put their delite in Bazin and Romelies ſonne: Beholde, the Lord ſhall bring mightie and great floods of water vpon them: namelye, the kinge of the Affirians, with all his power: whiche ſhall climbe vpon all his floods, and renne ouer all their bankes. And ſhall breake in vpon Iuda, flowing and encreaſing in power, till he get him by the necke. He ſhall fill alſo the wyderſſe of the lande with his broad wings, O

Emannell. Breake doſone (O people of Affir) and ye ſhall be broken doſone: hearken to, all ye of ſarre countreys. After you, and you ſhall be broken doſone, prepare you to battayle: and you ſhall be tozne in pieces: take your counſaile together, yet muſt your counſaile come to naught: go in hand withall, yet ſhall it not proſper: for God is with vs. For the Lord ſpoke thus to me in the power of his hande, and warned me, ſaying vnto me: that I ſhuld not waite in the wait of his people. He ſayde moſcour: rounde with none of them, whoe ſo euer ſay, yonder people are bounde together, feare them not, neyther be aſtrayde of them, but ſanctifie the Lord of hoſtes, let him be your feare and dreade. For he ſhall be the holpe place to ſlee to, and ſtone to ſtumble at: the rocke to fall vpon, a ſnare, and net to bothe the houſes of Iſrael, and the inhabitours of Ierusalem. And many ſhall ſtumble, fall, and be broken vpon him: yea, they ſhall be ſnared and taken. Howe laye the witneſſes together, and ſeale the laſte with my diſciples. Thus will I waite vpon the Lord that hath couraged his face from the houſe of Iacob, and I will looke for him. But loe, as for me, and the children which the Lord hath giuen me, we are a token and wonder in Iſrael, for the Lord of hoſtes ſaith, which dwelleth vpon the hill of Sib. And if they ſay vnto you: aſke counſell at the ſothſayers, witches, charmers, and coniarers, then make them this answer. Is there a people any where that aſkerh not counſell at his God? Shuld men renne vnto the dead for the liuing? If any man want lighte, let him looke vpon the laſte, and the teſtimonye, whether they ſpeake not after this meaninge. If he doo not this, he ſtumbleth and ſuffereth hunger. And if he ſuffer hunger he is out of patience, and blaſphemeth his king and his god. Then ſoſerh he vponward and doſoneward to the earth, and behold, there is trouble and woe: neſſe, deſolation is rounde aboute him.

and the cloude of errour. And out of such aduersitie, shall he not escape. Euenlyke as in time past, it hath bene well seene, that the lande of Babulon, and the lande of Repythai (where through the sea way goeth ouer Iordan into the lande of Galile) was at the firste in litle trouble: but afterwarde soe vexed.

The .ix. Chapter.

The people that walke in darknes haue scene great light. As for them that dwell in the land of the shadowe of death, vpon them hath the light shined. Thou hast multiplied the people, and not en-creased theyr toye. They reioyce before the, etern as men make merie in banquet, and as men that haue gotten the victorie when they deli the spoyle.
For thou hast broken the yoke of the peoples burthen: the staffe of his shoulder, and the rod of his oppresseure, as in the dayes of Madian. And true-ly every battayle that the warriour accomplisheth, is done with confused noise, and despyling theyr garmentes with blood: But this battayle shal be with burning and consuming of fyre.
For vnto vs a chield is bozne, and vnto vs a sonne is geuen. Vpon his shoulder doth the kingdome lye, and he is called with his owne name, wonderfull. The gener of counsel, the mightie God, the euermassing father, the prince of peace, he shall make no ende to encrease the kingdome, and peace, and shall sitte vpon the seate of Dauid, and in his kingdome, to set vp the same, and to stablish it with equi-tie and righteousness, from hence forth for euermore. This shal the gelousie of the Lorde of hostes bying to passe.
The Lorde sent a worde into Iacob, the same is come into Israel. And all the people of Ephraim shall know and they that dwell in Samaria, that can say with pride and hye stomaches on this manner: The tile worke is fallen downe, but we wil build it with squared stones. The mulberry timber is broken, but we shal set it by agayne with Cedre. Nevertheless the Lorde shal prepare Razin the enemy against them, and so order their aduersaries, that the Sirians shall laye hold vpon them before, and the Philistines behynde, and so denour Israel with open mouth. After all this, is not the wraoth of the Lorde ceased, but yet his hand stretched out still. For the people turneth not vnto him that chastiseth them, neyther do they seeke the Lorde of hostes. Therefore hath the Lorde rooted out of Israel both head and tayle, braunche and twigge in one day. By the heade, is vnderstande the. Senatoure and honozable man, and by the tayle, the Prophete that preached lyes. For all they which enfourme the people that they be in a right case, such be disceners. Such as men thinke also to be perfecte among these, are but castawayes. Therefore shal the Lorde haue no pleasure in their pouge men, neyther fauoure their fatherlesse and widowers. For they are all together ypocrites and wycked, and all theyr mouthes speake follye.

After all this, is not the Lordes wraoth ceased, but yet his hande is stretched out still. For bagodolyns burneth as a fyre in the hyers and thornes. And as it were out of a fyre in a wood, or a reede bushe, so ascendeth the smoke of their pride. For because of the wraoth of the Lorde of hostes is the lande fall of darknes, and the people be consumed as it were with fyre, no man doth spare his brother, but he robbeth on the right hand, and doth famishe: he eatech on the left hande, and he shal not haue ynouth. Every man shall eate the fleshe of his owne arme. Manasses shall eate Ephraim, and Ephraim Manasses, and they both shal eate Juda. After all this, is not the Lordes wraoth ceased, but yet is his hande stretched out still.

The .x. Chapter.

Vnto be vnto them that make vnrightheous lawes, and de-uise thinges, which be to hard for

The Propheſye

for to keepe: where thoroſwe the poore are oppreſſed on euery ſyde, and the innocentes of my people robbed of iudgement: that widowes may be their pray, and that they may robbe the fa-therleſſe. What will ye doe in time of the viſitation, and when deſtruction ſhal come from farre: To whom will ye runne for helpe: and to whom will ye geue your honoure, that he may keepe it: that when I withdraw my hand, ye come not among the prisoners, or lye among the dead: After all this dothe not the wrath of the Lorde cealle, but yet is his hand ſtret-ched out ſtill. Wo be alſo vnto Aſſur, which is a ſtaffe of my wrath, in whoſe hand is the rod of my puniſhe-ment. I ſhall ſende him among thoſe hipocritiſhe people, among the people that haue deſerued my diſfauours ſhall I ſend him, that he may bitterly robbe them, ſpoyle them, and treade them downe like the mire in the ſtrete.
Howbeit, his meaning is not ſo, neither thinketh his hert on this faſhion.
But he ymagineth only, how he may roote out and deſtroy muche people, for he ſayth: are not my Princes all Kinges: Is not Calno as eaſye to winne, as Charchani is: Is it harder to conquere Hamah then Arphad: Or is it lighter to ouercome Damafcus, then Samaria: As who ſaye, I were able to winne the kingdome of the Idolaters and their gods: but not Jeruſalem and Samaria. Shall I not doo vnto Jeruſalem and they: ymages, as I did vnto Samaria, and they: ydols. Wherefore the Lorde ſaith: As ſoone as I haue perſourmed my whole worke vpon the hill of Sion and Jeruſalem then will I viſite the noble and ſtout heart of the kinge of Aſſyria with his proude lookes. For he ſtandeth thus in his owne conceite.
This dooe I thoroſwe the power of myne owne hande, and thoroſwe my wiſedome: For I am wiſe, I am he that remoue the landes of the people: I robbe their treaſures: and (like one of the worthies) I dzyne them from their hye ſeates. My hand hath found out the ſtrength of the people, as it were a neſt. And like as egges y were layde here and there, are gathered together: So do I gather al countreys.

And there is no man that dare bee ſo bolde, as to touche a feather, that dare open his mouth, or once whiſper.
Shal the axe boalt it ſelfe againſt him that he weth therewith: or dothe the ſawe make any bragging agaynſt him that ruleth it: That were euen lyke, as if the rodde did exalt it ſelfe agaynſt him that beareth it: or as though the ſtaffe ſhould magnifie it ſelfe, as who ſay: it were no wood. Therefore ſhall the Lorde of hoſtes ſende him among his ſatlinges, leanneſſe, and burne by his gloze, as it were with a ſpye. But the lyght of Iſraell ſhall be that ſpye, and his Sanctuary ſhalbe the flame, and it ſhall kindle, and burne by his thornes and briers in one day: yea all the gloze of his woodes and fieldes ſhalbe conſumed with body and ſoule.
And they ſhalbe as an hoſte of men, whoſe ſtanderde beare ſayleth. The trees alſo of his field which remaine, ſhalbe of ſuche a number, that a chield may tell them: After that day, ſhal the remnaunt of Iſraell, and ſuche as are eſcaped out of the houſe of Jacob, ſeke no more comforte at him that ſmote them: but with ſapthfulnes and truth ſhal they truſt vnto the lord, the holye one of Iſraell. The remnant of the poſteritie of Jacob, ſhall conuert vnto G O D the mightie one. For though thy people (O Iſraell) be as the ſande of the ſea, yet ſhall the remant of them conuert in him. Perfect is the iudgement of him y ſhoweth in rightcouſnes, and therefore the Lorde of hoſtes ſhall perfectly fulfill the thing that he hath determined in the mideſt of the whole worlde. Therefore thus ſayth the Lorde God of hoſtes: Thou my people, that dwelleſt in Syon, be not afrayde for the kinge of the Aſſirians: He ſhall ſmye thee with a rodde, and ſhall wagge his ſtaffe at thee, as the Egyptians dide ſometime: But ſoone after, ſhall my wrathe, and mine indignation, be fulfilled in the destruction of the. Moze-ouer, the Loyde of hostes shall prepare a scourge for him, lyke as was the slaughter of Hadrian vpon the rocks of Oreb. And he shall lifte vp his rod ouer the sea, as he dyd some-tyme ouer the Egyptians. Then shall his burthen be taken from thy shoulders, and his yoke from thy necke: yea, the same yoke shall be corrupt for very fatnesse. He shall come to Iath, and thowse towarde Migdon: at Michmas shall he lay by his harnessse, and go ouer the soord. Gibeon shall be their resting place, Ramah shall be a frayd, Gibeon shall flee away.

The voyce of the noyse of thy hostes (a daughter Gallim) shall be hearde vnto Lays and to Inathoth, which also shall be in trouble. Hadmenah shall tremble for feare, but the citizens of Gabin are manly, yet shall he remayne at Iob that daye. After that shall he lyft vp his hande agaynst the mounte of the daughter Sion, the hill of Ieru-salem. But se, the Loyd God of hostes shall take away the proud from thence, with feare. He shall he we downe the proude, and tell the hye minded. The bushes also of the wood shall he roote out with yron, and Libanus shall haue a mightie fall.

The. xi. Chapter.

Ad there shall come a rodde forth of the kynred of Iai, and a blossome shall flozpythe out of his rote. The sprete of the Loyd shall lighte vpon him: the sprete of wisdomme, and vnderstanding: the sprete of counsell, and strength, the sprete of knowledge, and of the feare of the Loyde: and shall make him feruent in the feare of God. For he shall not geue sentence, after the thing that shall be brought before his eyes, neither repproue a matter at the fyrst hearyng: but with righteousnes shall he iudge the poore, and with holpnesse shall he reforme the symple of the worlde. He shall smite the worlde with a rod of his mouth, & with the breath of his mouth shall he slaye the vngod-lye. Righteousnesse shall be the gyrdle of his loynes, truth and faythfulnesse, the girdinge by of his reynes. The wolfe shall dwell with the lambe, and the Leopard shall lye downe by the goate. Bullockes, Lions, and cattell shall keepe company together, so that a lytle chyld shall rule them. The cowe and the beare shall feede together, & their yong ones shall lye together. The Lyon shall eate strawe like the oxe, or the cowe. The childe while he sucketh, shall haue a desyre to the serpentes nest, and when he is weaned, he shall put his hande into the Cockatrice denne. No man shall do euill to another, no man shall destroy another, in all the hill of my holynes.

For the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Loyde, euen as the sea flo-wereth ouer with water. And in that daye shall the Gentils enquire after the roote of Jesse, which shall be set vp for a token vnto the people, and his dwelling shall be glorious. At the same time shall the Loyde take in hande a-gayne, to conquere the remnaunte of his people (which shall be left alyue.) From the Assyrians, Egyptians, Ira-bians, Moziars, Elamites, Caldeys, Antiochians, and from the Ilandes of the sea. And he shall set vp a token among the Gentiles, and gather together the disperfed of Israel, yea and the outcastes of Iuda from the foure corners of the worlde. The hatred of Ephraim also and enenies of Iuda shall be cleane roted out. Ephraim shall beare no euill will to Iuda, and Juda shall not hate Ephraim: but they both together shall lie vpon the shoulders of the Philistines towarde the weste, and spoyle them together that dwell towarde the East. The Idumites and the Moabites shall let their handes fall, and the Ammonites shall be obedient vnto them. The Loyd also shall cleane the tonges of the Egiptians sea, and with a mightie winde shall he lift vp his hande ouer Nilus, and shall smyte his seven streames, and make men go ouer drye shod. And thus shall there be a waye for his

people that remaineth from the Assyrians, like as it happened to the Israelites. What time they departed out of the lande of Egypt.

The .xii. Chapter.

SO that then thou shalt say: O Lord, I will thanke thee, for thou wast displeased at me, but refrayne thou from thy wrath, and comfort me. Beholde, God is my salvation, in whom I will trust, and not be afraide. For the Lord God is my strength, and my songe, he also is become my salvation. Therefore with ioye shall ye drawe water out of the welles of the Saviour, and then shalt say: geue thanks vnto the Lord, call vpon his name, declare his counsels among the people, keepe them in remembrance, for his name is excellent. I singe prayles vnto the Lord, for he hath doone great thinges, as it is knowen in all the worlde. Cry out and singe thou that dwellest in Zion for great is the holy one of Israel in the middes of thee.

The .xiii. Chapter.

This is the heauye burthen of Babilon, whiche I say the son of Iosias dyd see. Lyft vp the banner vpon the hye hill, call vnto the, holde vp your hand, that the Princes maye goe in at the doore. I haue sent for my debities and my gianter (sayth the Lord) which shall execute wrath, I will call for suche, as triumphe in my gloire. There is a noyse of a multitude in the mountaynes, lyke as of a great people, a rushinge, as though the kingdomes of the nations came together. (And the Lord of Hostes, mustreth his army to battell.) They come out of a farre countrey, from the ende of heauen: Euen the Lord himselfe with the ministers of his wrath, to destroye the whole lande. Hourne ye, for the day of the Lord is at hand, and shall come as a destroyer from the Almighty. Therefore shall all handes be letten downe, and all mens heartes shall melte awoye, they shall stande in feare, carefullnesse and sorow shall come vpon them, and they shall haue payne, as a woman that travaileth with childe. One shall be abashed of another, and they faces shall burne lyke the flame of fyre. Beholde, the daye of the Lord shall come, terrible, full of indignation, furour and wrath, to make the lande waste, and to roote out the sinners thereof. For the starrs and planettes of heauen shall not geue their lycht, the sun shall be darkened in the ryng, and the moone shall not shyne with his lycht. And I will punishe the wickednesse of the worlde, and the synnes of the bngodlye, sayeth the Lord. He hye Romances of the proude will I take away, and will laye downe the boasting of tyrantes. I will make a man deerer then fyne golde, and a man to be more woorth then a golden swedge of Ophir. Therefore, I will shake the heauen, and the earth shall remoue out of her place: in the wrath of the Lord of hostes, and in the daye of his feare: full indignation. And Babilon shall be as an hunted or chased doe, and as a shepe that no man taketh vp. Every man shall turne his owne people, and syle eche one into his owne land. Who so is founde alone shall be shot through: And who so gather together, shall be destroyed with the swerde. Their children shall be slaine before their eyes, their houses spoyled, and their wyues ranshed. For lo, I shall byng by the Medes agaynst them, whiche shall not regarde silver, nor be despiuous of golde. With bowes shall they destroye the yonge children, and hane no pittie vpon women with child, and their fathers shall not spare the children. And Babilon (that gloire of Kingdomes and beantie of the Caldees honour) shall be destroyed, euen as Sodom destroyed. Sodome and Gomorra. It shall not endure for ever, neyther shall there be anye moore dwellinge there, from generation to generation. The Arabians shall petch no tents there.

there, neither shal the shepherds make their foldes there any more: but fearefull wilde beastes shall lye there, and the houses shalbe full of great Dilles. Riches shall dwell there, and they shall daunce there, wilde cattles shall crye in the palaces, and dragons shalbe in the pleasaunte houses. And as for Babilons time, it is at hande, and her dayes shall not be prolonged.

The. xiiij. Chapter.

But the Lorde will be mercifull vnto Jacob, and will yet chose Israel agayne, and set them in their owne land. Straungers shall cleane vnto them, and get them to the house of Jacob. The people shal take them, and carpe them home to their owne lande. And make them to inherite the house of Israel in the lande of the Lord that they may be seruantes and hande maydens of the Lorde. Thei shal take those prisoners whose captiues they hadde beene afoze: and ryle those that had oppressed theym. When the Lord, now shal bzing thee to rest, from the traualle, feare, & harde bondage that thou was laden withall: then shalt thou vse this mockage vpon the king of Babilon, and saye: howe happeneth it that the oppresoure leaureth off? Is the golden tribute come to an ende? The Lord hath broken the sceptre of the vngodly, and the rod of the Lordly. Whiche when he is worth smitteth the people with continuall strokes, and tyzannously reigneth ouer the heathen, whom he persecuted without compassion. And therefore the whole world is nowise at rest and quietnes, and men singe for loy: Yea, euen the fir trees, and Cedres of Libanus reioice at thy fall, sayinge: Now that thou art laid downe, there come by no mo to be we downe ha. Yet also beneath trebleth to mete thee at thy coming, and for thy sake hath rayled his deade, and all mightye men, and princes of the earth. All kinges of the earth stande by from their cities, that they may all answer and speake vnto thee. Art thou become weakke also as we? art thou become like vnto vs? Thy pompe and thy pryde is layde downe into the pitte, and so is the melodye of thy instruments. Woymes be layde vnder thee, and woormes be thy couering. Howe art thou fallen from heauens (O Lucifer) thou faire morning childe: howe haste thou gotten a fall euen to the grounde, and art become weaker then the people? For thou saydest in thine heart: I will clime by into heauen, and exalte my thzone aboue beside the starres of God, I will sit also vppon the holpe mount toward the North, I will clime by aboue the cloudes, and wilbe like the highest of all. Yet thou shalt be broughte downe to the depe of hell. They that see thee, shall narrowly looke vpon thee, and thinke in them selues, sayinge: Is this the man, that brought all landes in feare, and made the kingdomes afrayde? Is this he that made the world in a manner waste, and layde the Cities to the grounde, which let not his prisoners go out? The kings of the nations lye euerye one in his owne house with woorthippe, and thou art cast oute of thy grave like a filthye abhominable bjaunch: like as dead mens rapyns that are shot through with the sword and gone downe to the stooncs of the deepe, as a dead carse that is troden vnder feete, and art not buried with them: Euen because that thou haste wasted thy lande, and destroyed thy people. The generation of the wicked shalbe without honour for euer. Let there a way be sought to destroy their children, that be in their fathers wickednes, that they come not by agayne to possesse the lande and fill the world full of enemies. I will stande by against them (sayeth the Lorde of hostes) and roote oute the name and remnant, sonne, and sonnes sonne of Babilon (sayeth the Lord God) and will gene it to the Otters, and will make water puddelles of it. And I will sweepe them oute with the besseome of destruction, sayeth Egg. ij. by F the Lorde of hostes . The Lorde of hostes hath swoyne an othe, sayinge: It shall come to passe as I haue determined, and shall be fulfilled as I haue deuyfed. So that Assyria shall I destroye in my lande, and vppon my mountaynes will I treade him vnder foote . wherethrough his yoke shall come from theym, and his burden shall be taken from their shoul-der. This deuise hath G O D taken through the whole world, and this is his hand stretched oute ouer all people. For yf the Lorde of hostes determine a thing, who is able to disanull it? And if he stretch forth his hande, who maye holde it in agayne? The same yere that king Schar dyed, God threatned on this maner: Kioyce not (thou whole Palestina) because the rod of him that beareth thee, is broken: for oute of the Serpentes roote, there shall come an adder, and the fruit shall be a fiery flying worme. But the first borne of the poore shall be fed, and the simple shall dwell in safetie. Thy roots also will I destroye with hunger, and it shall slaye thy remnant. Mourne thou porte, wepe thou citie, for (O whole lande of Palestina) thou art layde waste, for there shall come from the North, a smoke, that not one alone maye abide in this place. Who shall then answer the messengers of the Gentiles? For the Lorde hath stablished Sion, and the poore of his people that be therein, do put their trust in him.

Che. xii. Chapter.

This is the heuys burthen vppon Moab: Ar of Moab was destroyed and overthrowen in the nighte season: Kir also in Moab was destroyed, and perished in the night. They wente vp to the ydoles house, euen to Dibon to the hye places, to wepe for Nebo, and Moab did mourne for Medba. All their heades were holde, and all their beards ha-uen. In their streates are they girded aboute with sackcloth. In all the toppes of their houses and streates shall be nothing but mourninge and weeping. Hesbon and Eleale shall cry that their voyce shall be heard vnto Jahaz. The woorthies also of Moab shall bleate out and crye for very sorrowe of their mindes. Woe shall my heart be for Moabs sake. They shall flee vnto the Citie of Zoar, whiche is like a fayre younge bullocke of thre yere olde, for they shall all go vp to Lath weeping. Euen so by the waye towarde Hozonaim they shall make lamentation for their viter destruction. For the waters of Rimmon shall be dyed vp, by reason wherof the grasse is withered, the herbes destroyed, and the greene thinges gone. For the residue that he hath done, they are sorry. As for their substance, the enemies haue carped them to the brooke of the willowes. For the crye wente ouer the whole lande of Moab: vnto Eglaim and vnto Beer Elim was there nothing but mourning, because the waters of Dimon were full of bloud: for I the Lorde shall send more bloud vpon Dimon, and ypon vpon the remnant of the land, and on them that are escaped from Moab.

Che. xli. Chapter.

Sende the Lorde of the sworde a lambe: from the rocke that lyeth toward the desert, vnto the hill of the daughter Sion. For as for the daughters of Moab, they shall be as a trembling birde, that is put oute of haruest, for they shall carpe them vnto Armon: gather your counsell, come together in iudgement, cower vs with your shadowe in the mid daye, as the nighte doeth hide the chafed, and beswage not them that are fled, lette we persecuted people dwell amonge you. Moab, be thou their refuge agaynst the destroyer: for the aduersarye is brought to nought, the robber is vndoone, the tyrant is swallowed oute of the land. And in mercye shall the seate be prepared, and he shall sit vpon it in the truth, in the Tabernacle of Dauid iudging and seeking iudgement, and making hast vnto righteousness.

we haue heard of the pride of Moab, he is very proude, presumptuous, arrogant, and full of indignation, andwayne are his eyes. Therefore shall Moab make lamentation because of the Moabites (that shall slayne) yea they shall waile al together. Because of the foundations of the Citie that is made of bricke, shall ye complayne: euen the same people that are left one eye behynd. For the bynes of Hesbon are cut downe: As for the vine of Sibna, the lordes of the heathen haue broke downe her principal branches: they are come euen vnto Iazer, they went on wandring vnto the wilderness. Her goodly branches were shewen downe, as they wente ouer the Sea. Therefore will I mourne for Iazer, and for the vine of Sibna. I will poure my teares vpon thee, O Hesbon and Eleal, for the crye of thine enemies is fallen vpon thy summer fruites, and vpon thyne harvest. The Mirth and chere is taken away out of the plentifull felds, and in the vineyardes there shall be no ioye nor gladnes. The treader shall treade out no wine in the presses, the songe of their mery chere haue I layde downe. Therefore, my bowels shall romble like an harpe for Moabs sake, & myne inward partes for the cities sake that is made of bricke. And it shall come to passe, that when it is sene that Moab shall be made woery of his hil chapels, he shall come to his temple to pray, but he shall not be able. So then this is the saying that the Lord hath spoken concerning Moab, sence that time. But now the Lord hath spoken, saying: In thre yeares which shall be as the yeares of an hyed seruant, shall the glorie of Moab be turned into confusion, throughout all his multitude, which is verie great. And that which remaineth shall be very small and feeble.

The xxij. Chapter.

This is the heauy burden vpon Damascus. Beholde, Damascus is taken away, to be no more a Citie, but shall be an heape of broken stones. The walled citie of Aroer shall be soldes for cattell, which shall lye there, and there shall none to fraye them away. Ephraim also shall no more be strong: and Damascus shall no more be a kingdome, and the remnaunt of Siria shall be as the glorie of the children of Israel, saith the Lord of hostes. And in that day it shall come to passe that Jacob shall be made very poore, and the fatnes of his fleshe shall waxe leane. And he shall be as one that gathereth by corne in harvest, euen like him whose arme reapeth the eares of corne. He shall be also lyke him that gathereth eares of corne in the valey of Rephaim. Som gathering in debe shall there be left in it, euen as in the shaking of an Olive tree, there remaine two or thre bearies in the toppe of the bittermooste bowe, and foure or fyue in the brode fruitfull branches thereof, saith the Lord God of Israel. Then shall man tourne agayne to his maker, and his eyes shall haue respect to the holy one of Israel. As for the alters which are his owne handie worke, he shall not regarde them: and the things that his syngers haue made (as groues and ymages) those shall hee not caste his eye vnto. In that day shall their strong cities be as the forsaken shubbes and branches, which they left because of the children of Israel, and the lande shall be desolate. Because thou hast forgotten God thy saluation, and hast not bene mindfull of thy stronge rocke, therefore shalt thou see pleasant plantes, and shalt graffe the branch of another mannes vyne. In that day shalt thou make thy plante to growe: and carely in the morning shalt thou make thy seede to flourish. The harvest shall be gone in the day of inheritance, and ther shall be sorrowe without hope of comfort. Wo shall be to the multitude of muche people, which shall make a sound like the noyse of the Sea. And the violence of the nations, which shall rage like the rushing in of many waters: Euen like many waters shall shall the people rage. God shall rebuke him, and he shall flye farre of. He shall be chased away lyke as a dyce strawe vpon the mountaynes before the wind and lyke a thing that tourneth before the skyme. At euen beholde, there is trouble: and oꝛ euer it be morning, lo, he is gone. This is the portion of them that oppresse vs, and the lotte of them that robbe vs.

The .xviij. Chapter.

O That lande that trusteth vnto the shadowe of winges, that lande whiche is beyonde the waters of Ethiopia: Sendinge messangers by the sea, euen in vessels of reedes ouer the water. Go you hence (ye spedie messangers) to a nation that is scattered abroade and robbed of that they had: a fearfull people from their beginning hitherto, a nation troden downe by little and little, whose lande the floodes haue spoyled. And al ye inhabitors of the world, and indwellers of the earth, loke vp when he setteth a token in the mountaynes, and hearken when he bloweth with the trompe. For so the Lord saide vnto me: as for me, I will take my rest and looke vpon the matter in mine habitation, lyke a sayre heate after the rayne, and like a cloude of Dewe in the heate of harvest. For afoze the harvest, when the braunche is growen there shall come ripe fruite out of the floure, and he shall cut downe the increase with sythes, and the braunches shall he take awaye with hookes. Thus shall they be lefte together vnto the foules of the mountaynes, and to the beastes of the earth: for in sommer the birdes shall remayne vpon it, and euery beaste of the land shall be vpon it in the winter. In y^e time shall there a present be brought vnto the Lord of hostes: euen a people that is scattered abroade, and robbed of that they had, that same people which hath ben fearfull from their beginning, hitherto, a nation troden downe by litle and lytle, whose land the floodes haue spoy-led: To the place of the name of the Lord of hostes, euen to the mounta Sion.

The .xix. Chapter.

The heauye burthen of Egypt: Behold, the Lord rideth vpon a swifte cloude, and shall come into Egypt, and the ydols of Egypte shall tremble at the presence of him, and the heart of Egypte shall quake in the mids of her. And I will set the Egyptians one agaynst another, so that one by other shall fight agaynst another, and one neyghboure agaynst another, citie against citie, and realme agaynst realme. The minde also of Egypte shall be cleane without counsell within it selfe, and the deuise that they take will I destroye, so that they shall see counsell at ydoles, and at sozeters, at woꝝkers with spirites, and at soothsayers. And the Egyptians will I geue ouer into the hande of a marvellous cruell Lord, and a mightie kinge shall haue dominion ouer them, saith the Lord God of hostes. The waters of the sea, shall fayle, and the riuer shall decrease and be dried vpp. The waters shall be drawen out: the ryuer of Egypte shall be emptied and dried vp, the reedes and flagges shall be cutte downe. The grasse in the riuer and by the riuers banke, and all that groweth by the riuer, shall wyther awaye, and be brought all to naught. The fishers also shall mourne, and all they that cast an angle into the water, shall make lamentation, and they that lape forth their net beside the waters, shall bee rooted out. Moreover, they that woꝝke in flart and make syne woꝝkes shall be confounded, and so shall they that woꝝke open woꝝkes. For their open woꝝkes shall be euen destroyed, and all they that make podes and strewes for fylle, shall come to naught. But ye foolish prince of Ioon, ye wyse counsellers of Pharao, whose witte is tourned to foolishenes, howe saye ye vnto Pharao: I am come of wise men, and of aunient kinges.

Where are they? Where are they? Let them tell thee (pt. 1) they can. For the Lord of hosts hath dwelt upon Egypt. The princes of Zoan are become fools, the princes of Noph are disceined, they haue de- ceined Egypte, euen they that were taken for the chiefe kinrede thereof. In the middes of it, hath the Lord powred the spirite of wickednesse, and they haue decepted Egypte, in e- uery worke thereof, euen as a drunken man staggereth in his vomite. Ne- yther shall the head or tayle, the branch or reede be able to doe anye worke in Egypt. In that daye shall Egypte be lyke vnto women: It shall be afrayde, and stand in feare at the motion of the hande of the Lord of Hostes, whiche he shaketh ouer it. And Egypt shall be afrayde of the lande of Iuda: so that euery one which maketh mention of it, shall be afrayde thereat, because of the counsell of the Lord of Hostes, whiche he deuileth for it. In that daye shall nine Cities in the lande of Egypte speake the language of Ca- nana, and sweare by the Lord of Ho- stes, the Citie of desolation shall be cal- led one of them. In that day shall the altare of the Lord be in the mids of the lande of Egypt, and this title be- syde it: Vnto the Lord. And it shall be a token & a witnesse vnto the Lord of hosts in the lande of Egypte. For they shall crye vnto the Lord because of suche as trouble them, and he shall sende them a Sauer, and a great man to deliuer them. And the Lord shall be knowen in Egypt, and the Egip- tians shall know the Lord in that day, and do sacrifice and oblation: yea they shall bowe a bowe vnto the Lord, and performe it. The Lord also shall smite Egypte sore, and heale them agayne, and they shall be conuerted vnto the Lord, and he shall be entreated of them and shall heale them. In that daye shall there be a common waye oute of Egypte into Assyria, and Assyria shall come into Egypt, and Egypt into As- syria, so that the Egyptians and the As- syrians shall serue the Lord together,

In that day shall the nation of Israel be the third with Egypt and Assyria, and they shall be blessed in the middes of the lande, which lande the Lord of hosts hath blessed, saying: Blessed is my people of Egypt: Assyria also is the worke of mine handes, and Isra- el is mine inheritance.

The xx. Chapter.

In the yere that Chardan cam vnto Asdod (when Sargon the kinge of Assyria had sente him (and had fought againtst Asdod, and taken it. At the same time spake the Lord by the hande of Esay the sonne of Amos, sayinge: So, and take of the sackcloth from thy loynes, and put off thy shoe from thy foote, And he did so, walkinge naked, and bare foote. And the Lord sayde: Lyke as my seruant Esay hath walked na- ked, and barefoot for a signe and won- der three yeaeres vpon Egypte, and Ethiopia: Euen so shall the kinge of Assyria take awaye out of Egypt and out of Ethiopia, children and olde men, naked and barefoote, with their loynes vncovered, to the great shame of Egypte. They shall be brought in feare also, & ashamed one of an other: Ethiopia of Egypte, and Egypte of Ethiopia, considering what gloype they were in afore. And they that dwelle in the same Ile, shall saye in that daye: Beholde, thus are we re- garded. Whither shall we flee for helpe, that we maye be deliuered from the king of Assyria? And howe shall we escape?

The xxi. Chapter.

The burthen of the waste Sea: Euen as the stormie weather that passeth throughe at the noone day to com from the wilderness from that horrible lande. A greuous vision was shewed vnto me: Let one discitfull offender comme agaynst another, and one destroyer agaynst another. Up Elam, laye siege thou of Media, all their growing haue I layde downe. Therefore are my loy- nes filled with sorowes, heauynesse hath hath taken hold vpon me, as the pang ges of a woman, that is travailling.

It made me stoupe when I heard it, and it vexed me when I sawe it. My heart panted, fearefulness came vpon me. The night of my voluptuousnes hath he turned against me into feare.
Whyle they garnished the table, the watchman looked: And while I was eating and drinkeing (it was sayde:) Up ye Captaynes, take you to your shield. For thus hath the Lord sayde vnto me: Go and set a watchman, to tell what he seeth. And he sawe a charet, whiche two horsemen sat vpon, with the cariage of an Asse, and the cariage of a Camell. So he looked and tooke very diligent hede. And the Lord cryed, Lord, I stande waiting all the whole daye, and am appointed to kepe my watche euery night. And behold, here cometh a charet of men with two horsemen. And he answered and saide: Babylon is fallen, it is fallen, and all the images of her Gods hath he smittē downe vnto the ground.
Thou art he, whom I must threke, & thou belōgest to my coyn flour. This that I hearde of the Lord of hostes, the God of Israel, haue I shewed vnto you. The burthen of Duma, he callech vnto me out of Seir: Watchman, what hast thou espied by night?
Watchman, what hast thou espied by night? The watchman saide: The morning cometh, and so doeth the night. If ye will aske any question, then aske it, retorne and come agayne.
The burthen concerning Arabia: In the pleasant ground of Arabia shall ye tarpe all night, euen in the streetes of Dedanin. The inhabitants of the lande of Tema brought forth water to him that was thirstie, they presented him with their bread that was fled away. For because of the sword are they become fugitive, euen for the drawen swearde, and for the bent bowe, and because of the greenousnes of warre. For this hath the Lord sayd vnto me: There is yet a yere according to the yeares of an hyed ser-uaunt, and all the glory of Cedar shall sayle. And the number of them that shall escape from the bowes, shall be minished by the mightie children of Cedar, for so the Lord God of Israel hath spoken.

The xxij. Chapter.

The burthen of the valley of vision: What haste thou to doe here, that thou climest vnto the house tops? Thou that arte full of occupying, thou seditious & proude citie, thy sayne men are neyther put to death with sword, nor dead in battyle. All thy captaynes are fugitive together, the archers haue taken them prisoners: All they that are founde in ther, are in captiuitie together, because they fled farre of. Therefore said I: let me alone, and I will make lamentation. Ye shall not be able to comfort me, because of the destruction of the daughter of my people, for this is a day of trouble, of ruine, and of destruction that the Lord will bring to pass in the valley of vision, breking downe the Citie, and crying vnto moun-taynes. I am bare the quiver with a charet of foote men and of horsemen, and the Citie of Kir shewed the shield open. Thy chiefe valey also was full of charrets, and the horsemen set their faces directly towarde the gate. And in that daye did the ennemye take waie the beautie of Iuda, and then diddest thou loke towarde the armour of the house of the forest. Ye haue sene also the broken places of the ci-tie of David, howe that they are manie, and ye gathered together the waters of the lower pool. As for the houses of Jerusalem ye haue mi-bred them, and the houses haue ye broken downe to make the walls stronge. I pitte also haue ye made betwene the two walls, for the waters of the olde pool, and haue not regarded the maker thereof, neyther hadde respecte vnto him that took it in hande. And in that daye didde the Lord God of hostes call menne vnto weeping and mourninge, to baldnesse and gydinge aboute facte lakerclothe. And beholde, they haue ioye and gladnesse, slayinge Oxen, and killing sheepe, eatinge fleshe and drinking wyne. Lette vs eate and drinke: for to morowe we shall dye.

And it came to the eares of the Lorde of hostes: This iniquitie shall not be poured from you till ye dye, saieth the Lorde God of hostes. Thus saith the Lorde God of hostes: Goe get thee into ponder treasurer, euen vnto Hebna, whiche is the ruler of the house. What haste thou to do here? and whom haste thou here, that thou shouldest here beue thee out a sepulchre, as it were one that beuerh him out a sepulchre on hie, or that graueth an habitation for him selfe in a harde rocker? Beholde, O thou manne, the Lorde shall cary thee away into capti-tute, and shall surely coner thee with confusion. The Lorde shall turne thee ouer like a ball with his handes (and shall sende thee) into a farre countrey: There shalt thou dye, and there (in sleepe of the charettes of thy pompe) shall the house of the Lorde haue confusion. I will dresse thee frome thy place, and out of thy dwelling shall be ouerthrowne thee. And in that day shall I call my seruant Eliakim, the sonne of Helkia. And with thy garmentes will I clothe him, and with thy girdle will I strength him: thy power also will I committe into his hande, and he shall be a father of suche as dwelle in Jerusalem, and in the house of Juda. And the keye of the house of Dauid will I laye vpon his shoulder, so that he shal open, & no ma shall shut. He shall shut, and no man shall open. And I will fasten him as a nagle in a sure place, and he shall be the glorious seat of his fathers house.
Moreover, all generations and pouerities shal hang vpon him, all the glorie of their fathers house, all besels bothe great and small, and all instrumentes of measure and musicke.
In that daye (saith the Lorde of He-des) shall the nagle that is fastned in the sure place departs, be broken and fall, and the burthen that was vpon it, shalbe pluckt aswaye, for so the lord hath spoken.

The .xxij. Chapter.

The burthen of Tyre: Mourne ye shippes of Charis, for there cometh suche destruction that ye shall not haue an house to enter into: Oute of the lande of Cittim haue they knowledge of this plage. We still, ye dwell in the Ile, the marchants of Sidon, and suche as passe ouer the sea, haue made the plenteous. The corn that groweth by the great waters of Nilus, and the fruites of the riuer were her vitayles, so that it became a common marte of the nations. We ashamed thou Sidon, for the see (eue the strength of sea) hath spoken, saying: I haue not traiailed nor brought forth children, nor nourished by pong menne, or brought by virgins. When tidynge cometh to the Egyptians, they shall be sope for the rumoz that goeth of Tyre. Gette you to Charis, mourne ye that dwell in the Ile, Is not this that glorious Citie of yours, which hath bene of olde antiquitie? Her owne feete shall carye her forth to bee a sojourner into a farre countrey. Who hath deuised this against Tyre (that geueth garlandes vnto other Cities): whose marchantes are princes, and whose captaynes are honorable in the world: Euen the Lorde of hostes hath deuyd this to put downe the pyde of all such as be glorious, and to minishe all theim that bee proude vpon earth. Get thee out of thy land vnto the daughter of Charis, seeing thou haste no more strength. He that smote the kingdomes together, holdeth oute his hande ouer the sea, euen the Lorde himselfe hath geuen a commaundement against the same common place of marchandise, that they shall betteriue destroy the might ther-of. And he saide: Make no more thy boast, O virgin, thou daughter Sidon: thou shalt be brought downe: Tyre, gette thee ouer vnto Cittim, where neuertheless thou shalt haue no reste. Beholde, this people come not of the Caldees, but Assur made them stronge with greateshippes. They set vp the stronge holdes thereof, and destroyed his palaces, and he broughte it in decaye. Mourne ye shippes of Charis, for your strength is brought downe. And in that daye shall Tyre be forgotten seuentye yeares (according to the yeares of one king) and after the ende of the seuentye yeare, shall Tyre sing as doeth an harlot. Take an harpe, and go about the Citie (thou harlot thou hast bene forgotten) make sweete melodye, sing no songes, that thou mayest be had in remembrance. And after the ende of the seuentye yeares, shall the Lord visite Tyre, and shee shall conuerter vnto her rewarde, and shall commit fornication with all the kingdomes of the earth, that are in the worlde. They occupyinge also and they rewarde shalbe holpe vnto the Lord. They gaynes shall not be layde vp nor kepte in store, but it shalbe theirs that dwell befoze the Lord, that they maye eate ynough, and haue clothing sufficient.

The .xxiij. Chapter.

BEholde the Lord maketh the earth wast and empye: he turned it vpside downe, and scattereth abrode the inhabitours thereof. And the Priest shalbe as the people, and the master as the seruant, the maystresse lyke the mayde, the seller lyke the byer: he that lendeth vpon vsury, lyke him that borroweth vpon vsury: the creditoure as the better. The worlde shalbe cleane wasted, and utterly spoyled, for so the Lord hath spoken. The earth is sope and consumed away, the worlde is feble and perisheth, the proude people of the earth are come to naught. The earth also is become vnprofitable vnder the inhabitants thereof, which haue transgressed the lawes, chainged the ordynance, broken the euerslastinge coneuynant.

Therefore hath the curle consumed the earth, and they that dwell therein, are fallen into trespase. Wherefore, the inhabitours of the earth are perished with drouth, and fewe men are left behinde: The wyne sapleth: the wyne hath no might, all they that haue bene merce of heart, are come to mourning. The mirthe of tabrettes is layde downe, the noyse of such as haue made merce, is ceased, the ioyent the harpe is at an ende. They shall drinke no more wyne with mirth, strong drinke shall be bitter to them that drinke it. The citie of banitie is broken downe, euery house is shut vp, that no man maye come in. In the strettes is there a crying because of wyne, all cheere is banished away, the mirthe of the worlde is gone, in the Citie is left desolation: and the gate is smitten with destruction. For in the middes of the worlde, euen amonge the people, it shall come to passe, as at the shakinge of Oliues, and as the grapes are whē the wyne haruest is done. They shall liste by their voyce: and make a merce noyse, and in magnifyinge of the Lord, shall they crye out of the Weste. Wherefore, prayse ye the Lord in the halles, euen the name of the Lord God of Israel in the ples of sea. From the uttermost parte of the earth haue we heard praises & mirthe because of the righteous. And I said: I knowe a thing in secret, wo is me, the transgressours haue offended, the transgressours haue greuously offended. Fearefulnesse, the pitte, and the snare are vpon thee, & thou that dwellest on the earth. It will come to passe, that whoso escapeth that fearfull noyse, shall fall into the pit. And he that commeth by out of the pitte, shall be taken with the snare. For the windowes from an hys are open, and the foundations of the earth are moued. The earth is utterly broken downe, the earth hath a sore ruine, the earth quaketh exceedinglye. The earth shall reele to and fro like a drunken, and shalbe remoued like a tente (of one night) and the iniquitie thereof shalbe heavy vpon it. It shall fall, and not ryle by agayne. And in that daye shall the Lord visite the hoolle worlde that is on hye: and the kinges of the world that are vpon the earth. And they shall be gathered together, as they that be in pysson: and they shalbe shut by inwarde, and after manye dayes shall they be visited. The moone shall be abashed, and the sunne ashamed, when the Lord of hostes shall reygne in mounte Sion and in Ierusalem with worship, and in the sight of such as shalbe of his counsell.

The xxv. Chapter.

Thou art the Lord my God, I will magnify thee, I will geue thanks vnto thy name. For thou hast brought wonderfull things to passe, according to thine olde counsels truly and saythfully. Thou hast made of a citie an heape of stones, and broughte a strong towne into decaye. The habitation of straungers haste thou made to be no citie, neyther shall it be builded any more. Therefore shall the mightie people geue glorye vnto thee, the citie of the balcaunt Heathen shall feare thee. For thou hast bene a strength vnto the poore, and a succour for the needie in his trouble. A refuge agaynst euill weather, a shadowe agaynst the heate. For the blast of raging men is like a storme that casteth downe a wall. Lyke as thou byngest heate downe out of a dry place, so shalt thou oppresse the nople of altauntes. The heate is in the shadowe of the cloude, the braunch of the mightie shall be brought lowe. And in this mountayne shall the Lord of hostes make vnto all people a feast of plenteous and delicate thngs, euen of most pleasant and dayntie dishes. And in this mountayne shall the Lord destroye the couerpyge, that all people are wrapped in, and the hanging that is spred vpon all nations. As for death, he hath destroyed it for euer. And the Lord God shall wipe away teares from all faces, and the rebuke of his people shall be take awaye out of all the earth. For so the Lord hath saide,

And in that daye it shall be sayde. Lo, this is our God, we haue waped for him, and he shall saue vs. This is the Lord, in whom we haue hoped, we will be merce, and reioyce in the saluation that cometh of him. For in this mountayne shall the hande of the Lord ceasse, and Moab shall be threshed vnder him, euen as strawe is threshed vpon the ground. And he shall stretch out his hande in the middes of them (as he that symmeth, casteth out his hands to swimme: and with the strength of his handes shall he bringe downe their pyde. The stronge holde also and defence of thy walles hath he ouerthrowen, and cast downe & brought them to the ground, euen vnto dust.

In that daye shall this song be songe in the lande of Iuda: We haue a strong citie. Saluation shall God appoynt in fiede of walles, and bulwarke. Open ye the gates that the righteous people whiche keperth the truth may enter in. Their mind is set vpon thee because thou preseruest them in peace, yea in peace: because they putte their trust in thee. Put ye your trust alway in the Lord: for in the Lord God there is strength for euermore. For he hath brought downe the hye minded citizens. As for the proude citie, he hath brought it lowe: euen vnto the ground shall he cast it downe, and bring it vnto dust. He fote euen the foote of the poore, and the steppes of suche as be in necessitie shall treade it downe: The path of equitie wilt thou graunte vnto the iuste, & thou molste righteous, & thou shalt order the pathes of him that is righteous. Yea, in the waye of thy iudgements, O Lord, haue we put our truste in thee. Thy name also, and the remembraunce of thee, is the thinge that our soule longeth for. My soule hath longed for thee all the night, and with my sprete (which is within me) will I seke thee early.

in the morning. For when thy iudgements are in the earth, the inhabitants of the world shall learne righteousness. Shall the vngodly man be favoured, whiche hath not learned righteousness, but doeth wickedlye in the earth, where nothinge ought to be done, but that whiche is righteous? He shall not see the glory of the Lord. Lord, when thy hande is lyfte vp to strike, they see it not: but they shall see it, and be confounded with the zeile of the people, and the fyre that consumeth thynne enemies, shall deuoure them. Lord vnto vs thou shalt prouide peace: for thou also hast brought all our workes in vs. O Lord our God, other Lordes besyde thee hath subdued vs, but we will be myndefull onely of thee, and of thy name. The deade will not liue, and they that be out of lyfe will not ryse agayne: therfore hast thou visited and roted them out, and destroyed all the memozye of them. Thou hast encreased the people (O Lord) thou hast encreased the people, and thou arte prayed: thou hast sent them farre of vnto all the coastes of the earth. Lord in trouble haue they visited thee: they powzed out theyr prayer, when thy chastening was vpon them. As lyke as a woman with chyld that dyeth nyr towarde her trauell, is sorre and cryeth in her paynes, euen so haue we bene in thy sight, O Lord. We haue bene with chyld, and suffered payne, as though we had brought forth wynde. For there is no saluation in the earth, neyther do the inhabitoures of the world submitte them selues. Thy deade men shall lyue, euen with my bodye shall they ryse agayne. Awake and singe ye that dwell in duste. For thy dewe is euen as the dewe of herbes, and the earth shall caste oute theym that be vnder her. Come my people, enter thou into the chambers, and shut thy doozes about thee: hyde thy selfe for a little while, vntill the indignation be overpasse. For lo, the Lord is comming out of his place, to visite the wickednesse of such as dwell vpon earth. The earth also shall disclose her owne bloude, and shall no moze hide them that are slayne in her.

The xxviij. Chapter.

In that daye, the Lord with his soze, greate, and mightie swerde shall visyte. Leviathan the fugitive serpent, euen Leviathan that croked serpente: and he shall slaye the dragon that is in the sea. In that daye, see that ye synge of the congregation whiche is the vyneyarde, that bringeth forth the best wyne. Euen I the Lord do keepe it. In due season shall I water it: and least the enemye do it any harme, I will both night and daye preserue it. There is no displeasure in me, els (when the vyneyarde bringeth me forth bypers and thornes) I would go thowow it by warre, and burne it vp together. Let it take holde of my strength, and it shall be at one with me, euen at one shall it be with me. The dayes are comminge, that Jacob shall take roote, Israel shall be greene and flourish, and the world shall be filled with fruite. Hath he smypten hym as soze as he did the other that smote him? Or is he slaine with so soze a slaughter as they that slewe him? In measure doeth he smyte him, whyle he sendeth vnto him suche thinges, wherewith he cometh to his minde agayne. For in the daye that the Calke wynde bloweth soze, it taketh away the frutes. Thus therfore shall the iniquitie of Jacob be reconciled, and here is all the fruite of the takinge awaye of his synne, yf he make all the stones of the altare of Idoles, as chalke stones that are beaten in sundye, that their groones and ymages ryse not vpe agayne. This shall the stronge cite be desolate, and the habitation forsaken, and lefte lyke a wilderness. There shall the calke feede, and there shall he lye, and eate by the grasses therrof. When the braunches of it are drye, they are broken of, and the women come, and sette them on fire. • For it is a people of no vnderstanding, and therefore he that made them, shall not fauour them: and he that created them, shall geue them no grace. And in that day shall the Lord make a threshinge from the middes of the riuer Euphrates vnto the riuer of Egypte, and ye children of Israel, shall be gathered together one to another. In that daye shall the great trumpet be blowen, so that they which were lost in the land of Assiria: and they that were banished into the land of Egypt, shall come and worship the Lord in the holie mount at Jerusalem.

The xxiiij. Chapter.

V Come vnto the crowne of pride, euen • to the drunken people of Ephraim, whose great pompe is as a flower that fadeth away, vpon the head of the balley of such as be in wealth and are overladen with wine. Beholde, there cometh a vehement and sore day from the Lord like an vnmeasurable hayle and perillous tempest, euen like the force of mightie and horrible waters that violently beareth downe all things. The crowne of the pride of the drunken Ephraimites shall be troden vnder foote: • so that the floure of his saynes and beautye, which is in the head of the balcy of fatnesse, shall fade away, as dooth an vntimely ripe figge afore haruest. Which when a manne seeth, he looketh vpon it, and while it is yet in his hande, he eateth it vp. In that day shall the Lord of hostes be the crowne of glory, and diamonde of beautye vnto the residue of his people. He will be also a spirite of perfecte knowledge to him that sitteth in iudgement, and strength vnto the that tourne awaye the battayle to the gate of the enemyes. But they are out of the way by reason of wine: yea, far out of the way are they through strong drinke. The priests also and the prophets are gone astray by the meanes of strong drinke, they are drunken with wine, they go amisse through stronge drinke, they faile in prophesying, and stumble in iudgement. For the tables are so full of vomit & filthines, that no place is cleane. Whom then shall suche one teache knowledge?

And whome shall he make to vnderstand the thing that he heareth? For they are as ignorant as yong children that are taken from the milke, and are weined. For they that be suche, muste haue after one lesson, another lesson:

• after one commaundement, another commaundement, after one rule another rule, after one instruction, another instruction, there a little, and there a little. For he that speaketh vnto this people, is euen as one that bleth rudenesse of spech, and a strange language. If any man say vnto them:

Lo, this is the rest, wherewith ye may ease him that is werre, this is the refreshing, they wil not herken. • Therfore the word of the Lord (lesson vpon lesson, commaundement vpon commaundement, rule vpon rule, instruction vpon instruction, there a littell, and there a little) shall be vnto them an occasion of stumblinge, that they may go on, and fall backward, be bruised, tangled, and snared. Wherefore, heare the worde of the Lord, ye mockers ye that haue rule of this people, whiche is at Jerusalem. Because ye haue said: We haue made a covenaut with deathe, and with hell are we at agreement. And though there go forth a sore plague, it shall not come vnto vs. For we haue made falshoode our refuge, and vnder vanitie are we hid. Therefore thus sayeth the Lord God:

Behold, I lay in Zion for a foundation a stone, euen a tryed stone, a precious corner stone, a sure foundation.

Who so beleueth, let him not be to hastie. Iudgement also will I laye to the rule, and righteousness to the balance, so that the haile shall take away your bayne confidence as a broome, and the pryncipall place of your refuge shall the waters renne ouer. And thus the covenaut that ye made with deathe, shall be disannulled: and your agreement that ye made with hel, shall not stand.

Yea, when the sore plague goeth forth ye shall be troden down vnder it. Fro the time that it goeth forth, it shall take you away. For early in the morn-ning, every daye, yea, both daye and night shall it go through: and when the people thereof is perceaues, it shall gender vexation: For the bed is nar-rowe, and not large: and the couering so small that a man can not wind him selfe vnder it. • For the Lord shall stande as in mount. • Parazim, and shalbe worthe like as in the valley • Gibeon, that he may do his worke, his strange worke, and bring to passe his acte, his strange acte. Nowe therefore see that ye be no mockers, least your punishment increase: for I have hearde of the Lord of hostes, that there shall come a shorthe ende vpon the whole earth. Heare ye then, and hearken vnto my voyce, consider and ponder my speech. Worth not the husbandman plowe all the daye, and openeth and breaketh the clottes of his ground, that he may sowe: when he hath made it playne, wil he not spread abrode the fitches, and sow comin, and cast in wheate by measure, and the appointed barley and rye in their place?
• I will instruct him to haue discretion, euen his God will teache him. For fitches shall not be threshed with an harowe: neither shall a carte wheele be brought through the cum-min: but that fitches are beaten oute with a staffe, and comin with a rodde.
But the seede that bread is made of, is threshed, though it be not alwaye a threshing. And the carte wheele must be brought ouer it, least he grinde it with his teeth. This also commeth of the Lord of hostes, which worketh with wonderfull wisdome, and bringeth excellent workes to passe.

2 Re. 5. b

Vnto thee, O Ariel, Ariel, thou art it that • David dwelt in. • Go on from yeare to yeare, and let the lambes be slayne. I will lay a siege vnto Ariel, so that ther shall be haupnesse and sorowe in it: and it shall be vnto me, euen as an altar of slaughter. I will besiege thee rounde about, and fight against thee through a bulwarke, and will reare vp ditches against thee. • Thou shalt be brought downe, and shalt speake oute of the grounde, and thy speeche shall go lowe out of the dust. • Thy voyce also shall come out of the ground like the voyce of a witche: and thy talking shall whisper out of the duste. Moreover, the people of thy strange enemyes shall like thynne dust, and the multitude of tyrannites shall be as a dyce strawe that can not carpe: euen sodainely and in haste shall their blast go. • Thou shalt be visited of the Lord of hostes with thunder, earthquake, and with a great people: with storme, and tempest, and with the flame of a consuming fyre.

And the multitude of all nations that fighte againste Ariel, shall be as a dreame scene by night: • euen so shall all they be, that make warre againste it, and stronge holdes to overcome it, and that lay any siege into it. In conclusion, it shall be euen as when a hon-gre man dreameth that he is eating, and when he awaketh, his soule is emptye. • As when a thirstie man dreameth that he is drinking, and when he awaketh, he is yet faint, and his soule hath appetite. Euen so shall the multitude of all nations that fighte againste Ston. Ponder these things once in youre mindes, and wonder.
• Blinded are they them selues, and the blinde guides of other. They are drunken, but not with wine: they are vnstable, but not through stronge drinke. • For the Lord hath couered you with a somberinge spirite, and hath closed your eyes. Your prophtes also and rulers that shoulde see, them hath he couered. • And the bill on of al the prophetes is become to you, as the wordes of a booke that is sealed vp, whiche men desire to one that is learned, sayinge: • Reade thou in it. • And he sayeth: I can not for it is sealed. And the booke is giuen vnto him that is not learned, sayinge: • Reade thou in it, and he sayeth: I am not learned. • Therefore thus hath the

15. a Lorde ſayde: • For as muche as this in reputation as the potters claye.

 And both the woorkes ſaye of him that made it, he made not me? And doeth an earthen beſell ſaye of him that fa-ſhioned it, he had no vnderſtanding?
 Is it not harde at hande, that Liba-nus ſhalbe turned into a lowe field, and that the lowe field ſhall be taken as the woode? And in that daye ſhall deafe men heare the woordes of the booke, and the eyes of the blinde ſhall ſee, men out of the cloude, and out of darkeneſſe. The make ſpoted alſo ſhall be merſe in the Lorde, and the pooze among them that be lowely, ſhall re-ioyce in the holpe one of Iſraell. For he that did violence, is brought to naught, and the ſcorpfull man is conſumed: and they rooted out that were halpe ſo ſoone to vnrightheuſneſſe, making a man to ſinne in the woode, and that toke him in a ſnare, whiche reported them in the open place: and they that haue turned the cauſe of the righteous to naught. Therefore thus ſayth the Lorde vnto the houſe of Ja-Euen they that waike to go doſwe ſtion at my mouth: but ſeeke ſtrength in the might of Pharaos, and truſte in the ſhadowe of Egipt. Therefore ſhal the ſtrength of Pharaos be your con-fuſion, and the truſte in the ſhadowe of Egipte your ſhame. For his cap-tayneſſe were at Zoan: and his ambalſadours came vnto Hanes. • They were all aſhamed of the people that coulde do them no good, and that might not helpe them, nor ſhe we them no good. • For daye and nothinge worth ſhall the helpe of the Egyptians be. Therefore haue I cryed vnto Jeruſalem. They ſhall haue ſtrength ynough, yf they will ſettle their min-des in quietneſſe. • Nowe therefore, go thy way and write this beſore them

The xxxi. Chapter.

Vo be vnto the that go down into Egypt for helpe, and trust in horses, and put their confidence in charettes, because they be many and in horsemen, because they be lustie and stronge. But they regarde not the holpe one of Israel, and they aske no question at the Lord. Where as he neuerthelesse (being wyllest of all) plageth the wicked, and yet goth not from his woode, when he step-peth forth, and taketh the victoize a-gaynst the household of the froward, and agaynst the helpe of euill doers.
 Nowe the Egyptians are men, and not God, and their horses fleshe and not spere. And as sone as the Lord stretcheth out his hand, then shall the helper fail, and he that shoulde haue bene helped, and they shall all together be destroyed. For thus hath the Lord spoken vnto me: Like as the lyon of Lyons whelpe roareth vpon the praye that he hath gotten, and is not afrayed, though the multitude of shepherdes crye out vpon him, neyther abashed for all the heape of them.
 So shall the Lord of hostes come downe to fyghte for mount Sion, and defende his hill. Like as birdes fluster about their nestes, so shall the Lord of hostes keepe, saue, defende, and de-lyuer Ierusalem. Therefore, O ye chyldren of Israel, turne againe from that infidelitie, wherein you dysoned your selues. For in that daye euery man shall caste out his ydoles of syt-ter, and his ydoles of golde, whiche ye haue made with your owne han-des vnto your synne. For also shall I laye with the swerde, not with a mannes swerde, neyther shall the swerde of anye man draduare him,

And he shall see from the slaughter, and his seruantes shalbe discomfyted in their heartes. He shall go for feare to his stronge holdes, and his princes shall see from his badge.
 This hath the Lord spoken, whose lighte burneth in Sion, and his fire in Ierusalem.

The xxxii. Chapter.

Behold, a kinge shall gouerne after the rule of righteousnes, and the princes shall rule, accordinge to the balauce of equitie. And that man shall be vnto men as a defence for the winde, and as a refuge for tem-peste: lyke as a ryuer of water in a thirstie place, and the shadowe of a great rocke in a drye lande. The eyes of the sepyng shall not be dimme, and the eares of them that heare shall take diligent hede. The heart of the vnwise shall attayne to knowledge, and the vnperfecte tongue shall speake playnclye and distinctlye. Then shal the foolishhe nigarde be no moze called gentle, nor the churle lyberall. But the nigarde will be nigardye mynded, and his heart will worke euill, and playe the ypocrite, and ymagine abhominations against God, to make the hongrie leane, and to withholde drynke from the thirstye. These are the perillous weapons of the chur-lysh, these be his shamefull counsels: that he maye begyle the pooze with disceitfull wordes: yea, euen there as he shoulde geue sentence with the pooze. But the liberall person ymagineth honest thinges, and commeth vp for liberalitie vnto promotion. Up (ye rich and ydle women) hearken vnto my voyce. Ye careles cities, marke my wordes. After peres and dayes shall ye be broughte in feare, O ye careles cities. For haruett shalbe out, and the grape gatheringe shall not come. O ye riche ydle cities, ye that feare no perill. Be ashamed, you that dyed: so shall you weepe for your fayre fieldes and fruitfull vineyardes.

My peoples fieldes shall bring thornes and thistles: and so shall it be even in euery house of holuptuousnes, and in euery cite that reioyceth. The palaces also shall be broken downe, and the greatly occupied cities desolate. The towers & bulwarks shall become den-nes for cucumbers, the pleasure of mules shall be turned to pasture for shepe: vnto the tyme that the spirite be poured vpon vs from aboue. Then shall the wilderness be a fruitfull fildes, and the plenteous fildes shall be reck-ned for a woodde. Then shall equitic dwell in the desert, and righteousnes in a fruitfull land. • And the re-warde of ryghteousnes shall be peace, and her fruite, rest and quietnes for euer. • And my people shall dwelle in the Innnes of Peace, and in sure dwellings, in safe places of comfort.
And when the hagle fallethe, it shall fall in the woodde, and the cite shall be set lowe in the dale. • How happy shall ye be, when ye shall safely sowe your seede bysyde all waters, and driue thither the secte of your oxen & asses.

broken it with thee: for whenne thou halt leaue destroying, • thou thy self halt bee destroyed. And when thou ceasest from breakynge the leagur, then shall they breake it to thee. • gathered (whiche shall bee poures) as are the gatheringe of Buzhus.

And the multitude of goynge to it, filled Iyon with Iudgemente and ryghteousnesse. And a sure stampe shyng of thy tymes shall be strength, healthe, wisdom, and knowledge: and the verpe feare of the Lorde shall be the rescue of it. Behold, thy messengers shall crye withoute: and the ambassadors of peace shall weepe bitterly. The streates are waste, there walketh no man therein. God hath broken the appoyntment, the Cities are cast away, and men are nothings regarded, the desolate earth is in vainnesse: Libanus is shamed and hewen downe. Saran is like a wydernesse: Basan and Chermell are spoyled of theyr fruytes. And therefore sayth the Lorde: I will knowe, nowe will I be aunced: nowe will I be exalted as a mightie God. • Ye Ier. shall cease to stubble, and bene strawe, and your spirite shall be the fire, that it may consume you: and the people shall be burnt like lyme, and as thornes burne that are beuyn of, and cast in the fyre. Nowe hearken to ye that are farre of, howe I haue done, and consyder my power, ye that be at hande. The spinners at Zion are frayd, a sodayne scarcfaulnesse is come vpon the hypocrites. What is he, a monge vs, saye they, that shall dwell by the consuming fyre? whiche of vs may abyde that euermolting heate?

He that leadeth a godly lyfe, saye I, and speaketh the trouth. He that ab-horreth gaynes wonne by violence and disceypte: he that keepeth by hande, that he touche no rewarde.
Whiche stoppeth his eares, that he heare no counsell agaynst the innocent bloude: whiche holdeth downe his eyes, that he see none euill. He it is that shall dwelle on hye: whole fourgarde shall be in a bulwarke of rockes, to him shall be geuen meate, and his waters shall not faile. Thine eyes shall see the king in his glory: euen the kinge of the farr countreys shall they see: thine heart studied for feare, thynekinge thus. • What shall thenne become of the scribe of the Receyuer of our money? what of him that taxed our sayest houses: There shalt thou not see a people of a strange tongue to haue so diffused a language, that it maye not be vnderstande, neyther so straunge a speeche but it shalbe perceyued. There shall thou be seene the head Citie of oure D solenne franchises. There shall thine eyes see Jerusalem that glorious habitation: the tabernacle that neuer shall remove: whose nayles shall neuer bee taken out without end: whose coards euerychone shall neuer corrupt: for the glorious maiestie of the Lord shall there be present amonge vs: as a place, where saye broade riuers and streames are, through the which shall runne galley rowe, noz great shippe sayle. For the Lord is our iudge, the Lord is our lawe giuer. The Lord is our king, and he him selfe shalbe oure captiue. There are the coardes so layde abroade, that they canne not be bitter. And therfore they haue not fixed their mass, noz spredde abrode they sayle. Then there is dealed greate people: yea, lamie men runne after the spere. There lyeth no man that sayth: I am sicke, but al euil is taken awaye from the people that dwell there.

The xxxij. Chapter.

3 Come ye Heathen and heare, take heede ye people. Harken thou earth and all that is therein: thou rounde compasse and all that groweth therevpon: for the Lord is angrie with all people, and his displeasure is kindled agaynst all the multitude of them, he hath destroyed them, and deliuered the to the slaughter. So that their name shalbe caste out, and their bodies stinke, that euen the besse hills shalbe wet with the blood of them. All the barres of heauen shall walke, and the heauen shall folde together like a roll, and all the barres thereof shall fall, like as the leaues fall from the bynes and figtrees. For my sworde shalbe bathed in heauen, and shall immediatly come downe in iudgement vpon Idu-men, and vpon the people whiche I haue cursed for my vengeance. And the Lordes sworde shalbe ful of blood, and be rustie with the fatnesse and bloud of lambes and goates, with the fatnes of the kidnees of wetters. For the Lord shall kill a great offering in Bozra, and a greate slaughter in the land of Idumea. There shall the Ni-nicones fall with them, and the bul-lics with the giauntes: and their lande shalbe thzoughly soked with bloude, and their ground corrupted with fatnes. Unto thee also, O Zion, shall come the daye of the vengeance of God, and the yeare when thine owne iudgements shalbe recompensed. And his tliendes shalbe touned to pitche, and his earth to tyme stone: and therewith shall the land be kindled, so that it shal not be quenched day noz night: but smoke euermore, and so forth to lye wast. And no man shal go through it for euer. But Pellicans, storkes, greate oules and rauens shal haue it in possession, and dwell therein. For God shall sprede out the lyne of desolation vpon it, and waye it with the stones of emptines. When kinges are called vpon, there shalbe none, and all princes shalbe awaye. Thyness shall growe in their places, nettles, and thistles in their stronge holdes, that the dragons may haue their pleasure therein, and that they maye be a court for Clutches. There shall straunge D visures and monstrous beastes mete one another, and the wilde kepe company together. There shall the Lemia lye and haue her lodginge. There shall the oule make her nest, build, be there at home, and bzinge forth his younge ones. There shall the kptes come together, eche one to his like. Seeke thorough the Scripture of the Lord and reade it. There shall none of these thinges be lefte out, there shall not one, noz such like sayle. For what his mouth commaundeth, that same doth his spirit gather together, of fulfilleth. He hath caste the lot for them, and to those beastes hath his handes deuided the life: therfore those shall possesse the inheritance from generation to generation, and dwell therein for ever.

The xxxv. Chapter.

BUt the deserte and wilderness shall reioyce, the waste ground shall be glad and flourish as the kilpe. Shee shall flourish pleasantly and be ioyfull, and euer be geuinge of thanks moze and moze. For the glorie of libanus, the bewtie of Carmel and Sharon shall be geuen her. These shall knowe the honour of the Lord and the matchlesse of oure God. And therefore strength the weake handes, and comfort the feeble knees. Say vnto them that are of a fearefull heart. Be of good chere, and feare not. Beholde, poure. God commeth to take vengeance: and you shall see the rewarde that God geueth: God commeth his owne selfe, and will deliuer you. Then shall the eyes of the blind be lightened, and the eares of the deafe opened. Then shall the lame manne leape as an hart, and the dumble mans tongue shall geue thanks: In the wilderness also there shall be welles springes and fountaines of water in the deserte. The drye groundes shall turne to rivers, and to the thirstie springes of water: where as dragons dwelte afore there shall growe sweete floures and grene rushes. There shall be footpathes and common streetes, this shall we called the holpe waye. No vncleane person shall go through it: for the Lord him selfe shall goe with them that waye, and the waifarer, nor ignozant shall not erre. There shall be no lion, and no ranshing beastes shall come therein, nor be there, but men redeemed shall go there free and safe. And the redeemed of the Lord, I say, shall conuerter and come to Zion with thankes geuinge. Euerlasting ioye shall they haue, pleasure and gladnes shall be among them. And as for al sorowe and heavines, shall hamish away.

The xxxvi. Chapter.

In the xliii. yere of the king Hezekias came Sennacherib king of the Assyrians downe to laye siege vnto al the strong Cities of Iuda, to conquer them. And the king of the Assyrians sente Rabshakeh fro Lachis towarde Jerusalem agaynst king Hezekias, with an exceeding host, which set him by the conduit of four poole in the waye that goeth through the fullers lande. And so there came forth vnto him Eliahim Helkian son the president, Sabsa the scribe, and Ioah Blaphs sonne the Secretary, And Rabshakeh sayde vnto them: Eli Hezekias, that the great king of Assyria sayth thus vnto him: what presumption is this, that thou trustest vnto: I sayde: Surely thou trustest in vayne wordes, when counsell and strength are necessarie to battaile, or els wherto trustest thou, that thou canst thy selfe of fro me? lo, thou puttest thy trust in a broken staffe of reede (I meane Egypt) which he that leaneth vpon, it goeth into his hande and shooteth him through. Euen so is Pharaos the kinge of Egypt, vnto all them that truste in him. But if thou wouldest saye to me: we trust in the Lord our God. A goodlye God is in dedde: whose hye places and altars Hezekias tooke downe; and commaunded Iuda and Jerusalem to worshippinge onelye before the altar. Howe therfore deliuer hostages that thou rebell no moze agaynst my Lord the Kinge of Assyrians. And I will geue thee two thousande hoiles: if thou be able to set men vpon them. How darest thou resist the power of the smallest prince that my lord hath? how darest thou trust in the chariotes and horsemen of Egypt? Howdost thou thinkest thou that I am come by hither to destroye this lande without the Lordes will? The Lord said vnto me: go by into the lande, that thou mayest destroye it. Then saide Eliahim, Sabsa and Ioah vnto Rabshakeh. Speake to vs thy seruantes (we praye thee) in the Assyrians language, for we vnderstand it wel. And speake not to vs in the Jewes tonge, least the folke heare, which lieth vpon the wall. Then answered Rabshakeh: Thinke ye, that the kinge sente me to speake this vnto thy Lord and thee? hath he not sent me to them also, that I be vpon the wall: that they maye be compelled to eate their owne dunge, & drinke their owne stale with you? And Rabshakeh stode stiffe, and cryed with a loude voyce in the Jewes tong, and sayd: How take heede, how the great king of the Assyrians geueth you warning. Thus saith the king: Let not Hezekias deceyue you, for he shall not be able to deliuer you. Wherefore, let not Hezekias comfort you in the lord, when he saith: the Lord without doubt shall defende vs, and shall not geue ouer this Citie into the handes of the kinge of the Assyrians, beleeue him not. But thus saith the kinge of Assyria: obtaine my fauour, incline to me, so may euery man enioy his vine-yardes & figg trees, and drinke the water of his cisterne, vnto the time that I come my selfe, and bring you into a lande that is like your owne: wherein is wheate and wine, whiche is bothe sowne with seede, and planted with vineyardes. Let not Hezekias deceyue you, when he saith vnto you: The Lord shall deliuer vs. Might the gods of the Gentils keepe euery mans lande, from the power of the kinge of the Assyrians? Where is the God of Bemath & Arphad? Where is the god of Sepharaim? And who was able to defende Samaria out of my hande?

Or which of all the gods of these landes hath deliuered their countrey out of my power? Is the Lord in deede able to deliuer Ierusalem fro my hand?
Vnto this Hezekias messengers held their tongues, and answered not one worde, for the kinge had charged them that they should geue him none answer. So came Eliakim Hezekias son, the President, Sobna the scribe, and Ioah Alphas sonne, the secretary, vnto Hezekias, with rent clothes, & tolde him the wordes of Rabshakeh.

The xxxvij. Chapter.

Vhen Hezekias hearde that, he rent his clothes, and put on sackcloth, and went into the temple of the Lord: but he sent Eliakim the president, Sobna the scribe, with the eldest priestes, clothed in sackcloth vnto the prophete Elay the sonne of Amoz, and they saide vnto him: Thus saith Hezekias: This is the daye of trouble, of plague, and of blasphemy: for the children are come to the place of birth: but there is no power to bring them forth. The Lord thy God (no doubt) hath well considered the wordes of Rabshakeh, whom his lord the kinge of the Assyrians hath sent to despye and blaspheme the liuing God, with suche wordes as the Lord thy God hath heard righte well. And therefore, lyfe vp thy prayer for the remnant, that yet are left. So the seruauntes of the kinge Hezekias came to Elay. And Elay gaue them this answere: Say thus vnto your Lord, thus sayth the Lord: Be not afayd of the wordes that thou hast hearde, wherewith the kinge of the Assyrians seruauntes haue blasphemed me. Be-holde, I will cause a winde to go ouer him, as soone as he heareth the rumoure, he shall go agayne into his countrey, there will I destroye him with the swearde in his owne lande.
Howe when Rabshakeh returned, he founde the kinge of Assyria laying siege to Libnas: for he hadde vnder-stand that he was departed from Lachis. For there came a rumour, that Charakas kynge of Ethiopia was come forth to warre agaynst him.
And when the kinge of Assyria heard that, he sent other messengers to king Hezekias, with this Commaunde-ment: Saye thus to Hezekias kinge of Iuda: Let not thy God deceyue thee, in whom thou hopest, and sayest: Ierusalem shall not be geuen into the handes of the kinge of Assyria. For lo, thou knowest well howe the kinges of Assyria, haue handeled all the landes that they haue subuerted, and hopest thou to escape? Where the people of the Gentiles (whom my pro-ges of Assiria haue conquered al king-domes and landes, and cast their god-des in the fyre. Notwithstanding those were no goddes, but the workes of mens hands, of wood or stone, therfore haue they destroyed them. Welyner is then, O Lord our God, fro the handes of Senacherib, that all king-domes of the earth maye knowe, that thou onely arte the Lord. Then e-

 That same wil I do nowe also, wail, I such of the house of Iuda as are ekaped, shall come together, and the remnant shal take roote beneath, and bring forth fruite aboue. For the escaped shall goe out of Ierusalem, and the remnaunte from the mounte Syon.

 And this shall the gelousy of the Lord of hostes bring to passe. Therefore thus sayeth the Lord, concerninge the kinge of the Assirians. He shall not come into this Citie, and shall shoote no arrowe into it, there shall no shilde hurt it, neyther shall they calte dytches about it. The same waye that he came, he shall retourne, and not come at thys Citie, sayeth the Lord: And I will kepe and saue this Citie, sayeth he, for myne owne, and for my seruante Danyel sake.

Jer. 48 • Thus the angell of the Lorde went forth, and ſlewe of the Aſſirians hoſt an hundred foureſcore and ſiue thouſand. And when men aroſe by earſe in the morninge: Beholde, they were ſlayne, and all laye full of dead bodics. So Sennacherib the king of the Aſſirians brake vp, and dwelte at Nine. Afterwarde it chaunced, as he prayed in the Temple of Neſtrah hys God, that Balamalech and Saracer his owne ſonnes ſlewe him with the ſword, and fled into the lande of Armenia. And Aſarhadon his ſonne reigned in his ſteade.

The xxxviij. Chapter.

N Long afore this, was Hezekia ſicke vnto the deathe: • And the Prophete Eſaye the ſonne of Amoz came vnto him, and ſayde: Thus commaundeth the Lorde: Sette thine houſe in order, for thou muſt die, and ſhalt not eſcape. Then Hezekia tourned his face toward the wall, and prayed vnto the Lorde, and ſaid: Remember (O Lorde) that I haue walked befoze thee in truth and a ſtedfaſt hert, and haue don the thing that is pleaſant to thee. And Hezekia wept ſore. Then ſayde God vnto Eſaye: Go and ſpeke vnto Hezekia: The Lorde God of Dauid thy father ſendeth thee this word: I haue heard thy prayer, and conſidered thy teares: • Behold, I will put ſiſteene yeares mo vnto thy lyfe, and deliuer thee, and the Citie alſo, from the hand of the king of Aſſiria, for I will deſtroye the Citie: • And take thee this token of the Lorde, that he will doo it, as he hath ſpoken: Beholde, I will retourne the ſhadowe of Ahas dyall, that now is layd out with the Sun, and bying it tenne degrees backward. • So the Sunne turned ten degrees backward, the whiche he was deſcended afore.

Isa. 10. • I thankesgiving which Hezekia king of Iuda wrote, when he had ben ſicke, and was recovered.

I thought I ſhoulde haue gone to the gates of hell, when mine age was ſhortened, and haue wanted the reſi-due of my yerres.

I ſpake within my ſelf, I ſhal neuer hiſite the Lorde, (the Lorde I ſay) in this life.

I ſhall neuer ſee manne amonge the dwellers of the worlde.

Mine age is folden by together, and take away from me, like a ſhepardes cotage: I haue heuen off my life by my ſinnes, like as a ſweauer cutteth off his webbe.

He will with pining ſickneſſe make an ende of me: yea, he will make an ende of me in one day.

Then chattered I like a ſwalow, & like a crane, and mourned as a dove.

I liſt by mine eyes into the height: O Lorde (ſaid I) my ſickenes kepeth me downe, eaſe thou me.

What ſhal I ſaye: The Lorde hath made a promiſe to me: Yea, and he him ſelfe hath perſourmed it.

I ſhal therfore ſo long as I liue remember this bitterneſſe of my life.

O Lorde, men may liue beyond their yeares: and I will declare to all men that euen in thoſe yerres I haue a ioyful lyfe, and that it was thou that cauſedſt me to ſleepe, and againe thou haſt geuen life to me.

Behold, bitter as gal was my penſiuenes, ſo ſore longed I for health.

And it was thy pleaſure to deliuer my life from the filthy pit, for thou it is (O Lorde) that haſte caſt all my ſinnes behinde thy backe.

so shall it be whole. Then sayd Hezekia: O what a great miracle is this, that I shall go vp into the house of the Lord.

The xxxix. Chapter.

At the same time Herodach Baladam, Baladamus sonne, king of Babilon, sent letters and presentes to Hezekia. For he vnderstode howe that he had bene sicke, and was recovered agayn. And Hezekia was glad thereof, and shewed them the comodities of his treasure.

of siluer, of gold, of spices and rootes, of precious oyles, all that was in his cubbozdes and treasure houses. Ther was not one thing in Hezekias house & so throughout all his kingdome, but he let them see it. Then came Elsay the Prophet to king Hezekia, and said vnto him: what haue the men sayde, and fro whence came they vnto thee? Hezekia answered: they came out of a far country vnto me out of Babilon. Elsay said: what haue they looked vpon in thine house? Hezekia answered: All that is in mine house haue they seene, and there is nothing in my treasure, but I shewed it them. Then saide Elsay vnto Hezekia: vnderstand the word of the Lord of hostes. Beholde, the time will come that euerye thinge which is in thine house, and all that thy progenitours haue layde vp in store vnto this daye, shalbe carried to Babilon, and nothing left behinde. Thus sayth the Lord: yea, and part of thy sonnes, that shall come of thee, and whom thou shalt get, shalbe caried hence, and become gelded chamberlaynes in the king of Babylons court. Then sayde Hezekia to Elsay. Nowe God prosper his owne counsell whiche thou haste tolde me. He sayd mozeouer. So that there be peace and faythfulnesse in my tyme.

Comfort my people (O ye prophetes) comforte my people, sayth your God, comforte Ierusalem at the heart, and tell her, that her trauayle is at an end, that her offence is pardoned, that she hath recovered of the Lordes hand sufficient correction for all her sinnes. A voyce crieth in wilderness: Prepare the way for the Lord in the wilderness, make straight the path for our God in the deserte. Let all balleys be exalted, and euerye mountayne and hill be layde lowe: what so is crooked, let it be made straighte, and let the rough be made playne fieldes. For the glorie of the Lord shall appeare, and all fleshe shall at once see it: for why, the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it. The same voyce spake: Nowe crye. And the Prophete answered: what shall I crye? That all fleshe is grasse, & that all the goodlynes thereof, is as the floure of the field. The grasse is withered, & floure falleth awaye. Euen so is the people as grasse, when the breath of the Lord bloweth vpon them. Nevertheless whether the grasse wither, or the floure fade awaye: Yet the worde of our God endureth for euer. Go vnto the hig hill (O Ston) thou that bringest good tidings, lyste vp thy voyce with power, O thou preacher Ierusalem: Lift it vp without feare, and say vnto the cities of Iuda: Behold your God, behold the Lord God shal come with power, and beare rule with his arme. Beholde, he bringeth his treasure with him, & his workes go before him. He shal feede his flocke like an heardeman. He shall gather the lambes together with his arme, and cary them in his bosome, and shall kindlye intreate those that beare yonge. Who hath holden the waters in his fist? who hath measured heauen with his spanne, and hath comprehended all the earth of the wombe in their measures? who hath swept the mountaynes and hilles in a balounce. Who hath reformed the minde of the Lord? or to whom hath he shewed his counsell? O who is of his counsell to teache him? or who hath giuen him vnderstanding, and hath taught him the pathe of iudgement. Who taught him cunning, and opened hys, and conſider: . . Who hath made theſe thinges, whiche come out by ſo great heapes? he can call them all by their names. For ther is nothing hid vnto the greatneſſe of his power, ſtrength, and might. Howe maye then Jacob thinke, or how maye Iſrael ſaye:

My wayes are hid from the Lorde, and my G D D knoweth not of my iudgements. Knoweſt thou not, or haſt thou not hearde, that the everlaſting God, the Lorde which made all the corners of the earth, is neither we-rye nor ſaynt? and that his wiſedome geueth ſtrength vnto the werpe, and power vnto the ſaynt? Childzen are wearye and ſaynte, and the ſtrongest groſſe vpon them. When they runne they ſhall not fall: and when they go they ſhall not be weary.

from amonge the glorious men of it, and sayd vnto thee. Thou art my seruuant, I haue chosen thee, and not caste thee away: be not afrayde, for I am with thee. Melt not away as ware: for I am thy God, to strength thee, helpe thee, and to kepe thee with this right hand of mine. Beholde, all they that resist thee, shal come to confusion and shame: and thine aduersaries shal be destroyed, and brought to naught. So that whoso seeketh after the, shall not find them. Thy destroyers shall perishe, and so shall they that undertake to make battell against thee, be as that is not, and as a thing of naught.

For I thy Lord and God wil strengthen thy right hand. Euen I that say vnto thee: Feare not, I will helpe thee. Be not afraide thou little woman Jacob, and thou despised Israel: for I wil helpe thee, sayth the Lord, and the holy one of Israel thine auenger. Behold, I will make of thee a trading cart and a newe shaple, that thou mayest thresh and grind the mountaynes, and bring the hils to powder. Thou shalt fan them, and the winde shal carpe the away, & the whirlwinde shal scatter them. But thou shalt reioyce in the Lord, and shalt delite in praying & holy one of Israel. When the thirlyte and pooze seke water and find none, & when their tongue is dry of thirlyte, I geue it them sayeth the Lord. I the God of Israel forsake the not. I bring forth foudes in the hilles, and wels in the playne fieldes. I turne the wilderness to riuers, and the drye land to conduites of water. I plant in the wast ground, trees of Cedar, Bore, Myrrre and Olives. And in the drye, I set fyre trees, Elmes and Hawthornes together. All this do I, that they altogether may see and marke, perceiue with their hearts, and consider, that the hand of the lord maketh these thinges, and that the holpe one of Israel bringeth them to passe.

Stand at your cause (sayth the Lord) and bring forth your strongest ground, sayeth the kinge of Jacob, Let them bring forth their goddes, and let their gods tell vs what shal chaunce hereafter: yea, let them shewe vs the things that are past, what they be: let them declare them vnto vs, that we maye take them to heart, and knowe them here after. Either, shewe vs things for to come, and tell vs what shalbe done hereafter: so shal we knowe that your gods: do somthing, either good or bad: so will we both knowledge the same, and tell it out. Behold, ye are gods of naught, & your making is of naught, yea, abhominable is the man that hath chosen you. Neuerthelesse, I haue swaked by one from the northe, and he shall come. And another fro the East, which shall call vpon my name, and shal tread vpon princes as vpon clay. and as the potter treadeth downe the myre: who declared this from the beginninge, and we will knowe him, Or from the olde times, and we will confesse, and say that he is righteous. But ther is none that sheweth or declareth any thing, there is none also that heareth your wordes. He firste is he that shall saye to Sion: Behold, behold, they are present, and to Ierusalem it selfe will I geue an Euangelist. But when I consider there is not a man among them, nor anye that can geue counsell, nor that when I examine them, that can aunswere one word: Lo wicked are they and bayne, with the thinges also that they take in hande, yea their ymages are but wind and bayne thinges.

Behold, this is my seruant whom I leane, mine electe, in whom my soule is pacified. I haue geuen him my spirit that he may shewe forth iudgement, and equitie among the Gentiles. He shall not be an outcrier, nor lift vp his voyce: his voyce shall not be heard in the streetes. And a brysed rebe shal he not bryake, and the smokinge flaxe shal he not quenched: but faithfull and truly shall he geue iudgement, not be pessiue nor carefull, that he may restore righteousness vnto the earth, and the Gentyles also shall keepe his lawes.

 glory will I geue to none other, neyther mine honour to grauen ymages.
 Beholde, olde thynges are come to passe, and newe thynges do I declare.
 And or ener they come, I tell you of them. Syng vnto the Lorde a newe song of thanksgenying, blow out his prayse from the ende of the world.
E They that be vpon the sea, and al that is therein prayse him, the Isles & they that dwell in them. Let the wilderness with the cities lifte by her voyce, the townes also, that they of Cedar dwell in: Let them be glad that syt vpon rocks of stone, and let them cry down from the hye mountaynes, ascrybing glozpe vnto the Lorde, and magnify-inge him amonge the Gentiles. The Lorde shall come forth as a giaunt, and take a stomake to him, like a fresh man of warre. He shall roare and crye, and overcome his enemies. I haue longe holden my peace (sayth the Lorde) I haue bene still and refrayned my selfe, but nowe I will crye lyke a trauay-ling woman, and at once will I de-stroye and deuoure. I will make walke both mountayne and hill, and dye vpon euery greene thinge that groweth thereon. I will dye vpon the fouds of water, and drinke vpon the ryuers.
I will byng the blind into a streete, that they knowe not, and leade them into a foote pathe that they are ignoraunt in. I shall make darkness light before them, and the thyng that is croked to be straight. These thynges haue I done vnto them, and not forsaken them. • They are fallen backe, yea and let them be ashamed earnestlye, that hope in ydoles, and saye to fashioned images: ye are our gods. Heare, O ye deafe men, & sharpen your sightes to see, O ye blinde. • Who is blind but my seruaunt? O: so deafe as my messenger, whom I sente vnto them.

 For who is the ruler so blinde (saye they) as the perfect man, and so blinde as the lordes seruaunt? Thou vnder-standest much, and kepest nothing: the eares are open, and no man heareth.
 The Lorde is mercifull vnto them for his righteousness sake, that his woide might be magnified and praysed. But the people them selues is robbed and troden vnder the foote, cheined in don-geons, and they al (I say) be shut into prison houses. • They be caried away captiue, and no man doth louse them.
 They be troden vnder foote, and no man doth labour to byng them again.
 • But who is he among you, that pon-deth this, that considzeth it, and taketh it for a warning in time to come?
 • Who suffred Jacob to be troden vnder foote, and Israel to be spoyled? Did not the Lorde? Because we haue sinned agaynst him, and haue had no de-lyte to walke in his wayes, neyther bene obedient vnto his law. Therefore hath he poured vpon him his wrath-full displeasure, and strong battayle, which feareth him on euery syde, yet will he not vnderstande. He burneth him vpper, yet sinketh it not into his heart.

The xliij. Chapter.

But nowe, the Lorde that made thee, O Jacob, and he that fashioned thee: O Israel, sayth thus: • Feare not, for I haue redeemed thee. • I haue called thee by name, thou art mine owne. • If thou goest through the water, I will be with thee, that the strong foudes shoulde not plucke thee away. • And if thou walkest through the fyre, it shall not burne thee, and the flame shall not kyndle vpon thee. For I am the Lorde thy God the holz one of Israel, thy Saviour.

nor asfraid. For haue I not ener tolde you hitherto, and warned you? Yee can heare me recorde your selues. Is there any GOD excepte me? or any maker, that I should not know him?
All caruers of Images are but vaine, and the carued ymagines that they loue can doo no good. They muste beare recorde them selues (that seing they ca-45. nether see nor vnderstande) they shall be confounded. • Who dare then 46. b. make a GOD, or fashion an ymage that is profitable for nothing? • Be-47. hold, all the fellowship of them muste 48. be brought to confusion. And trauelye all the workmasters of them are men they shall all bee gathered together, they shall stande, tremble, and be confounded one with an other. The smith maketh an axe, and tempereth it with boaste coales, and fashioneth it with hammers, and woozeth it with all the strength of his armes: yea, sometime he is foynte for verpe hunger, and so thirstye, that he hath no more power. The Carpenter, or image Caruer taketh measure of the timber, and speaketh forth his 49. worke, hee marketh it with soume color. He playneth it, he ruleth it, and 50. finisheth it, and maketh it after the image of a man, and accordinge to the beautie of a man: that it may stand in the Temple. Moreover, hee goeth out to helve downe Cedre trees: he bringeth home Elmes and Oakes, and taking a bolde courage, hee seeketh out the best timber of the wood. Hys him selfe hath planted a Pyne tree, which the rayne hath swelled, which wood scructh for men to burne. Of this he taketh and warmeth himselfe withall: he maketh a fire of it to bake bread. And afterwarde maketh a God thereof, so honoz it: an Idol to knele before it. One peece he burneth in the fire, with an other he roseth fleshe, & he may eate rost his bely ful: with the thirde he warmeth himself, and sayeth: I ha, I am well warmed, I haue ben at the fire. And of the residue, he ma-keth him a god, and an Idole for him self. He kneleth before it, he wooshippeth it, he prayeth vnto it, & saith: De-liuer me, for thou art my God. • Yet Esa, 13. a. men neither consider nor vnderstand, because their eyes are stopped, & they can not see: & their hertes, that they can not perceue. They ponder not in their minde, for they haue nether knowledge nor vnderstandinge, to thinke thus: I haue bent one peece in the fire I haue baked bread with the coales therof, I haue rosted fleshe withall, & eaten it: shall I nowe of the residue make an abhominable Idole, and fall downe before a rotten peece of woode?

Thus he doth but seele his laboz, and his hert which is disceined, doth turne him aside: so that none of the can haue a free conscience to thinke, may not I erre? Consider this (O Jacob & Is-

I only spread out the heauens, and I only haue layd the foundation of the earth by mine owne selfe. I destroye the tokens of witches, and make the Soothsayers fooles. As for the wise, I turne them backward, & make their cunning foolishnesse. He doeth set by the purpose of his seruant, and fulfilleth the counsell of his messengers. Concerninge Jerusalem, he sayth: I shall be inhabited. And of the cities of Iuda. They shall be builded againe, and I will repayre their decayed places. He sayth to the ground: Be dry. And I will dry vp the water floodes. He sayth of Cyrus: He is mine herdsman: so that he shall fulfill all thinges after my will. He sayth also of Jerusalem: It shall be builded, and of the temple: It shall be fast grounded.

¶ The xiv. Chapter.

Thus sayth the Lord vnto Cyrus his anointed, who I haue taken by the right hand, to subdue nations besyde him. • I will loose the girdle of kinges, & I will open the gates besyde his face, and not to shut their doores. I will go besyde thee, & make the crooked streight. I shall bryake the brasen doores, and burst the yron bars. I shall geue thee that hid treasures, & the thing which is secretly kept: that thou mayest knowe that I am the Lord God of Israel, whiche haue called thee by thy name: & that for Jacob my seruantes sake, and for Israel my chosse. For I called thee by thy name, & ordeined thee of euer thou knewest me. • Euen I the Lord besyde whom there is none other: for without me there is no God. • I haue prepared the of euer thou knewest me that I might be knowne from the rising of the sunne, to the going downe of the same, that al is nothing without me. For I am the Lord, and there is none els none. It is I that created the light & darkenes. • I make peace and trouble: yea, euen I the Lord do al these thinges. Ye heauens from aboue vpon downe, & let the cloudes rayne righteousness. The earth open it selfe, & bring forth health, that thereby righteousness may flourish. Euen I the Lord bringe it to passe. • Who be vnto him that agreeth with his maker: & partner with the potter: Saith the clay to the potter: What makest thou of me, thy worke serueth for nothing: Who be vnto him that saith to his father: Why brast thou: and to his mother: Why brast thou: Thus sayth the Lord, euen the holy one, & maker of Israel. As for me of thinges to come, concerninge my sons, and put me in remembrance, as touching the workes of my handes. I haue made the earth, & created man vpon it. With mine handes haue I spread forth heauen, & given a commandement for all the host thereof. I shall wake him by with righteousness, and order all his wayes. • He shall build my citie, & let out my prisoners: & that neither for gift nor rewards, saith the Lord of hostes. Thus sayth the Lord: The occupiers of Egypte, the merchants of the Moytans & Sabers, shall come vnto thee with tribute, they shall be thine, they shall follow thee, & go with cheynes vpon their feete. They shall fall downe besyde thee, and make supplicatio vnto thee. For god (with out whom there is none other God) shall be with thee. • O how profound art thou, O God, thou God and Honour of Israel: Confessed art they all, & put to dishonour: they are gone hence together with shame, euen the makers of ymages. But Israel shall be saved in the Lord, which is the lasting saluation. Ye shall not come to shame nor confusion, world without end. For thus saith the Lord: I haue created heauen, the God that made the earth, that fashioned it, & sett forth: He did not make it for nought, but to be inhabited. Euen I the Lord without whom there is none other. I haue not spoken secretly, neither in darke places of the earth. I haue you that are escaped of the people.

Have they any vnderstanding, that set vp the stockes of their Idols, & praye drawe nye, come hither, and let the aske what is he that tolde this befoze: or who speake of it euer sence the begin-without who ther is none other god: the true God & Saviour, and there is elsh none, but I. And therefore turne you vnto me (al ye endes of the earth) that ye maye be saved: for I am God, and there is elsh none. I sweare by my selfe, out of my mouth commeth the woorde of righteousnes, and that may no man turne: but all knees shall bowe vnto me, and all tongues shall swear by my name saying: Blesse, in the Lord is my righteousnes and all they that thinke scozne of hym, shall be confounded. And the whole seed of Israel shall be iustified, and make their boast in the Lord.

to ouerlade them, and to make them swerpe. They are sonke downe, and fallen together, for they maye not ease them of their burthen: therefore must they go into captiuitie. Harken vnto me, O house of Jacob, and all ye that remane yet of the household of Israel whom I haue bozne from your mothers wombe, & brought you vp from your birth, till ye were growen. I, I, whiche shall beare you vnto your last age, I haue made you, I will also nowrepe you, beare you, and saue you.
Whom will ye make me lyke? or to whom will ye make me equall, or co-pare me that I should be like him, in salvation of many, that I may be lyke him. Ye sayers (no doubt) shall take out splauer and golde out of your pur-to make a god of it: that men maye kneele downe and worshippe it. Yet Esa. 44. &

Bless, that men shoulde crye vnto him, which geueth no answer, and deye-nereth not the man that calleth vpon him, from his trouble. Consider this well, and be ashamed. Go into your owne selues (O ye runnagates) Remember the thinges which are passe, sence the beginninge of the worlde: that I am God, and that there is elsh no god: yea, and that there is nothing lyke vnto me. In the beginning of a thing, I shew the end thereof: and I tel befoze, thinges that are not yet come to passe. My deuise standeth stedfastly established, & I fulfill all my pleasure.
I cal a bird out of the East, and the man by whom my counsell shall be fulfilled out of far countreys, as sone as I thinke to deuise a thinge, I do it.
Hear me, O ye that are of an hye stomacke: but farre from righteousnesse, I shall bringe forth my righteousnes.
It is not farre, and my health shal not tary long a way. I will save health in Sion, and in Israel my glory.

downe in the dust, set vpon the ground, and not in a throne. (O thou mayden of Caldea.) Thou shalt no more be called tender and pleasaunte.
Bring forth the querne and grinde myle, vntill the thy brydded heare, put of thy shoes, make bare thy knees, and waide thorough the water riuers.
Thy shame shall be discovered, and thy prinites shall be seene. For I will auenge me of thee, and will shewe no mercy to thee, as I do to other men, sayth our redeemer, which is called the Lord of Hostes, the holy one of Israel: Hytte still, holde thy tongue, and get thee into some darke corner, (O daughter Caldea) for thou shalt no more be called: Lady of kingdome.

I was so worthe with my people, that I punished mine enheritaunce, and gaue them into thy power. • Ne-uerthelesse thou shewdest them no

The. xlviii. Chapter.

Hear this, O thou house of Jacob, ye that are called by the name of Israel, and are come out of one stocke with Iude: which sweare by the name of the lord and beare witness by the God of Israel (but not with truth and right) which are called free men of the bo-ly cite, and are grounded vpon the God of Israel, whose name is the Lorde of hostes. The things that I shewd you, euer sence the beginning haue I not brought them to passe, im-mediatly as they came out of my mouthe, and declared them, and they are come: Howbeit, I knowe that thou art obstinate, and that thy necke hath an yron bayne, and that thy browe is of brasse. Neuerthelesse, I haue cur-sence the beginning shewed thee of things so to come, and declared them vnto thee, or euer they came to passe, that thou shouldest not say: Myne dol hath done it, my carued or molten ymage hath shewed it. Thou hardest it before, and beholde, It is come to passe, and whether can ye prophete of things to come? But as for me I told thee before at the beginning, new and secret things that thou knewest not off. • And some done nowe not of olde time, whereof thou neuer hear-dest before they were brought to passe that thou canst not say: Beholde, I knewe of them: Howeouer, there be some, whereof thou hast neyther heard nor knowen, neyther haue they bene opened vnto thine eares afore tyme.
For I knewe that thou wouldest maliciously offende, therefore haue I called thee a transgressour, euen from thy mothers wombe. Neuerthelesse for my names sake, I will withstand my wrath, and it shall be for my honors sake, if I patiently forbeare thee, and do not roote thee out. Beholde, I haue poured thee: yet not as sychar.
• I haue chōse thee in the fyre of affliction, and that owenly for myne owne sake: yea: euen for myne owne sake will I doo this, or els what dyspōse would they doo to my name? Therefore unto me, O Jacob and Iſrael whom I haue called. I am euen he, that is: I am the firſt and the laſt. My hande hath layd the foundation of the earth: and my right hand hath ſpanned ouer the heauens. As ſoone as I call them, they are there. Gather you all together, and hearken: whiche of yonder gods hath declared this? The Lorde hath a loue vnto him, and he ſhall perſeuerance his will againſt Babel, and declare his power agaynſt the Chaldees. I my ſelfe alone, euen I, haue tolde you this befoze. Yea, I did call him: and bring him forth, and he ſhall gene a prosperous iourney. Come nye and heare this: haue I ſpoken any thinge darkely, ſence the beginning? When a thing beginneth, I am there. Wherefoze, the Lord God & his ſpyete hath ſente me. And thus ſayeth the Lord God, thy redemer, the holy one of Iſrael. I am the Lorde thy God, which teach thee profitable thinges, and leade thee thy waye, that thou ſholdeſt do. O that thou haddeſt regarded my commandementes, then had thy welthines bene as the water ſtreame, and thy rightcouſnes as the waves flowing in the ſea. Thy ſeede alſo had bene lyke as the ſande in the ſea, and the fruite of thy body lyke the grauell ſtones therof. His name ſhold not be rote out: nor deſtroyed befoze me. Go away from Babilon, flye from the Caldees with a mery voyce, ſpeake of this, declare it abode, and go forth vnto the ende of the worlde, ſaye ye: The Lorde hath redemed his ſeruant Jacob, that they ſuffred no thirſt he led them thowoe the wilderness, and cauſed the waters to flowe out vnto them from out of the rocke. He cleue the rocke a ſunder, and the water gushed out. As for the vngodly, they haue no peace, ſayth the Lord.

Ch. xlix. Chapter.

Y Harken vnto me, and heere ye people from far. The Lorde hath called me from my birth, and made mention of my names my mothers wombe:

he hath made my mouthe lyke a ſharpe ſword, vnder the ſhadowe of his hand hath he defended me, and hid me in his quier as a good arowe, and ſayd vnto me: Thou art my ſeruant Iſrael. I will be honoured in thee. Then answered I: I haue loſt my labour, I haue ſpent my ſtrength in vayne. Neuertheleſſe, I will commit my cauſe & my worke vnto the Lorde my God. And now ſayth the Lorde, euen he that faſhioned me fro my mothers wombe to be his ſeruant, that I maye bringe Jacob agayne vnto him: howbeit Iſrael will not be gathered vnto him agayne. In whole ſyght I am great, whiche alſo is my Lorde, my God, and my ſtrength. And he ſayde: It is but a ſmall thing that thou arte my ſeruant, to ſette by the kinreddeſ of Jacob, and to reſtore the deſtruction of Iſrael. For I haue made thee the lyghte of the Gentiles, that thou mayeſt be my health vnto the end of the worlde. Wherefoze, thus ſayth the Lorde the redemer and holy one of Iſrael: becauſe of the abhorring and deſpyſſing among the Gentyles, concerning the ſeruant of all them that beare rule: Kinges and Princes ſhall ſee, and ariſe and worſhippe, becauſe of the holpe one of Iſrael, whiche hath choſen thee. And thus ſayth the Lorde: In the time accepted haue I heard thee, and in the day of ſaluation haue I helped thee. I will preſerue thee, and make thee to be the attonement of the people, that thou mayeſt helpe by the earth agayne: and poſſeſſe agayne the deſolate heritages. Thou that mayeſt ſay to the priſoners: go forth, and to them that are in darknes: Come into the lyghte, they ſhall ſeede in the hye waies, and get their paſture in all hye places. They ſhall nother hunger, nor thirſte, heate nor ſunne ſhall not hurte them. For he that fauoureth them, ſhall leade them, and geue them drinke of the ſprynge welles. As for those that ouerthrew thee, and made thee wast, they shall depart from thee. • Lift vp thine eyes, and loke about thee: all these gather them together and come to thee. As truely as I liue (sayth the Lord) thou shalt put them all vpon thee, as an apparell, and gyrd them to thee, as a byrde doth her ierwels. As for thy lande that lieth desolate, wasted and destroyed: it shall be to narrowe for them that shall dwell in it. And they that would deuoure thee, they shall be far away. When the childe whom the baren shall bring forth vnto thee, shall say in thine eare: this place is to narrowe, geue place that I maye haue room. Then shalt thou thinke by thy selfe: who hath begotten me these: saying I am baren and alone, a captiue and an outcast? And who hath nourished them vp for me? I am desolate and alone, but from whence come these? And therefore thus sayeth the Lord God: Beholde, I will stretch out mine hand to the Gentiles, and set vp my token to the people. They shall bring thee thy sons in their lappes, and carpe thy daughters vnto thee vpon their shoulbers. For kinges shall be thy nursinge fathers, and Queenes shall be thy nursinge mothers. They shall fall before thee with their faces flat vpon the earth, and saye by the busse of thy feete: that thou mayest know how that I am the Lord. And will fede thine enemies with their owne fleshe, and make the drinke of their owne bloude as of swete wine. And all fleshe shall know, I Jacob that I am the Lord thy sauour, thy noble redemer. The. i. Chapter. Thus sayth the Lord: • Where is the bill of your mothers deuorment, that I sente her away? or who is the blurer, to whom I solde you? • Behold for your own offences are ye solde, & because of your transgression, is your mother forsaken. For why would no man recyue me, when I came: and when I called, no man gaue me answer. As my hand shortened that it might not helpe: or haue I not power to deliuer? Lo at a worde, I drinke vp the sea, and of water foudes I make drye lande: so that for wante of water the fishe corrupt and dye for thirste. As for beauen, I clothe it with darkenes, and put as it were a sacke vpon it. The Lord God hath geuen me a well learned tongue, so that I can comfort them which are troubled, yea & that in due season. He wakeneth mine eare by times in the morning: by times in the morning, I saye, he will waken mine eare, & I might hearken as to the scole masters. • The Lord god hath opened min eare, therefore can I not say nay, nor withdraue my selfe: but I offer my backe vnto the smyters, and my chekes to the nyppers. • I turne not my face from shame and spitting, and the Lord God shall helpe me, therefore shall I not be confounded. I haue hardened my face lyke a flint stone, for I am sure, I shall not come to confusion. He is at hande that will rebuke me, who will then? with me to law? Therefore who so feareth the Lord among you, let him feare the boyce of his seruant. who so walketh in darkness, and no light shineth vpon him, let him put his trust in the name of the Lord, and holde him by his God. But take heede, ye all kinde a fyre of the wrath of God, and stirre vp the coales: walke on in the glisteringe of youre owne fyre, and in the coales that ye haue kindled. Chapter.

Herken vnto me, ye that holde of righteousness, and ye that like the Lord. Take heede vnto the stone, whereout ye are hewen, & to the graue whereout ye are digged. Consider. Abraham your father, and Sara that bare you: howe that I called him alone, and blessed him, and increased him. Therefore shall the Lord comfort Sion, and repayre all her decaye: making her desert as a paradise: and her wilderness as the garde of the Lord. Mirth & ioy shalbe found there, thankesgiving and the voice of praise. Haue respect vnto me the, O my people, both high and lowe, and lay thyne eare to me: for a lawe and an ordinaunce shal go forth fro me, to lighten the Gentiles. It is harde by that my health and my righteousness shall go forth, and the people shalbe ordyed with mine arme. The Lordes that be in the Gentils, shal hope in me, and put their trust in mine arme. Lift vp your eyes toward heauen, and looke vpon the earth beneath. For the heuens shall vanishe away like smoke, and the earth shal waxe old like a cloth, and they that dwell therein, shall perishe in like maner. But my saluation shall endure for euer, and my righteousness shall not cease. Hearken vnto me ye that haue pleasure in righteousness, thou people that bearest my lawe in thine heart. • Feare not & curse of men: be not afraid of their blasphemies and reuplinges: for woormes & moths shal eat the vp like cloth & wol. But my righteousness shall endure for euer, & my saluing health from generation to generation. Wake vp, wake vp: & be strong, O thou arme of the Lord, wake vp, like as in time past, euer & since & world began. Art not thou & same arme, & hast wounded the proud Egypt, & hewen the dragon in pieces? Art not thou euen he, which hast dyed by the depth of & sea, which hast made plaine & sea ground, that the deliuered might go through? Therefore the redeemed of the lord shal turne again, & come with ioy vnto Sion, there to endure for euer. That mirth and gladnes might be to the: that sorow & wo might flee from the. • Yea I, I am euen he, & in al things geuerth you consolation. What art thou then, & fearest a mortall man: the child of man, which goeth awaye as doth the flour: And forgettest & lord & made thee, that spred out the heuens, & laid the fundation of the earth. But thou art euer afraide for the sighte of thine oppressor, which is ready to do harm. wher is & wrath of the oppressor? The time cometh on fast, wher the prisoner shalbe loosed, & he shal not dye in the dagon, nor yet be consumed by famishment. • I am the lord thy God & make the sea to be stil, & to rage: whose name is the Lord of hostes. • I haue put thy wordes in thy mouth, & haue defended thee in the shadowe of my hand: that I may plant the heuens, and lay the foundation of the erth, and say vnto Sion: Thou arte my people. • Wake, awake, and stand vp O Jerusalem, thou that from the hande of the Lord, hast dronken out the cup of his wrath: thou that hast supped off, and sucked out the dregges of his deadlye cuppe to the bottome. For amonge all the sonnes whome he hath begotten, there is not one that may holde it vp, and not one to leade it by the hande, of all the sonnes that he hath nourished. And therefore, thou miſerable, and dionke, howbeit not with wine, heare this. Thus ſaith the Lord, thy Lord and God, the defender of his people: Behold, I will take the ſum- bing cuppe oute of thy hand, euen the cuppe with the dregges of my wrath: that from henceforth, thou ſhalte ne- uer drinke it moze, but I will put it into their hande that trouble thee: which haue ſpoken to my ſoule, ſcoupe downe, that we may go ouer thee: and thou laideſt thy bodie euen with the ground, and as the ſtrete to go vpon.

Come to the waters all ye that be thirstie, and ye that haue no money. Come hie, that ye may haue to eate. Come bye wine, and milke without any money, or money woorth. Wherefore do ye laye out your money for the thing that feedeth not, and spende your labour about the thing that satisfieth you not? But herken, herke rather vnto me, and ye shall eate of the best, & your soule shal haue her pleasure in plentousnes. Encline your eares, and come vnto me, take heede (I say) and your soule shal liue.

3 Re. 7. c

• For I will make an euertlasting covenant with you, euen the sure mercies of Dauid. Beholde, I gaue him for a witnes amonge the folke, for a Prince and captaine vnto the people. Lo, thou shalt call an vnknown people, and a people that had no knowledge of thee, shal runne vnto thee, because of the Lord thy God, and the holy one of Israel, whiche glorifieth thee. Seeke the Lord, whyle he may be found, and call vpon him while he is nye. • Let the vngodly man forsake his owne waies, and the vnrighteous his owne ymaginations, and turne agayne vnto the Lord: so shall he be mercifull vnto him: and so our God. For he is verie ready to forgive. • For thus sayth the Lord: my thoughtes are not your thoughtes, and your waies are not my waies, but as farre as the heauens are hyer then the earth, so farre do my waies exceede yours, and my thoughte yours. • And like as the rayne and snow cometh downe from heauen, and returneth not thither agayne, but watereth the earth, maketh it fruitefull, and grene, that it may geue cozne vnto the sower, and breaue to him that eateth. So the worde also that cometh out of my mouth shal not turne agayne boyde vnto me, but shal accomplish my will, and prosper in the thinge whereto I sende it. And so shall ye go forth with ioye, and be ledde with peace. The mountaynes & hilles shal singe with you for ioye, and all the trees of the field shal clap their hands. For thornes there shall growe fyre trees, and the Myrre tree in the steede of byers. And this shall be doome to the prayse of the Lord, and for an euertlasting token, that shal not be taken away.

Thus sayeth the Lord: • keepe I equitie, and do right, for my seruing healthe shal come shortly, and my righteousnesse shal be opened. Blessed is the man that doth this, and the mans child which keepeth the same. • He that taketh heede, that he vnhalowe not the Sabbath, (that is) he that keepeth him selfe, that he do no euill. Then shall not the stranger which cleaueth to the Lord, say: • alas, the Lord hath shut me cleane out from his people. • Neyther shall the gelded man say: lo, I am a bye tree. For thus sayeth the Lord vnto the gelded that keepeth my saboth. Praise ye, that holdeth greatly of the thinge that pleaseth me, and keepeth my covenant: vnto them will I geue in my housholde, and within my walles, a better heritage and name, then yf they had bene called sonnes and daughters. • I will geue them an euertlasting name, that shal not perishe. I gayne the straungers, that sticke to the Lord, to serue him, and to loue his name, and to be his seruantes. And all they, whiche keepe them selues, that they vnhalowe not the Sabbath, namely, that they fulfill my couenant: Them wil I bring to my holy mountayne, and make them ioyfull in my house of prayer. Their burnt offerings and sacrifices shalbe accepted vpon myne altare. • For my house shalbe called an house of prayer for all people. Thus sayeth the Lord God which gathereth together the scattered of Israel: I will bring yet an other congregation to him. Come al ye beasts of the fildes, that ye may deuoure all the beasts of the wood. • For his watchmen are al blind, & they haue al together no vnderstanding, they are all, comme dogges, not beyng able to bark: They are slepe, sluggishe are they, and lye snoozing, they are shamelesse dogges, that be neuer satisfied. The shepherdes also in lyke maner haue no vnderstandinge, • but euery man tourneth his owne waye, euery one after his owne couetousnes, with all his power. • Come (saye they) I will fetch wine, so shall we fill our felices, that we may be drunken. And do to morowe, like as to daye: yea, and much more.

The. lviij. Chapter.

The righteous perisheth, and no man regardeth it in his hert. Good godly people are taken awaye, and no manne considereth it. Namely, that the righteous is conuayed away from the wicked. He cometh into peace, and godly men rest in their chambers, and befoze the godly man goth peace. Come hither therfore ye charmers children, • ye sonnes of the aduoutherer, & the whoze: where in take ye your plesure? Upon whom gaze ye with your mouth, and bleare out your tongue? are ye not children of aduoutry, and a seede of dissimulation? Ye make your fyre vnder the oaks, and vnder all greene trees, and ye offer chyldren in the valleys, and dung of stone. Thy parte shalbe with the stonye rockes by the ryuer: Yea, enen these shalbe thy parte. For there thou hast poured meate and drinke offering vnto them. Shoulde I delite in that? Thou hast made thy bed vpon hye mountaynes, thou wentest by thither, and there hast thou slayne sacrifice. • Behinde the doozes and postes, haste thou set by thy remembrance. Whenne thou haddest discovered thy selfe to an other then mee, when thou wentest by and made thy bed wider, and with those Idolles haste thou made a couenaunt, and louedst their couches, where thou sawest them. Thou wentest straighte to kinges with oyle • and diuers oyntmentes (that is) thou haste sente thy messengers far of, and yet art thou fallen into the pit therby. Thou art swere for the multitude of thine owne wayes, yet saydest thou neuer, I will leue of. • Thou haste had the life that thy handes wroughte, and therfore thou art carelesse. For when wilt thou be abashed of feare, seeinge thou hast broken thy promise, and rememberedst not mee, neyther haste me in thy hert? Thinkest thou, that I also will holde my peace (as afore time) that thou ferdest me not? Yea, vnto I will declare thy goodnes and thy workes. but they shal not profit thee, when thou criest, let thy chosen heay deliuer thee. But the wind shall blow them forth, and vanitie shal take them all away. • Neuerthelesse, they that put their trust in me, shal inherite the land: and haue my holpe hill in possession. And therfore thus saith he: • Make plaine, make plaine: and cleane the strete, take by the Rumbling blockes out of that waye that leadeth to my people. For thus sayth the hye and excellent, enen he that dwelleth in everlastingnesse whose name is the holy one: • I dwell hie aboue, and in the Sanctuary, and with him also that is of a contrite and humble spirite do I dwell: that I may heale a troubled minde, and a contrite heart. • For I chide not euery, and am not wrothe withoute ende. But the blasting goeth from mee, and is included in the bode, and I made the breathe, I am wrothe with him for his couetousnesse,

I smite him, I hide me, and am angrie, when he tourneth himselfe, and solooweth the byways of his owne heart. I haue seene his wayes, and I heale him, I leade him and restore to him comforte, and to those that were sorpe for him. I make the fruites of thankesgeuing, that he maye saie: Peace, peace. vnto them that are far off, and to them that are nye, sayth the Lorde, and I make him whole. But the wicked are lyke the raginge sea, that cannot rest, whose water someth with the mire and grauel. Euen so the wicked haue no peace, sayeth God.

The. lviij. Chapter.

I lye. nowe, as loude as thou canst. Leauē not off, like by thy boyce lyke a trompette, and shewe my people their offences, and the house of Jacob their sinnes. For they seeke me daylye, and will knowe my wayes, euen as it were a people that did righte, and had not forsaken the statutes of their God. They argue with me concerning right iudgement, and will be nye vnto G D D.

Wherfore faste we (saye they) and thou seest it not? we put our lyues to straightnes, and thou regardest it not.

Beholde, when ye fast, your lust remaineth still: for ye dooe no lesse violence to your detters: loe, ye faste to strife and debate, and to smite with the fist of wickednes. Nowe ye shall not fast thus that you may make your voice be herd aboue: I thinke ye this fast pleaseth me, that a man shoulde chasten him selfe for a daye, and to worthe his heade about like an hoope, and to lye vpon the earth in an hearpe cloth: Shoulde that be called fasting, or a day that pleaseth the Lorde? Woth not this fasting rather please me, that thou loose him oute of bondage, that is in thy daunger: that thou breake the cote of wicked bargaines: that thou let the oppressed go fre, and take from them all manner of burthens: to deale thy breade to the hungrye, and bying the poore wandring home lyte thy house: when thou seest the naked that thou couer him, and hyde not thy face from thy neighbour (and despie not thyne owne fleshe.) Then shall thy light breake forth as the morning, & thy health flourish right shortly: thy righteousness shall go before thee, and the glorye of the Lorde shall embrace thee. Then if thou callest, the Lorde shall aunswere thee: yf thou cryest, he shall saie: here I am. Yea, if thou layest away from thee thy burthens, and holdest thy fingers, and ceaseest from blasphemous talking, yf thou haue compassion vpon the hungry, and refreshest the troubled soule: Then shall thy light spring out in the darkenes, and thy darkenes shall be as the noone daye. The Lorde shall euer bee thy guyde, and satisfie the desire of thine heart in the tyme of thyngth, and fill thy bones with mary. Thou shalt be like a fresh watered garden: and lyke the fountayne of water, that neuer leaueth runninge. Then the places that euer haue bene wast, shall be builded of thee: there shalt thou laye a foundation for many kinreds. Thou shalt be called the maker of headges, and the builder againe of the wayes of the Saboth. Yea, if thou turne thy feete in the Sabboth, so that thou do not the thinge which pleaseth thy selfe in my holye daye: and thou call the pleasant, holy, and glorious Sabboth of the Lorde, and that thou geue him the honour, so that thou dooe not after thine owne ymagination, neyther seeke thine owne will, nor speake thine owne wordes. Then shalt thou haue thy pleasure in the Lorde, and I will cary thee hye aboue the erth, and fede thee with the heritage of Jacob, thy father: for the Lordes own mouth hath so promised.

The. lix. Chapter.

Beholde. the Lordes hande is not so shortened that it cannot helpe, neyther is his eare so stopp'd that it maye not heare. But your misdeedes haue separated you from your G D D, and your sinnes hyde his face from you, that he heare speake lealinges, and your tongue fetteth out wickednes. No man regardeth righteousnes, and no man indgeth truely. Euery manne hopeth in vayne thinges, and imagineth disceat, Job. 15. b. concueth wearynes, and bringeth psal. 7. b. forth euill. They bzeede Cockatrice egges, and weaue the spiders webbe:

Who so eateth of their egges, dyeth.
But yf one treade vppon them, there commeth vp a serpente, & their webbe maketh no clothe, and they maye not couer them with their labors. Their deedes are the deedes of wickednesse, and the woꝝke of robbery is in their bandes. • Their feete runne to euill, and they make haste to shedde innocent bloude, their counsellers are wicked counsels, harme and destruction are in their wayes. But the waye of peace they knowe not. In their go-inges is no equitie: their wayes are so crooked, that whosoener goeth therin, knoweth of no peace. And this is the cause that equitie is so farre from vs, and that righteousnes commeth not npe vs. • We looke for light, loe, it is darkenes: for the moꝝning shine, for we walke in the darke. • We grope like the blinde vppon the wall, we grope eue as one that hath none eyes, we stumble at the none day, as though it were toward night: In the falling places, lyke men that are halfe deade.
We rope al like beares, and mourne still like doves. We looke for equitie, but there is none, for healtch, but it is farre from vs. For our offences are many before the, and our sinnes testifie agaynst vs. Yea, we must con-fesse that we offende, and knowe ledge that we do amysse: Plainely transgresse and delinquit agaynst the Lord, and fall away from our God, blinge pe-sumptuous and trayterous imaginations, and casting falsse matters in our hearts. And therfore is equitie gone afore, and righteousnes standeth a far of. much is fallen down in the strete, and the thing that is playne and open, may not be shewed. Yea the truth is taken away, and he that refrayneth hym selfe from euill, must be spoyled.

When the Lord sawe this, it displeased him soze, that there was no equi-tie. He sawe also, that there was no man righteous, and he wonderd that ther was no man to helpe him. Wherefore he helde him by his owne power, and he sustayned him by his owne righteousnes. • He put righteousnes vpon him for a brest plate, and set the helmet of healtch vppon his heade. He put on wrath in stede of clothing, and roke gelousye aboute hym for a cloake: (lyke as when a manne goeth soozth wrathfully to recompence hys enemies, and to be auenged of his aduer-saries.) Namelye, that he might recompence and rewarde the Ilandes, where through the name of the Lord might be feared, from the rising of the Sunne: and his waityng, vnto the going downe of the same. For he shall come as a violent water streame which the winde of the Lord hath moued. • But vnto Sion there shall come a redeemer, and vnto theim in Jacob that tourne from wickednes, sayeth the Lord. I will make this couenant with theim (sayeth the Lord:) My spirite that is vpon thee, and the woꝝdes which I haue put in thy mouth, shall neuer go out of thy mouth, nor out of the mouth of thy childers children, from this time soozth for euer: more, woꝝide without ende, sayth the Lord.

shall come vnto thee. The multitude of Camels shall couer thee, the dro-they of Saba shall come, bringinge Cedar shalbe gathered vnto thee, the rams of Sabaioth shall serue thee, to be offered acceptably vpon mine au-

The fles also shal wayte for me, and specially the shippes of Charlis: that they may bring thy sonnes from farre, and their siluer and their golde with them, vnto the name of the Lorde thy God, vnto the holy one of Israel, that hath glorified thee. Strangers shall build by thy walles, and their kinges shal do thee seruice. For when I was angry, I smote thee, and of my mercy I pardoned thee. Thy gates shall stand open still both day & night, and neuer be shut, that the holt of the Gentyles may come, and that their kinges may be brought vnto thee. For euery people and kingdome that serueth not thee, shall perishe, & be destroyed with bitter destruction. The gloze of Liba-nus shal com vnto thee. The fir trees, Boxes & Cedars together to garnish the place of my sanctuary, for I will glorifie the place of my feete. Moreo-uer, those shal come kneeling vnto thee, that haue vexed thee: and all they that despised thee, shall fall downe at thy foote. Thou shalt be called the citie of the Lorde. Shon the Citie of the holpe one of Israel. Because thou hast ben forsaken & hated, so that no man went through thee: I will make thee glorious for euer & euer, & ioyfull throughout all posterities: Thou shalt suck the milke of the Gentiles, and kinges brests shall feede thee. And thou shalt know that I the Lorde am the Sanctifyer & redeemer, the mighty one of Jacob. For yasse, will I geue thee gold, and for yron siluer: for wood yasse, & for stones yron. I will turne thine oppression into peace, and thine exaltations into righteousness. Violence and robbery shall neuer be heard of in thy lande, neyther harme and destruction within thy borders. Thy walls shalbe called health: and thy gates the praise of God. The sunne shall neuer be thy daye light: and the light of the Moone shall neuer shine vnto thee: but the Lorde himself shalbe thine euermore light, and thy God shalbe thy glory. Thy sunne shall neuer go downe, and thy moone shall not be hid, for the Lorde him selfe shalbe thine euermore lighte, and thy sorrowfull dayes shalbe ended. Thy people shall be all righteous, and possesse the lande euer, the floure of my plantinge: the worke of my handes, whereof I will reioyce. The youngest and least shall growe into a thousande, and the simplest into a stronge people. I the Lorde shall shortly bringe this thing to passe in his time.

thy Sanctuary Iherusalem. Zion is a wilderness, and Ierusalem a desert.
Our holy house which is oure beau-tie, where our fathes prayled thee, is brynte by : yea, all our commodities and pleasures are waisted away. Wilt thou not be intreated (Lord) for all this : wilt thou holde thy peace, and fource vs so soze :

The. lxx. Chapter.

They seeke me, that hitherto haue not asked for me : they fynde me, that hitherto haue not sought me. I haue sayde: I am here. I am here, I am. founde of a people that neuer called vpon my name. For thus long haue I euer holden out my handes to an vnfaishfull people that go not the right way, but after their owne ymaginations: O a people that is euer despyng me to my face. They make their oblations in gardepns, and their smoke vpon aultars of bycke, they lurke amonge the grazes, and lye in the dennes at night.
They eate swynes fleshe, & vncleane byoche is in their vessels. If thou commest npe them, they say: touche me not for I am holper then thou. All these men when I am angry, shall be tour-ned to smoke, and they, that shall burne for euer. Beholde, it is written before my face, and shall not be forgotten, but recompenced. I shall reward it them into their bosome: I meane your misdeedes, and the misdeedes of your fathes together (sayeth the Lord) which haue made their smokes vpon the mountaynes, and blas-phemed me vpon the hilles: therefore will I measure their olde deedes into their bosome agayne. Moreover, thus sayeth the Lord: I like as when one wold gather holy grapes, men say vnto him: Break it not off, for it is holy: euen so wil I do also for my seruan-tes sakes, that I will not destroy the all. But I wil take a sede out of Jacob, and out of Iuda one, to take possession of my hill. My chosen shall possesse these thinges, and my seruan-tes shall dwell there. Sharon shalbe a shepefolde, and the valey of Achoz shall gene the stallinge for the cattell of my people that feare me. But as for you, ye are they that haue forsaken the Lord, and haue forgotten my holy hill. Ye haue set vp an altar vnto Jupiter, and geuen riche drinke offerin-ges vnto the planets. Therefore will I number you with the swerd, that ye shalbe destroyed all together. For when I called, no man gaue me an-swere: when I spake, ye harkned not vnto me, but did wickednesse before mine eyes, and choose the thinge that pleased me not. Therefore thus sayeth the Lord God: Behold, my seruants shall eate, but ye shall suffer hunger: Behold, my seruants shall drinke, but ye shall suffer thirst. Beholde, my ser-uantes shalbe mery, but ye shalbe confounded. Behold, my seruantes shall reioyce for very quietnesse of hearte.

But ye shall crye for sorowe of heart, and complaine for vexation of minde.
Your name shall you leaue accursed among my chosen: for God the Lord shall flea you, and call his seruants by an other name. Who so reioyceth vpon earthe, shall reioyce in the true God. And who so sweareth vpon earthe, shall sweare in the true God.
For the olde enimitie shalbe forgotten, and taken away out of my sighte.
For lo, I shall make a newe heauen and a newe earth. And as for the olde, they shall neuer be thought vpon, nor kept in minde: but the Lord sayeth be gladde, and euermore reioyce, for the thinges that I shall doo, for whye I shall

Beholde, I shall make a topfull Jerusalem, and his people ioyfull: yea, I my selfe will reioyce with Jerusalem, and be gladde with my people.

And the voyce of weeping and wailing shall not be heard in her from thenceforth. There shall neither be childe nor old man, that haue not their full dayes. But when the childe cometh to an hundred yere olde, it shall dye. And if he that is an hundred yeres of age, do wylonge, he shalbe cursed.

They that builde houses, and dwell in them: they shall plant vineyardes, and eate the fruit of them. They shall not builde, and another possesse: they shall not plant and another eate. But the life of my people shalbe like a tree and so shal the worke of their hands. My chosen shall liue longe, they shall not labour in vayne, nor beget with trouble: for they are the hye blessed seede of the Lord, and they frutes with them. And it shalbe, that ouer they call, I shall aunswere them.

While they are yet but thinking how to speake, I shall heare them. The wolfe and the lambe shall feede together, and the Lyon shall eate hay lyke the bullocke.

But earthe shalbe the serpentes meate. There shall no man hurt nor slaye another, in all my holpe hill, sayth the Lord.

The lxvi. Chapter.

Thus sayth the Lord: Heauen is my seate, and the earth is my foote stoole. Where shall nowe the house stand that ye will build vnto mee? And where shalbe the place that I will dwell in? As for these thinges, my hande hath made them all, and they are all created, sayeth the Lord, which of them shall I then regard? Euen him that is pooze and of a lowe troubled spirit, and standeth in awe of my wordes. For whoso slayeth an oxe for me, doth me so great dishonoure as hee that killeth a manne.

Hee that killeth a sheepe for me, killeth a dogge. He that bringeth mee meate offerings, offereth swynes bloud: who so maketh a memoriall of incense, praiseth the thing that is vnrighte. Yet take they suche swyes in hand, and their soule deliteth in these abominations.

Herfore will I also haue pleasure in laughing them to scorn, and the thing that they feare will I bring vpon them. For when I called, no man gaue answer: when I spake, they would not heare. But did wickednesse before mine eyes, and choose the thinges that displeased me. Heare the word of the Lord all ye that feare the thinge whiche he speaketh: Your brethren that hate you, and cast you out for my names sake, saye:

The Lord is gracious agaynst vs, but you shall see him in ioye whē they shall be confounded. Then shall he heare a greates noyse from the Citie and the temple, the voyce of the Lord that wil reward and recompence his enemies: lyke as when a wife bringeth forth a manne childe, or euer she suffer the payne of the birth, and anguyshe of the traaille. Who euer hard or saw such thinges: both the ground beare in one daye: or are the people borne all at ones, as Sion trauayled in childe birth and bare her sonne. For thus sayth the Lord. Am I he that maketh other to beare, and beare not my selfe? Am not I he that beareth and maketh baren: saith the gode. I reioyce with Jerusalem, and be glad with her, all ye that loue her.

We ioyefull with her, all ye that mourned for her. For ye shall such comforte out of her breastes: and be satisfied. Ye shall taste, and haue delecte in the plenteousnes of her power.

For thus sayeth the Lord: beholde, I will let peace into her, like a waterflood, and the mighte of the Heben lyke a flowing streame. Then shall ye such, ye shalbe borne vpon her shoulders, and be ioyefull vpon her knees.

For like as a child is comforted of his mother, so shall I comfort you, and ye shalbe comforted in Jerusalem. And when ye see this, your heart shal reioyce, and your bones shall flourish like an herbe. Thus shall the hande of

with an other, then the question is: should he resort vnto her any more after that? Is not this fildes then despyled and vnclean? • But as for thee, thou hast played the harlot with many louers: yet turne agayne to me, saith the Lord. Lift vp thine eyes vnto the hilantes, and looke, yf thou be not despyled with whozedom. Thou hast wayted for theym in the streetes, as a murderer in the wildernesse. Thou rowe thy whozedom and shameful blasphemies is the lande despyled.

2.re.16 a • This is the cause that the rayne and evening dew hath ceased. Thou hast gotten thee an whozes sozeheade, and wylte not be ashamed. Els wouldest thou saye vnto me: • O my father, thou art he that haste brought me vp, & led me fro my yowth. Wilt thou then put me away, and cast me of for euer? O: wilt thou withdraue thy selfe cleane fro me? • Neuerthelesse, thou speakest such wordes, but thou art euer doyng worse and worse. • The Lord said also vnto me: in the tyme of Iosiah the king: hast thou seene what y rebellion Israel hath done: how she hath runne vp, vpon all the hilles, and among all the thicke trees, & there played the harlot: hast thou seene also (when she had doone all this) how I saide vnto her: that she should turne agayne vnto me, & yet she is not returned? • Iuda that vnfaithful sister of hers also saw this Namely, that after I had well seene the aduouty of the shrinking harlot Israel: • I put her away, and gaue her a bill of deuozement. For all this, her vnfaithfull sister Iuda was not ashamed, but went backe, and playeth the whoze also: Yea, and the noyse of her whozedom hath defiled the whole land. For she hath committed fornication with stones and stockes. Neuerthelesse, her vnfaithfull sister Iuda is not turned vnto me agayne with her whole heart, but fainedly saith the Lord. And the Lord saide vnto me: • The bakelider Israel is more righteous, then the vnfaithfull Iuda: and therefore go preache these wordes towarde the North, and say: Thou disobedient Israel, turne agayne (sayeth the Lord) and I will not let my wrath fall vpon you. I am mercifull sayeth the Lord) and I will not awayne • beare displeasure agaynst thee: but this I will, that thou knowe the great blasphemy. Namely, that thou hast vnfaithfully forsaken the Lord thy God, and hast made thy selfe partaker of strange goddes. vnder all greene trees, but haste had no will to heare my voyce, sayeth the Lord. • O ye disobedient childzen, turne agayne sayeth the Lord, and I will be married with you. For I will take one out of the citie, and two out of one generation, from among you, and brynge you into Shion: and will geue you herden after mine owne minde, which shall feede you with learning and wisdom. Moreover, when ye be increased and multiplied in the lande, then (sayeth the Lord) there shall no more be made of the Ark of the Lords testament: for man shall thinke vpon it, neyther shall any man make mention of it: for from thenceforth, it shall neyther be visited, nor honored with giftes. • Then shall Ierusalem be called the Lordes seate, and all heathen shall be gathered vnto it: for the name of the Lordes sake, which shall be set vp at Ierusalem. And from that tyme forth, they shall folowe no more the imagination of theyr owne frowarde heart. Then those that be of the house of Iuda shall go vnto the house of Israel: • and they shall come together out of the North, into the same lande that I haue geuen your fathers. I haue shewed also how I toke thee vp bring but a childe, & gaue thee a pleasant land for thine heritage: yea and a goodly host of the heathen, and how I commaunded thee, that thou shouldst call me father onely, and not to shynke fro me. But yke as a woman vnfaithfullie sayeth her husbande, so are ye vnfaithfull vnto me, (O ye house of Israel) saith the Lord. • And therefore the voyce of the childzen of Israel was heard on hye, sweeping and wayling: for they haue defiled their waye, and forgotten god & their Lord. O ye disobedient children, tourne agayne, ſayinge: Lo, we are thine: for thou art the Lord our God:

They crye: murder vpon murder, the whole lande shall peresh. Immediately, my tentes were destroyed, and my hanginges in the twinking of an eye. Howe longe shall I see the tokens of warre, and heare the noise of the trompettes? Nevertheless this shall come vpon them, • because my people is become foolish, and hath not knownen me. • They are the children of foolishnes, and without any discretion. To doo euill, they haue wit ynough: but to do well, they haue no wisdom. I haue looked vpon the earth, and see: it was wast and boide.
I looked towarde heauen, and it had noo shine. I behelde the mountaynes, and lo, they trembled, and all the hilles wer in a feare. I looked about me, and there was no body, and all the birdes of the ayre wer away. I marked well, and the plowed fiede was become waste: yea, all their Cities were broken downe at the presence of the Lord, and indignatio of his wrath.
For thus hath the Lord sayde: The whole lande shalbe desolate, yet will I not then haue done. And therefore shal the earth mourne, and the heauen be sope abone: for the thinge that I haue spoken to the Prophetes, pur-posed, and taken vpon mee to do, shall not repent me, and I wil not go from it. The whole lande shall flee, for the noise of the horsemen and bowemen: they shall runne into tents, into woddes, and clime vpon the stonpe rocks.
All the Cities shall be voyde, and no man dwelling therein. What wilte thou nowe do, thou being destroyed?
• For though thou clothest thy selfe with scarlette, and deckest thee with golde: • though thou payntest thy face with colours nowe, yet shalte thou trim thy selfe in bayne. For those that hitherto haue bene thy great fauourers, shall abhorre thee, and go about to slaye thee. For I heare a noise lyke as it were of a woman trauailing, or one labouring of her first childe: Crie the voyce of the daughter Sion, that casteth out her arme, and swooneth saying: Ah ah wo is me, howe soe her ed, and saynt is my heart, for I am of the murderers?

The .v. Chapter.

Looke through Ierusalem, be-holde and see: Seeke through her streetes also within, if ye can finde one man that doeth equal and right, or seeketh for the truth, and I shall spare that Citie (sayeth the Lord). • For though they can saye, the Lord is with vs, yet do they sweare to disceine. Where as thou (O Lord, look kest once vpon faith and truth.
Thou hast scourged them, but they tooke no repentance: thou hast corrected them for amendement, but they refused thy correction. They made their faces harder then a stone, and would not amend. Therefore I thought in my selfe: peradventure they are so simple and foolish, that they vnder-stand nothing of the Lords waye, and iudgements of our God. • Therefore will I go vnto their heades and rulers, and talke with them: if they knowe the waye of the Lord, and the iudgements of our God. But this (in like maner) haue broken the yoke and burst the bondes in sunder.

• Wherefore, a Lion out of the woods hath hurt the, and a wolfe in the euening shall destroye them. The Leopard doth lye lurking by their cities, to teare in pieces all them that come thereout. For their offences are mul-tipled, and their departing away is increased. Should I then for all this haue mercy vpon thee? Thy children haue forsaken me, and • sworn by the that are no goddes. And albeit that I fed them to the full, yet they fail to aduoury, and haunt harlots houses.
In the desire of vncleanly lusts they are become like the stoned horse. • Eu-ery man neieth at his neighbors wife:

unfaythfully hath the house of Israel and Iuda forsaken me, sayeth the Lord. They haue denied the Lord, and sayd: it is not he that loketh vpon vs. • And there shal no mistofune come vpon vs, we shal see nether sword nor hunger. • As for the warning of the Prophetes they take it but for winde, yea, there is none of these which will tell them, that suche thinges shall happen vpon them. Wherefore, thus saith the Lord God of hostes: because ye speake such wordes, beholde: • The wooddes that are in thy mouth will I turne to fyre, and make the people to be wood, that the fyre may consume them. • Lo, I will bring a people vpon you from farre, a house of Israel (sayth the Lord) a myghty people, an olde people, a people whose speache thou knowest not, neither vnderstandest what they say. Their arrowes are sodayne death: yea, they them selues be very giantes. This people shall eate by thy fruite and thy meate, yea, they shall deuoure thy sonnes and thy daughters, thy sheepe and thy bullockes. They shall eate vppon thy grapes and figges, As for thy strong and well defended Cities wherein thou diddest trust, they shall bring to pouertie, and that thorough the sword. Neuerthelesse, I will not then haue doone with you, sayth the Lord. But if they say: wherfore doth the Lord our God all this vnto vs? • Then aunswere them: • because that like as ye haue forsake me, and serued strange goddes in your owne lande, even so shall ye serue other goddes also in a strange lande. Speaeth this vnto the house of Jacob and cry it out in Iuda, and saye thus: Heare this (thou foliſhe & vndiscrete people) • ye haue eyes, but ye see not: eares haue ye, but ye heare not. Feare ye not me, sayth the Lord: • For ye are not ashamed to loke me in y face? • which binde the sea with the land, so that it can not passe his bondes. • For though it rage, yet can it do nothinge, and though the waues therof do swell, yet maye they not go ouer. But this people hath a false and obstinate heart, they are departed and gone away from me. They thinke not in their hartes, • let vs leaue the Lord our god, that geueth vs rayne early and late, when neede is: which keepeth euery still the hartest for vs perely. • Neuerthelesse your misdoedes haue turned these from you, and your sinnes haue robbed you hereof. • For among my people are founde wicked persons, that pitiely laye snares and wayt for men, to take them, and destroy them. And lyke as a net is full of byrds, so are their houses full of that which they haue gotten with falschoode and disceyte. • Hereof commeth their great substance and riches, herof are they fat and welthy, and are moze mischeuous then any other. • They minister not the lawe, they make no ende of the fatherlesse cause, yea, and they prosper: yet they iudge not the poore accordinge to equitie. • Should not I punishe these thinges, sayth the Lord? should not I be auenged of all suche people as these be? Horrible and greuous thinges are done in the lande. The Prophetes teache falsely, and the priestes receyue gyftes, and my people hath pleasure therein: what will come therof at the last?

The. viij. Chapter.

These are the wordes that God spake vnto Jeremie, sayinge: Stande vnder the gate of the Lordes house, and crie out these wordes there, with a loude voyce, and say: Heare the wordes of the Lord alpe of Iuda that go in at the doore, to wooshp the Lord. Thus sayth the Lord of hostes, the God of Israell.

I mend your wayes and your counceils, and I will let you dwell in this place. Trust not in false lying woordes, sayinge: here is the temple of the Lord, here is the temple of the Lord. But rather in dede amend your wayes in counceils, and iudge righte betwixt a man and his neighbour: oppresse not the stranger, the fatherlesse, and the widow: shed not innocent blood in this place, cleane not to strange Goddesses to your owne destruction: then will I let you dwell in this place, yea in the lande that I gaue afoze time vnto your fathers for euer. But take hede, ye trust in lying tales that begyle you and do no good. For when ye haue stolen, murdered, committed aduouty, and perurie: when ye haue offered vnto Baal, folowing strange and unknowen gods shall ye be unpunished: Yet then come ye, and stand befoze me in this house, which hath my name geuen vnto it, and say: Cuius, we are absolved quite, though we haue done al these abominations. What thinke you this house that beareth my name, is a den of thieues? And yet I see what you thinke, sayth the Lord. Go to my place in Siloh, wher vnto I gaue my name afoze time, and looke well. What I did to the same place for the wickednes of my people of Israel. And now though ye haue done all these dedes, (sayth the Lord) & I my selfe rose vp euer betimes to warne you & to come with you, yet would ye not heare me. Pro. 1.2

I called, ye would not answer. And Esa. 65b therefore, .euen as I haue done vnto Siloh, so will I doo to this house, that my name is geuen vnto (and that ye put your trust in) yea vnto y place that I haue geuen to you, and your fathers. And I shall thrust you oute of my sight, as I haue caste out all your brethren the whole seide of Ephraim. Therefore thou shalt not pray for this people, thou shalt nether geue thanks, nor bid prayer for them: thou shalt make no intercession to me for them, for in no wise will I heare thee. Seest thou not what they do in the Cities of Iuda, and in the strettes of Ierusalem? The children gather sticks, the fathers kinde the fyre, the women kneade the dowghe to bake cakes for the queene of heauen. They poure out drinke offerings vnto strange goddesses, to prouoke me vnto wrath. Howbeit they hurte not me (sayth the lord) but rather confound, and shame them selues. And therefore thus sayth the Lord God, behold, my wrath & my indignation shalbe poured oute vpon this place, vpon men and cattel, vpon the trees of the field, and fruite of the lande, and it shall burne so that no man may quench it. Thus sayth the Lord of hostes, the God of Israell: Heape vppc your burnt offerings with youre sacrifices, and eate the fleshe. For when I broughte your fathers oute of Egypt, I spake no word vnto them of burnt offerings and sacrifices: but this I commaunded them, saying: hearken and obey my voice, & I shall be your god, and ye shalbe my people: so that ye walke in all the wayes which I haue commaunded you, that ye may prosper. But they were not obediēt, they enclined not their eares ther vnto, but went after their owne ymaginations, and after the motions of their owne wicked heart, and so turned them selues a way, & conuerted not vnto me. And this haue they done, from the time that your fathers

I came out of Egypte, vnto this daye.
Jer. 25. a. • Neuerthelesse, I sente vnto you, all

Eze. 16 d • The viij. Chapter.
At the same time sayeth the Lord, the bones of the kinges of Iuda, the bones of his princes, the bones of the priestes and prophets, yea, and the bones of the citizens of Ierusalem, shalbe brought out of their graues and layde againe the • Sunne, the Moone and all the heauenlye hostes: whom they loved, whom they serued, whom they ransomed, whom they soughte and woo-shipped. They shal neyther be gather-red together nor buried, but shal lye as dong vpon the earth, to their shame and despising. • And all they that re-mayne of this wicked generation, shal desire rather to dye then to liue, wherfore they remayne, and wher-as I scattered them, sayth the Lord of hostes. This shalt thou say vnto the also. Thus saith the Lord: Do men fall so, that they arysle not by agayne?

O yf Irael repent, will not God turne againe to them? Wherfore then is this people and Ierusalem gone so far backe, that they turne not againe?
They are euer the longer the more obstinate, and will not be conuerted.
• For I haue looked, and considered: but there is no man that speaketh a good worde: there is no man that tak-eth repentance for his sinne, that will so much as say: wherfore haue I done this? But every man (as soone as he is turned backe) runneth forth still, like a wilde horse in a battayle.
The stocke in the ayre knoweth his appointed time, the Turtle doue, the Swallow and the Crane consider the time of their trauell, • but my people will not know the time of the punishment of the Lord. How dare ye saye then, we are wise, we haue the lawe of the Lord among vs? Cruthe in vayne hath he prepared his penne, and vaine haue the writers written it, therefore shal the wise be confounded, they shalbe afrayde and taken: for so, • they haue cast out the wordes of the Lord: what wise dome can then be among them? Wherfore, I will geue their voices vnto alecantes, and their fieldes to destroyers. • For from the lowest vnto the highest, they folowe all filthy lucre: and from the prophets vnto the priestes, they deale all with lyes. • Neuerthelesse, they heale the hurts of my people byge slenderlye sayng

laying: peace, peace, where there is no peace at all. Eye for shame, howe ab= horrible thinges do they? and yet they be not ashamed, yea they knowe of no shame. • Wherefore in the time of their visitation, they shal fall among the dead bodies, and be overthrowen wth the sword. • Moreover, I will consume them in deede (sayeth the Lorde) so that there shall not be one grape vpon the vyne, neither one fig vpon the figge tree, and the leaues shal be pluckt off. And the thing that I haue geuen them shall be taken from them: whye prolonge we the time? Lette vs gather oure selues together, and goe into the stronge Citye, there shall we be in rest.
For the Lorde oure God hath put vs to silence, and geuen vs water mixt with gall, to drinke: because we haue sinned agaynst him. • We looked for peace, and we fare not the better: we waited for the time of healthe, and lo, here is nothing but trouble. The people of his horses is afrayde at the noyng of his stronge horses, for they are come in, and haue deuoured the lande, with all that is in it: the ci= ties, and those that dwell therein.
• Moreover, I will sende Cocka= trices and Serpentes amonge you.
(whiche will not be charmed) and they shal bite you, sayeth the Lorde.
I woulde haue had comforte against sorowe: but sorowe is come vpon me, and heauynesse vexeth my heart: for lo the voyce of the crying of my peo= ple is heard for feare of them, that come from a farre countrey. Is not the Lorde in Sion? Is not the Kinge in her? wherefore then haue they griued me (shall the Lorde say) with their ymages and foolish strange fashions of a fozeyne God? The har= ueste is gone, the Summer hath an ende, and we are not helped. I am sore vexed, because of the hurt of my people. I am heauye and abashed, is there no triacle at Gilead? Is there no Physicion there? why then is not the health of my people recouered?

Who will geue my head wa= ter ynough, and a well of tea= res for mine eyes, that I maye swepe night and day, for the slaughter of my people? wold God, that I had a cotage some where farre from folke, that I might leaue my people, and go from them: for they be al aduouters, & a shrinking sorte. They bende their tonges like bowes, to shoote out lyres, They wake stronge vpon earth. Is for the trueth, they maye nothinge a= wayne with all the worlde. For they go from one wickednes to another: and wil not knowe me, saith the Lorde.

• Yea, one must kepe himselfe from a= nother, no man may safely truste his owne brother: for one brother vnder= mineth another, one neighbour begi= neth another. Yea one dissembleth wth another, and they dele with no trueth.

• They haue practised their tongues to lye, & taken great paynes to do mis= chiefe. Thou sittest in the middes of a disceitful people, which for very dis= sembling falshed, will not knowe me sayth the Lorde. Therefore thus sayth the Lorde of hostes: Behold, I will melte them, and trye them: for what should I els do to my people? Their tongues are like sharp arrows, to speke disceate. With their mouth they speke peaceably to their neighbour, but pri= uily they lay wait for him. • Should

I not punishe them for these thinges sayth the Lorde? Or should I not be auenged of any such people as this? vpon the mountains will I take vp a lamentation and a sorowful cry, and a mourning vpon the sayre playnes of the wilderness. Namely, how they are so bzente vpye, that no man goeth there any moze. Yea, a man shall not heare one beaste crye there. Birdes and cattell are all gone frome thence.
I will also make Ierusalem, an heape of stones, and adenne of bene=

But whose will reioyce, let him reioyce in this, that he vnderstandeth and knoweth me: for I am the Lord which do mercy, equitie and righteousness vpon the earth. ¶ Therfore, haue I pleasure in such thinges, sayth the Lord. Beholde, the time commeth (sayth the Lord) that I will visite all them, whose foreskinne is vncircumcised. The Egyptians, the Iewes, the Edomites, the Ammonites, the Moabites, and the shanen Moabianites, that dwell in the wilderness. For all the Gentiles are all vncircumcised in the flesh, but all the house of Israel are vncircumcised in the heart.

The .x. Chapter.

¶ Heare the worde of the Lord that he speaketh vnto thee, O thou house of Israel. Thus sayth the Lord. Ye shall not learne after the maner of the heathen, and ye shall not be afrayde for the tokens of heauen: for the heathen are afraid of suche: yea, all the customes and lawes of the Gentiles are nothing, but vanitie. They hewe downe a tree in the wood with the handes of the workeman, and fashion it with the axe: they couer it ouer with golde or siluer, they fasten it with nayles and hammers, that it moue not. It standeth as stiffe as the palme tree, it can neither speake nor go on fote, but muste be bozne. Be not afrayde of such, for they can do neyther good nor euil. But ther is none like vnto thee, O Lord, and great is the name of thy power. Who wold not feare thee? O king of the gentils, for thine is dominion. For among al the wise men of the gentils, and in al their kingdoms, ther is none that may be likened vnto thee. They are altogether vnlearned & vnwise in this one thing. All their cunning is but vanity: namely wood, silver, which is brought out of Tharsis, and beaten to plates: and gold frō true God, a liuing God, and an euerlasting king. • If he be wrothe, the earth shaketh: al the Gentils may not abide his indignation. • Is for they spredde out my tente, or to sette by my hangings. For the heardemen haue doone foolishly that they haue not sought the Lord. Therefore, haue they dealt vnwisely with their cattell, and all are scattered abroad. Behold, the noise is hard at hand, and great sedition out of the north: to make the cities of Iuda, a wilderness, and a dwelling place for Dragons. • Nowe I know (O Lord) that it is not in mans power to order his owne wayes, or to rule his owne steppes and goynges. • Therefore, chasten thou vs, O Lord, but with fauour, & not in thy wrath: bryn vs not bitterly to naught. Pour out thine indignation rather vpon the Gentiles, that know thee not, & vpon the people y call not on thy name. And that because they haue consumed, destroyed and destroyed Iacob, and haue made his habitation wast.

The xi. Chapter.

This is an other Sermon, whiche

Mat. 7. b
Ro. 11. e

For the Lord of Hostes that planted thee, hath deuised a plague for thee (O thou house of Israel and Iuda) for the euill that ye haue done to prouoke him to wrath, in that ye did seruite vnto Baal. Thus (O Lord) haue I learned of thee, to vnderstande it, for thou hast shewed me their imaginatōs. • But I am (as a meke lambe, an oxe) that is caried away to be slayne, not knowinge that they had deuised such a counsell against me, saying: We will destroy his meate with wodde, and dye him out of the land of the liuing, that his name shall neuer be thought vpon. Therefore, • I will beseeche thee now (O Lord of hostes) thou righteous iudge, thou that triest the reines and the hertes: let me see thee auenged of them, for vnto thee haue I comitted my cause. • The lord therefore spake thus of the citizens of Bathan, that thought to slea me, saying: • preach not vnto vs in the name of the Lord, or els thou shalt dye of our handes. Thus (I say) spake the Lord of hostes. Beholde, I will visite you. Your yonge men shall perishe with the swerde, your sonnes and your daughters shall bitterly dye of hunger, so that none shal remayne. For vpon the Citizens of Bathan will I bringe a plague, euen the pere of their visitation.

The .xij. Chapter.

O Lord, thou art moze righteous, then that I should dispute with thee. Neuerthelesse, lette me talke with thee in thinges reasonable. Howe happened it, that the swaye of the vngodlye is so prosperous: and that it goeth so well with them, which without any shame offend and line in wickednes? • Thou plantest theym, they take roote, they growe and bring forth fruite. They boast much of thee, yet art thou farre from theym reynes. But thou Lord (to whom I am well known) thou that haste seene and proued my heart, take them awaye, lyke as a floche is carped to the slaughter house, and appoint them for the day of slaughter. How long shall the land mourn

Jer. 14. and all the herbes of the field perish, for the wickednes of them that dwell therin. The cattell and the birdes are gone, yet say they tush, . God will

Jer. 19. not destroye vs utterly. Seeing thou art weary in running with the foote

Jer. 1. men, how wilt thou runne with horses? In a peacible sure land thou maist be safe, but how wilt thou do in the furious pride of Iordane: For thy brother and thy kindred haue altogether despised thee, and cryed out vpon Jer. 9. thee in thine absence. . Beleue them not, though they speake saye wordes to thee. As for me (I say) I haue forsaken mine owne dwelling place, and Jer. 19. left mine heritage. My life also that I loue so well, haue I geuen into the handes of mine enemyes. . Mine heritage is become vnto me, as a lion in the wood. It cryed out vpon me, therfore haue I forsake it. Mine heritage is vnto me, as a speckled birde, a bird of diuers colours is vpon it, Come, and gather ye together all the Jer. 1. beasts of the field. Come that ye may cate it vp. . Diuers herdmen haue Jer. 1. broke downe my . vineyard, and troden vpon my position. Of my pleasant position, they haue made a wilderness and desert. They haue layde it waste:

and nowe it is waste, it sigheth vnto me. Yea, the whole lande lyeth waste, and no man regardeth it. The destroyers come ouer the heath euery waye:

for the sword of the Lord doth consume from the one ende of the land to the other, and no flesh hath rest. They haue sowne wheate, and reaped thornes.

They haue taken heritage in possession, but it doth them no good.

And the Prophetes were ashamed of your fruites, because of the greates

Jer. 1. wrath of the Lord. Thus sayth the Lord vpon all mine euil neighbours, that lay hand on mine heritage, which I haue possessed, euen my people of Israel. Behold, I will plucke them (namely Israel) out of their lande, and put out the house of Iuda, from amonge them. . And when I haue cutt them out, I will be at one with them agayne, and I will haue mercy

Jer. 1. vpon them, and bring them agayne, e- uery man to his owne heritage, and into his lande. And yf they (name- ly, that trouble my people) wil learne the wayes of them, to sweare by my name: The Lord lieth (like as they learned my people to sweare by Baal) then shall they be reckned among my people. But yf they will not obey, then will I roote out the same folke, and destroye them, saith the Lord.

The .xij. Chapter.

Thus sayth the Lord vnto me: go thy way, and get me a lynn-en breeche, and gird it about thy loynes, and lette it not be sweete,

Then I got me a breeche, accordinge to the commaundement of the Lord, and putte it about my loynes. After this, the seconde time, the Lord spake vnto me agayne: Take the breeche that thou hast prepared, and putte aboute thee, and get thee vp, and go vnto Euphrates, and hide it in a hole of the Jer. 1. rocke. So went I, and hid it at Euphrates, as the Lord commaunded me.

And it happened long after this, that the Lord spake vnto mee: Arise and get thee to Euphrates, and sette the breeche from thence, which I commaunded thee to hide there. Then went I to Euphrates, and digged vp, and toke the breeche from the place where I had hid it: and behold, the breeche was corrupt, so that it was profitable for nothing. Then sayde the Lord vnto me: Thus sayth the Lord, euen so will I corrupt the pride of Iuda, and the hye mind of Ierusalem. This people is a wicked people, . they will

Jer. 7. not heare my worde, they folowe the wicked imaginations of their owne and, 19. heart, and hange vpon strange gods, them they serue and worshippe: and therfore they shall be as this breeche that serueth for nothinge. . For as straitlye as a breeche lyeth vpon a mannes loynes, so straitly did I bind the whole house of Israel, and the whole house of Iuda vnto me, sayth

Deu. 4. c the Lord, that they might be my people: that they might haue a glorious name: that they might be in honour: but they woulde not obey me. Therefore laye this riddle befoze them, and say: Thus saith the Lord God of Israel: Euerye pot shalbe filled with wine. And they shall say: thinkest thou, we knowe not, that euerye pot shalbe filled with wine? Then shalt thou say vnto them. Thus sayth the Lord: Beholde, I shall fill all the inhabiteurs of this land with drunkennes, the kinges that sit vpon Dauids stole, the priestes and prophetes, with all that dwell at Jerusalem. And I will set them one against another, yea the fathers against the sonnes, sayeth the Lord. I will not pardon them, I wil not spare them, nor haue pitie vpon them, but destroy them. Be obedient, geue eare, take not disdayne at it, for it is the Lord himselfe that speaketh. Honour the Lord your God herein, or he take his light from you, and or euer your fete stumble in darkness at the hill: least when ye looke for the light, he turne it into the shadowe and darkenes of death. But if ye will not heare me, that geue you secreete warninge, I will mourne from my whole heart for your Subbournes.

Jer. 31 c. •ditionally will I wepe, and the teares shall gush out of mine eyes. For the Lordes flocke shalbe caried awaye captiue. Cel the king and the queene: Humble your selues, set you downe lowe, for your dignitie shalbe throwne downe, and the crowne of your glory shall fall vpon your head. The cities toward the South shalbe shutte vp, and no man shall open them. All Iuda shalbe caried awaye captiue, so that none shall remayne. Lift vp your eyes and behold them, that come from the North, where is the flocke (O thou land) that was geue thee. And where are thy fat and riche sheepe. • To who wilte thou make thy mone, when the enemye shall come vpon thee: for thou hast taught them thy selfe, and made them masters ouer thee. Shal not so we come vpon thee, as on a woman trauailing with childe? And yet thou wouldest saye then in thine heart: Wherefoze come these thinges vpon mee? • Euen for the multitude of thy blasphemies, shall thy hinder parties and thy feete bee discovered. For lyke as a man of Inde maye change his skinne, and the cat of the mountayne her spottes: so maye ye that be exercised in euill, do good. Therefore will I scare them, like as the strubble that is taken away with the Southwinde. This shalbe your portion, and the portion of your measure, wherewith ye shalbe rewarded of me, sayth the Lord: because ye haue forgott me and put your trust in deceitfull thinges. • Therefore shall I turne thy clothes ouer thy heade, and discover thy thigh, that thy vniustices may be seene, thy aduoutie, thy deadely malice, thy beastlynes, and thy shamefull whoredome. For vpon the fieldes and hilles I haue sene thy adominations. We be vnto thee (O Jerusalem) when wilt thou euer be clenched any more?

The xiiij. Chapter.

The word of the Lord shewed vnto Jeremie, concerninge the dearth of the fruits. Iuda hath mourned, his gates are desolate: (they are desolate) they are brought to heauyness euen vnto the ground, and the crye of Jerusalem goeth vp. The Lordes sent their seruantes to fetch water, and when they came to the welles, they did finde no water, but caried their vessels home emptye. They be ashamed & confounded, and couer their heades. • For the ground is dried vp, because there cometh no rayne vpon it. The plowmen also be ashamed, and couer their heades. The winde also forsooke the sponge sawne that he brought forth in the field, because there was no grasse. The wilde fowles did stand in the hye places, and dyewe in their wind like the diags, their eyes did fayle for want of grasse. Doubtes, our owne wickednes doth reward vs. But Lord do thou, according to thy name, though our transgressions one and sinnes be many, and agaynst 14.19 b they haue we sinned. • For thou arte the comfort and helpe of Israel in the time of trouble. Why wilt thou be as a stranger in the lande, and as one that goeth ouer the fildes, and commeth in onely to remayne for a nighte? Whye wilt thou make thy self a coward, and as it were a gyaunte that yet may not helpe? For thou (O Lord) art in the midst of vs, and thy name is called vpon of vs, forsake vs not. Thus hath the Lord sayd vnto this people: seying they haue had suche a luste to wander abroade, and haue not refrayned their fete, and therfore displeased the Lord, but he will no more bying agayne to re= membraunce all their misdeedes, and punishe all their synnes. Yea, euen 14.7. b thus saide the Lord vnto me. • Thou shalt not pray to do this people good.

 14.1. h. • For though they faste, I will not heare their prayers, and though they offer burntofferings and sacrifices, I yet wil not I accept them. For I wil destroy them with the sword, hunger and pestilence. Then answered I: O 14.1. d Lord God, • the prophetes saue vnto 14.1.2 a them: Cushe, ye shall • nede to feare no sword, and no hunger shal come vpon you, but the Lord shall geue you continuall rest in this place. And the Lord sayde vnto me: The prophetes 14.33. b preache ypes in my name, where as I haue not • sente them, neyther gaue I them anye charge, neyther didde I sprake vnto them: yet they preach vnto you false visions, charming, vanitie, disceatefulness of their owne hearte.
 Therefore thus saith the Lord. As for those Prophetes that preache in my name (whom I neuertheles haue not sent) and that say: Cushe there shal no 14.14. a swerde nor hunger be in this lande, • with swerde and with hunger, shall those prophetes perishe, and the people to whom they preache shall be cast out of Ierusalem, dye of hunger, 14.16. a and be slaine with the swerde, • (and there shalbe no man to burye them) both they and their wiues, their sons and their daughters. For thus will I pourte their wickednes vpon them,

This shalt thou saue also vnto them. D Myne eyes shall weepe withoute ceassing day and night: For my peo= ple shal be destroyed with great harm, and shal perishe with a great plague.
 For yf I go into the fild, lo, it lyeth all full of slayne men. If I come in= to the citie, lo, they be all famished of hunger. Yea their Prophetes also and priestes shalbe led into an vnknown land. Wilt thou then bitterly forsaken Iuda: Doe st thou not abhorre Stone?
 O halbe thou so plagued vs, that we can be healed no more. • We looked for 14.8. f peace, and there commeth no good: for the time of healthe, and lo, here is no= thing but trouble. We knowledg, O Lord, all our misdeedes, and the sin= nes of our fathers, that we haue of= fended thee. We not displeased, (O Lord) for thy names sake, • forget not thy louing kyndnes. Remember the throne of thine honour, bryake not the couenaunt that thou hast made with vs. • Are there any among the gods of the Gentiles: that send rayne, or geue the showres of heauen? Or may the heauens drop rayne without thy com= maundement? Doe st not thou it, O Lord our God, in whom we trust: Yea Lord, thou dost al these thinges.

Cher. x. Chapter.

Then spake the Lord vnto me:
 • Though Moses and Samu= 14.7. b ell stood before me, yet haue I 14.14. c no heart to this people. Dzyne them a waye, that they maye go out of my sighte. And yf they saue vnto thee: whither shall we go? then tell them:
 The Lord geueth you this aunswere.
 • Some vnto death, some to the sword some to hunger, some into captiuitie.
 For I will bying foure plagues vpon them, sayth the Lord. The sword shall slaye them, the dogges shal teare them in peeces, • the foules of the ayre and beastes of the earth, shal eate them vpon, & destroy them, I wil scatter them about also in all kingdoms & landes to be plagued, because of • Manasseh the

Who shall then haue pittie vpon thee, O Ierusalem: who shall be sorre for thee: or who shall make intercession, to obtayne peace for thee: seeing thou goest fro me, and turnest backeward, sayeth the Lord: therefore, I didde stretch out mine hande agaynst thee, to destroy thee, & I haue ben sorre for thee so long, that I am wery. I haue scattered them abroade with the same on euery syde of the lande. • I haue wasted my people, and destroyed theym. Yet they haue had no luste to turne fro their owne waies. I haue made their widowes more in number, then the sandes of the sea. Upon the mothers of their childzen did I bring a destroyer in the noone daye. • Sodenly and vnawares did I send a fear vpo their cities. She that hath borne seuen childzen hath none, her heart is full of sorowe. • The Sunne doeth sayle her in the cleare daye, she is confounded and sayntie for very heuynesse. As for those that remayne, I will deliuer the vnto the sword before their enemies, sayth the Lord. • A mother, alas that euer thou diddest beare me, a brasler & rebuker of the whole land. Though I neuer lente nor receaued vpon blespe, yet all men speake euill vpon me. And the Lord answered me: Merely thy remnaunte shall haue welthe. Come not I to thee, when thou art in trouble, and helpe thee, when thine enemy oppresseth thee? Doeth one prou hurt another, or one metall that commeth from the North, another?

And the Lord answered me: Merely thy remnaunte shall haue welthe. Come not I to thee, when thou art in trouble, and helpe thee, when thine enemy oppresseth thee? Doeth one prou hurt another, or one metall that commeth from the North, another? As for thy riches and treasure, I will geue them out into a pray, not for any money, but because of al thy sins, that thou hast done in all thy coastes. And I will bring thee with thyne enemies into a lande, that thou knowest not: for the fyre that is kindled in my indignation, shall burne you vp. O Lord thou knowest, therefore remember me, and visyte me, deliuer me fro my persecutours. Take me not from this lyfe in the time of the longe patience, thou knowest, that for thy sake I suffer rebuke. • When I had found thy wordes, I did eate them vp greedily: they haue made my heart full and glad. For thy name was called vpon me, O Lord God of hostes, I dwell not among the scoyners, neither is my delite therein: but I dwell onely in the feare of thy hand, for thou hast fylled me with bitterness. Shall my heauynesse endure for euer: Are my plagues then so great, that they may neuer be healed? Wilt thou be as one that is false, and as a water, that filleth, and can not continue? Upon these wordes thus saide the Lord vnto me: If thou wilt turne agayne, I will sette thee in my seruice: and if thou wilt take out the thinges that are precious from the vile, thou shalt be euen as myne owne mouth. • They shall conuert vnto thee, but turne not thou vnto them: and so shall I make thee a stronge brasen wall against this people. • They shall fighte agaynst thee, but they shall not preuaile. For I my selfe will be with thee, to helpe thee, and deliuer thee, sayth the Lord. And I will rid thee out of the handes of the wicked, and deliuer thee out of the handes of tiraantes.

The .xvi. Chapter.

Thus sayde the Lord vnto me. Thou shalt take thee no wyfe, nor beget childzen in this place. For of the childzen that are borne in this place, of their mothers that haue borne them, and of their fathers that haue begotten them in this land, thus saith the Lord. They shal dye an horrible death, • no man shall mourne for them nor burie them, but they shall lye as donge vpon the earth. They shall peryshe thorow the sword and hunger, • and theyr bodies shall be meate for the foules of the ayre, and beastes of the earth. For thus sayeth the Lord: So not thou in vnto them, nor come to mourne & wepe for them: for I haue taken my peace from this people (sayth the Lord) yea my favour and my mercy. And in this lande shall they dye, old and yonge, and shall not be buried: no man shall beweepe them, no man shall clippe or shawe him selfe for them, & here shall not one blyssed another, to mourne with them for theyr deade, as to comfort them. One shall not offer another the cup of consolation, to forget their heauynesse for father and mother. • Thou shalt not go into their feast house, to sit downe, to eate or drinke with them. For thus sayth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel: • Behold, I shall take away out of this place, the voyce of myrrh and gladnes, the voyce of the bydegroue and of the byde: yea, and that in your daies, that ye may see it. Now when thou shewest this people all these wordes, and they say vnto thee: wherefore hath the Lord deuised all this great plague for vs? What is the offence and synne, that we haue done against the Lord our God? He make thou them this answer: • Because your fathers haue forsaken mee (sayth the Lord) and haue walked after strange gods, whom they haue honoured and worshipped: but mee haue they forsaken, and haue not kept my lawe. • And ye with your shamesfull blaspheming, haue exceeded the wickednes of your fathers, for euery one of you haue folowed the forehead and full ymaginations of his owne heart, and is not obedient vnto me.

 • Therefore will I cast you out of this land, into a lande that ye and your fathers knowe not: and there shall ye serue strange gods daye and night, there will I shewe you no fauoure.
 • Beholde therefore (sayth the Lord) the dayes are come, that it shall no more be hyde: the Lord knoweth, whiche broughte the children of Israel out of the lande of Egypt: but it shall be sayd, the Lord knoweth, that broughte the children of Israel from the North, and from all landes where he had scattered them. For I will bring them againe into the land, that I gaue vnto their fathers. Beholde (sayth the Lord) I will send out many spiers to take them; and after that will I send out many hunters to hunt them out from all mountaynes and hilles, and out of the croues of stone. For mine eyes behold all their wayes, and they can not be hid fro my face, neither can their wicked deedes be kept close out of my sight. But first will I sufficiently reward their shamefull blasphemies and sinnes, because they haue despyled my lande: Namely with their stinking Idolles, and with the carions of their abominations, wher with they haue filled mine heritage.

 • O Lord, my strength, my power, Jer. 24 8 and refuge in tyme of trouble. The Gentiles shall come vnto thee from the endes of the worlde, and say: We reioyce our fathers haue cleaured vnto lyes, they? Idols are but bayne, and vnprofitable. How can a man make those his goddes, whiche are not able to be goddes? And therefore I will once teache them, sayth the Lord, I will shewe them my hande and my power, that they may knowe, that my name is the Lord.

The .xviij. Chapter.

Y Our sinne (O ye of the tribe of Iuda) is written in the table of your heartes, and grauen so vpon the edges of your aultern with a penne of yron, and with an adamant clawe: that as the fathers thinke vpon their children, so thinke you also vpon your aulterns, woddes, thicke trees, hye hilles, mountaynes, and fieldes. • Wherefore, I will make Jer. 15 8 my mount that standeth in the field al your substance and treasure to be spoy-led, for the great sinne that ye haue done vpon your hye places, thowout all the coastes of your land. Ye shal be caste out also from the heritage, that I gaue you. And I will subdue you vnder the heauy bondage of your enemies in a lande that ye knowe not.
 For ye haue ministered fyre to my indignation, whiche shall burne euermore. Thus sayth the Lord. • Cursed be the man that putteth his trust arme, and he, whose heart departeth Lord, ye kinges of Iuda, and all the people of Iuda, and all ye citizens of Ierusalem, that go thowoe this gate.

Thus the Lord commaundeth, • Take heede for your lyues, that you carry no burthen vpon you in the Sabbath, in bring it thowoe the gates of Ierusalem: ye shall beare no burthen alle out of your houses in the Sabbath.
Ye shall do no labour therein, but halooe the Sabbath, as I commaunded your fathers. Forsothe, they ob-eyd me not, neither hearkned they beto me: but were obstinate & stubborne and neither obeyed me, nor receyued my correction. Nevertheless, if ye will heare me (sayth the Lord) and beare no burthen into the Citie, thowoe this gate vpon the Sabbath, if ye will halowe the Sabbath, so that ye do no worke therein: then shall they goe thowoe the gates of this Citie, kinges and princes, that shall sitte vpon the throne of David: They shall be caried vpon charets, and ryde vpon horses, bothe they and theyr wantes. Yea, whole Iuda, and all the citizens of Ierusalem, shall go here thorough, and this Citie shall e-uer moore and moore be inhabited.
There shall come men also from the Cities of Iuda, from about Ieru-salem, and from the lande of Beniamin, from the playne fields, from the mountaynes, and from the wildernesse: whiche shall bring burnt offerings, sacrifices, oblations, and incense; and offer vpon the altar burning in the house of the Lord. But if ye will not be obedient vnto me, to halowe the Sabbath, so that ye will beare your burthens thowoe the gates of Ierusalem: vpon the Sa-bath: Then shall I sette fyre vpon the gates of Ierusalem; and it shall burne by the houses of Ierusalem, and no man shall be able to quench it.

The .xviii. Chapter.

This is another communication; that God had with Jeremye, sayinge: Arise, and goo downe into the Potters house, and ther shal I tel thee moze of my mind.
Nowe when I came to the Potters house, I founde him makinge his wooke vpon a wheele. The vessel that the Potter made of claye, brake amonge his handes. So he began a newe, and made another vessel accordinge to his minde. Then sayde the Lorde thus vnto me: • May not I do with you, as this Potter doth, O ye house of Israel, saith the Lorde: Be-holde, ye house of Israel, ye are in my hande, euen as the clay in the potters hande. • When I take in hande awaye any people or kingdome, • yf deuised, conuert from their wickednes: I repent of the plage, that I de-uised to bring vpon them. • Agayne, when I take in hande, to builde, or to plant a people or a kingdome: yf the same people do euill befoze me, and heare not my voyce: I repent of the good, that I deuised to doo for them: I speake nowe therfore vnto whole Iude, and to them that dwell at Jerusalem. Thus sayth the Lorde: Be-holde, I am deuising a plague for you, and am takinge a thing in hande against you. • Therfore let euerye man turne from his euill waye, take vpon you the thing that is good, and do righte. But they sayde: Rompze of this: we will folowe oure owne imaginations, and euery man ac-cordinge to the wilfulness of his owne mind. Therfore thus saith the Lorde: Behold among the brethren, if any man hath heard such horrible thinges, as I daughter of Sion hath done, shal he not lorde that melteth vpon the founte of waters of Libanus, moule the foules? Or may the springes of water be so graven awaye, that they runn awaye, geue moistnes, nor make fruitful: But my people hath so forgotten me, that they haue made sacrifice vnto bayne Goddesses. And their prophetes make theym fall in theyr wayes from the auncient pathes, and to go into a foote way not bled to be troden of iust men. Wherethronghe they haue brought their land into an euertlastinge wilderness and scozne.

• So that whosoener traueleth ther-by, shalbe abashed, and wagge their heades. With an East wind will I scatter them befoze their enemy. And when their destruction commeth, I will turne my backe vpon theym, but not my face. Then sayde they, • come, let vs imagine something against this Jeremy. For the priestes shall not be destitute of the law, neither shall the wise menne bee destitute of counsell, nor the prophetes destitute of the worde of God: Come, and let vs smite him with the tonge, and let vs marke all his wordes.
Consider me, O Lorde, and heare the voyce of mine enemyes, • shall they recompence euill for good: for they haue digged a pit for my soule. • Remember, howe that I stood befoze thee, to speake good for them, and to turne awaye thy wrath from theym.
• Therfore let their childe dye of fisger, and let them be oppressed with the sword. Let their wyues be robbed of their childezen, & becom widowes: let their hus bandes be slaine, let their younge menne bee killed with the swearde in the fiede. Let the noyle be hearde oute of their houses, when the murderer commeth sodenly vpon them. • For they haue digged a pitte to take me, and layed snares for my fete: Yet Lorde, thou knowest all their counsell, that they haue deuysed to slaye me. Forgeue not their wickednes, and let not their sinne be put out of thy sight: but let them be iudged befoze thee as the giltye. & his shalt thou do vnto them in the time of thy indignation.

THus sayde the Lord: So thy waie and bye thee an earthen pitcher, and bringe forth the Senators and chiefe priestes into the balley of the children of Menom, whiche lieth befoze the dooze that is made of brycke, and shewe them there the wordes, that I shall tell thee, and saye thus vnto them: Heare the word of the Lord ye kinges of Iuda, and ye citezens of Ierusalem. Thus saith the Lord of hostes the God of Israel. Behold, I will bring such a plague vpon this place that the eares of all that heare it shall glowe. And that because they haue forsaken mee, and vniolowed this place, and haue offered in it vnto straunge gods, who neither they, their fathers, nor the kinges of Iuda haue knowen. They haue filled this place also with the blond of innocentes, for they haue set vpon an altair vnto Baal to burne their children for a burnt offering vnto Baal, whiche I neyther commaunded nor charged them neyther thought once ther vpon. Behold therfoze, the time commeth (sayeth the Lord) that this place shall nomore be called Copheth: nor the balley of the children of Menom, but the balley of slaughter: For in this place will I slaye the Senators of Iuda and Ierusalem, and kill them downe with the sword in the sight of their enemies and of them that seeke their liues. And their dead carcasses will I geue to be meate for the foules of the ayre, and beastes of the fildes. And I will make their cite so desolate and despitied: that whoso goeth thereby, shall be abashed and leaue vpon her, because of all her plagues. I will fede them also with the flesh of their sonnes and their daughters. Yea, every one shall eate vp another in the besieginge and straighenes, wherewith their enemies (that seeke their liues) shall kepe them in. And the pitcher shalt thou bryke in the sight of the men that shall be with thee, & say vnto the. Thus saith the Lord of hostes: Euen so will I destroye this people and cite: as a man breaketh an earthen vessel, that can not be made whole againe. In Copheth shall they be buried, for they shall haue none other place. Thus will I do vnto this place also, saith the Lord, and to them that dwell therein: yea, I wil do to this cite as vnto Copheth. (For the houses of Ierusalem and the houses of the kinges of Iuda shall be defiled, like as Copheth) because of all the houses in whose parlours they did sacrifice vnto al the host of heauen, and powred vynde offerings vnto straunge goddes. And so Ieremie came from Copheth, wher the Lord had sent him to prophesie, and stood in the court of the house of the Lord, and spake to all the people. Thus saith the Lord of hostes the God of Israel: Behold I will bring vpon this cite and vpon euery town about it: all the plagues that I haue deuised against them: for they haue bene obstinate, and would not obey my warninges.

The xx. Chapter.

Vhen Shalhur the priest the sonne of Emer, chiefe in the house of the Lord, hearde Ieremye preache so steadfastly: he smote Ieremye, and put him in the stocks, that are by the bye gate of Ben Iamin, in the house of the Lord. The next day folowing Shalhur brought Ieremye oute of the stocks againe. Then sayde Ieremye vnto him: The Lord shall cal thee no more Shalhur, (that is excellent and encreasing) but Shagoz (that is fearefull and afraid) euen wher. For thus saith the Lord: beholde, I will make thee afraid, euen thy self, and al that sawe thee, which shall perishe with the sword of their enemies, euen befoze thy face, and I wil geue whole Iuda vnder the power of the king of Babylon, which shall carie some vnto Babylon prisoners, and slay some with the sword. Whoeuer all the substance of this lande, all their precious and goodly woorthes, all costliness, and al the treasure of the kinges of Iuda, will I geue into the handes of their enemies whiche shall spoyle them, and cary the vnto Babylon. But as for thee (O Iphthar) thou shalt be caried vnto Babilon, with all thine household, and to Babilon shalt thou come, where thou shalt dye, and be buried, thou and all thy fauourers, to whom thou hast preached lyes. O Lord, yf I am disceaued, then haste thou disceaued me: thou hast dealt strongly, and haste perswaded, and makest me stronge agaync. • All the daye longe am I despised, and laughed to scozne of euery man: because I haue nowe preached longe agaynst malicious tiramny, and shewed them of destruction. • For the which cause they caste the woorde of the Lord in my teeth, and take me euer to the worst. Wherefore, I thought from thenceforth, not to speake of him, nor to praye any more in his name. But the woorde of the Lord was a very burning fyre in my heart and in my bones, whiche when I wold haue stopped, I might not. For why? I heard so many de-rilious and blasphemies on euery syde of me: complayne vpon him, say they, and we will tell his tale, yea euen of mine owne companions, and suche as were conuersant with me, wente about to murder me, saying: vpon him, we shall one way or other begyle him and perswade agaynst him, and be auenged of him. But the Lord stood by me, lyke a mightie gyaunte, therefore my persecutours feil, and coulde do nothing. They shalbe soze confounded, for they haue done vnwisely, they shall haue an everlasting shame. • And nowe, O Lord of hooses, thou righteous searcher (whiche knowest the reynes and the verye heartes:) let me see them punished, for vnto thee I committe my cause.

 Hence vnto the Lord, and prayse him, for he hath deliuered the soule of the oppressed, from the hande of the violent. • Cursed be the day, wherein I was borne, unhappy be the daye wherein my mother brought me forth, Cursed be the man, that brought my father the tidinges to make him glad, saying: thou hast gotten a sonne. Let it happen vnto that man, as to the citizens. whiche the Lord turned vpside downe. Let him heare crying in the morning, and at none daye lamentable howling. Why sleepest thou not me, as sone as I came out of my mothers wombe? • That my mother had bene my greue her selfe, that the birth might not haue come out, but remayned still in her. • Wherefore came I forth of my mothers wombe?

 To haue experience of laboure and sorowe? and to leade my life with shame?

The .xxi. Chapter.

These are the wordes that the Lord spake vnto Ieremie, • What time as king Zedekiah sent vnto him, Iphthar the sonne of Melchias, and Sophonias the sonne of Maasias the priest, saying. • Aske counsell at the Lord (we pray thee) of our behalfe, for Nabuchodonosor the king of Babylon besetgeth vs, yf the Lord (peradventure) will deale with vs, according to his maruiculous power, and take him from vs. Then spake Ieremie: Geue Zedekias this answer. Thus sayth the Lord God of Israel: Beholde, I will tourne backe the weapons that ye haue in your handes, wherewith ye fighte a-gaynst the kinge of Babylon and the Caldees, whiche besiege you rounde about the walles, and I will bringe theym together into the middell of this citie, and I my selfe will fight agaynst you, with an out stretched hande, and with a mightie arme, in great displeasure and terrible wrath, and will smyte theym, that dwell in this citie: yea, both men and cattell shall dye of a great pestilence. • And after this (sayth the Lord) I shall de-liuer Zedekias the king of Iuda, and his seruantes, his people (and suche as are escaped in the citie, from the pestilence, swearde and hunger) into the power of Nabuchodonosor king of Babilon: yea, into the handes of their enemies, into the handes of those that folowe vpon their liues, whiche shall smite theym with the sword, they shall not pittie them, they shall not spare them, they shall haue no mercy vpon them. And vnto this people thou shalt saye: Thus sayeth the Lord: beholde, I laye before you the way of life and death. • Who so abydeth in this citie, shall perishe, eyther with the sword, with hunger, or with pestilence. But who so goeth out to holde on the Caldees parte, that besiege it, he shall saue his lyfe, & shall win his soule for a praye. • For I haue set my face agaynst this citie, (sayth the Lord) to plague it, and to do it no good. It muste be geuen into the hande of the king of Babilon, and be burnt with fire. And vnto the house of the king of Iuda, say thus: Heare the word of the Lord (O thou house of Dauid) for thus sayeth the Lord.

lent, doe not griene nor oppresse the stranger, the fatherlesse, nor the widow, & shed no innocent blood in this place. And yf ye keepe these thynges saythfully, then shall there come in at the doore of this house, kinges to sit vpon Dauids seate: they shall be tried in charettes, and ryde vpon horses, both they and their seruantes, and their people. But yf ye will not be obedient vnto these commandmentes, • I sweare by myne owne selfe (sayth the Lord) this house shall be waste. For thus hath the Lord spoken vnto the kinges house of Iuda. Thou Gilead arte vnto me the heade of Libanus. Shall I not make thee so wast (and thy cities also) that no man shall dwell therein? I will prepare a destroyer with his weapons for thee, to hew down the special Cedre trees, and to cast them in the fyre. And all the people that go by this citie, shall speake one to another. • Wherefore hath the Lord done thus vnto this noble citie? • Then shall it be answered: • because they haue broken the couenant of the Lord their God, and haue worshipped & serued strange goddesses. • Mourne not ouer the dead, and be not woe for theym, but be saye for him that departeth away: for he commeth not agayne, and seeth his native countrey no more. For thus sayth the Lord, as touchinge • Beliaim the son of Josias king of Iuda, whiche reigned after his father, and is caried out of this place, he shall neuer come hither agayne, for he shall dye in the place, whereto he is led captiue, and shall see this lande no more. • Wo worth him, that buildeth his house with vnrighteousnes, and his parlours with the good, that he hath gotten by violence, which neuer recompenseth his neighbour's labour, nor payeth him his hyre. He thinketh in him selfe, I will build me a wide house, and gygionous parlours. He causeth windowes to be between therein, & the selinges and ioyntes maketh he of Cedre, & payeth them with Sinauer. • Thinketh he to reggne, now that thou promost me to wrathe with the Cedar trees: Did not thy father cate & drinke, and prosper well, as long as he dealt with equitie & righteousness? Yea, when he helped the oppressed and poze to their right, then prospered he well. From whence came this, but onely because he had me before his eyes, sayeth the Lord: Nevertheless, as for thine eyes and thine heart, they loke vpon conu^{er}sionnesse, to shedde innocent blood, to doo wrong and violence. And therefore thus sayeth the Lord Against Je^{re}mias, the sonne of Josias king of Juda. They shal not mourne for him as they vse to doo. Alas brother, Alas sister. Ne^{it}her shall they say vnto him. Alas sir, alas for that noble prince. But as an Asse shall he bee buried, corrupte and be caste without the gates of Ierusalem. Climbe vp the hill of Libanus, (O thou daughter of Sion) lise vp thy voyce vpon Balsam, crye from all partes: for all thy towers are destroyed, I gaue thee warning, while thou wast yet in prosperitie. But thou saydest: I wil not heare. And this maner haste thou vnto from thy youth, that thou wouldest neuer heare my voyce. All thy hardemen shall be diuinen with the wind, and thy dearlinges shalbe carried away into captiuitie. Then shalt thou be brought to shame and confusion, because of all thy wickednesse. Thou that dwellest vpon Libanus, & makest thy neaste in the Cedar trees: Elu. 13 b • O howe little shalt thou be regarded whenne thy sorowes and panges come vpon thee, as a woman traung^{ing} with childe. • As true lye as I lye (sayth the Lord.) Though Conanias, the sonne of Jehoakim kinge of Juda were the signet of my right hande, yet will I plucke him off. And I will geue thee into the power of them, that serke to slea thee, and into the power of them that thou fearest: into the power of Nabuchodonosor, the king of Babilon, and into the power of the Calders. Moreover, I will send thee, and the mother that bare thee into a straunge land, where ye were not bozne, and there shall ye dye. But as for the land that ye will desire to retourne vnto, ye shall neuer come at it agayne. This manne Conanias shalbe like an ymage robbed and tozne in pieces, which pleaseth no manne for all his apparayle. Wherefore both he and his seede shalbe sent away, & cast out into a lande that they know not. O thou earth, earthe, earthe: Heare the word of the Lord. Thus saith the Lord: Write this man among the outlawes, for no prosperitie shall this manne haue all his life long. Ne^{it}her shall anye of his seede be so happy, as to sitte vpon the seate of Dauid, and to beare rule in Juda.

The xxij. Chapter.

Vo be vnto the shepherdes that destroye, and scatter my flocke, sayeth the Lord. Wherefore this is the commande^{ment} of the Lord God of Israel, vnto the shepherdes that fed my people: Ye scatter & thrust out my flocke, and looke not vpon them. Therefore now will I visite the wickednesse, of youre ymaginations (sayeth the Lord. And will gather together the remnant of my flocke, from all landes that I hadde diuinen theym vnto, and will bynge theym agayne to their pastures that they may growe and increafe, I will set shepherdes also ouer theym, whiche shall feede them. They shall no moze feare and dyede, for there shall none of them be losse, sayeth the Lord. • Beholde, the time commeth, sayth the Lord, that I will raise vp the righteous br^{an}che of Dauid, which kinge shall beare rule, and he shall prosper with wisdom, and shall sette vp equitie and righteousnesse againe in the earth. In this time shall Juda be saued, and Israel shal dwell without feare. And this is the name that they shall call him: • cuen the Lord our righteousnesse. And therefore behold, the time commeth, sayeth the Lord, that it shall no moze be sayde: Al. 119. the

My hearte breaketh in my bodye because of the false prophetes, all my bones shake: I am become like a drunken manne, (that by the reason of wine can take no rest) for very feare of the Lord, and of his holy wordes. Because the lande is full of aduouters, and thou-

Crough swearing it mourneth, and the pleasant pastures of the deserte are dyed by. Yea, the way that men take, is wicked, and their gouernance is nothing like the holy worde of the Lord. For the Prophets & the priests them selues are polluted ypocrites, and their wickednes haue I founde in my house, sayth the Lord. Wherefore, their way shalbe slippery in the darknes, wherein they may sticke and fall. For I will bring a plague upon them, euen the peare of their visitation, sayth the Lord. I haue scene follie among the Prophets of Samaria, that they preached for Baal, and disceined my people of Israel. I haue scene also among the Prophets of Ierusalem foule aduoutry, and presumptuous lyes. They take the most shamefull men by the hande, flattering them, so that they can not retourne from their wickednes. All these with their citizens are vnto me as Sodome, and as the inhabitours of Gomorra. Therefore thus saith the Lord of hostes concerning the Prophets. Beholde, I will feede them with wormewood, and make them drinke the water of gall. For from the prophetes of Ierusalem is ypocrisie come into all the land. And therefore the Lord of hostes geueth you this warning. Heare not the wordes of the prophetes, that preach vnto you, and disceine you: surely they teach you vanitie, for they speake the meaninge of their owne hearte, and not oute of the month of the Lord. They saye vnto them that despise me. The Lord hath spoken it: Cull ye shall prosper right well. And vnto all them, that walke after the luste of their owne hearte, they saye: Cull, there shall no misfortune happen you, for who hath sitten in the councill of the Lord, that he hath hearde and vnderstande what he is about to doe: Whoe hath marked his deuise, and heard it? Beholde, the storme waith of the Lord (that is his indignation) shall go forth, and a violent whirlwind shall fall downe vpon the heade of the vngodlye. And the wrath of the Lord shall not turne agayne, vntill he persourne and fulfill the thoughte of his hearte. And in the latter dayes ye shall knowe his meaning. I haue not sente these prophetes (sayth the Lord) and yet they ranne. I haue not spoken to them, and yet they preached. But if they had continued in my councill, they had opened to my people my wordes, and they had toured my people fro their euill waies and wicked imaginati- ons. Am I then God that seeth but the thinge, which is nye at hande, and not that is farre off? sayth the Lord. May any man hide him selfe so, that I shall not see him? sayth the Lord. Do not I fulfill heauen and earth? sayth the Lord. I haue hearde well enough, what the prophetes say that preache lyes in my name, sayinge: I haue dreamed, I haue dreamed. How longe will this continue in the prophetes heart to tell lyes, and to preach the craftie subtilty of their own herte: whose purpose is (with the dreamed that euery one tell) to make my people forgette my name, as their forefathers did, when Baal came by. The prophete that hath a dream, let him tell it: and he that vnderstandeth my word, let him shew it faithfully. For what hath chaffe and wheate to doe together sayth the Lord. Is not my word lyke a fire, sayth the Lord, and like an hammer, that breaketh the harde stones. Therefore thus sayeth the LORD: Beholde I will vpon the prophets that steale my worde pryncipe from euery man: Behold, here am I (sayth the Lord) against the prophetes, that make tongues tender to speake, and saye: The Lord hath said it. Beholde, here am I (sayeth the Lord) against those prophetes, that dar prophesy lying dreames, & disceane my people with their vanities and miracles, whō I neuer sent nor commaunded them. They shal do this people great harme, sayth the Lord. Ye this people, epyther any prophet or priest as he thee & say: what is the burthen of the Lord? Thou shalt say vnto them, what burthen? Therfore will I cast you fro me, sayth the Lord, because ye your selues are (a burthen). And the prophet, priest, or people that blesch this tearme (the burthen of the Lord) him will I visite, and his house also. But thus shal ye say, euery one to another, and euery man to his brother. What aunswer hath the Lord geuen? or what is the Lordes commaundemente? And as for the burthen of the Lord, ye shall speake nomore of it: for euery mans owne worde is his burthen, because ye haue altered the wordes of the liuing God the Lord of hostes, our God. Thus shall euery man saye to the prophetes: what aunswer hath the Lord geuen thee? Or, what sayeth the Lord? And not once to name the burthen of the Lord. Therfore thus sayth the Lord. For so muche as ye haue bled this tearme (the burthen of the Lord) where as I notwithstanding sente vnto you, and forbad you to speake of the Lordes burthen. Beholde therefore, I will repute you as a burthen, and will caste you oute of my presence: yea, and the Citie also, that I gaue you, and your fathers: and will bring you to an euerlasting confusion, and into suche a shame, as shall neuer be forgotten.

The .xxiij. Chapter.

The Lord shewed me a vision: Behold, ther stood two maundes of figges befoze the temple.

of the LORD, after that. Nabuchodonosor king of Babylon had led away captiue Jechonias the son of Jehoakim king of Iuda, the mightie men also of Iuda, with the workmasters, and cunning men of Ierusalem, vnto Babilō. In the one maunde wer very good figges, euen like as those that be first ripe. In the other maund wer very naughty figs, which might not be eaten, they were so euil. Then said the Lord vnto me: what seest thou Ieremye? I sayde, figges, wherof some be verpe good, and some so euil, that no man maye cate them. Then came the word of the Lord vnto me, after this maner: Thus sayeth the Lord the God of Irael: like as thou knowest the good figges, so shal I knowe the menne led away, whom I haue sente out of this place into the land of the Caldees, for their profite: and I will set mine eyes vpon them for the best, for I will bringe them agayne into this lande: I will build them vp, and not breake theym downe: I will plante theim, and not roote theym oute. And I will geue them an heart to knowe howe that I am the Lord. They shalbe my people, and I wilbe their God, for they shall retourne vnto me with their whole heart. And like as thou knowest the naughty figges, whiche maye not be eaten, they are so euil: Euen so wil I (sayth the Lord) let Zedekias the king of Iuda yea and al his princes, and the residue of Ierusalem that remayne ouer in this lande, and them also that dwel in Egypt to be vexed and plagned in all kingedomes and landes. And will make them to be a reprove, a commō byword, a laughing stocke and shame, in all the places wherc I shal scater them. I wil send the sword, hunger and pestilence among them, vntil I haue cleane consumed them out of the lande, that I gaue vnto them and their fathers.

 Dan. 9. a . When the. lxx. yeares are expired, I will visit also the wickednes of the kinge of Babilon, and his people saith the Lord: yea, and the land of the Caldees, & will make it a perpetuall wildernes, and will fulfill al my wodes vpon that land, which I haue de-uised against it: yea, all that is written in this booke, which Jeremy hath propheted of all people: so that they also shalbe subdued vnto diuers nations and great kinges, . for I will recompence them accordinge to their dedes and workes of their own han-des. For thus hath the Lord God of Israell spoken vnto me: Take this . Wyne cuppe of indignation from my hande, that thou mayest cause all the people, to whom I sende thee, for to drinke of it: that when they haue dronken therof, they may be mad, and out of their wittes, when the sword commeth, that I will sende amonge them. Then toke I the cup from the Lordes hand, and made all people to drinke therof, vnto whom the Lord had sent me. But first the cite of Jerusalem, and all the Cities of Iuda, their kinges and princes, to make them desolate, wast, despised, and hissed at, and cursed, accordinge as it is come to passe this day. Yea, and Pharao the king of Egypt, his seruantes, his princes and his people all together one with another, and all kinges of the land of Hus, all kinges of the Philistines land, I scalon, I yah, Accaron and the remnaunt of Iudod, the Edomites, the Moabites, and the Ammonites, all the kinges of E-rus and Sidon: the kinges of the Isles that are beyond the sea: Dedan, Thema, Buz, and al them that dwell in the bittermost partes of the world: all the kinges of Traby, and (generally all the kinges that dwell in the desert: all the kinges of Samri, all the kinges of Eiam, all the kinges of the Medes, all the kinges toward the North, whet her they be furre or nye, euery one agaynst his neighbour: Yea, and all the kingdomes that are vpon the whole earthe. The king of Serach sayde he, shall visite

I with them also. Therefore sape thou vnto them: This is the commandement of the Lord of hostes the God of Israel: Drink and be drunken, sweare and fall, that ye neuer ryse, and that thowse the swearde, whiche I will sende among you. But yf they will not receaue the cup of thy hande, and drinke it, then tell them. Thus doeth the Lord of hostes threaten you: drinke it ye shall, and that shortly.
For so, I beginne to plague the citie, that my name is geuen vnto: thinke ye then that I will leaue you unpunished? Ye shall not go quite, for wyther I call for a swearde vpon all the inhabitoures of the earth, sayeth the Lord of hostes. Therefore tell them all these wordes, and sape vnto them. The Lord shall crye from about, and let his voyce be heard from his holie habitation. With a greate noyse shall he crye from his court re-gall. He shall geue a greate voyce (lyke the grape gatherers) and the sounde thereof shalbe heard vnto the ende of the worlde. For the Lord hath a iudgemente to geue vpon all people, and will holde his courte of iustice with all fleshe, and punishe the vngodly, sayeth the Lord. For thus sayth the Lord of hostes: Behold, a miserable plague shall goe from one people to another, and a great stozing water shall arsele from all the endes of the earth. And the same daye shall the Lord him selfe slaye them, from one ende of the earth to another.
There shall no mone be made for any of them, none gathered vp, none buried: but shall lye as donge vpon the ground, shourne (O ye shepherdes) and crye, sprinkle your selues with ashes, O ye kams of the flocke: for the time of your slaughter is fulfilled, that ye shall slaye one another, and ye shalbe scattered, and ye shal fall like beisels comynge made for pleasure.
The shepherdes shall haue no waye to flee, and the rammes of the flocke shall not escape. Then shall the shepherdes crye horrible, and the rammes of the flocke shall mourne: for the Lord hath consumed their pasture.

And their best fieldes lye dead, because of the horrible wyathe of the Lord.
They haue forsaken their foldes like as a Lyon: For their lande is waste because of his furious cruelte, for his fearfull indignation.

The xxvi. Chapter.

In the beginning of the reigne of Jehonkin the sonne of Josiah kinge of Iuda, came this worde from the Lord, saying: Thus sayth the Lord: Stand in the court of the Lordes house and speake vnto all them which (out of the Cities of Iuda) come to do worship in the Lordes house, all the wordes that I commaund thes to say. Like that thou keepe not one woorde backe, yf (peraduenture) they will herken, and tourne euerye man from his wicked way: that I may also repnt of the plague, which I haue determined to brynge vponn theym, because of their wicked inuentions. And after this maner shalte thou speake vnto them: Thus sayth the Lord, yf ye will not obey me, to walke in my lawes whiche I haue geuen you, and to heare the wordes of my seruants the prophetes, whom I sent vnto you, rising vp timely, and still sending. Yf ye will not folowe theym (I sape) then will I do to this house, as I dyd vnto Siloh, and will make this citie to be abhoyred of all the people of the earth. And the Priestes, the Prophetes, and all the people heard Jeremie preache these wordes in the house of the Lord. Nowe when he had spoken out all the wordes, that the Lord commaunded him to preache vnto the people, then the priestes, the prophetes, & al the people toke hold vpon him, & said, thou shalt die. Now darest thou be so bolde, as to say in the name of the Lord, it shal happen to this house as it did vnto Siloh: & this citie shall be so wast, y no man shal dwel therein.
And whē al the people wer gathered about Jeremie in the house of the Lord, the princes of Iuda heard of this ramos, & they came sone out of the kings palace and the Prophetes vnto the Rulers, and to all the people, these woordes:

 lers, and to all the people: The Lord hath sente me to preache agaynst this house, and agaynst this Citie, all the woordes that ye haue heard. Therfore amend your way & your aduilemēts, and be obedient vnto the voyce of the Lord your God: so shall the Lord repent of the plague, that he had deu-sed agaynst you. Nowe as for me, I am in your handes, do with me, as ye thinke expedient and good. But this shall ye knowe, yf ye put me to death,

Mat. 23. * ye shall make your selues, this citie, and all the inhabitants therof, guiltie of innocent blood. For this is of a truth that the Lord hath sente me vnto you, to speake all these woordes in your ea-

E res. Then said the rulers and the people vnto the Priestes and prophetes: This man may not be condemned vnto death, for he hath preached vnto vs in the name of the Lord our G O D.
 The elders also of the lande stode by, and said thus vnto al the people: Mi-

Mich. 1 a cheas the Mozahtite, . which was a prophet vnder Ezekiah kinge of Juda, spake to all the people of Juda:

Mich. 3 c Thus saith the Lord of hostes: . Sy-on shalbe plowed like a field, Ierusalem shalbe an heape of stones, and the hill of the Lordes house shal be tour-ned to an hie wood. Did Ezekiah the king of Juda, & all the people of Juda put him to death for this. No be-

Jon. 3, b rily, . but rather feared the Lord, and made their prayer vnto him. For the whiche cause also, the Lord repented of his plague, that he had deuised agaynst them. Shold we then do such a shamefull deede agaynst our soules.
 There was a prophete also that preached stiffly in the name of the Lord, called Uriah, the sonne of Semeliah, of Mariathiarim: this man preached also agaynst this city, and agaynst this land, according to al as Jeremy sayth. & Nowe . when Jehoakim the kinge with all the estate and princes hadde heard his woordes, the king went a-boute to slea him. . When Uriah per-ceuyed that, he was afraide and fled, and departed into Egypt. Then Je-hoakim the king sent seruantes into the lande of Egypt: Namely Elnathan, the sonne of Ichbor, and certaine men with him into Egypt, which let-ched Uriah out of Egypt, & brought him vnto king Jehoakim, that slewe him with the sweerde, and caste his dead bodie into the common peoples graue. But Shitham, the sonne of Saphan, healded Jeremie, that he came not into the handes of the people to be slayne.

The .xxvij. Chapter.

 of Jehoakim the sonne of Josiah kinge of Iuda, came this worde vnto Jeremie, from the Lord, whiche spake thus vnto me: Make thee bondes and chapnes, and put them about thy necke, and sende theym to the kinge of Edom, to the kinge of Moab, to the kinge of Ammon, to the kinge of Cyprus, and to the king of Sydone: and that by the messengers, which shall come to Jerusalem vnto Zedekiah the kinge of Iuda, and byd theym saye vnto their maisters: Thus saith the Lord of hostes, the God of Israel: Speake thus vnto your maisters: . I am he that made the earth, the men, and the cattell that are vpon the ground, with my great power & outstretched arme, and haue giuen it vnto whome it pleased me. . And nowe will I de-liuer all these Landes into the power of Nabuchodonosor the kinge of Babylon, . my seruant. The beskes also of the fieldes, shall I geue him, to do him seruice. And all the people shall serue him, and his sonne and his childers childen, vntill the time of the same lande be come aye: Yea, many people and great kinges shall serue him.

Moreover, that people and kingdome which will not serue Nabuchodonosor, and that will not put their necks vnder the yoke of the king of Babilon: the same people will I visite with the sword, with hunger, with pestilence, vntill I haue consumed them in his handes, saith the Lord.

And therefore soloow not your Prophets, Soothsayers, expounders of Dreames, Charmers, and witches, which say vnto you: Ye shal not serue the king of Babilon. For they preach you lies, to bring you farre from your lande, and that I might cast you out, and destroy you. But the people that put their necks vnder the yoke of the king of Babilon, & serue him: those will I let remayne still in their owne lande, sayth the Lord, and they shal occupie it, and dwell therein.

All these thinges tolde I Zedekiah, the king of Iuda, and sayde: Putte your neckes vnder the yoke of the king of Babilon, and serue him and his people, that ye may liue. Whye wilt thou and thy people perishe with the sword, with hunger, with pestilence: like as the Lord hath deuised for al people that will not serue the king of Babilon? Therefore geue noare vnto those prophets (that tell you: Ye shall not serue the kinge of Babilon) for they preache you lies, neither haue I sente them (sayeth the Lord: Howbeit they are bolde falsely to prophetic in my name, that I might the sooner dyne you oute, and that ye might perishe with your preachers. I spake to the priestes also, and to all the people. Thus sayeth the Lord: Heare not the wordes of those prophets, that preache vnto you, and say: Beholde, the vessels of the Lordes house shall shortly be broughte hither againe from Babilon. For they prophetic lies vnto you. Heare them not, but serue the kinge of Babilon, that ye may liue. And for I will make this Citie to be destroyed. But if they be true prophets, I will sende the word of the Lord vnto them, then let them pray to the Lord of hostes, that the remnant of the ornaments (which are in the house of the Lord, and remayne yet in the house of the king of Iuda and at Ierusalem) be not caried to Babilon also: for thus hath the Lord of hostes spoken concerning the pillars, the lauer, the seat, and the residue of the ornaments that yet remayn in this Citie, which Nabuchodonosor the king of Babilon tooke not. When he caried away Je-

Yea, thus hath the Lord of hostes, the God of Israel spoke, as touching the residue of the ordinaunces of the Lordes house, of the king of Iudaes house, and of Ierusalem. They shal be caried vnto Babilon, and ther they shal remaine, vntill I visite them, sayeth the Lord. Then will I bring them hither agayne. And this was done in the same yere, even in the beginning of the reigne of Zedekia king of Iuda.

The xxviij. Chapter.

BUt in the fourthe yere of the reigne of Zedekiah, kinge of Iuda, in the fifth Moneth, it hapned that Ihananiah, the sonne of Issur the prophete of Gibeon spake to me in the house of the Lord, in the presence of the Priestes, and of al the people, and said: Thus saith the Lord of hostes, the God of Israel: I haue broken the yoke of the king of Babilon: and after two yere will I bring againe into this place, al the ornaments of the Lordes house, that Nabuchodonosor king of Babilon, caried away from this place vnto Babilon: yea, I will bring agayne Je-
Jer. 17. 2
chomiah, the sonne of Jehoahim the king of Iuda him selfe, with all the prisoners of Iuda (that are caried vnto Babilon) euen into this place, saith the Lord: for I will breake the yoke of the kinge of Babilon.

Then the prophet Ieremie came on-Wher vnto the prophete Hananiah be-foze the priests, and befoze al the people that were presente in the house of the Lord. And the Prophet Jeremy sayde: Amen, the Lord doo that, and graunt the thing which thou haste prophecied: that he may bring againe al the ornaments of the Lordes house, and ressoze al the prisoners from Ba-bilon into this place. Neuerthelesse, herke thou also: what I wil say that thou and all the people may heare.

The Prophetes that were befoze vs in time past, which prophecied of war or trouble, or pestilence, either of peace, vpon many nations and great king-domes, were proued by this (yf God had sent them in very dede). When the thinge came to passe, whiche the prophete told befoze. And Hananiah the prophet tooke the chaine from the prophete Jeremies necke, and brake it, and with that sayd Hananiah, that all the people mighte heare: Thus hath the Lord spoken: Euen so will I breake the yoke of Nabuchodonosor king of Babilon, from the necke of all nations: yea, and that within this two yere. And so the Prophete Jeremye went his waye.

Howe after that Hananiah the prophet had taken the chapne from the prophet Je-remies necke, and broken it: The word of the Lord came vnto the Prophet Jeremy, saying: Go, and tel Hananiah these wordes: Thus saith the Lord: Thou hast broken the chain of wood: but in fiede of wood thou shalt make chaynes of yron. For thus saith the Lord of hostes, the God of Israel: I will put a yoke of yron vpon the necke of all this people, that they may serue Nabuchodonosor the king of Babilon: yea, and so shall they doo.
And I will geue him the bestes in the fiede. Then sayde the Prophete Jeremy vnto the prophete Hananiah:

Jer. 29
heare, my Hananiah: The Lord hath not sent thee, but thou bringest this people into a false belefe. And therefore thus sayeth the Lord: beholde: I will send thee out of that lande, and within a yere thou shalt dye, because thou hast e falsly spoken against the Lord. So Hananiah the Prophet dyed the same yere in the seventh moeth.

The xxix. Chapter.

These are the wordes of the booke, that Jeremy the Pro-phete sent from Jerusalem vnto the prisoners, the senators, priestes, prophets, and al the people, whi Nabuchodonosor had led from Jerusalem vnto Babilon, after the tyme that king Iechoniah and his queene, his chamberlains, the princes of Juda and Jerusalem, the wyke-masters of Jerusalem were departed thither, which boke Eliaha the sonne of He-phan, and Gamariah the son of Netaniah did beare, whome Zedekiah the king of Iuda sent vnto Babilon to Nabuchodonosor the king of Babilon: these were the wordes of Jer-emies booke. Thus hath the Lord of hostes, the God of Israel spoken vnto all the prisoners, that were led from Jerusalem vnto Babilon, build you houses to dwel therein: plant you gardens, that ye maye enioy the fruites thereof. Take you wiues, to be-are you sonnes and daughters, geuide wiues for your sonnes, and habandes for your daughters, that they may get sonnes and daughters, and that ye may multiply there. Labour not to be feir but seke after peace and prosperitie of the cite, wherein ye be prisoners, and praye vnto the Lord for it. For in the peace thereof, shall your peace be. For thus saith the Lord of hostes the God of Israel: Let not these prophetes and sooth-sayers that be amonge you discomfort you, and beleue not your owe wordes. For why? they preache vnto you in my name, and I haue not sent them.
Thus sayth the Lord. But thus saith the Lord: When ye haue dwelled there seco yeres at Babilon, I will bring you home, and of mine own good will I will carpe you thither againe into this place. For I knowe what I haue deuyled for you, sayth the Lord.
My thoughtes are to geue you peace and not trouble, whiche I geue you already, and that ye might haue hope agayne. Ye shall crye vnto me, ye shall go and call vpon me, and I will heare you. Ye shall see me and spede me. Yea, so be that ye see me with your whole heart, I will be found of you, sayth the Lorde, and will deliuer you out of prison, and gather you together agayne out of al places, wher-in I haue scattered you, sayeth the Lorde: and will bring you agayne to the same place, from whence I caused you to be caried awaye captiue. But where as ye saye, that God hath ray-sed you vnto prophetes at Babilon: Thus hath the Lorde spoken to the king that sitteth in the thron of Da-uid, and to all the people that dwell in this Citie, your brethren, that are not gone with you into captiuitie.

 Thus (I saye) speaketh the Lorde of hostes: Beholde, I will sende a sword, hunger, and pestilence vpon them: and will make them lyke vn-timely sygges, that may not be eaten for bitterness. And I will persecute them with the sword, with hunger, & pestilence. I will deliuer them vp to be heard of all kingdomes, to be cursed, abhoyred, laughted to scozne, and put to confusion of all the people, amonge whom I haue scattered them: and that because they haue not beene obedient vnto my commandements, sayth the Lorde, whiche I sente vnto them by my seruants, the prophetes.
 I spake by early, and sent vnto them: but they woulde not heare, sayth the Lorde. Here therfore the worde of the Lorde, all ye prisoners, whom I sente from Ierusalem vnto Babilon. Thus hath the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel spoken of Ihab the sonne of Colaiab, and of Zedekiah the sonne of Maasiah, whiche prophesye I ges vnto you in my name. Beholde, I will deliuer them into the hands of Nabuchodonosor the king of Babilon, that he maye slaye them before your eyes. And all the prisoners of Ierusalem in Babilon shall take this worde of cursinge, and say: Howe God do vnto thee, as he did vnto Zedekiah and Ihab, whom the kinge of Babilon rolled in the fyre, because they synned shamefully in Israel. For they haue not onely despyed their neighbours wyues, but also preached lyinge wordes in my name, whiche I haue not commaunded them.

 Thus I testifie and assure, sayth the Lorde. But as for Semciash the Ne-helamite, thou shalt speake vnto him.
 Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: Because thou hast sealed letters vnder thy name vnto all the people that is at Ierusalem, and to Sophoniah the sonne of Ma-asiah the priest: yea, and sent them to all the Priestes, wherein thou writest thus vnto him: The Lorde hath ordined thee to be priest in the steade of Jehoiada the priest, that thou shouldest be the chiefe in the house of the Lorde, aboue all prophetes, and prechers, and that thou mightest set them vpon the pylerie, or in the stocks.
 Howe happeneth it then, that thou haste not repproued Jeremie of Ana-thoah, which neuer leaueth of his prophesying. And beside all this, he hath sente vs worde vnto Babilon, and tolde vs playnely, that our captiuitie shall longe endure: that we shoulde build vs houses to dwell therein, and to plant vs gardens, that we maye en-tope the frutes therof. Whiche letter Sophoniah the priest red, and let Jeremy the prophet heare it. Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto Jeremy, saying: Send worde to all them that be in captiuitie, on this maner: Thus hath the Lorde spoken concerninge Semciash the Nehelamite: Because that Semciash hath prophesied vnto you without my Commission, and brought you into a false hope, therefore thus the Lorde doeth certifie you: Beholde, I will visite Semciash, the Nehelamite, & his seide: so that none of his shall remayde amonge this people, and none of them that see the good, that I will do for this people, sayth the Lorde. For he hath preached falsly of the Lorde.

4. reg. 21

Jer. 29

The xxx. Chapter.

 Lord sheweth vnto Jeremie, saying. Thus sayth the Lord Jer. 30. God of Israel: write by diligently all the wordes, that I haue spoken vnto thee in a booke. For so, the time cometh, sayth the Lord, that I will bringe agayne the prisoners of my people of Israel and Iuda, saith the Lord. For I will restore them vnto the land, that I gaue to their fathers, and they shall haue it in possession.
 Agayne, these wordes spake the Lord, concerning Israel and Iuda. Thus sayth the Lord: we haue heard a terrible crye, feare and disquietnes. For what eyles doeth this signifie, that I see? Namely that all stronge men fignity, every man his hande vpon his Jer. 13 b lognes: as a woman in the payne of her travell. Who euer sawe a man trauell with childe? Enquire thereafter, and see. Yea all their faces are maruelous pale. Alas for this day, which is so dreaddfull that none may be likened vnto it: and alas for the time of Jacobs trouble, from the whiche he shall yet be deliuered. For in that day sayeth the Lord of hostes, I will take his yoke from of thy necke, and breake thy bondes. And straungers shall no more serue him: but they shall do seruice vnto God their Lord, and Ezr. 34 b to David their kinge; whom I will raise vp vnto them. And as for thee, O my seruauit Jacob, feare not, sayth the Lord, and be not afraide, O Israel. For so, I will helpe thee also from farre, and thy seede from the lande of their captiuitie. And Jacob shall turne agayne, he shall be in rest, and haue a prosperous life, and no man shall make him asrayde. For I am with thee, to help thee, sayth the Lord.
 And though I shall destroye all the people, among whom I haue scattred thee, yet will I not destroy thee, but correct thee, and that with discretion.
 For I knowe that thou arte in no Exo. 44 a wife without fault. Therefore thus sayth the Lord: Thy broodings are perclous, and thy woundes ready to cast thee into sickness. There is no man to medle with thy cause, or to lay plaster vpon thee, or to bynde by thy woundes, there may no man help thee.

 Altho thy louers haue forgotten thee, and care nothing for thee. For I haue geuen thee a cruell stroke, and chastened thee roughly: and that for the multitude of thy misdeedes, for thy sinnes haue had the ouerhande. Why maist thou more for thy harme? in dede, thou arte soze wounded and in teopardie: but for the multitude of thy misde-des and sinnes, I haue done this vnto thee. And therefore al they that benoure thee, shall be denoured: and all thy thynne enemies shall be led into captiui-tie. All they that make thee wast, shall be wasted them selues, and all those that rob thee, will I make also to be robbed. For I will geue thee thy hych again, and make thy woundes whole, sayth the Lord, because they rent thee, as one cast away and despised.
 Sion (sayd they) is the whom none regardeth. For thus sayth the Lord: Beholde, I will bringe agayne the captiuitie of Jacobs tentes, and defende his dwellinge place. The Citie shall be buylded in her olde estate, and the houses shall haue their righte foundation. And out of them shall go thankesgiving, and the voyce of ioye.
 I will multiplie them, and they shall not be fewe. I shall endue them with honour, and no man shall subdue them.
 Their children shall be as afore time, and their congregation shall continue in my sighte. And all those that dese-ise them will I visite. I will saye also shall come of them; and a Prince shall sprynge out from the midst of theym: him will I chalenge to my selfe, and he shall come vnto me. For what is he that getteth ouer his heart to come vnto me? sayth the Lord.
 Ye shall be my people also, and I will be your God. Beholde, on the other syde shall the wrath of the Lord be out, as a storme water, as a mightie whirlewind, and shall fall vpon the heades of the vngodly. The displeasure of the Lord shall not leaue of, until he haue done, and perfourmed the intent of his hearte, whiche in the latter daies ye shall vnderstand. At the same time saith the Lord, shall I be the God of all the generations of Israel, and they shall be my people.

Ihus sayth the Lord: • The people of Israel, whiche escaped in the wilderness from the sword, found grace to come into their rest. Euen so shall the Lord be no more also appeare vnto me from far, and saye: • I loue thee with an euersingling loue, therefore, by my mercy I haue drawen thee to me. I will repayre thee agayne, O thou daughter of Israel, that thou maist be fast and sure. Thou shalt take thy tabretes agayne, and go forth with them, that leade the daunce. Thou shalt plant vines again vpon the hilles of Samaria, and the grape gatherers shall plant, and commonly eate of it. For the dayes shall come when the watchmen vpon the mount of Ephraim shall crye, • aryse, let vs go by vnto Sion to our Lord God, for thus saith the Lord: Reioyce with gladnes because of Jacob, crye vnto the head of the Gentiles: speake out, sing & saie, O Lord save thy people, the remnant of Israel, and make them whole. Beholde I will bringe them agayne from out of the North land, and gather them fro the endes of the world, with the blind & lame that are among them, with the womē that be great with childe, and such as be also deliuered, and the company of them that come agayne shall be great. They shall come weeping, and with merciful pitie will I bringe them hither agayne. I will leade them to the riuers of water in a streight way, wher they shall not stumble. • For I am Israels saymer, and Ephraim is my first borne. Hear the word of the Lord, O ye Gentiles, preache in the ples that I ye farre of, & say: he that hath scattered Israel, shall gather him together agayne, and shall kepe him as a shepherde doth his flocke. For the Lord hath redeemed Jacob, and ridde him from the hand of the violence, and they shall come, and reioyce vpon the hill of Sion, and shall haue plenteousnes of goodes, which the Lord shall geue the: Hamely wheate, wyne, oyle, yonge sheepe and calves. And their conscience shall be as a well watered garden, for they shall no more be hungrie. Then shall the maide reioyce in the daunce: yea, both younge and olde folkes. For I will turne their sorow into gladnesse, and wil comfort them from their sorowes & make them ioyefull. I will power plenteousnes vpon the heartes of the priestes, and my people shall be satisfied with my goodnes sayth the Lord. Thus sayth the Lord: • The voyce of heauines, weeping and lamentation was heard on hye: cuen of Rachell mourning for her childe, and would not be comforted, because they were away. But now sayth the Lord, leaue of from weeping and crying, withholde thine eyes from teares, for thy labour shall be rewarded: sayeth the Lord. And they shall come agayne out of the lande of their enemies: Yea, euen thy posteritie shall haue consolation in this, sayth the Lord, that thy childe shall come agayne into their owne land. Moreover, I herd Ephraim, that was ledd away captiue, commaundment on this maner. • O Lord, thou hast corrected me, and thy chastening haue I receaued, as an vntamed calfe. • Conuert thou me, and I shall be conuerted, for thou art my Lord God: Yea, as lone as thou turnest me, I shall reforme my selfe, and when I vnderstande, I shall smyte vpon my thigh, for verely I haue committed shamefull thinges. For I haue bozne the reproofe & confusion of my youth. Vpon this complaynte, I thought thus by my selfe: • Is not Ephraim my deare sonne? Is he not the childe, with whom I haue had all my mirth and pastime? For sence the time that I firste communed with him, I haue him euer in remembraunce: there-foze my verpe heart directh me vnto him, gladlye and willingly I will haue mercy vpon him, saith the Lord. Get thee watchmen, prouide teachers for thee, set thine heart vpon the right waye, that thou shouldest walke, and turne agayne, O thou daughter of Israell, turne agayne to the cities of thyne. Howe longe wilt thou go astraye, O thou shrinkinge daughter?

E For the Lord will worke a newe thinge vpon earth. I woman shall compasse a man. For thus sayth the Lord of hostes the God of Israell: It will come therto, that when I haue brought Iuda out of captiuitie, these wordes shall be heard in the lande, and in his cities. The Lord no more be saide: the fathers haue eaten a sowze grape, and the chyldrens teeth are set on edge: for euery one shall dye for his owne misdoede, soo that who so eateth a sowze grape, his teeth shall be set on edge. • Beholde, the daies come, saith the Lord, that I will make a newe couenaunte with the house of Israell, and with the house of Iuda: not after the couenaunt that I made with their fathers, whiche I tooke them by the hande and ledde them out of the lande of Egypte: whiche couenaunte they bzeake; yea, euen when I as an husband had rule ouer them sayth the Lord: • But this shall be the couenaunte that I will make with the house of Israell after those dayes sayth the Lord. • I will plante my lawe in the inward partes of them, and write it in their hertes, • and will be theyr God, and they shall be my people. And from thence forth, shall no man teache his neighbour of his brother, and saye: knowe the Lord. But they shall all knowe mee from the lowest vnto the hiest, sayth the Lord. For I will forgive their misdoedes, and will neuer remember their synnes any more. Thus sayeth the Lord, whiche gaue the sunne to be a lighte for the daye, and the moone and starres to shine in the night: which moueth the sea, so that the floudes thereof waxe scarce: his name is the Lord of hostes. Like as this ordinaunce shall neuer be taken out of my sight, saith the Lord: So shall the seede of Israell neuer cease, but alwaye be a people before me. Whereouer thus sayth the Lord: like as the heauen above can not be measured, and as the foundations of the earth beneath may not be sought out: • Soo will I also not caste oute the whole seede of Israell, for that they haue committed, sayth the Lord. Beholde, the daies come, saith the Lord, that the citie of the Lord shall be enlarged from the tower of Hananeel, vnto the gate of the corner wall. From thence shall the ryght measure be taken befoze her, vnto the hill toppe of • Garb, and shall come aboute Gaath, and the whole valley of the deade carkasses, and of the ashes, and all the hyeldes vnto the brooke of Cedron: and vnto the corner of the hogegate towarde the east, where as the sanctuarie of the Lord also shall be set. And when it is nowe buylded, and set by of this fashion, it shall neuer be broken nor cast downe any more.

These wordes spake the Lorde vnto Jeremy, in the tenth pere of Zedekiah kinge of Iuda: which was the .xviij. pere of Nabuchodonosor, what time as the kinge of Babylons house layde siege vnto Ierusalem: But Jeremy the prophet lay in hande in the courte of the prison, which was in the kinge of Iudacs house: where Zedekiah the kinge of Iuda caused him to be layde, because he hadde prophesied of this maner: Thus sayth the Lorde: Beholde, I will deliuer this Citie into the hands of the kinge of Babilon, which shall take it. As for Zedekiah the kinge of Iuda, he shal not be able to escape the Caldees, but surely he shall come into the hands of the kinge of Babilon, which shall speake with him mouth to mouth: and one of them shall looke another in the face. And Zedekiah shalbe carped vnto Babilon, and ther shall be he, vntill the time that I visite him, sayth the Lorde. But if thou takest in hande to fight agaynste the Caldees, thou shalt not prosper. And Jeremy said: thus hath the Lord spoken vnto me: Behold, Hananeel the sonne of Helium thyne vncles sonne shall come vnto thee, and require thee to redeeme the land that lieth in Anathoth vnto thy selfe: for by reason of this kinred it is thy right to redeeme it, and to bye it out. And Hananeel mine vncles sonne came to me in the courte of the prison, according to the woorde of the Lord, and sayd vnto me: Bye my land, I praye thee, that lyeth in Anathoth in the countie of Benjamin: for by heritage thou hast right to lose it out for thy selfe, therefore redeeme it. Then I perceined that this was the commandement of the Lorde, and so I bought the land from Hananeel of Anathoth, mine vncles sonne, and weyed him there the money: euen seuen sicles and ten silver pence. I caused him also to make me a writinge and to seale it: and called record there by, and weyed him there the money vpon the weightes. So I tooke the euidence with the cōpy when it was orderly sealed & red ouer, and I gave the euidence vnto Baruch the son of Neriah, the sonne of Maasiah in the sight of Hananeel my cosin, and in the presence of the witnesses, that be named in the euidence: and befoze all the Iewes that wer therby in the court of the prison. I charged Baruch also befoze them, sayinge: The Lorde of hostes the god of Israel commaundeth thee, to take this sealed euidence with the cōpy, and to laye it in an earthen vessel, that it may long continue. For the Lord of hostes the God of Israel, hath determined that houses, fieldes, and vineyardes shall be possessed agayne in this lande. Nowe when I had deliuered the euidence vnto Baruch the sonne of Neriah, I besought the Lorde saying: O Lorde God, it is thou that hast made heauen and earth with thy great power and hye arme, and ther is nothing hid from thee. Thou shewest mercy vpon thousandes, thou recompensst the wickednes of the fathers, into the bosome of the children that come after theym. Thou arte the greates and mighty God, whose name is the Lord of Hostes: great in counsel, and excellent in worke. Thine eyes loke vpon all the wayes of mens children, to rewarde euerye one after his waye: and according to the fruites of his inuentions. Thou hast done great tokens and wonders in the lande of Egypt, as we see this daye, vpon the people of Israel, and vpon those men to make thy name great, as it is come to passe this day. Thou hast brought thy people of Israel out of the lande of Egypt with tokens, with wonders, with a mightye hande, with a stretched out arme, & with gret terriblenes: and hast geuen them this land like as thou haddest promised vnto their fathers. Namelye, that thou wouldest geue them a lande that floweth with milke and honny. Nowe when they came therin, and possessed it, they folowed not thy voyce, and walked not in thy lawe, but all that thou commaundest them to doo, that haue they not done, and therfore come all these plagcs vpon them. Behold, there are bulwokes made nowe againste the Citie, to take it, and it shalbe won of the Caldees that besiege it, with sword, with hunger and death, and looke what thou haste spoken that same shall come vpon them.

For loe, all these thinges are present vnto thee: Yet (sayest thou vnto me, O Lord God) and commaundest me that I shall loose a peece of lande vnto my selfe, and take witnessers thereto: and yet in the meane season the citie is deliuered into the power of the Caldees. Then came the woorde of the Lord vnto me saying: Behold I am the Lord God of all flesh, is there any thing then to hard for me? Therfore thus sayth the Lord: Beholde,

I shall deliuer this Citie into the power of the Caldees, and into the power of Nabuchodonosor the king of Babilon, they shall take it. For the Caldees shall come, and winne this citie, and set fire vpon it, and burne it: with the gorgeous houses in whose parlours they haue made sacrifice vnto Baal, and powred drinkeofferings vnto straunge goddes, to prouoke me vnto wrath. For seeing the children of Israel, and the children of Iuda haue wrought wickednes before me euer from their youthe vp, what haue they els done, but prouoked me with the workes of their owne handes: sayth the Lord. Or what hath this Citie bene elles but a prouokinge of my wrath, euer since the day that they builded it, vnto this houre, wherein I caste it out of my sighte, because of the great blasphemies of the children of Israel and Iuda, which they haue to prouoke me: yea, they, their kinges, their princes, their priestes, their prophets, the men of Iuda, and the citizens of Ierusalem. When I stood early, and taught the, and instructed them, they turned their backs to me, and not their faces. They woulde not heare, to bee reformed and correct: but set their Idols in the house that is halowed vnto my name to defile it. They haue builded hye places for Baal in the valley of the children of Henuom, to bowe their sonnes and daughters vnto Moloch, whiche I neuer commaunded them, neither came it euer in my thoughte, to make Iuda sinne with such abomination. And nowe therfore, thus hath the Lord God of Israel spoken concerninge this Citie, which (as ye your selues cōfesse) shalbe deliuered into the hand of the kinges of Babilon, when it is wonne with the swearde, with hunger and with pestilence. Beholde, I will gather them together from all landes, wherein I haue scatered them in my wrath, in my feareful and great displicare: and will bring them again vnto this place, where they shal dwell safely. And they shalbe my people, and I will be their God. And I will geue them one hearte and one waye, that they may feare me all the dayes of their life, that they and their children after them may prosper. And I will set vp an euertlasting conenant with them. Namely, that I will neuer cease to do them good, and that I will put my feare in their heartes, so that they shall not runne awaye from me. Yea, I wil haue a lust and pleasure to do them good, and faithfully to plante them in this lande with my whole heart, and with all my soule. For thus sayeth the Lord: like as I haue brought al this gret plague vpon this people, euen so will I also bring vpon them all the good, that I haue promised them. And men shall haue their possessions in this lande. wherof ye say nowe, that it shall neuer be inhabited of people, nor of cattell: but be deliuered into the handes of the Caldees. Yea, the lande shalbe bought for mony, and euidences made therevpon, and sealed before witnessers in the countrey of Ben Iamin, & rounde about Ierusalem, in the cities of Iuda, in the Cities that are vpon the mountaines, and in them that lye beneth: yea, and in the cities that are in the South. For I wil bring their prisoners hither againe saith the Lord.

Because the inhabitours of this citie haue com to fight against the Caldees: and they are filled with the dead carkasses of men, whom I haue slayne in my wrath and displeasure: when I tourned my face from this citie, because of all her wickednes. Wherefore, saith the Lord, I will repaire and heale their woundes, and make them whole: I will open them the large treasures of peace & trueth. And I will returne the captiuitie of Iuda and Israel, and will set them by agayne, as they were afore. . From all misdoes, wherein they haue offended agaynst me, I will clesse them. For so they haue despised my people, and they repented them as though they were no people. Therefore thus saith the Lord: If I haue made no conuenaunt with daye and nighte, and geuen no statute vnto heauen and earth: then will I also cast awaye the seede of Jacob and Dauid my seruante, so that I will take no prince out of his seede to rule the posteritie of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. But yet I will turne agayne their captiuitie, and be mercifull vnto them.

The xxxiij. Chapter.

Ier. 39. These are the wordes which the Lord spake vnto Ieremye, what time as Nabuchodonosor the kinge of Babilon, and all his hostes (out of all the kingdomes that were vnder his power) and all his people soughte agaynst Ierusalem, and all the cities thereof. Thus sayth the Lord God of Israel: Go, speake to Zedekiah the kinge of Iuda, and tel him: The Lord sendeth thee this worde. Behold, I will deliuer this citie into the hands of the kinge of Babilon, he shal burne it, & thou shalt not escape his hands, but shalt be led awaye prisoner, & deliuered into his power. Thou shalt loke the kinge of Babilon in the face, and he shal speke with thee mouth to mouth, and then shalt thou go to Babilon. Yet heare the worde of the Lord, O Zedekiah thou kinge of Iuda: Thus saith the Lord vnto thee. Thou shalt not be slayne with the swerde, but shalt dye in peace. As thy forefathers the kinges, thy progenitours were brent, so shalt thou be brent also, and in thy mourning they shall say: Oh Lord. For thus haue I determined, sayeth the Lord, When spake Ieremie the prophete all the wordes vnto Zedekiah kinge of Iuda in Ierusalem, what time as the kinge of Babilons hoste besieged Ierusalem, and the remnant of the Cities. Namely, Lachis and Ierach, whiche yet remayned of the stronge defended cities of Iuda. These are the wordes that the Lord spake vnto Ieremy the prophete, when Zedekiah was agreed with all his people at Ierusalem, that there should be proclaimed a libertie: so that euery man shoulde let his seruante and handmayde go free: Hebrue and Hebruelle, and no Iewe to holde his brother as a bondman. Asowe as they had consented, all the princes and all the people whiche had gathered vnto this agreement, that euery man shoulde set at libertie his bondseruant and bondwomen, and no longer to holde them bounde: euen so they were obedient and let them go free. But afterwarde they repented and tooke agayne the seruantes and handmaydens, whom they hadde let go free, and so made them bond again. For the which cause the worde of the Lord came vnto Ieremye from the Lord him selfe, saying: Thus sayth the Lord God of Israel: I made a couenant with your fathers, when I brought theym out of Egypt, (that they shoulde no more be bondmen) saying: When seven yeres are out, euery man shall let his bought seruante and Hebrue go free, if he haue serued him syxe yeres. But your fathers obeyed me not, and hearkened not vnto me. As for you, ye were nowise turned and did right before me, in that ye proclaimed, euery man to let his neighbour go free, and in that ye made a couenant before me in the temple that bereth my name. But yet ye haue turned your selues agayne, and blasphemed my name. In this that euery man hath required his seruante and handmayden agayne, sohowe ye had lette go quite and free, and compelled them to serue you agayne, and to be your bondmen, and bondwomen. And therefore thus sayeth the Lord:

ye haue not obeyed me, euerye manne to proclaime freedome vnto his brother and neighbour: wherfore, I will call you vnto a freedome, sayeth the Lorde: euen vnto the swerde, to the pestilence, and to hunger, and will make you to be plagued in al the king-domes of the earth. Yea, those men that whiche they made before mee: when they heved the calfe in two, and whē there went through the two halues therof: The princes of Iuda, the princes of Ierusalem, the heided men, the priests and al the people of the land, whiche went through the two spydes of the calfe. Those menne wil I geue into the power of their enemyes, and into the handes of them that solo we vpon their lines. And their deade bodies shalbe meate for the foules of the ayre, and beastes of the fielde. As for Jedekiah the kinge of Iuda, and his princes, I will deliuer them into the power of their enemyes, and of them that desyre to slaye them, and into the hand of the king of Babylons hoft, which nowē is departed from you: But throughte my commaunde-ment (sayth the Lorde) they shal come agayne before this Citie, they shall fight against it, winne it, and burne it. Moreover, I will laye the Citie of Iuda so waste, that no manne shall dwel therein.

The xxx. Chapter.

The wordes which the Lorde spake vnto Jeremy, in the rey-gne of Iehoaikim the sonne of Josiah king of Iuda are these: Goe Ch. 10 vnto the house of the Rechabites and call them out, and bryng them to the house of the Lorde into some commonious place, and geue theym wyne to drynke. Then tooke I Iazaniah the sonne of Jeremye the sonne of Iabagiah, and his brethren, and all his sonnes, and the whole household of the Rechabites, and brought theym into the house of the Lorde into the closette of the chyldren of Hanan the sonne of Jedekiah the man of God, whiche was by the closet of the princes, that is about the closette of Maasiah the sonne of Helum, whiche is the treasurer. And before the sons of the kin-red of the Rechabites, I sette pottes full of wyne, and cuppes, and said vnto theym: Drynke wyne. But they sayde: wee will drynke no wyne, for Jonadab the sonne of Rechab oure father commaunded vs, saying: ye and your sonnes shal neuer drynke wyne, • build no houses, sowe no seede, plant • no vynes: yea, ye shall haue no vyneyardes: but for all your tyme, ye shall dwel in tentes, that ye may liue longe in the lande wherein ye be strangers.

Thus haue we obeyed the commaun-dement of Jonadab the sonne of Re-chab oure father, in all that hee hath charged vs, and so we drynke no wyne all our life longe: we, nor our wyues our sonnes, and our daughters. Net-ther builde wee anye house to dwell therein, we haue also among vs, neyther vyneyardes, nor coyne lande to sow: but we dwell in tentes, we obey and do accordyng vnto all that Jonadab our father commaunded vs. But nowe that Nabuchodonosor the king of Babilon came vp into the lande, we said: come, let vs go to Ierusalem that we maye escape the hooft of the Chaldees and the Assirians: and so we dwel nowē at Ierusalem. Then came the word of the Lorde vnto Jeremy, sayinge: Thus saith the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: Go and tell the men of Iuda and the inhabitours of Ierusalem. Will ye not be reformed, to obey my wordes, sayeth the Lorde: The wordes which Jonadab the sonne of Rechab commaunded his sonnes that they should drynke no wyne, are fast and surely kepte: for vnto this day they drynke no wyne, but obeye their fathers commaunde-ment. What as for me, • I haue stande by early, I haue spokē vnto you, and geuen you earnest warninge: and yet haue ye not ben obediēt vnto me. Yea I haue sente my seruantes, all the Prophetes vnto you, I rose vp early, and sent you word, saying: O tourne you, now every man from his wicked waye, amende your lyes, and go not after straunge gods to worship them: that ye may continue in the land, whiche I haue geuen vnto you, and your fathers, but ye would neyther heare me, nor folowe me. The children of Jonadab Rechabs son haue stedfastly kept their fathers commaundement, that he gaue them, but this people is not obediēte vnto me. And therefore thus sayeth the Lord of hostes, the God of Israel: Behold, I wil bring vpon Iuda, and vpon every one that dwelleth in Ierusalem, all the trouble that I haue deuised against them.

For so much as ye haue obeyed the commaundement of Jonadab your father, and kept al his preceptes, and done according vnto al that he hath bidden you: Therefore thus sayeth the Lord of hostes, the God of Israel: • Jonadab the sonne of Rechab shall not sayle, but haue one out of his stock, to stand alway before me.

The xxxvi. Chapter.

In the fourth yere of Jehoakim the sonne of Josiah, the kinge of Iuda, came the word of the Lord vnto Ieremye, saying: • Take a booke and write therein all the wordes that I haue spoken to thee against Israel, against Iuda, & against all the people from y^e time that I began for to speke vnto thee (in the reigne of Josiah) vnto this day. That when the house of Iuda heareth of the plague, which I haue deuised for them, they may peraduenture • turne every man from his wicked way: that I may forgue their offences and sinnes. Then did Ieremie cal Baruch the son of Neriah, • and Baruch wrote in the booke at the mouth of Ieremis, all the wordes of the Lord, which he had spoken vnto him. And Ieremie commaunded Baruch, saying: I am in prison, so that I may not come into the house of the Lord: therefore go thou thyself, and rede the booke that thou hast written at my mouth: Namely, the wordes of the Lord: and reade them in the Lodes house vpon the fastinge daye, that the people, whole Iuda, and all they that come out of the Cities may heare. Peraduenture, they will praye meekely before the face of the Lord, and turne every one from his wicked way. For great is the wrath and displeasure, that the Lord hath taken against this people. So Baruch the sonne of Neriah did according vnto all that Ieremie the Prophete commaunded him, reading the wordes of the Lord out of the booke in the Lodes house. And this was done in the fiftie yere of Jehoakim, the sonne of Josiah king of Iuda, in the ix. Moneth, • when it was commaunded, that al the people of Ierusalem shuld faste before the Lord, and they also that were come from the cities of Iuda vnto Ierusalem. Then read Baruch the wordes of Ieremie out of the booke within the house of the Lord out of the treasure of Gamariah, the sonne of Saphan the scribe, which was beside the hyer loft of the • newe doore of the Lodes house, that al the people might heare. Nowe when Michiah the sonne of Gamariah, the sonne of Saphan had heard all the wordes of the Lord out of the booke, he went downe to the kinges palace into the Scribes chambers, for there all the Princes were set. Elisama the scribe Dalatah, the sonne of Hemei, Elnah than the sonne of Achob, Gamariah the sonne of Saphan, Jechiah, the sonne of Hananiah, with all the princes. And Michiah tolde them all the wordes, that he heard Baruch reade out of the booke before the people. The all the Princes sent Jehudi, the son of Pathaniah, the sonne of Selemiah, the sonne of Chafi vnto Baruch, sayinge: • Take in thine hande the booke, whereout thou hast red before all the people, and come. So Baruch the ſonne of ſeriah toke the boke in his hand, and came vnto them. And they ſayd vnto him: Sit downe, and reade the boke, that we may heare alſo. So Baruch read that they might heare. Nowe when they had hearde all the wordes, they were abaſhed one vpon another, and ſaid vnto Baruch: We will certifie the king of all theſe wordes. And they examined Baruch, ſaying: Tell vs, howe did deſt thou write all theſe wordes oute of his mouth. Then Baruch answered them: He ſpake all theſe wordes vnto me with his mouth, and I wrote them in the boke. Then ſaid the princes vnto Baruch: Go thy way, & hide thee with Jeremie, ſo that no manne know where ye be, and they went in to the kinge to the courte: But they kept the boke in the chamber of Eliſama the ſcribe, and told the king all the wordes, that he might heare. So the kinge ſent Jehudi to fet him the booke whiche he brought out of Eliſama the ſcribes chaumber: And Jehudi read in it that the king and al the princes which wer about him might heare. Nowe, the king ſat in the winter houſe, for it was in the .ix. moneth and ther was a fire beſore him. And whē Jehudi had red thre or four leaues therof, he cut the boke in peces wth a penknife, and caſte it into the fire vpon the hearth, vntill the booke was all bzent in the fire vppon the hearthe. Yet no man was abaſhed threof, or rent his clothes: neyther the kinge him ſelfe, nor his ſeruauntes, though they heard all theſe wordes. Neuertheleſſe Elnathan, Delaiah, and Gamariah beſought the kinge, that he would not burne the boke, norwithſtanding the king woulde not heare them, but commaunded Ierahmeel, the ſonne of Amiech: Saratah the ſonne of Eziel, and Helamiah the ſonne of Abdiel, to laye handes vpon Baruch the ſcribe, and vpon Jeremie the prophete: but the Lord kept them out of ſight. After nowe that the king had bzent the boke, and the ſermons whiche Baruch wrote at the mouth of Jeremie. The wordes of the Lord came vnto Jeremie, ſaying: Take an other boke, and write in it al the ſorſayde ſermons, that were written in the firſt booke, which Jehoaſchim the king of Iuda hath bzent. And tel Jehoaſchim the king of Iuda: thus ſayth the Lord: thou haſt bzent the booke, and thoughteſt within thy ſelfe: why haſt thou writte therein, that the king of Babilon ſhall come, and make this lande waſte: ſo that he ſhal make both people and cattel to be out of it: Ther ſorſe thus the Lord ſayth of Jehoaſchim the king of Iuda. There ſhall none of his generation ſitte vpon the throne of Dauid. His dead carſe ſhall be caſte out, that the heate of the day, and the froſt of the night maye come vppon him. And I will viſite the wickednes of him, of his ſeede, and of his ſeruauntes. Moreover, all the euill that I haue promiſed them, (though they heard me not) will I bring vpon them, vpo the inhabitants of Ieruſalem, and vppon all Iuda. Then toke Jeremie another boke, and gaue it Baruch the ſcribe, the ſonne of ſeriah, whiche wrote therein out of the mouth of Jeremie, all the ſermons that wer in the firſt boke, whiche Jehoaſchim the king of Iuda did burne. And there were added vnto the many mo ſermons then beſore.

The .xxxvij. Chapter.

Zedechiah, the ſon of Joſiah, which was made king throug Nabuchodonosor king of Babilon, reigned in the land of Iuda, in the ſeade of Cononiah, the ſon of Jehoaſchim. But neyther he, nor his ſervants, nor the people in the land, wold obey the wordes of the Lord, whiche he ſpake by the prophete Jeremie. Neuertheleſſe, Zedekiah the king ſent Jehucall, the ſonne of Semeliah, and Sophoniah the ſonne of Maaliah the priette, to the prophete Jeremie, ſaying: A pray thou vnto the Lord our God for vs. Nowe Jeremie walked free amonge

Eze. 17^d the people of that time, and was not putte in prison as yet. • Pharaos hoste also was come out of Egypt: whiche when the Caldees that besieged Ierusalem perceiued, they departed from thence. Then came the worde of the Lord vnto the Prophet Jeremy, saying: Thus sayth the Lord God of Israel, this answer shall

Jer. 46^a ye geue to the king of Iuda, that sent you vnto me for counsaile: • Behold, Pharaos host which is come forth to helpe you, shall returne to Egypt into his owne lande: but the Chaldees shall come agayne, and fight agaynst this Citie, winne it, and set fyre vpon it. For thus sayth the Lord: Deceiue not your owne mindes, thinking on this maner. Cush, the Chaldees go now their way from vs, so thei shal not go their way. For though ye had slayne the whole hoste of the Chaldees, that besiege you, and euery one of the slayne lay in his tente, yet should they stande by, and set fire vpon this Citie. Now when the hoste of the Chaldees was broken by from Ierusalem, for feare of the Egyptians army: Jeremy went out of Ierusalem, toward the land of Ben Iamin, to get him from amonge the people. And when he came vnder Ben Iamins porte, there was a porter called

Jer. 18^b E Jeriah, the sonne of Shaiamiah, the sonne of • Hananiah, which fell vpon him, and toke him, saying: thy minde is to run to the Caldees. Then sayde Jeremy: It is not so, I go not to the Chaldees.ouertheless Jeriah wold not beleue him, but brought Jeremy bound before the Princes. wherfore the princes were angry with Jeremy & smote him, and layd him in prison, in the house of Ionathas the scribe. For he was the ruler of the prison. Thus was Jeremy put into a dongeon and prison, and so laye there a long time.

Jer. 28^c D Then Zedechiah the king sent for him and called him, and asked him quietly in his own house, saying: • Thinkest thou this business (that is in hand) commeth of the Lord? Jeremy answered: Yea that it doth: and thou (sayd he) shalt be deliuered into the king of Babylons power. Moze: D ouer, Jeremy sayde vnto king Zedechiah. What haue I offended agaynst thee, agaynst thy seruantes, or agaynst this people, that ye haue put me in prison? Where are your prophetes which haue prophesied vnto you, and sayde: that the king of Babylon should not come agaynst you and this lande? And therefore heare now, O Lord the king, let my prayer be accepted before thee, and sende me no moze into the house of Ionathas the scribe, that I dye not there. • Then Zedechiah the king commaunded to put Jeremy in the fore entry of the prison, and dayly to be geuen him a cake of bread out of the bakers strete, vntil al the bread in the Citie was eaten by. Thus Jeremy remained in the fore entrie of the prison.

The xxxviij. Chapter. S Aphatiah, the sonne of Nathan, 3 Soboliah, the sonne of Phashur, Iucall, the sonne of Semeliah and Phashur, the sonne of Melchiah perceiued the wordes, that Jeremy had spoken vnto all the people, namely on this maner: Thus saith the Lord • who so remaineth in this Citie, shall perishe, epyther with the sword, with hunger, or with the pestilence. But who so falleth vnto the Chaldees, shall escape winning his soule for a praye, and shall liue. • For thus sayth the Lord: This citie (no doubt) muste be deliuered into the power of the kinge of Babylon, and hee also shall winne it. • Then saide the princes vnto the kinge: Sir, we beseeche you, lette this man be put to death. For thus he discourageth the handes of the Souldiours that be in this Citie, and the handes of all the people, when he speaketh such wordes, vnto them. • This man verily laboureth not for peace of the people, but mischief. Zedekiah the king answered and sayde: • Loe, he is in youre handes for the king may denye you nothing. Then tooke they Jeremy, and caue him into the donges of Melchiah the sonne sonne of Hamelch, & dwelt in the for-entry of the prison. And they let down Jeremy with cordes into a dongeon, where there was no water, but myre.

So Jeremy sticke faste in the myre.
Now when Zedmelech & Moxian, being a chamberlayne in the kinges courte, vnderstode that they had caste Jeremy into the dongeon: he went out of the kinges house, and spake to the king, (whiche then sat vnder the port of Benjamin) these wordes: my lord the king, wheras these men meddle with Jeremy the prophet, they do him wrong: Namely, in that they haue put him in prison, there to dye of hunger, for ther is no more bread in the ci-tie. Then the king commaunded Z-edmelech the Moxian, & sayd: Take from hence .xxx. men whō thou wilt, and draw vp Jeremy the prophet out of the dongeon before he dye. So Z-edmelech toke the men with him, and went to the house of the king, & there vnder the treasure he gate olde rags and woone cloutes, and let the do wne by a corde, into the dongeon to Jeremy. And Zedmelech the Moxian sayd vnto the prophet Jeremy: I put these rags & cloutes vnder thine arme holes, betwexte thee and the coardes: and Jeremy did so. So they drew vp Jeremy with cordes, & toke him out of the dongeon, and he remayned in the fore entry of the prison. Then Zedekiah the king sent, and caused Jeremie the prophete to be called vnto him into the third entry that is in the house of the Lord. And the kinge saide vnto Jeremy: I will aske thee somewhat, but hide nothing from me. Then Jeremy answered Zedekiah: Yf I be plain vnto thee, thou wilt cause me, to suffer death. Yf I geue thee counsell, thou wilt not folow me. So the king sware an othe secretly vnto Jeremy, saying: As truly as the Lord liueth that made vs these soules, I will not lay thee, nor geue thee into the handes of them that seeke after thy life. Then said Jeremy vnto Zedekiah. Thus saith the Lord of hostes the God of Israel: Yf cark be, that thou wilt go forth vnto the kinge of Babylons princes, thou shalt saue thy lyfe, and this citie shall not be bzente: yea, both thou and thy household shal escape with your liues.

But yf thou wilt not go forth to the king of Babylons princes, then shall this citie be deliuered into the handes of the Chaldees, whiche shall set fyre vpon it, and thou shalt not be able to escape them. And Zedekiah saide vnto Jeremy. I am afrayd for the Iewes, that are fled vnto the Chaldees, leaste I come in their handes, and so they to haue me in derision. But Jeremy answered: No, they shal not betray thee: O herken vnto the voyce of the Lord (I beseech thee) which I speake vnto thee, so shalt thou be wel, and saue thy life. But yf thou wilt not go forth, the Lord hath tolde me this playnely: Behold, all the women that are left in the kinge of Judas house, shal be led forth to the kinge of Babylons princes. And they shal say, that thou art disceiued, and that the men in whō thou diddest put thy trust, haue gotten thee vnder, and set thy face fast in the myre, and gone their way from thee. Therefore all thy wiues with their children shall they leade forth vnto the Chaldees, and thou shalt not escape the handes, but shalt be the king of Babylons prisoner, and this citie shalt thou cause to be bzent. Then sayde Ze-dekiah vnto Jeremy: loke that no body knowe of these wordes, and thou shalt not dye. But yf the princes perceyue, that I haue talked with thee, & come vnto thee, saying: O speke, what said the king to thee: hide it not from vs (we pray thee) what said the king to thee: See thou gene them this an-swere: I haue humbly besought the kinge, that he will let me lye nomore in Jehonathans house, that I die not there. Then came all the princes vnto Jeremy, and asked him. And he tolde them after the maner as the king bad him. Then they helde their peace, and let him alone, for they perceyued nothing. So Jeremy abode still in the fore entry of the prison, vntill the day that Jerusalem was won.

Nowe. When the cite of Jerusalem was taken (for in the ix. yere of Zedekiah kinge of Iuda, in the tenth moneth, came Nabuchodonosor the king of Babilon, and all his hoste, and besieged Jerusalem and foughte agaynst it. And in the. xi. yere of Zedekiah in the fourthe moneth, the. ix. day of the month he brake into the citie.) Then all the Princes of the king of Babilon, came in, and sat them downe vnder the pozt: Meregell, Sarezzer, Samgarnebo, Sarsachin, Rabaris, Meregell, Sarezzer, Rabmage, with all the other princes of the king of Babilon. And when Zedekiah the king of Iuda, with his souldiours sawe theym, they fled, and departed out of the citie by night thorough the kings garden, and thzough the pozte that is betweene the two walles, and so they wente towarde the wilderness: But the Chaldees hoste folowed laste after theym, and tooke Zedekiah in the fieelde of Jericho, and broughte him prysoner to Nabuchodonosor kinge of Babilon, vnto Reblath, that lieth in the land of Hemath, where he gaue iudgemente vnto him. So the kinge of Babilon caused the children of Zedekiah, and all the nobles of Iuda to be slaine, before his face at Reblath. And made Zedekias eyes to be putte out, and bound him with two chaynes, and sent him to Babilon. Moreover, the Chaldees bzent bp the kinges palace with the other houses of the people, and brake downe the walles of Ierusalem. As for the remnaunt of the people that were in the Citie, and suche as were come to helpe theym (whatsoeuer was left to the common sort, Nabuzaradan the chiefe captayne caried them to Babilon. But Nabuzaradan the chiefe captayne let the rascall people (and those that had nothing) dwell still in the land of Iuda, and gaue them vineyardes, and cozne fieldes at the same time. Nabuchodonosor also the king of Babilon gaue Nabuzaradan the chiefe captayne a charge, concern-ning Jeremy, saying: take and cherishe him, and make much of him, see thou doo him no harme, but intreate him after his owne desyre. So Nabuzaradan the chiefe captaine, Nabuzabban, Rablars, Mergall, Sarezzer, Rabmage, and all the kinge of Babilons lordes sente for Jeremie, and caused him to be set out of the pozt: entree of the prison, and so committed him vnto Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam, the sonne of Saphan, that he should carpe him home: and so he dwelte among the people. Nowe while Jeremy laye yet bound in the pozt entree of the prison, the woide of the Lord came vnto him, saying: Goe and tell Ahimelech the Moztan: Thus sayth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel: behold, the cruell and sharpe plage that I haue deuised for this Citie, will I bzing vpon them, that thou shalt see it: but I will deliuer thee (sayth the Lord) and thou shalt not come in the handes of those men wth whom thou fearest. For doubtlesse, I will saue thee, so that thou shalt not perishe with the sword: but thy lyfe shall be saued, & that because thou hast put thy trust in me, sayth the Lord.

The. xl. Chapter.
This is the woide that the Lord spake vnto Jeremy. When Nabuzaradan the chiefe captayne had lette him go free from Ramath whither he had led him bound among all the prysoners that were caried from Jerusalem and Iuda vnto Babilon. The chiefe captayne called for Jeremie, and sayde vnto him: The Lord thy God spake mightie lyfe befoze, of the miserie vpon this place. Nowe the Lord hath sente it, and performed it as he hath promised. For ye haue sinned agaynst the Lord, and haue not bene obedient vnto his voyce, therefore commeth this plague vpon you. Beholde, I loose the bandes from thy handes this day: yf thou wilt nowe goe with me vnto Babilon, yf then, for I will see to thee, and prouide for thee. But yf thou

Not go with me vnto Babilō, then reis at thy wil, looke where thou thinkest conuenient and good for thee to abide, there dwell. For as yet he was not gone backe agayne to Godoliah, therfore he sayd to him: Go backe to Godoliah, the sonne of Ahicam, the sonne of Shaphan: whom the king of Babilon hath made gouernour ouer the Cities of Iuda, and dwelle with him among þ people, or remain wher soener it pleaseth thee. So the chiefe captain gaue him his expences with a reward, & let him go. • Then went Jeremie vnto Godoliah, the sonne of Ahicam, to Mizpa, and dwelte there with him among the people that wer left in the land. Now when the captains of the host of Iuda, which with their felowes were scattered abroade on euery side in the lande, vnderstode doliah, the sonne of Ahicam gouernor camme to Godoliah vnto Mizpa: Namely, Ismael, the son of Natha-niah, Iohanan and Ionathan, the sons of Careah, Sarrah, the sonne of Chanhomech, the sonnes of Ophay, the Methophathite, Iesaniah, the son of Maachari with their companions And Godoliah, the sonne of Ahicam, the son of Shaphan sware vnto them and their felowes in this maner. • Be not afrayd to serue þ Caldees, dwell in the land, & do the king of Babilon seruite, so shall ye prosper. Behold, I dwell at Mizpa to be an officer in the Caldees behalfe, and to satisfie suche as come to vs. Therefore gather you wine, coyne, and oyle, and keepe them in your ware houses, and dwell in your cities that ye haue in keeping, yea al the Iewes also that dwelt in Moab vnder the Ammonites, in Idumea and in al the countreys, whē they heard that the kinge of Babilon had made Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam the sonne of Shaphan, gouernour vpon pon them that were left in Iuda. Al the Iewes (I saye) returned oute of all places where they were fled vnto, and camme into the lande of Iuda to Godoliah vnto Mizpa, and gathered wine and other fruites, and that very much. Moreover, Iohanan the sonne of Careah and all the captains of the hoste, that were scattered on euery syde in the land, came to Godoliah in Mizpa, and sayd vnto him: Knowest thou not that Baal the king of the Ammo-nites hath sent Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah to slaye thee. But Godo-liah the sonne of Ahicam beleued the not. Then sayd Iohanan the sonne of Careah, vnto Godoliah in Mizpa, these woordes secretiue. Let me go, I praye thee, and I will slaye Ismael the son of Nathaniah, so that no body shall knowe it. Wherefore will he kill thee, that al the Iewes which resozte vnto thee, might be scattered, and the remnaunt in Iuda perishe? And Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam sayde to Iohanan the son of Careah. Thou shalt not dooe it, for they are but Iyes, that thou sayest of Ismael.

The.xli. Chapter.

But in the seuenth moneth it happened. that Ismael the son of Nathaniah the sonne of Eslisama (one of the kinges blud) came with them that were greatestt aboute the king, and tenne menne that were swozne with him: vnto Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam to Mizpa, and they did eate together. And Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah with those tenne men that were swozne to him start vp, & smote Godoliah the son of Ahicam the son of Shaphan, with the sword: slew him, whom the kinge of Babilon had made gouernour of the lande. Ismael also slew al the Iewes that were with Godoliah at Mizpa, and all the Caldees, and he found ther wayting vpon him, that those that were able to fight he slew with him.
 The next day after that he had slayne Godoliah (the matter was yet vn-knowne) and ther came certaine men from Sichem, from Siloh, and Samaria,

maria, to the number of .lxxx. whiche had shaven their bearded, rente their clothes, and were all heauye, byning meate offerings and incense in their handes, to offer it in the house of the Lorde. And Ismael the sonne of Nathanah went forth to Mizpa. Weeping, to meete them. Nowe, when he met them, he saide: So your waye to Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam. And when they came in the middell of the cite, Ismael the sonne of Nathanah (with them that were sworne vnto him) slewe them, euen at the middell of the pitte. Amonge these foure scope men, there were ten, that sayde vnto Ismael: Oh slave vs not, for we haue yet a greate treasure in the fildes of wheate, barley, oyle and honye. So he spared them, and slew them not with their byethzen. Now the pit wherewith Ismael did cast the dead bodyes of the men (whom hee slewe because of Godoliah) had king Isa caused to be made for feare of Baasa the kinge of Israell, and the same pit did Ismael fill with slayne men. As for the remnant of the people, the kings daughters, and all the people that were yet leste at Mizpa, vpon whom Nabuzaradan the chiefe captayne had made Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam gouernoure: Ismaell the sonne of Nathanah caried them away prisoners toward the Ammonites. But when Iohanan the sonne of Careah, and all they which had bene captaynes ouer the kinges hoste with him, hearde of all the wickednes that Ismaell the sonne of Nathanah had done: they tooke their companions, and wente out for to fight with Ismaell the son of Nathanah, and founde him by the greate waters that are in Gibeon. Nowe when all the people, whome Ismaell led captiue, sawe Iohanan the sonne of Careah, and all the other captaynes of the host, they were glad. So al the people that Ismael had caried away from Mizpa, wer brought again. And when they returned, they came to Iohanan the son of Careah. But Ismael the sonne of Natha-nah fled from Iohanan with eght of his sworne companions, and went to the Ammonites. Then Iohanan the sonne of Careah, and all the captaynes of the hoste that were with him, toke al the remnant of the people, whom Ismael the sonne of Nathanah had led away. (When he had slayn Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam) whom they also had rescued from him: fightinge men, women, and children, and gelded men, whome they brought againe from Gibeon, and went from thence, and sat them down at Gerath Canaan, whiche lyeth beside Bethlehem: that they might go into Egypt for feare of the Caldees: of whom they were afraide, because that Ismael the sonne of Nathanah had slaine Godoliah Ahicams sonne. Whom the kinge of Babilon hadde made gouernour in the lande.

The xliij. Chapter.

So al the captains, and Iohanan the sonne of Careah, Jezaniah the sonne of Osai, came with all the people from the least vnto the moste, and sayde vnto Jeremie the Prophet. We heare our petition, that thou mayest praye for vs, vnto the Lorde thy God, namelye, for all the remnaunte, whereof there be very fewe of vs leste of manye, as thou seest vs: that the Lorde thy God maye shewe vs a waye to go in, and tell vs what we shoulde do. Then Jeremie the Prophet sayd vnto them, I haue heard you. Behold, I will pray vnto God your Lorde as ye haue required me: and looke what answer the Lorde geueth you: I shall certifie you thereof, and kepe nothing backe from you. And they sayde vnto Jeremie. Of the Lorde of truth and faithfulness be our record, that we will do al that the Lorde thy God commaundeth vs whether it be good or euil. We wil hearken vnto the voyce of the Lorde God, whom we sende thee, that we may prosper, when we haue folowed the voyce of the Lorde our God. And after tenne dayes came the voyce of the Lorde vnto Jeremie. Then calling

Johanan the sonne of Kareah, and all the captaynes of the people that were with him: yea, and al the people from the least to the mooste, and sayde vnto them: Thus sayeth the Lord God of Israel vnto whom ye sent me, to say forth your prayers before him: . Ye will dwell in this lande, I shall bryde you bype, and not breake you downe, I shall plante you, and nor roote you out, for I repent, as concerning the trouble that I haue doone to you. Feare not the king of Babilon, of whom ye stande in awe, O be not afrayde of him, sayeth the Lord, for I will be with you, to helpe you, and deliuer you from his hand, I will pardon you, I will haue mercy vpon you, and cause him to pitie you, and bryng you agayne into your owne lande. Nevertheless, yf ye purpose not to dwell in this lande, nor to follow the voyce of the Lord your God, but will saye thus, we wil not dwell here, but go into Egypte, where we shall neyther see war, heare the noyse of the trumpet, nor suffer hunger, ther will we dwell. Wherefore heare now the word of the Lord, O ye remnant of Juda. Thus sayeth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel: Yf ye be wholly purposed to go into Egypte, and to be ther as strangers, the sword that ye feared, shall overtake you in Egypt, and the hunger wherof ye be here afrayd, shall hanze vpon you, and folow you into Egypt, and there ye shall dye. And all they that of set purpose undertake to go into Egypte, to sojourne there, shall perishe with the sword, with hunger and pestilence: not one of them shall remaine, ther shall none escape the plague, that I will bring vpon them. For thus saith the Lord of hostes the God of Israel: like as my wrath and indignation is moued agaynst the inhabitoures of Ierusalem, so shall my displeasure be kindled agaynst you also, yf ye go into Egypt: and there ye shall be reuiled, abhorred, brought to shame and confusion: and as for this place, ye shall neyther see it more. The Lord forbiddeth you (O ye remnant of Juda) that ye shal not go into Egypt. And forget not that I haue warned you earnestly this daye, for ye haue dissembled with me. For ye sent me vnto the Lord your God, and said: O pray thou the Lord our God for vs, and loke what answer the Lord our God geueth thee, that bring vs agayne, and we shall do ther after. Now haue I shewed and declared vnto you, but ye haue not obeyed the voice of the Lord your God, for the which cause he hath sente me to you. Nowe therefore, . yf ye will not followe it, be sure y ye shall perishe with the sword, with hunger and pestilence, euen in the same place, where your lust is to go, and dwell.

The xliij. Chapter.

NOWE when Jeremie hadde ended all the wordes of the Lord his God vnto the people, whiche to declare the Lord their God had sente him to them, (euen all these wordes I say) Azariah the sonne of Azariah, and Johanan the sonne of Kareah with all stubberne persons, sayd vnto Jeremie: . Thou liest, the Lord our God hath not sente thee to speake vnto vs, that we shoulde not go into Egypt, and dwell there. But Baruch the sonne of Neriah prouoketh thee agaynst vs, that he might bring vs into captiuitie of the Chaldees, that they might slea vs, and carie vs away prisoners vnto Babilon. So Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the captaynes of the host, and all the people folowed not the commandement of the Lord: Namely, to dwell in the land of Juda. But Johanan son of Kareah, and al the captains of the host, caried away al the remnant in Juda, y were come together agayne fro al the hethē (among whō they had bene scattred) to dwell in the lande of Juda. When women, childre, the kinges daughters, al those that Nabuzardan the chiefe captaine had left with Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam, the sonne of Shaphan. They caried away also the prophet Jeremie, Baruch the son of Neriah, and so came into Egypte for they were not obedient vnto the commandement of God. Thus came they to Caphnis. And in Caphnis the worde of the Lord happened vnto Jeremey, saying: take greate stones in thyne hande, and hide them in the bricke wall, vnder the dooze of Pha-raos house in Caphnis, that all the men of Iuda may see, and sape vnto them. Thus sayth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel: Behold, I will sende and call for Nabuchodonosor the kinge of Babilon my seruante, and will sette his seate vppon these stones that I haue hidde, and he shall spread his tent ouer them. And when he cometh, he shall smite the land of Egypte, some with slaughter, some with prisonment, and some with the swerde. He shall sette fyre vpon the temples of the Egyptians gods, and burne them by, and take them selues prisoners. Moreover, he shall arape him selfe with the land of Egypt, like as a shepheard putteth on his coate, and shall depart his way from thence in peace. The pillars also of the temple of the Sunne, that is in Egypte, shall he breake in peces, and burne the temples of the Egyptians gods.

The .xliij. Chapter.

This is the worde that was shewed to Jeremey, concerning all the Jewes, which dwelt in Egypte, at Migdall, at Caphnis, at Noph, and in the lande of Patures.
 Thus sayth the Lord of hostes, the God of Israel: Ye haue seene all the miserie, that I haue broughte vppon Ierusalem, and vppon the cities of Iuda, so that this daye they are desolate, and no manne dwelling therein: and that because of the greate blasphemies whiche they committed, to prouoke me vnto anger. In that they went backe to do sacrifice, and worshippe vnto straunge god-des: whom neyther ye nor your fathers haue knowen. Howbeit, I sent vnto them my seruantes all the prophetes. I rose by early, I sente vnto them, and gaue them warning,

Jer. 25. a

I do not suche abhominable thinges, and thinges that I hate. But they woulde not folowe nor hearken, to turne from their wickednes, and to doo no more sacrifices vnto straunge gods. Wherefore mine indignation, & wrath was kindled, and it was by the cities of Iuda, the fields with the streetes of Ierusalem, so that they were made waste and desolate, as it is come to passe this daye. Nowe therfore, thus sayeth the Lord of hostes, the God of Israel: Howe hapneth it, that ye doo so greate euill vnto your owne soules, thus to destroy the men and women, children & babes of Juda: so that none of you is left, because ye prouoke me vnto wrath with the workes of your owne handes, when ye offer vnto straunge goddesses in the lande of Egypte, where as ye be gone to dwell. That ye might bitterly perrythe, and that ye mighte be crueld, and shamefully intreated of all nations. Ye haue ye nowe forgotten the wickednesse of your forefathers, the wickednesse of the kinges of Juda, and theyr wyues, the wickednes that ye your selues and your wiues haue done in the land of Iuda, in the citie, and in the streets of Ierusalem.
 Yet are ye not sorry vnto this day, ye feare not, neyther walke ye in my law, & in my commandements that I haue geue vnto you & your forefathers.
 Therefore thus sayth the Lord of hostes, the God of Israel: I am sick-faste aduised and determined to pun-nysh you, and to roote out all Iuda.
 As for the remnant of Iuda, that purposely went into Egypt, ther to dwell, I will take them, and they shall all be destroyed. In the lande of Egypte shall they perrythe, beinge consumed with the swerde, and with hunger.
 For from the least vnto the most, they shall perrythe with the swerde & with hunger. Moreover, they shall be condemned, abhoyred, shamed, and confounded for I will visite them that dwell in Egypte, as I haue visited Ierusalem, with the swerde, with hunger, and with pestilence. So that none of the remnant of Iuda, whiche are gone to dwell in Egypt, shall be left to come agayne into the lande of Iuda, although they thinke to come thither agayne, and to dwell there. For none shal come agayne, but such as are fled awaye. Then all the men which knew that they swines had offered vnto strange gods, and a greatesoyte of swines that stode there, yea, and all the people that dwelte there in Egypt in the cite of Patures, answered Jeremie, and saide: As for the wordes that thou hast spoken vnto vs, in the name of the Lord, we will in no wise heare them: but what former goth out of our owne mouth, that we will doe. We will doo sacrifice and offer oblations vnto the queene of heauen, like as we and our forefathers, our kinges, and our heades haue done in the Cities of Iuda, and in the streetes and feldes of Ierusalem. For then had we plenteuousnes of vittayles, then were we in prosperitie, and no misfortune came vpon vs. But sens we left to burne incense, and to do sacrifice vnto the queene of heauen, we haue had scarcenes of all thinges, and peryshe with the swerde and hunger. Last of all, when we women did sacrifice & offered vnto the queene of heauen, did we make her cakes and ypure vnto her drinkeofferings, euen to that ymage did we sacrifice and seruice, without our husbandes willes? Then sayde Jeremy vnto all the people, to the me, to the women, and to all the folke which had generhim that aunswere: Did not the Lord remember the sacrifices that ye, your forefathers, your kinges and rulers, with all the people, haue offered in the cities of Iuda, in the stretes and land of Ierusalem? and hath he not considered this in his minde? In somuche that the Lord might no longer suffer the wickednes of your inventions, and the abhominable thinges which ye did: Is not your land desolate and boyde: yea aboyred and accursed, so that no man dwelleth therein anye moze, as it is com to passe this daye? Did not all this happē vnto you, because ye made such sacrifices to ydoles, and sinned agaynst the Lord? Ye haue not sowed his boyce, to walke in his lawe, in his ordinaunces and statutes. Yea, this is the cause, that all misfortune happened vnto you, as it is come to passe this daye. Moreover, Jeremie spake vnto all the people, and to all the women. Heare the worde of the Lord all Iuda, ye that be in the lande of Egypt. Thus sayth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel: Ye and your wives haue spoken with your owne mouth, that thing that ye haue fulfilled in deede. Yea, thus haue ye saide: We will not sayle, but perfourme the bowes that we haue bowed, we will do sacrifice, and powze out drinkeofferings to the queene of heauen. Purposely will ye set by your owne meanings and perfourme your bowes. And therefore heare the wordes of the Lord, all Iuda, ye that dwell in the lande of Egypte. Beholde, I haue swozne by my great name, sayeth the Lord, that my name shall not be rehearsed through any mans mouth of Iuda, in all the land of Egypt, to say, The Lord God liueth: for I will swatche to plague them, and not for their wealth. And al the men of Iuda that be in the lande of Egypt shall peryshe with the swerde, and with hunger, vntil they be bitterly destroyed. Nevertheless, those that fled awaye for the swerde, shall come agayne into the lande of Iuda, but there shalbe verpe fewe of them. And all the remnant of Iuda, that are gone into Egypt, there to dwell, shal know whose wordes shalbe founde true, theirs or mine. Take this for a token that I will visite you in this place sayth the Lord: and that ye may knowe that I (without doubt) will perfourme my purpose vpon you to punish you. Beholde, sayth the Lord, I will deliuer Pharaos Pophrea king of Egypt into the handes of his enemies that seeke after his life: euen as I gaue Zedekiah the kinge of Iuda, into the handes of Nabuchodonosor, kinge of Babilon.

Che. xlii. Chapter.

I These are the wordes that Jerempe the prophete spake vnto Baruch the sonne of Neriah: Ier. 33. a After that he hadde wzitten these sermons in a booke at the mouth of Jerempe. In the fourthe yere of Jehoakim the sonne of Josias kinge of Juda, saying: Thus sayth the Lord God of Israel vnto thee, O Baruch: In so muche as thou thoughtest thus when thou wast wziting: Wo is me, the Lord hath geuen me sorowe vpon sorowe. I haue meried my selfe with sighing, and haue found no rest. Therefore tell him (O Jerempe) that the Lord sayeth thus: beholde, the thing that I haue buylded, will I breake downe agayne, and rote out the thing that I haue planted. Yea, this whole land. And seekst thou yet promotion? Loke not for it, and despye it not. For I will bring a miserable plague vpon all fleshe, sayeth the Lord. Ier. 21 b But thy life will I geue thee for a pray in all places, wher soeuer thou goest.

Che. xlii. Chapter.

I Here folow the wordes of the Lord to the prophete Jerempe which he spake agaynst all the Gentyles. These wordes folowing preached he to: the Egyptians concerning the hoost of Pharaos Necho kinge of Egypte: When he was in Charcainis, besyde the water of Euphrates: what time as Nabuchodonosor the kinge of Babylon slew him, in the fourth yere of Jehoakim the son of Josias king of Juda: Make ready buckler and shield, and go forth to fyght, harness your horses, and sette your selues vpon them, sette your salettes fast on, bynge footth speares, scoure your swordes, and put on your best plates. But alas, howe happeneth it, that I see you so afrayde: why thinke ye backe? They woorthies are slayne, yea, they runne so faste away, that none of them loketh behind him. Fearfulness is fallen vpon euerichone of them, sayth the Lord. The lyghtest of foote shall not see swyre, and the woorthies shall not escape. Toward the North by the water of Euphrates, they did stumble and fall. But what is he this that sweileth vp, as it were a flood, roaring and raging lyke the streames of water? It is Egypte that ryseth vpe lyke the floodde, and casteth oute the waters with so greute nospe. And he sayd: I will go vp, and will couer the earth, I will destroye the Citie with them that are therein. Get ye vp ye horses, roll forth ye charets, come forth ye woorthies: ye Moxtians, ye Libians with your bucklers, ye Libeons with your bowes. This daye of the Lord God of hoostes, is a daye of vengeance that he maye avenge him of his enemies. The swerde shall denoure, it shall be satisfied, and bathed in theyr blud. For the Lord God of hostes shall haue a slayne offeringe toward the North, by the water of Euphrates. Go vp, O Gilead, and bynne treacle vnto the daughter of Egypte, but in bayne shalt thou go to surgery: for thy wounde shall not be stopped. The heathen haue heard of thy shame, and the lande is full of thy confusion, as one stronge man did stumble vpon another, and they are fallen both together. These are the wordes that the Lord spake to the prophete Jerempe, concerning the comming of Nabuchodonosor the kinge of Babylon, whiche was sent to destroye the lande of Egypte. Preache out through the lande of Egypte, and cause it to be proclaymed at Migdal, Haph, and Caphnis, and saye: Stande still, make thee ready, for the swerde shall consume thee rounde aboute. Howe happeneth it, that thy mightie woorthies are fallen? why goodde they not fall? Euen because the Lord thurst them downe. The slaughter was great, for one fell euer still vpon another. One cried vpon another: Alas, let us go agayne to our owne people, and to our owne naturall countrey from the cruel sword. They did crye euen then

Egypt king of Egypt, thou troublous king, the time will bring sedition. As truly as I live, sayeth the king, whose name is the Lord of hostes, it shall come as the mount of Shabar, and as Libanus, if it flood in the sea. O thou daughter of Egypt make ready thy gear to sitte. For Noph shall be voyde & desolate, so that no man shall dwell therein. The land of Egypt is like a goodly, fayre calfe, but destruction shall come out of the North, I say it commeth. Her waged souldiours that be with her, are like fat calves. They also shall slee away together, and not abide: For the day of their slaughter, and the time of their visitation shall come upon them.

The crye of them, shall make a noyse as the blast of a trompette. For they shall enter in with their hostes, and come with axes, as it were hewers downe of wood. And they shall cut downe her wodde, sayeth the Lord.
They shall be innumerable: for they shall be more in number then the grasshoppers, so that no man shall be able to tell them. The daughter of Egypt is confounded, and delitered into the hands of the people of the North. Thus sayth the Lord of hostes, the God of Israel: Beholde, I will visite that restlesse people of Alexandria, Pharao, and Egypt: yea, both they: gods and their kinges: euen Pharao, and all they that put their trust in him. Yea, I will deliuer them into the handes of those that seeke after their liues. Namely into the power of Nabuchodonosor the king of Ba-bilon, and into the power of his ser-uantes. And after all these things it shall be inhabited, as afore time sayth the Lord. But be not thou asrayde (O my seruant Jacob) fear not thou O Israel. For lo, I will helpe thee from farre, and thy seede from the land of their captiuitie. Jacob also shall come agayne, and be in reste: he shall prosper, and no man shall doo him harme. Feare thou not (O Jacob, my seruant) sayth the Lord, for I am with thee: and will destroye all nations amonge whom I haue scattered thee. Neuerthelesse I will not consume thee, but chasten and correct thee yea and that with discretion: neither will I spare thee, as one that were faultlesse.

The .xliij. Chapter.

Lord spake vnto Jeremy the Prophet agaynst the Philistines, before that Pharao smote the ci-tie of Azah. Thus saith the Lord: Be-holde, there shall waters arise oute of the north, and shall growe to a great flood, running ouer, and coueringe the land, the cities, & them that dwell in the land, shall mourne at the noyse and stamping of their stronge barbed hostes, at the shaking of their charettes, and at the rombling of the wheeles. The fathers shall not loke to their children, so feeble and weary shall their handes be: at the same time when he shall be there, to destroy the whole land of the Philistines: he shall make wast bothe Cyprus, Sidon, and all other that are sworne vnto them. For the Lord will destroy the Philistines, the remnant of the ple of Chaptor. Wail-nes is come vpon Azah, Ascalon with her other bailleys shall kepe her peace.
Howe longe wilt thou slaye, O thou sword of the Lord: when wilt thou ceasse? Turne agayne into thy sweete reste, and leaue it off. But howe can it ceasse: when the Lord him selfe hath geuen him a charge against Ascalon, and rayed it vp against the Cities of the sea coast.

agaynst Moab: Wo be to the Citie of Hebo, for it is layde waste brought to confusion: and Cariath-iaram taken, Misgab is brought to shame and asrayde, Moab can boast no more of Hesebon: for they haue de-

Gentiles, and that the Madmen may no more be thought vpon, and the swearde shall persecute thee. A voyce shall crye from Hozonaim: with great waiking and destruction is Moab made desolate. Children could tell of the cry thereof. For at the going vp into Luith, he arose with lamentation and mourninge, and downe towarde Hozonaim, they heard a cruell and dreadly cry. Get you awayne, saue your liues, and be like vnto the heath in the wilderness. For because thou hast trusted in thine owne woozkes and treasure, thou shalt be taken. Chamos, with his priesles and Princes shall go aaway into captiuitie. The destroyer shall come vpon all cities, none shall escape. The valleys shall be destroyed, and the fieldes shall be laide waste, like as the Lord hath spoken. Geue winges vnto Moab, that shee gette her aaway speedely: for her cities shall be made so desolate, & no man shall dwell therein. Cursed be he that doeth the worke of the Lord negligently, & cursed bee he that keepeth backe his sweard from shedding of bloude. Moab hath euer bene riche and carelesse from her youth vp, she hath sitten and taken her ease with her treasure. Shee was neuer yet put out of one besell into an other (for is) she neuer went aaway into captiuitie, therefore her tast remaineth, and her sauour is not yet changed. But lo, the time cometh, saith the Lord, that I shall sende her trussers to trusse her vp, whiche shall remoue her from her dwelling: and to empye her vessels, and breake her wine pottes. And Moab shall be ashamed of Chamos, lyke as Israel was ashamed of Bethel, wherein she put her trust. Wherefore do ye thinke thus: We are mighty and stronge men of warre: Moab is destroyed, and her cities bzent vp, her chosen younge men be slaine, saith the king, whose name is the Lord of hostes. The destruction of Moab cometh on a pace, and her fall is at hand. All her neighbours shall mourne for her, and all they that knowe her name shall saye, O

howe hapneth it, that the stronge hath and the goodly rodde is thus broken? And thou daughter Dibon, come downe from thy gloze: and sitte in thyll. For he that destroyeth Moab shall come vp to thee also, and breake downe thy stronge holden. And thou that dwellest in Aroer, get thee to the strete, and loke about thee: aske them that are fled & escaped, and saye: What thing is hapned? Oh Moab is confounded and overcome. Mourne and cry, tel it out at Arnon, that Moab is destroyed. For indignement shall come vpon the playne lande: Namely, vpon Holon, and Jahazah, vpon Mephath and Dibon, vpon Mabo, and the house of Deblathaim, vpon Ceriath iarim, and vpon the house of Gamul, vpon the house Maon, & Carioth, vpon Bozrah, & all the cities in the lande of Moab whether they lye far or nere. The horne of Moab is smitten downe and her arme broken, sayth the Lord. Make her drunken, for she magnified her selfe about the Lord: that men may clappe their handes at her vomite, and that she also may be laughed to scorn. O Israel, thou shalt not laugh him to scorn, when he is taken amongst thienes. Yea, because of thy wordes that thou hast spoken against him, thou shalt be driuen away. Ye Moabites shall leane the cities, and dwell in rockes of stone, and become lyke doues that make their nests in holes. As for Moabs pryde, we haue heard of it: she is verie hyge minded. I knowe her stoutnesse, her boasting, her arrogancie, and the pryde of her stomacke, sayth the Lord. I knowe (sayth the Lord) her indignation, she doeth not right, her wordes are lyes, and they haue not dealt truly. Therefore shall there mourning be made for Moab, and euery man shall crye for Moabs sake: A lamentation shall be made to the men that stande vpon the wall. So shall I mourne for thee also, O Jazer, and for thee, O thou vineyarde of Sabanah. Thy wyne branches shall come ouer the sea, and the branches of Jazer, but vnto the sen, the destroyer shall breake into thy barnell and grape gatl, ering: myrrh and chere shall be taken away from the symbel syde, and from the whole land of Moab. Ther shall be no swete wyne in the pisse, the treader shall haue no stomacke to crye, yea, there shall be none to crye vnto him: which sometyme were hearde from Hesebon to Eleale and Jahaz, whiche lye-ted vpp thez voyce from Zoar vnto Hozonaim, that bullocke of thzee yere olde shall goe mourninge. The waters also of Memrim shall be dyed f by. Moreover I will make Moab crosse, sayeth the Lord, from the offe-sprynges and censpryng that shee hath made vnto her goddes in hye places.

Wherefoze my hearte mourneth for Moab, lyke a crowde playing an heaue songe, and for the mennes sake of the bakke wall, my hearte mourneth also: euen as a pipe that pipeth a dole-full songe, for they shall be verpe fewe, and destroyed. All heades shall be sharen, and al beards clipped of, all han-des bounde, and loynes girded about with sackcloth. Upon all the house toppes and strettes of Moab, there shall be lamentable mourning: for I will breake Moab lyke an vnprofy-table vessel, sayeth the Lord. Howe is she destroyed? Howe mourneth she? Howe doeth Moab hange downe her heade, and she ashamed?
Thus shall Moab bee a laughinge stocke, and hadde in derision of all them that be rounde aboute her. For thus sayeth the Lord: Beholde, the ennemye shall come slepyng as an Eagle, and spreade his wynges vpon Moab. They shall clymbe ouer the walles, and win strong holdes. Then the mightie mens heartes in Moab shall be like the heart of a woman tra-uayling with childe. And Moab shall be made so desolate, that she shall no-more be a people, because she hath set by her selfe agaynst the Lord. Feare, pynne and snare shall come vpon thee, Moab, sayeth the Lord. Who so climbeth the steepe, shall fall in the pyt: and he that getteth out of the pit, shall be taken in the snare. For I will brynge a yere of visitation vpon Moab, sayth the Lord. They that are able to flee, shall stande vnder the shadowe of Hesebon. For there shall go a fyze out of Hesebon, and a flame from Sion, and shall burne vpon that proud people of Moab, and the toppe of those sedicious chylidren. Woe be vnto thee, Moab, for thou people of Chamos shall perishe. Yea, thy sons and daughters shall be ledde awaye captiue. Yet at the laste will I brynge Moab out of captiuitie agayne, sayth the Lord.

Thus farre is of the plage of Moab.

The xlix. Chapter.

Concerning the Ammonites, thus the Lord sayth: Hath Israel no chylidren, or is he wout an heyre? Why hath your kinge then taken Gad in? Wherefoze doeth his people dwel in his cities. Behold therefoze, the time commeth, sayth the Lord, that I will brynge a noyle of warre into Rabah of the Ammonites: and it shall be layde on a desolate heape, and her cities bzent vpon, and the Israelites shall be lordes ouer those that had them in possession afore, sayeth the Lord. Hesebon shall mourne, for he shall be rooted out of the ground, sayeth the Lord. The Cities of Rabah shall crye out, and gyze theym selues with sackcloth: they shall mourne, and runne aboute the walles, for their kinge shall be ledde awaye prysoner, yea, his Princes and Princes with him. Wherefoze trustest thou in the valley: thy valley hath flowed awaye, thou feare daughter, and thinkest thou that thou arte so safe, by reason of thy tre-soure, that no man shall come to thee?

Ier. 18 b Idumea shall be a wilderness: whoso Gen. 19 c goeth by it shall be abashed, and wonder at all her miserable plagues, • Like as Sodome, Gomorra, and the citie that laye thereabout were turned by spede downe, saith the Lord: so shall no body dwell in Idumea, and no man shall haue his habitation there. Be-holde, like as the Lion, so shall a destroyer come vppon from the pleasant medowes of Jordan vnto the stronge dwelling place: and when I haue made him quiet, I will make him to flee from her, and all chosen men will I set in aray agaynst her: who is like vnto me? What is he that will strue with me? What shepheard may stande in my handes? • Therefore, heare the councell of the Lord that he had taken vpon Idumea, and his purpose that he hath deuised vpon the citezens of Cheman. The leaue of the flocke shall teare them in peeces: and loke what saye thing they haue, they shall make it waste, and them selues also. At the noyse of theyr fall, the earth shall quake, the crye of theyr voyce shall be heard vnto the red sea.

Beholde, the enemye shall come and flee by hither, like as it were an Eagle, and spede his winges vpon Borsah.
Then shall the hertes of the worshipers of Edom be as the heart of a woman trauayling of child. • Vpon Damascus Hamath and Arphad shall come confusion, for they shall heare euill tydings, they shall be tolled to and fro, like the sea that cannot stand still. Damascus shall be for a strayde, and shall flee, trembling shall come vpon her.
Sorrowe and payne shall ouertake her, as a woman trauayling of child.
But howe shold so worshipful & glorious a citie be forsaken: heare therefore, her ponge men shall fall in the streets, and all her men of warre shall be taken away in that time, saith the Lord of hostes. I will kindle a fyre in the walles of Damascus, which shall consume the palace of Benhadad.
• As for Cedar and the kingdome of Hazor, whom Nabuchodonosor the kinge of Babilon smote downe, the Lord hath spoken thus vpon them: Arise, and get you by vnto Cedar, & destroy the people towards the East.

Their tentes and their flockes shall they take away: Yea, their hanginges and their vessels. Their camels also shall they carry away with the. They shall crye to them. Feare is on euerye syde. Flee, get you soone away, creepe into caues, that ye may dwell there, O ye inhabitants of Hazor, sayth the Lord: For Nabuchodonosor the king of Babylon hath holden a counsell concerning you, and concluded his devise against you. Arise & get you vp against yonder rich and carelesse people (saith the Lord) which haue neyther gates nor doze bars, but dwell alone. Their camels shalbe stolen, and the droues of their cattell diuinen away. Moreover, those wil I scatter toward al the windes, and bring them to destruction: yea, and that throughe their own families, sayth the Lord. Hazor also shalbe a dwelling for dragons, & an euell lasting wilderness, so that no bodye shall dwell there, and no man shall haue there his habitation. These are the wordes that the Lord spake to the prophete Jeremy, concerning Elam in the beginning of the reigne of Zedekiah king of Iuda. Thus saith the Lord of hostes: Behold, I wil breake the bowe of Elam, and take awaye their strength: and vpon Elam I wil bring the foure windes from the four quarters of heuen, and wil scatter the against the same four windes. And there shalbe no people, but some of Elam shall flee vnto them. For I wil cause Elam to be afraide of their enemies, and of the that seke their liues, and wil bring vpon them the indignation of my wrath, sayth the Lord. And I wil persecute them with the sword, so longe till I haue brought them to naught: I will set my throne in Elam. I will destroye bothe the kinge and the princes from thence, sayth the Lord. But in proces of time I wil bring Elam out of captiuitie againe, sayth the Lord.

The .i. Chapter.

The wordes that the Lord spake vnto the prophete Jeremy, concerning Babylon, and the lande of the Chaldees: Preach amonge the Gentiles, let your voyce be heard, make a token, crye out, kepe no silence but saie: Babylon is wonne. • Wel is confounded, and Herodach is overcome. • Yea, their gods be brought to shame, and their images burst in peeces. For out of the North there doth come a people agaynst her, which make her land so waste, that no bodye dwell therein, neyther man nor beast: for they flee and departe from thence. • In those dayes and at that tyme, sayth the Lord, the children of Israel shall come, they & the children of Iuda, weping and making halt, and shal seke the Lord their God. They shal aske the way to Syon, thither shall they turne theyr faces, sayinge: Come and we will cleane to the Lord, in a couenaunt that neuer shalbe broken. My people hath bene a lost flocke, my shepherdes haue discaued them, and haue made them go astraye vpon the hilles. They haue gone from the mountaynes to the litle hill, and gotten their folde. All they that came vpon them, haue deuoured them, and theyr enemies sayde: We haue made no defaulte agaynst theym, for they haue displeased the Lord: yea, euen the Lord, which is the bewtife of their rightousnesse, and that defended their fathers. Yet shall ye flee from Babylon, and departe oute of the lande of the Chaldees, and be ye as the rammes that goo before the flocke. • For loo, I will wake vpon hoste of people from the North: then lande, and bringe them vpon Babylon: these shall laye siege to it, and winne it. Their arrows shall not misse, lyke as a cunninge archer shooteth not wronge. And the Chaldees shall bee spoyled, and all they that spoyle them, shall bee satisfied, sayeth the Lord. • although ye were so cheerefull and gladd, to treade downe myne herbage, and fulfilled youre pleasures, as the calves in the grasse, and triumphed over them like the bulles, when he had gotten the victorie. Your mothers shall be sore confounded, and they that bare you, shall come to shame. She shall be the least set by amonge the nations, boyde, waisted, and dyed by. No man shall be able to dwell ther, for the feare of the Lord, but she shall be whole desolate. • All they that go by Babylon, shall stande still, and be abashed, and shall wonder at all her plagues. So forth in your arraye agaynst Babylon rounde about, all ye that can handle bowes: shoote at her, spare no arrowes, for she hath sinned agaynst the Lord. Crye out vpon her, vpon her, agaynst her rounde about: she shall yeld her selfe, her foundations shall fall, and her walles shall come downe: for it shall be the vengeance of the Lord. • Yea, vengeance shall be taken of her, and as she hath done, so deale ye with her. Rote out the tower from Babylon, and him that handleth the sickle in Barueste. For feare of the sword of the enemy, euery man shall get him to his owne people: and euery man shall flee to his owne lande. • Israel is a scattered flocke, the lions haue dispersed them.

4.re.17.e • Firste the king of the Assyrians deuoured them, • laste of all this Nabuchodonosor king of Babylon hath brooked all their boones. Therefore thus sayeth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel: Beholde, I will visite the kinge of Babylon and his kingedome, as • I haue visited the kinge of the Assyrians, and wil bringe Israel agayne to his pleasaunt pasture, that he may fede vpon Carmell and Basan, and be satisfied vpon the mount of Ephraim and Galiaad. In those dayes and at the same time, sayeth the Lord, yf the offence of Israel be soughte for, there shall none be founde. If men enquire for the sinne of Iuda, there shall be none: for I will be mercifull vnto them, whom I suffer to remayne ouer. So downe, O thou auenger, into the enemyes lande, and visite them that dwell therin: do wne with them, and smite them vpon the backes, sayth the Lord, do according to all that I haue commaunded thee. • There is gone about the lande a crye of a slaughter, and greate murther, nameiye on this manner. • Howe happeneth it, that the hammer of the whole worlde is thus broken and brooked in sunder? Howe chaunceth it that Babylon is become a wilderness among the heathen on this maner? • I my selfe haue layd wayt for thee, and thou art taken, vswares arte thou trapped and snared: for whye? thou hast prouoked the Lord vnto anger. The Lord hath opened his house of ordinance, & brought forth the weapons of his wrath, for the thing that is done in the lande of the Chaldees, it is the Lord of hostes worke. Come agaynst her, for this is her ende, breake by her chestes, thyrt her as ye thyshe coyns, destroe her, that nothinge shall be left. • Slaye all their mightye souldiers, and putte them to deathe. Wo be vnto them, for the daye and time of their visitation is at hande. • We thinke I haue already a crye, of them that be fled and escaped out of the lande of Babylon, which shew in Sion the vengeance of the Lord our God, the vengeance of his temple: yea, a voyce of them, that crye agaynst Babylon. Call by all the archers agaynst Babylon, pitche your tentes round aboute her, that none escape. • Recompence her as she hath deserued, and accordinge as she hath doone, so deale with her agayne, for she hath • set by her selfe agaynst the Lord, agaynst the holie one of Israel. • Therefore shall her yonge men fall downe in the streets, and all her men of warre shall be roted out in that daye, sayth the Lord. Beholde, I speake vnto thee, O thou proud, sayth the Lord God of hostes, for thy day shall come, euen the time of thy visitation. And the proud shall stumble and fall, and no man shall helpe him by. I will burne by his cities with fire, and it shall consume all that is rounde about him. • Thus sayth the Lord

Lorde of hostes: the children of Israel and Iuda suffer violence together. All they that haue them in captivity, kepe them faste, and will not let them goo, but their auenger and redeemer is mightye, whose name is the Lord of hostes, he shall maintaine their cause, he shall make theyr lande shake, and iudge them that dwell therein, one with another. The swerde shall come vpon the Caldees, sayeth the Lord, vpon them that dwell in Babylon, vpon their princes, and vpon their wise men. The swerd vpon their southsayers, as for those they shall become fooles. The swerd vpon their worthyes, so that they shall stand in feare. The swerd vpon their hoysmen and charettes, and vpon all the common people that dwell vnder them, so that they shall all become like women. The swerde vpon theyr treasure, so that it shall be stolen away. I brought vpon their waters, so that they shall be dryed vp. For the lande worshippeth ymages, and delireth in strange wonderfull thinges. Herfor shall wild beasts, Lamia, and cat of mountaynes, and estriches dwell therein, for there shall neuer man dwell there, neyther shall any man haue his habitation there for euermore. Like as God destroyed Sodome and Gomorre, with the cities that laye there about, sayeth the Lord: So shall no man dwell there also, neyther shall any man haue there his habitation. Wherefore, there shall come a people from the north with a great bonde of men, and many kinges shall stand vp from the endes of the earthe. They beare bowes and bucklers, cruell are they and vnnmercifull. Their voyce roareth like the raging sea, they ryde vpon horses, and come weaponed to fight agaynst thee, O Babylon. As soon as the king of Babylon heareth tell of them, his handes shall waxe feeble. Sorow and heauynesse shall come vpon him, as a woman traoueling with childe. Beholde, like as thou comest vp from the plaines vnder the shadow of Iordana vnto the grene pastures of Echan, so will I driue them forth, and make them run agaynst her. But whom shall I chose oute: and ordeyne to suche a thinge? For who is like mee, or who will strine with me? or what shewe I maye stande agaynst me? Therefore, heare the counsell that the Lord hath geuen vpon Babylon, and the denise that he hath taken vpon the lande of the Chaldees. The least amonge the people shall teare them in peeces, and loke what pleasant thing they haue they shall laye it waste. The noyse at the winning of Babylon shall moue the earth, and the crye shall be heard amonge the Gentiles.

The .lii. Chapter.

Thus hath the Lord sayde: beholde, I will raise vp a perilous winde agaynst Babylon and her citizens, that beare euill will agaynst me. I wil send also into Babylon fanners, to fanne her out, and to destroye her lande: for in the day of her trouble they shall be about her on euery side. Moreover, the Lord hath sayd vnto the bowmen, and to them that clime ouer the walles in by the places. Ye shall not spare her younge men, kill downe all her hoste. Thus the slayne shall fall downe in the lande of the Caldees, and the wounded in the stretes. As for Israel and Iuda they shall not be forsaken of theyr god, of the Lord of hostes, for the help one of Israels sake: no, though they haue filled all their land full of sinne. Slee aswape from Babylon, euery man saue his life, that ye be not roated out with her wickednes, for the time of the Lordes vengeance is come: yea, he will reward her agayne. Babylon hath berne in the Lordes hande, a golden cuppe that maketh all landes dronken. Of her wyne haue all people dronken: therefore, are they out of their wittes. But suddenly is Babylon fallen, & destroyed. Mourne for her, bringe plasters for her woundes, if she maye peraduenture be healed agayne. We would haue made Babylon whole, say they.

Set vp tokens vpon the walles of Babylon, make your watch strong, set your watchmē in aray: yea, holde priue watches, and yet for all that shall the Lord go forth with the deuice, which he hath take vpon them that dwell in Babylon. O thou that dwellest by the great waters. O thou that hast so great treasure and riches, thine ende is come, and the reueninge of thy winninges. The Lord of hostes hath sworn by him self, that he wil ouerwhelme the with men, like gresshoppers in number, whiche with a courage shall crye, alarum, alarum agaynst thee. Yea, euen Jer. 35 b the Lord of hostes, that with his power made the earth, with his wisdom prepared the rounde world, and with his discretion spied out the heuens, as some as he letteth his voyce be heard, the waters in the ayre waxe scarce. He draweth vp the cloudes from the ende of the earth. He toucheth the lightnings to raine, he bringeth the windes out of their secrete places, if they be esteemed by their wisdom, all men are become fooles. O founded be all the caskers of ymagines: for the thinge that they make, is but disscate, and hath no bzeth. Mayne is it and an erroneous worke, and in the time of visitation it shall perish. Nevertheless, the portion of Jacob is none such, but he that made all things whose name is the Lord of hostes, he is the rod of his inheritance. Thou hast beene myne hammer and weapons for warre, for with thee haue I broken the people in peeces, and with thee haue I destroyed kingdomes. Through thee I haue beaten to powder horse and horseman: yea, the charrettes and suche as sat vpon them. Through thee I haue broken manne and woman, olde and yonge, bachelor and mayden. Through thee, I haue destroyed the shepheardes and his flocke, the husbandman and his catel, the princes and their rulers. Therefore will I reward the Citie of Babylon and all her citizens, the Chaldees, with all the euill whiche they haue done vnto Shō, yea, that ye your selues shall see it, sayth the Lord: Behold, I come vpon thee, thou nailsome hill, sayth the Lord: thou that destroyest all landes, I will streche out my hande ouer thee, and calte thee downe from the stony rockes, and will make thee a bzent hill, so that nether corner stones nor pynacles, nor foundations of stones shalbe taken anpe more out of thee, but waste and desolate shalte thou lye for euermore, sayth the Lord. Set vp a token in the lande, blowe the trumpettes amonge the hearthen, prouoke the nations agaynst her, call the kingdomes of Ararat, Minni, and Ascanes agaynst her. Set the prince agaynst her, bzing as great a sorte of terrible horses agaynst her, as if they were gresshoppers. Prepare agaynst them the people of the Medes with their kinges, princes, and all their chiefe rulers: yea, and the whole lande that is vnder him. The land also shall shake and be asrayde when the deuice of the Lord shall come forth agaynst Babylon, to make the land of Babylon so waste, that no man shall dwell any more therein. The worthies of Babylon shal leaue the battayle, and kepe theym selues in stronge holdes, they strength hath fayled them, they shalbe like women. Their dwelling places shalbe bzent by, they barres shalbe broken. One pursuauant shall meete another, yea one poste shall come by another, to bzinge the Kinge of Babylon tydinges, that his citie is taken on euery syde, the soodes

the fennes brente vp, and the foulders foze aftrayde. For thus fayeth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel: the daughter of Babilon hath bene in her tyme, lyke as a thyrling flooze, but shortlye shall her haruett come. Nabuchodonosor the king of Babilon hath deuoured and destroyed me, he hath made me an emptie vessel. He swallowed me vp lyke a dragon, and fylled his belpe with my delicates, he hath caste me out, he hath taken my substance away, and the thinge that was left me hath he caried vnto Babilon, sayth the daughter that dwelleth in Sion: yea, and my bloud also vnto the Chaldees, sayth Jerusalem. Therefore thus sayth the Lord: Beholde, I will defende thy cause, and auenge thee: I will drinke vp her sea, and drye vp her water springes. Babilon shall become an heape of stones, a dwelling place for dragons, a fearfulnes and wondering, because no manne dwelleth there. They shall roare together lyke lions, and as the yonge lions when they be angrye, so shall they bend them selues. In their hate I shall geue them a dinner, and they shall be drunken for tope. Then shall they sleepe an euerlasting sleepe and neuer wake, sayth the Lord. I shall carrie theym downe to be slayne lyke sheepe, lyke wethers and goates, howe was Helach won? howe was the glorie of the whole land taken: howe happeneth it, that Babilon is so wondred at among the heathen: the sea is risen ouer Babilon, and hath couered her with his greate waues. Her Citie are layde waste, the lande lyeth vnbuyded and boyde, it is a lande where no man dwelleth, and wher no man traueileth throughe. Moreover, I wil visit Bel at Babilon, and the thing that he hath swallowed vnto, that same shall I plucke out of his mouth. The Gentiles also shall runne no moze vnto him, yea, and the walles of Babilon shall fall. My people, com out of Babilon, that every man may save his life, from the fawfull mouth of the Lord, Be not faynt hearted, and feare not at euery rumoure that shalbe heard in the land, for euery yeare byngyth newe tydinges, and in the yeare folowing newe tydinges, and robbing in the lande, and Lord vppon Lord. And loe, the tyme cometh, that I will visite the ymages of Babilon, and the whole lande shalbe confounded: yea, and her slape shall lye in the middelt of her. Heauen and carthe with all that is therein, shall reioyce ouer Babilon, when the destroyers shall come vpon her from the North, sayth the Lord.

Like as Babilon hath beaten down Jer. 50. and slayne manye out of Israel, so shall there fall many, and be slayne in all her kingdome. Ye that haue escaped the sword, halt thou, stand not stil, remember the Lord a farre of, and thinke vpon Jerusalem, for we were ashamed to heare the blasphemies: our faces were couered with shame, because the strange aleantes came into the Sanctuary of the Lord. wherefore beholde (sayth the Lord) the time cometh that I will visite the ymages of Babilon, and throughe the whole land they shall mourne and fall.

Though Babilon clymed vp into Jer. 49. heauen, and kepte her power an hys, yet shall I sende her destroyers sayth the Lord. A pitious crye shalbe heard from Babilon, and a great misery fro the lande of the Chaldees, when the Lord destroyeth theym, and when he drieth out the proud stomacke and proude boasting, wherewith they haue bene as furios as the swanes of greate water floudes, and made greate crakes with theyr woozdes. For the destroyers shall come vppon her (euene vppon Babilon) whiche shall take their worthies, and breake theyr bowes: for God is disposed to auenge him selfe vpon them, and sufficientye, to recompence theym. Yea (sayeth the Lord) I will make their princes, their wyse men, their chiefs rulers, and all their worthies, drunken: soo that they shall sleepe an euerlasting sleepe, and neuer walke. Thus sayeth the kinge, whole whose name is the Lord of Hostes. Moreover, thus saith the Lord of Hostes. The thicke wall of Babylon shall be broken, and her hye gates shall be brent by. And the thinge that the Gentiles, and the people haue wrought with greate trauayle and labour shall comme to naughte, and be consumed in the fyre. This is the charge that Ieremie gaue vnto Saraiah the sonne of Ieriah, the sonne of Maasiah, when he went towarde Babylon with Zedekiah the kinge of Iuda, in the fourth yere of his reygne. Now this Saraiah was a peaceable prince: Ieremie wrote in a booke all the misery that should come vpon Babylon, yea, and all these sermons that he wrotten agaynst Babylon, and gaue Saraiah his charge. When thou comest vnto Babylon, see that thou reade all these wordes, and say: O Lord thou arte determined to roote out this place, so that neither people nor cattell shal dwel there anye more, but to lye waste for euer, and when thou haste reade oute the booke, bynde a stone to it, and cast it in the midst of Euphrates, and say: Euen thus shall Babylon sincke, and be thrast downe with the burthen of trouble that I wil bring vpon her, so that she shal neuer come by again. Thus saue are the preachinges of Ieremy.

Ch. liij. Chapter.

Zedekiah was one & twentie yere olde, when he was made king, and he reygned euen yere in Ierusalem.

His mothers name was Hamutal, Ieremies daughter of Iibna. He lyued wickedly befoze the Lord, euen as Iehoaikim did. For the Lord was angrie at Ierusalem and Iuda, so longe till he had caste them out of his presence. And Zedekiah fell from the kinge of Babylon. But in the ninth yere of his reygne, in the tenth moneth, in the tenth day of the moneth it happened, that Nabuchodonosor the kinge of Babylon with all his hoste came befoze Ierusalem, and besieged it, and made them bulwarkes rounde about it. And this besiering of the Citie endured vnto the eleventh yere of king Zedekiah. And in the fourth moneth, the ninth daye of the moneth, there was so great hunger in the Citie, that there were no more bytapes for the people of the lande. So all the souldiers brake away, and fled out of the citie by night through the way of the porte betweene the two wallen by the kinges garden. Nowe the Chaldees had compassed the citie round about, yet went these men their way towarde the wildernes. And so the Chaldees folowed vpon them, and toke Zedekiah the kinge in the felde of Iericho, when his host was run from him: So they caried the kinge a waye prisoner to Reblath, vnto the kinge of Babylon in the lande of Hamath, where he gaue iudgement vpon him. The kinge of Babylon also caused Zedekias sonnes to be slayne befoze his face, yea, and put al the princes of Iuda to deathe at Reblath. Moreover, he put out the eyes of Zedekia, & caused him to be bound with two cheynes, to be caried vnto Babylon, and let him lye in prison, till he dyed. Now the tenth day of the fifth moneth in the. xix. yere of Nabuchodonosor the kinge of Babylon, Nabuzardan the chiefe captayne and the kinge of Babylons seruantes came vnto Ierusalem, and byente vppon the house of the Lord. He byent by also the kinges palace, all the houses, and all the gorgeous buildinges in Ierusalem. And the whole host of the Chaldees that wer with the chiefe captayne brake downe all the wallen of Ierusalem rounde about. As for the poore people and such folke as yet was left in the citie, which also were fallen to the kinge of Babylon: yea, and what people as yet remayned, Nabuzardan the chiefe captayne caried them a waye prisoners. But the poore people of the countrey did Nabuzardan the chiefe captayne leaue in the lande, to occupy the vineyardes and felde. The Chaldees also brake & baden pillers that wer in the house of the Lord.

per, the seat and the brasen lauer that was in the house of the Lozde, and carried all the metall of them vnto Babilon. They toke away also the cauldrons, shouels, fleshehookes, sprinklers, spones, and all the brasen vessel that was occuppyed in the seruice: with the basens, colepane, sprinklers, pots, candlestickes, spones, and cups: wherof some were of golde, and some of silver. The chiefe captaine toke also the two pillers, the lauer, the. xij. brasen bullockes that stode vnder the seat: which king Salomon made in the house of the Lozde: and all the vessel conteyned so much metall, that it might not be swept. For every piler was eyghtene cubites hye: and the rope that went about it, was twelue cubites, and foure fingers thicke and rounde. Nowe vpon the rope were brasen knoppes, and every knop was five cubites hye: and vpon the knoppes were whopes, and pomgranates rounde about of cleane brasse. After this maner were bothe the pillers fashioned with the pomgranates, wherof there were an hundred and xlii. which hanged vpon the whopes round about. The chiefe captayn also toke Shariah the hye priest, and Sophoniah that was chiefe next him, and the thre keepers of the treasure. He toke out of the Citie a chamberlayne which was a captayne of the souldiers, and seuen men that were the kinges seruantes, which were founde in the Citie, and Sepher a captayne, that bled to muster the men of war, with threescore men of the countrey that were take in the citie. These Nabuzaradan the chiefe captaine toke, and carried them to the king of Babilon vnto Babel: and the king of Babilon caused them to be put to death at Babel in the land of Hemath. And thus Iuda was ledde away captiue, out of his owne lande. This is the summe of the people, whom Nabuchodonosor led away captiue. In the seventh yere of his reigne, he carried away of the Iewes, three thousande and thre and twenty. In the. xviij.

yere Nabuchodonosor caried awaye from Ierusalem eyght hundred thirtye and two personnes. In the. xxij. yere of Nabuchodonosor, Nabuzaradan the chiefe captayne, tooke awaye seuen hundred, sortie and five Iewes prisoners. The whole summe of all the prisoners, is foure thousande and sixe hundred. In the. xxxij. yere after that Jehoakim the king of Iuda was caried away in the. xxv. daye of the. xij. moneth, Evilmerodach kinge of Babilon (the same yere that he reigned) gaue Jehoakim the king of Iuda his pardon, and let him oute of prison, & spake louingly to him. And set his trone aboue the trones of the other kinges that were with him in Babilon. He chaunged also the clothes of his prison, yea, and he did eate with him al his life long. And he had a continuall iuiuing geuen him of the kinge of Babilon, every daye a certayne thing allowed him all the dayes of his life, vntill he dyed.

The end of the booke of the Prophet Jeremy.

The lamentations of Jeremy.

The first Chapter.

Alas, howe sitteth the Citie so desolate, that sometyme was full of people: Howe is shee become like a widow, which was the lady of all nations: Howe is she brought vnder tribute, that ruled all landes. She weepeth sore in the nighte, so that the teares runne downe her cheekes: for among all her louers, there is none that geth her any comforte: yea her nexte frendes transgresse agaynst her, and are become her enemyes. Iuda is taken prisoner, because she was defiled: and for seruinge so manye strange gods, she dwelleth nowe amonge the heathen. Shee findeth no rest, al they that persecuted her, tooke her in strait places where she coulde not escape. The streetes of Sion mourne, because no man commeth nomore to the solempne feastes. All her gates are desolate, her pickets make lamentation, her maydens are carefull, and she her selfe is in great heauynes. Her enemyes haue ben rulers ouer her, and her enemyes haue prospered: because the Lord hath chastened her for her great wickednes: her children are led away captiue befoze their enemy.

All the bewtife of the daughter of Sion is away, her princes are become like hartes, that fynde no pasture. They are diuyn away befoze they enemy, so that they haue no more power. Nowe doth Jerusalem remember the time of her miserie and disobedience, yea, the ioye and pleasure that she hath had in times past, seeing her people is brought down throughe the power of their enemy, & there is no man for to helpe her: her enemyes stande lookinge at her, and laugh her. Shaboth dapes to scozne. Jerusalem hath sinned euery more and more, therefore is she come in decay. All they that had her in honour despise her, for they haue sene her filthynes. Yea, she spgheth, and is ashamed of her selfe. Her skirtes are defiled, she remembred not what wold soloow: therfore is her fall so wonderfull, and there is no man to comforte her.

The Lord consider my trouble, for mine enemy hath the vpper hand. The enemy hath put his hand to all the precious thinges that she had, yea, euery befoze her eyes came the heathen in and out of the Sanctuary: whō thou (neuertheless) haste forbidden to come within thy congregation. All her people seeke they bread with heauynes, and loke what precious thing euery man hath, that geueth he for meate, to saue his lyfe. Consider, O Lord, and see howe vile I am become. Haue ye no regarde. All ye that go foze by, behold and see, if there be any sorrowe lyke vnto mine, where with the Lord hath troubled me, in the day of his fearefull wrath,

Eren. 2.6

From above hath he sente before a fire into my bones, and it burneth me cruelly: he hath layed a net for my feet, and thysowen me wyde open: he hath made me desolate, so that I must euer be mourning. The yoke of my transgression is come at the last, with my hand hath he taken it by, and put it about my necke. My strength is gone, the Lord hath deliuered me into the handes, wherout I can not quite my self. The Lord hath destroyed all the mighty men, that wer in me. He hath proclaymed a feast, to slaughter all my beske men. The Lord hath troden downe the daughter of Juda, like as it were in a wyne presse. Therefore do I wepe, and mine eyes gush out of water: for the comforte that shoud quicken me, is farre from me. My children are diuyn away, for wythe the enemy hath gotten the ouer hand. Sion casteth out her hands, and there is no man to comforte her. The Lord hath layed the enemyes rounde about Jacob, and Jerusalem is become abomination in the midst of them. The Lord is righteous, for I haue prouoked his countenance vnto anger. I take hede al ye my people, and consider my heauynesse. My maydens and my yong men are lead away into captiuitie. I called for my louers (but they beguiled me) for my priestes and counsailers, but they perished: euery while they soughte for meate, to saue their liues. Consider (O Lord) howe I am troubled, my wombe is disquieted, my heart turneth about in me, and I am full of heauynes, because I rebelled against thee. The swerde barbed me without, and within I am lyke vnto death. They heare my mourning, but there is none that will comforte me. All mine enemyes haue heard of my trouble, and are glad thereof, because thou haste doone it, and thou hast brought forth the time whiche thou calledst, when they also shall be like vnto me. From thee that com at the aduersitie, thou shalt plucke them away, as thou hast plucked me, cause of al my wickednes. For my sorow is very greate, and my heart is heavy.

Alas, howe hath the Lord darkened the daughter of Zion so sore in hys wrathe: As for the honour of Israel, he hath cast it downe from heauen vnto the earth. Howe happeneth it, that he remembred not his owne foote stole when he was angrie: The Lord hath cast downe all the habitations of Jacob without any fauoure, all the stronge places of the daughter of Iuda hath he broken in his wrathe, and throughten them downe to the ground: her kingdome & her princes hath he suspended. In the wrathe of his indignation he hath broken all the hope of Israel, he hath withdrawen his right hand fro the enemy: yea, a flame of fyre is kindled in Jacob, and hath consumed by al round about. He hath bent his bowe lyke an enemy, he hath fastened his righte hande, as an aduersarie: and every thing that was pleasant to se, he hath smitten it downe. He hath poured out his wraith lyke a fire into the tabernacle of the daughter of Zion. The Lord is become lyke as it were an enemy, he hath deuoured Israel and all his palaces: yea, all his strong holdes hath he destroyed, and fylled the daughters of Iuda with muche sorowe and heauyness. Her tabernacle (whiche was lyke a garden of pleasure) hath he destroyed: her hie solemne feastes hath he put downe. The Lord hath brought it so to passe, that the solemne feastes and Sabothes in Zion, are cleane forgotten. In his heauy displeasure hath he made the king and priestes to be despised. The Lord hath forsaken his owne altar, and hath abhorred his owne sanctuaries, and hath geuen the walles of their townes into the hands of the enemy. Their enemies made a noyse in the house of the Lord, as it had bene in a solemne feast day. The Lord thought he would breake downe the walles of the daughter of Syon, he spied out his line, and drew not in his hand, till he had destroyed them: Therfore mourne the turrets and the broken walles together. Her gates are lonke downe to the grounde, her barres are broken and smitten in sunder. Her kinges and princes are caried away to the Gentils. They haue neither lawe nor Prophetes, nor yet anye vision from the Lord. The Senatours of the daughter Zion sit vpon the ground in silence: they haue strawed ashes vpon their heades, and girded them selues with sackcloth. The maydens of Ierusalem hange downe theyr heades to the ground. Mine eyes be- gin to fayle me throughte weeping, my body is disquieted, my lyuer is pained vpon the earthe, for the greates hurte of my people, seeing the childrenne and babes didde swoorne in the streetes of the citie. Euen when they spake to their mothers: where is meate and drinke: for while they soa sayde, they fell downe in the streetes of the Citie, lyke as they hadde bene wounded, and some dyed in their mothers bosome. What shall I saye of thee, O thou daughter Ierusalem, to whome shall I lycken thee: To whome shall I compare thee, O thou daughter of Syon, to comforte thee withall: Thy hurte is lyke a mayne sea, who maye heale thee: Thy prophetes haue locked out bayne and foolish things for thee, they haue not shewed thee of thy wickednesse, to kepe thee from captiuitie: but haue ouerladen thee, and throughte fashod scattered thee abroad. All they that gooe by thee, clappe their handes at thee, hyssinge and wagginge theyr heades vpon the daughter of Ierusalem, and saye: Is this the citie that men call so sayre: where in the whole lande reioyseth: All thine enemies gape vpon thee, whisperinge and byting theyr teeth, saying: let vs deuour, for the time that we loked for is come, we haue founde and scene it. The Lord hath fulfilled the thing that he was purposed to do:

and perfourmed that that he had deuised long ago: he hath destroyed, and not spared. He hath caused thine aduersarie to triumph ouer thee, and set by the horne of thine enemye. Let thine heart crye vnto the Lord, O thou citie of the daughter Sion, let thy teares runne downe lyke a ryuer daye and nighte, reste not, and let not the aple of thine eye leaue of. Stande by and make thy prayer in the firste watch of the nighte, poure out thine herte lyke water befoze the Lord, yf by thine handes, for the lyues of thy ponge children, that dye of hunger in the stretes. Behold, O Lord, and consider, why haste thou gathered me by so cleane? Shall the women then eate their owne fruite, euen children of a spanne longer? Shall the priestes and prophetes be slaine thus in the Sanctuarie of the Lord? Yonge and olde ye behynde the stretes vpon the ground, my maydens and pong men are slayne with the sworde: Whom thou in the daye of thy wrathfull indignation hast put to death, yea, euen thou hast put them to death, and not spared them. My neyghbours that ere round about me, haste thou called, as it were to a feast day: so that in the daye of the Lordes wrath none escaped, neyther was anye lefte behynde. Those that I haue broughte and noursyshed, hath myne enemye destroyed.

The. iij. Chapter.

In the man, that (throughe the rod of his wrath) haue experience of miserie. He droue me forth and led me, yea, into darkenes but not into light. I agaynst me only he turneth his hand, and layeth it euer vpon me. My fleshe and my skinne hath he made olde, and my bones hath he brused. He hath buyled round about me, and closed me in with gall and traueil. He hath set me in darkenes, as they that be deade for euer. He hath so hedged me in, that I can not get out, and hath layed heauie lynkes vpon me. Though I cry and call piteously, yet heareth he not my prayer. He hath stopped by my sinnes with foure squared stones, and made my pathes croked. He layde wyte for me like a Beare, and as a Lion in a hole. He hath marred my wyse, and broken me in peces, he hath layde me waste altogether. He hath bent his bowe, and made me as it were a marche to shoooe at: The arrowes of his quinner hath he shot euen into my reines. I am laughed to scoone of all my people, they make songes vpon me all the daye longe. He hath fylled me with bytternesse, and greuen me woorme wood to drinke. He hath smitten my teeth in peces with stones, and rolled me in the dust. He hath put my soule out of rest, I forget all good thinges. I thought in my selfe, I am vndone, there is no hope for me in the Lord. I remember yet my mylde, and my trouble, the woorme wood and the gall. Yea, thou shalt remember them, for my soule melteth aways in me. While I consider these thinges in my hert, I get a hope agayne. Namely, it is of the Lordes mercies that we are not bitterly consumed. Truly his pitefull compassion hath not ceased. His mercies shall the Lord shew vpon thee carely, yea, in the daye spryng, (O Lord) great is thy saythfulness. The Lord is my portion sayth my soule, therefore will I hope in him. O howe good is the Lord vnto them, that put their trust in him, and to the soule that seeketh after him: The good man with patience, tarieth for the beauly of the Lord. O howe good is it for a man, to take the poke vpon him from his youth by. He styeth alone, he holdeth him still, and sheweth quiettye by him selfe. He layeth his face vpon the earth, yf (perchance) there happen to be any hope. He offereth his cheeke to the smyter, he will be content with repproues. For the Lord will not forsake for euer. but though he punish him: yet according to the multitude of his mercies, he returneth to grace agayne: For he hath not plaged, and cast out the children of men.

from his heart. To treade all the prisoners of the earth vnder his fete. To moue the iudgement of man befoze the moost highest. To condemne a man in his cause. The Lord hath not pleasure in fuche things. What is he then that sayth: there should be something done without the Lordes commaundement?
Out of the mouth of the moost highest goeth not euill and good: wherefoze then murmureth the liuing man: let him murmure at his owne sinne. • Let vs loke well vpon our owne wayes, and remember our felices, and turne a-gayne to the Lord. Let vs lyft by our heartes with our hands vnto the lord that is in heuen. We haue ben dissemblers, and haue offended, wilt thou not be therfoze intreated? Thou hast coue-red vs in thy wrath, & persecuted vs, thou haste slayne vs without any fa-uour. • Thou hast hidde thy selfe in a cloude, that our prayer should not go st, and to be despised amog the people. • All our enemies gape vpon vs.

Feare and pitte is come vpon vs, yea, deceit and destruction. • Whole riuers of water gush out of mine eyes, for the greate hurte of my people. Myne eyes runne, and can not cease, for there is no rest. O Lord, when wilt thou looke downe from heauen, and consider? Mine eyes bethyeth my heart, because of all the daughters of my citie.
Mine enemies hunted me out sharply, like a birde, yea, and that without a cause. They haue put downe my life into a pytte, and they haue cast stones vpon me. They poured water vpon my head, then thought I: nowe am I vndoone. I called vpon thy name, O Lord out of the depe pyt. Thou haste heard my voyce, & hast not turned away thine eares fro my sighing & crying.
Thou hast enclined thy selfe vnto me, when I called vpon thee, and haste sayd: feare not. Thou (O Lord) hast maintained the cause of my soule, and hast redeemed my lyfe. O Lord, thou hast seene my blasphemers, take thou my cause vpon thee. Thou hast well considered, howe they go about to doo me harme, and that all theyr counsels are against me. Thou hast heard their despitefull wordes (O Lord) yea, and all their imaginations agaynst me.

The lips of mine enemies, and theyr deuises that they take agaynst me, all the daye longe. Thou seest also their spitting downe, and theyr rising vp: they make theie songes of nothings but of me. Rewarde them (O Lord) according to the woorkes of their han-des. Geue them an obstinate hearte, euen thy curse. Persecute them (O Lord) with thyn indignation, and roote them out from vnder the heuen.

The Booke of the Pro- phete Ezechiel

The first Chapter.

E chaced in the xxx.
 yeare, the fiftie daye of the fourth month that I was amonge
 the prisoners by the riuer of Eobar, wher the heauens opened and I saw a vision of God. Nowe the fiftie daye of the moneth made out of fiftie yere of king Jehoakims captitiuitie. At the same time came the worde of the Loyd vnto Ezechiel the son of Buzi the priest, in the lande of the Chaldees by the water of Eobar, where the hande of the Loyde came vpon him. And I looked, and beheld, a stormy winde came out of the north with a great cloude full of fyre, whiche with his glister lightened all rounde aboute. And in the midst of the fyre, it was all cleere like the face of an angell, and as it were the like-nesse of the four beastes, and this was their likenes. They were fashioned like a man, sauinge, that euerye one had foure faces, and foure winges.
 Their legges were straight, but their feete were like bullockes feete, and they glistered, as it hadde bene sayre shouered mettall. Under theiꝝ win-ges vppon all the foure corners, they hadde mennes handes. Their faces and their winges were towarde the foure corners, yet were the winges so, that one ouer touched an other.

When they went, they turned theiꝝ not about, but echone went streight forwarde. Furthermoze, this was the similitude of their faces. • Vpon the right side of these foure, their faces were like the face of a manne, and the face of a Lion. But vpon the left syde they hadde the face of an Ox, and the face of an Eagle. Their faces also and their winges were spred out aboue, so that twoo winges of one touched euery twoo winges of an other, and with the other they couered their body. Euery one when it went, it went streight forwarde. Where as the spi-rite ledde theiꝝ, thither they went, and tourned not aboute in their goinge. The fashion and countenance of the beastes, was like hotte coales of fyre, euen as thoughe burninge cressettes had bene amonge the beas-tes: (this was the vision) and the fyre gaue a glister, and out of the fyre there wente lightninge. When the beastes went forwarde and backward, one woulde haue thoughte it hadde lightened. Nowe when I hadde well considered the beastes, I sawe a worke of wherles vppon the earth with foure faces also nigh vnto the beastes. The fashion and worke of the wherles was like the Sea.
 The foure wherles were ioyned and made (to looke vpon) as it had bene one wheele in another. When one went forwarde, they wente all foure, and tourned them not aboute in their goinges. They were large, great, and horrible to looke vpon. Theyꝝ beekes were full of eyes rounde aboute theiꝝ all foure. When the beastes wente, the wherles wente also with theiꝝ. And when the beastes liste them selues vppe from the earth, the wherles were liste vp also. Whither soener the spirite went, thither went they also, and the wherles were lyfte vp, and folowed them: for the spirite of life was in the wherles. When the beastes wente forth, stode still, or liste them selues from the earth, then the wherles also went, stode still, and were list vppe, for the breathe of life was

was in the wheles. Above, ouer the heades of the beastes there was a firmament, whiche was fashioned as it had bene of the moste pure Chyall and that was spread out aboue vpon their heades: vnder the same firmament were their winges layde abode one towarde another, and two winges couered the bodye of euery beast.

And when they went forth, I hearde the noyse of their winges like the noyse of great waters, as it had bene the voyce of the great GOD, and a rushing together, as it were of an hoste of men. And when they stoode still, they let downe their winges. Nowe when they stoode still, and had letten downe theyr winges, it thondred in the firmamente that was aboue their heades. Above the firmamente that was ouer their heades, there was the fashion of a seate, as it

Ez. 8. d. had bene made of Saphir. Upon the seate there sat one like a manne. • I behelde him, and he was like an angel, as it had bene all of fyre within from his loines vppward. And beneth when I looked vpon him vnder the loynes, me thought he was like a shining fyre, that getteth light on euery side. Yea, the shine and glister that lightned rounde aboute, was like a raynebowe, which in a raynie daye appereth in the cloudes. Euen so was the similitude, wherein the glorie of the Lord appered. When I sawe it, I fel vpon my face, and hearkened vnto the voyce of him that spake.

The .ij. Chapter.

Ez. 3. d. And then sayde he vnto me: Stande vp vpon thy fete (O thou son of man) and I will talke with thee. • And as hee was communing with me, the spirit came into me and set me vp vpon my feete: so that I marked the thinge that hee sayde vnto me. And he sayde: Beholde thou sonne of man, I will sende thee to the chyldren of Israel, to those runnagates, and obstinate people, for they haue taken parte agaynst me, and are runne away from me, • both they and their forefathers vnto this daye. Yea, I will sende thee vnto a people that haue rough visages and stiffe stomakes, vnto whome thou shalt saye in this maner: This is the Lord God him selfe hath spoken, that whether they be obedient or no (for it is a frowarde household) they may knowe yet that there hath bene a prophete amonge them. • Therefore thou sonne of man) feare them not, neyther be afrayde of their wordes, for prouokers and thornes ar with thee. Yea, thou dost dwell amonge scorpions, but feare not their wordes, be not abashed at their looks for it is a froward household. He that thou speake my wordes vnto them, whether they be obedient or not, for they are obstinate. Therefore thou son of man, obey thou all thinges that I saye vnto thee, and be not thou stiffnecked, lyke as they are a stiffnecked household. Open thy mouth, and eat that I geue thee. So as I was looking vp, behold, there was sente vnto me an hande, wherein was closed a booke, and the hande opened it before mee, and it was written within and without full of carefull mourninges, alas, and wo.

After this, sayde he vnto me: I thou sonne of man, eat that, whatsoeuer it be: yea, • eat the booke, and go thy way, and speake vnto the chyldren of Israel. So I opened my mouth, and hee gaue mee the booke for to eate, and sayde vnto me: Thou sonne of man, thy bellye shall eat, and thy bowels shall be filled with the booke that I geue thee. Then did I eate the booke, and it was in my mouth sweeter the hony. And he sayd vnto me, thou son of manne, • get thee soone vnto the house of Israel, and shewe them the wordes, that I commaunded thee, for I send thee not to the people that hath a strange bewynnen, or hard speeche, but vnto the house of Israel, for to many nations which haue diuers speeches and hard languages, whose wordes thou vnderstandest not. • Neuertheles, yf I sent thee to those people, they woulde folowe thee. But the house of Israel will not folowe me: yea, al the house of Israel haue stiffe foreheads and harde hearts. • Behold therfore, I wil make thy face preuaple agaynst their faces, and harden thy forehead agaynst their foreheades, so that thy forehead shalbe harder then an • Adamante or flynte stone, that thou mayest feare them the lesse, and be lesse afrayde of them, for they are a froward household. He sayde moouer vnto me: thou son of man, take diligent heerde with thyne eares, to the wordes that I speake vnto thee, fasten them in thine hearte, and go to the prisoners of thy people, speake vnto them, and say on this maner: Thus the Lord God hath spoken, whether ye heare or heare not. With that the spiete toke me vp. And I hearde the noyse of a greete rushing and remouing of the moost blessed gloype of the Lord out of his place. I hearde also the noyse of the wynges of the brayles, that rushed one agaynst another, yea, and the rattling of the wheles that were by them, which rushing and noyse was very greate. • Howe when the spiete tooke me vp, and carried me away, I went with an heauye and sorrowfull mynde, but the hand of the Lord comforted me right soone. And so in the beginning of the moneth I did, I came to the prisoners • that dwelte by the water of Cobar, and remoued in that place, where they were. And so continued I among them seven dayes, heeryng very sore. And when the seven dayes were expired, the Lord sayd vnto me: Thou sonne of manne, I haue made thee a watchman vnto the house of Israel: when I saye make good hede to the wordes at my mouth, and geue them warning at my commaundement. If I saye vnto thee, concerninge the vngodlye man, (that without doubte) he will dye, and thou sayest: He shall not war-ninge, nor speakest vnto him, that he may turne from his euill way, and so to liue: Then shall the same vngodlye man die in his owne vnrightheousnes, but his bloud wil I require of thine hand. Neuertheles, yf thou geue war-ninge vnto the wicked, and he yet forsake not his vngodlynelle: then shal he dye in his owne wickednesse, but thou hast discharged thy soule. Howe yf a righteous manne goo from • his righteousnes, and do the thinge that is euill: I will laye a stumblinge blocke before him, and he shal dye because thou hast not genen him war-ninge: yea, dye shall he in his owne sinne, so that the vertue, which he did before shall not be thought vpon: but his bloude will I require of thyne hande. Neuerthelesse, yf thou exhortest the righteous that he synne not, and so the righteous doo not synne: then shall he liue, because he hath re-ceaued thy warninge, and thou hast discharged thy soule. And there came the hande of the Lord vpon me, and he sayd vnto me: Stand vp, and go into the fild, that I maye there talke with thee. So when I had risen vp, and gone forth into the fild: Behold, the gloyp of the Lord stode there, • like as I sawe it afore, by the water of Cobar. • Then fel I downe vpon my face, & the spiete came into me, which set me vp vpon my ferte, and sayd thus vnto me: Go thy way, and shute thy selfe in thine house: Beholde (• thou sonne of man) there shall chaynes be brought for thee, to bind thee withal, so that thou shalt not escape out of them.

 And I will make thy tong cleue so to the sole of thy mouth, that thou shalt be dumb, and not be as a chyder with them; for it is an obstinate household.
 But when I speake vnto thee, then open thy mouth, and say: Thus sayth the Lord god: who so heareth, let him heare: who so will not, let him leaue, for it is an obstinate household.

• The .iiij. Chapter.

Thou sonne of man: take a little stone, and laye it before thee, and describe vpon it the cite of Ierusalem, howe it is besyged, howe bulwarkes and stronge dyches are grauen on enery side of it: describe also tentes, and an host of men rounde about it, with engines of war. Whereouer, take an yron panne, and set it betwixt thee and the Citie, in steede of an yron wall. Then sette thy face towarde it, besyge it, and laye ordinance agaynst it, to win it. This shalbe a token vnto the house of Israel. But thou shalt sleepe vpon thy lefte syde, and laye the summe of the house of Israel vpon thee. Certaine daies appointed, thou shalt sleepe vpon that syde, and beare theyr synnes. • Neuertheless, I will appoynt thee a time (to putte of their synnes) and the number of the daies. Thye hundred & nintye daies, must thou beare the wickednes of the house of Israel. Whē thou hast fulfilled these daies, lie downe againe and sleepe vpon thy righte syde for tie daies, and beare the synnes of the house of Iuda. • 3 daies for a yere, a daye (I saye) for a yere, will I euer laye vpon thee. Therefore set now thy face agaynst that besieged Ierusalem, and discourte thine arme, that thou mapest prophecie agaynst it. Behold, I will lay chaynes vpon thee, that thou shalt not turne thee from one syde to another, till thou hast ended the dayes of this besieging. Wherefore, take vnto thee wyate, barley, beanes, growell seede, Whittum and fitches, and putte these together in a vessell, and make thee loaves of bread therof, according to the number of the dayes that thou muste lye vpon thy syde, that thou mapest haue bread to eate, for .ij. hundred and nintie daies. And the meate that thou eatest, shall haue a certayne weight appointed: namely, twentye sicles every daye. • This appointed meate shalt thou eate dayly from the beginning to the ende. Thou shalt drinke also a certayne measure of water: Namely the sixte part of an hyyn shalt thou drinke dayly from the beginning vnto the ende. Barley cakes shalt thou eate, yet shalt thou fyre tosse them at a fyre made with manys donge, that they may see it. And with that sayde the Lord. Then thus shall the chyldren of Israel eate their besyled breade in the myddell of the Gentyles, amonge whom I will scatter them. Then sayde I: O Lord God, Behold my soule was yet neuer slayned, for fro my yowth vnto this houre, I did neuer eate of a dead carcasse, or of that whiche was slayne of wilde beastes, nether came there euer any vncleane fleshy in my mouth. Where vnto he answered me, and sayde: Well then, I will graunte thee to take cowes donge for the donge of a manne, and torosse the breade withall before them. And he sayde vnto me: Behold thou son of man, • I will minishe all the prouision of bread in Ierusalem, so that they shall wepe their bread, and eate it with scarcitie. But as for water, they shall haue a berpe little measure therof to drinke. And when they haue no more bread nor water, one shal be destroyed with another, and family away, for theyr wickednes.

The .v. Chapter.

When some of man, take thee then a sharpe knyfe, namely, a rasour. Take that, and shawe the heare of thy head and beard: Then take the scales and the weyghte, and denide the heare a sunder. And after thou hast accomplished the dayes of the siege, burne the thirde parte therof in the fyre, in the myddell of the citie, and cut the other thirde part in peeces, with a knyfe. • As for the third part that remaineth, caste it in the wynde, and I will drawe out the sword after them. Yet afterwarde, take a little of the same, and bind it in thy girdle. Then take a curtelle of it, and cast it in the myddell of the fyre, and burne it in the fyre. Out of the same fyre shall there go a flame, vpon the whol house of Israel. Whereouer thus sayth the Lord God: This same is Ierusalem, I set her in the myddell of the heathen and nations that are rounde aboute her, but shee hath despised my iudgements more then the Gentyles them to the mountaynes of Israell, that thou mayest prophesy vnto them, and saye: Heare the word of the Lord God of ye mountaynes of Israell: Thus where they shalbe in captiuitie. As for that whoo:the and vnfaithfull heart of theirs, wherewith they runne away from mee, I will breake it: yea, and put out those eyes of theirs, that committe fornication with they: y-dols. Then shall they be ashamed and displeased with their selues, for the wickednesses and abominations, which they haue done: and shall lerne to knowe, that I am the Lord, howe that it is not in vayne, that I the Lord spake, to bring suche miserie vpon them. The Lord sayd moreover vnto mee: Smite thine handes together, and stampe with thy feete, & say: Woe woozthe all the abominations and wickednesses of the house of Israel, for because of them, they shall perishe with the swerde, with hunger, and with pestilence: who so is farre off, shall dye of the pestilence, hee that is nye at hande, shall perishe with the swerde, and the other that remaine and that are besieged, shal dye of hunger. Thus will I satisfy my wrothfull displeasure vpon them. And so shall ye learne to knowe, that I am the Lord, when your slaine men lye amonge your ydols, and about your altars, vpon all hye hilles and toppes of mountaynes among al grene trees, among al thicke okes, euen in the places, where they did sacrifice vnto all their ydols. I will stretch mine hand oute vpon theym, and will make the lande waste. So that it shall lye desolate and voyde, from the wilderness of Deblothah forth, throught all there habitations: to learne theym for to knowe: that I am the Lord.

The viij. Chapter.

The woordes of the Lord came vnto me on this maner. Thee I call, O thou sonne of manne.
Thus sayth the Lord God vnto the land of Israel: The end commeth vpon the land of Israel: yea hereby the end commeth vpon all the four corners of the lande. But now we shall the end come vpon thee, for I will sende my wroth vpon thee, and will punish thee according to thy wayes, and re-warde thee after all thine abhominations. Mine eye shall not ouersee thee, neither will I spare thee, but rewarde thee, according to thy wayes, & declare thine abominations. Then shall ye knowe that I am the Lord. Thus sayeth the Lord God. Beholde, one misery and plage shall come after another: the ene is here, the ende I saye is come, it watcheth for thee: beholde, it is come alreadye, the destruction is earlye come agaynst thee, that dwel-lest in the lande. The time is at hand, the day of sedition is harde by, and the crye shall not be as the soundinge a-gayne of the mountaynes. Therefore I will shortly poure out my rage displeasure ouer thee, and fulfil my wroth vpon thee, I will iudge thee after thy wayes, & recompence thee al thy abhominations. Mine eye shal not ouersee thee, neither wil I spare thee, but rewarde thee after thy wayes, and thine abominations shall bee punished in the middes of thee, to learne you for to knowe, howe that I am the Lord that smiteth. Beholde, the daye is here, the day is come, the houre is runne out, the rodde flourisheth, pyde watcheth greene, malicious violence is growen by, and the bngodlye warren to a staffe. None of them shal remaine ouer, none of their riches, not one of their seebe, and no lamentation shal be made for them. The time commeth, the day draweth nye: • whoso beth, let him not reioyce, he that selleth, let him not be so: for woe: • Trouble shall come in the midst of them all: so that the seller shal not come againe to the thing he sold, although he there lyfe be yet with the liuing. For wht the prophecie was preached vnto all the people, none returned from their sin, and no man tooke strength to him agaynst his wickednes, to save his owne lyfe. The trumpetes shall be blowen, and make you all ready, and no man shal go to the battell, for I am wroth with all the whole multitude.

The swerde shalbe swithoute, pestilence & hunger within: so that whole to in the fildes, shalbe slayne with the sword, and he that is in the city. shal perishe with hunger and pestilence. And such as escape and flee from amonge them, shalbe vpon the hilles, like as the domes in the fildes: euerye one shalbe afrayd because of his owne wickednes. All handes shall be lette downe, and all knees shalbe weake as the water, they shall girde them selues with sackcloth, feare shal fall vpon them. Their faces shalbe confounded, and their heades balde: their siluer shall they cast forth in the streetes, and their golde shalbe despised. Yea their siluer and golde may not deliuer them, in the day of the fearefull wrath of the lord. They shal not satisfie their hungry soules, neither fill their empty bellies therewith: for it is become their owne decay through their wickednes, and their brotherly costely ornament that God had ordeyned to be their great gloype, in it they haue set by abominations vnto their ydols. For this cause will I make them and it to be abhorred. Moreover, I will geue it into the handes of the strangers to be spoyled: and to the wicked, for to be robbed, and they shal destroye it. My face will I turne fro them, my treasure shalbe despised, for the thennes shal go into it, and suspend it. Make a chaine, for the land is wholy despyled with vnrightheous iudgement of innocent blood, and the cite is full of violent oppression. Wherefore, I will bringe the most cruell tyrantes from amonge the heathen, to take their houses in possession. I will make the pompe of the proud to cease, and their sanctuary shal be despyled. When this trouble cometh, they shall seeke peace, but they shall haue none. One mischief and sorowe shall folowe another, and one rumour shall come after another. Then shall they beke bitions in bayne at their thowghes. The ioune shall be gone from the milties, and wisdom from the elders. The kinge shall mourne, the princes shalbe clothed with bewines, and the handes of the people in the land shall tremble for feare. I will do vnto them after their owne wayes, according to their owne iudgements: will I iudge them, to learne them for to knowe that I am the Lord.

The. liij. Chapter.

It happened, that in the sixt yeare the fifth day of the sixt month, I sat in my house, and the Lordes of the counceyl of Iuda with me, and the hande of the Lord God fell euen there vpon me. And as I looked vpper, as it were a likenes of fyre from his loines downeward, and from his loines vppward, it shined maruylous cleere and like an angell to loke vpon. This similitude stretched out an hande, and toke me by the heary lockes of my head, and the spirite lift me vp betwixte heauen and earthe, and brought me in a vision to Jerusalem into the entre of the inner porte that lyeth towarde the North, there stood an ymage, with whom he that hath all thinges in his power, was verie worthy. And beholde, the gloyp of the God of Israel was in the same place: euen as I hadde sene it afore in the fildes. And he sayde vnto mee: Thou sonne of man, I liste by thine eyes, and looke towarde the North. Then liste I vpper myne eyes towarde the North, and beholde: belyde the port northward, there was an altar made vnto the ymage of prouocation in the very entring in. And he sayde further moze vnto me: Thou son of man seest thou what these do? Seest thou the great abhominations that house of Israel committeth in this place: to driue me from my sanctuary? But turne thee about, and thou shalt see yet greater abhominations. And with that brought he me to the court gate, and when I looked, behold, there was an hole in the wall. Then sayd he vnto mee: Thou sonne of manne, digge through the wall. And when I digged through the wall, beholde, there was a doze. And he saide vnto me: Go thy way in, & looke what wicked abhominations they do here. So I went in,

in, and sawe: and behold, there were all maner ymages of wormes & beastes, all Idoles and abominations of the house of Israel paynted euery one round about the wall. Ther stood also before the ymages. • lxx. Lordes of the counsell of the house of Israel: and in the midst of them stood Iaa-nah the sonne of Saphan. And euery one of the had a censoure in his hand, and oute of the cense, there wente a smoke, as it had bene a cloude. Then sayd he vnto me: Thou sonne of man, hast thou seene what the Senatoures of the house of Israel do secretly, euery one in his chamber? • For they say: • Cusse, the Lord seeth vs not, the Lord regardeth not the world. And he sayd vnto me: Turne thee yet againe, and thou shalt see yet greater abhomi-nations that they do. And with that he brought me to the doze of the porte of the Lords house, toward the north.
And behold, there sat women mourning for Tammus. Then sayd he vnto me: Hast thou seene this, thou sonne of man? Turne thee about, & thou shalt see yet greater abhominations then these are. And so he brought me into the inward court of the Lords house: and beholde at the porte of the Lords house, be it with the fore entrie and the altare, there were fine and twentye men, that turned their backs vpon the temple of the Lord, and their faces toward the east, and these worshipped the sunne. And he sayde vnto me: hast thou seene this, thou son of man?
Thinke the house of Juda, that it is but a tryfle, to do these abhomi-nations here? Should they fill the land full of wickednes, and undertake to prouoke me vnto anger? Yea, and purposely to call by their noses vpon me.
Wherefore will I also do some thing in my wrathfull displeasure, so that mine eye shall not ouersee them, neither will I spare them. • Yea, and though they cry in mine eares with a loud voyce, yet will I not heare them.

The ix. Chapter.

HE cried also with a loud voyce in mine eares, sayinge: Come, heare ye rulers of the Citie, euery man with his weaponed hand to the slaughter. Then came there six men out of the strete of the vpper port toward the North, and euery man a weapon in his hand to the slaughter.
There was one amongst them, that had on him a linnen raymente, and a writers ynnk horn by his syde. These went in, and stood besyde the bialen altare, for the glozpe of the Lord was gone away from the. • Cherub which was vpon him, and was come downe to the thersholde of the house, and he called the man that had the linnen ray-ment vpon him, and the writers ynnk horne by his side, and the Lord sayde vnto him: Go thy waye through the Citie of Jerusalem, and set a marke vpon the foreheads of them that mourn and are sorry for al the abhomi-nations, that be done therein. And to the other, he saide that I might heare:
• Go ye after him through the Citie, slay, ouersee none, spare none, kill and destroy both men and yong maydens, childre, and wiues. But as for those that haue the marke vpon them, see that ye touche them not, and begin at my Sanctuary. • Then they began at the elders, which were in the temple, for he had sayde vnto them: When ye haue despyled the temple, and filled the court with the slayne, then go poure waye forth. So they wente oute, and slew downe through the citie. How whē they had done the slaughter, & I yet escaped, I fel down vpon my face, and cryed, sayinge: O Lord God, wilt thou then destroy al the residue of Israel, in thy fore displeasure, that thou hast poured vpon Jerusalem? Then sayd he vnto me: The wickednesse of the house of Israel and Juda is very great, so that the land is full of blood, and the citie full of vnlawfulness: for they saye: • Cusse, the Lord regardeth not the earth, he seeth vs not.
Wherefore will I vpon them, mine eye shall not ouersee them, neither will I spare them, but will recon-penne their wickednesse vppon their heades, And behold, the man that had the linnen rayment vpon him, and the writers ynkehoorne by his syde, tolde all the maner howe it happened, and sayde: Lozde as thou hast commaunded me, so haue I done.

The .x. Chapter.

I As I looked, beholde, in the firmamente that was aboute the Cherubines there appeared the similitude of a stole of Saphir vppon them: • Then sayde he that sat therin, to him that had the linnen ray-ment vppon him: Crepe in betwene the wheelles that are vnder the Cherubines, and take thynne handefull of hoate coles oute from betwene the Cherubines, and caste them ouer the cite. And he crept in that I mighte see. Now the Cherubines stode vpon the righte syde of the house, when the men went in, and the cloude filled the inner court. • But the glozpy of the Lozde remoued from the Cherubines, and came vppon the thersholde of the house: so that the temple was full of cloude, and the court was full of the shyne of the Lozdes glozpye. Yea, and the sound of the Cherubines wynges was heard into the foze court, lyke as it had bene the voyce of the almightie God, when he speaketh. Nowe when he had bydden the man that was clothed in linnen, to go and take the hote coles from the midst of the wheles which were vnder the Cherubines: he went and stode besyde the wheles.
Then the one Cherub reached forth his hand from vnder the Cherubines, vnto the fyre that was betwene the Cherubins, and toke therof, and gaue it vnto him that hadde on the linnen rayment in his hande: whiche tooke it, and wente out. And vnder the wynges of the Cherubines, there appeared the likenes of a mans hand: I sawe also foure wheelles besyde the Cherubins, so that by euery Cherub there stode a whele. And the wheelles were (so lyke vpon) after the fashion of the precious stone of Charkis: yea (vnto the sighte) they were all foure of one fashion, as yf one whele hadde bene in another. When they wente forth, they went al foure together, not turning about in their goynge. But where the fyfste went, thither wente they after also, so that they turned not about in their goynge. Their whole bodies, their backes, theyr hands, and wynges, yea, and the wheelles also, were all full of eyes round about them all foure. And I hearde him call the wheelles. • Euery one of them hadde foure faces, so that the one face was the face of a Cherub, the seconde of a man, the thirde of a lyon, the fourth of an Eagle, and they were lyfted vp aboue. This is the beaste, that I sawe at the water of Cobar. Nowe when the Cherubines wente, the wheelles went with them, and when the Che-rubins shoke their wynges to lyfte them selues vppward, the wheelles remained not behinde, but were with them also. Shortly, when they stode, these stode also. And when they were lyft vp, the wheelles were lyft vp also with them, for the sprete of lyfte was in the wheelles. • Then the glozpye of the Lozde was lyft vp from the thersholde of the temple, and remained vpon the Cherubines: And the Cherubines flattered with their wynges, and lyfte them selues vppe from the earth: so that I sawe when they went, and the wheles with them. And they stode at the easte syde of the porte that is in the house of the Lozde. So the glozpye of the Lozde was vppon them, This is the beast that I sawe vnder the God of Israell, by the water of Cobar. And I perceaued, that it was the Cherubins. Euery one had foure faces, and euery one foure wynges, and vnder their wynges, as it were mens handes. Nowe the fygure of their faces was, euen as I had scene them by the water of Cobar, and so was the countenance of them. • Eu-ery one in his goynge went streight forwarde, customes of the Heathen, that lye preached, Pheltiah the sonne of Bananiah dyed. Then fell I downe bypon my face, and cryed with a loude voyce, saying: O Loyd god, wilt thou of Israell: And so the worde of the lord cam vnto me on this maner, thou sonne of man, thy bzerben, thy kindfolke, and the whole house of Iuda, which dwell in Ierusalem, say: with drawe ye farre from the Loyde, for the land is geuen vs in possession. Therfore tell them, thus sayeth the Loyde God: I will send you farre of among the Gentyles, and scatter you among the nations, and I will halowe you but a lytle, in the landes where ye shal come. Tell them also, thus sayeth the Loyd God: I will gather you agayne out of the nations; and bringe you from the countries where ye be scattered, and wil geue you the land of Israel agayne. And they shall come by ther. And they shall take awaye all their Idoles and all their abhomi-nations from thence. • And I will geue you one heart, and I wil plant a new spytet within your bowels. That stomie hert will I take out of your body, and geue you a fleshely heart, that ye may walke in my commandments, and keepe myn ordinaunces, and doo them, that ye maye be my people, and I your God. But loke whose heartes are disposed to folowe their abhominations and wicked liuinges: those mens dedes will I bring vpon their owne heades, sayeth the Loyde God.

 After this dyd the Cherubines yfte by their winges, & the whelles went with them, and the glory of the Loyd was vpon theym: • So the glorye of the Loyde went by from the myddell of the citie, and stode vpon the mount of the citie towarde the East. • But the winde toke me by, and in a vision (whiche came by the spytet of God) it broughte me agayne into Caldea among the prisoners. Then the vision that I had scene banyshe awaye fro me. So I spake vnto the prisoners, al the wordes of the Loyd, which he had shewed me.

The .xii. Chapter.

The worde of the Loyde came vnto me, saying: • Thou sonne of manne, thou shalt see the the middell of a frowarde houtholde, Eze. 6 b • whiche hone eyes to see, and yet see mat. 14. b not: eares haue they to heare, and yet mat. 4. a. they heare not, for they are an obsti-nat. 8. b nate houtholde. Therefore (O thou Act. 13. d sonne of man) make thy geare redy to Ma. 11. b flee, and go forth by saye daye light, that they may see. Yea, euen in theyr sight shalt thou go from thy place to another place, yf peradventure they will consider, that they bee a disobedient houthold: Thy geare that thou hast made redy to fyt withall, shalt thou beare out by saye daye lyght that they may see, and thou thy selfe shalt go forth also at euen in their sight, as a man doeth when he flitteth. Digge through the wall, that they may see, & beare through it the same thing, that thou tokest by in their sight: In their sight shalt thou beare vpon thy shoulders, and carpe it forth in the darke.

 Hide thy face that thou see not the earth, for I haue made thee a shew token vnto the house of Israel. Now as the Lorde commaunded me, so I did: the geare that I had made readye brought I oute by daye. At euen I brake downe an hole thorough the wall, with my hand: and whē it was darke, I toke the gere vpon my shoulders, and bare them out in their sight.
 And in the morning, came the worde of the Lorde vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, if Israel that froward houtholde aske thee, and saye: What dost thou there? Then tell theym.
 Thus sayth the Lorde God: Ehy punishment toucheth the chiefe rulers at Ierusalem, and all the house of Israel, that dwell amonge them.
 Tell them: I am your shewe token, like as I haue done, so shall it happen vnto you: flee shall ye also, and go into captiuitie. • O be chiefeest that is amonge you, shall lade his shoulders in the darke, and get him awaye.
 He shall brake downe the wall, to carye stuffe therethrough: He shall couer his face, that he se not the ground with his eyes. • My line will I throw out vpon him, and catch him in my net, and carpe him to Babilon, in the land of the Caldes, which he shall not see, and yet shall he dye there. As for all his helpers, and all his hostes, that be about him, I will scatter them toward all the windes, and brase out a sword after them. • So when I haue scattered them amonge the heathen and strawed them in the landes, they shall know, that I am the Lorde.

 But I will leaue a little number of them from the sword, hunger, and pestilence, to tell all their abhominat-ions among the heathen, where they come, that they may know, howe that I am the Lorde. Moreover, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man with a fearefull trembling shalt thou eate thy breade, with carefulnesse and sorowe shalt thou drinke thy water. And vnto the people of the land, speake thou on this maner: Thus sayth the Lorde God, to them that dwell in Ierusalem, and in the land of Israel: Ye shall eate your bread with sorowe, and drinke your water with heavynes: Yea, the lande with the fulnes thereof shalbe layde wast, for the wickednes of them that dwell therein. And the Cities that nowe be well occupped, shalbe voyde, and the lande desolate, that ye maye knowe, howe that I am the Lorde.
 Yet came the worde of the Lorde vnto me agayne, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, what maner of byworde is that which ye vse in the lande of Israel, sayinge: Cull, • seeing that the dayes are so slacke in comming, all the visions are of none effect: Tell them therfore, thus sayeth the Lorde God: I will make that byworde to cease, so that it shall no more be commonly vs-ed in Israel. But saye this vnto them, the dayes are at hand, that euery thing which hath bene prophesied, shalbe fulfilled. • Here shall no vision be in bayne, neyther any prophetic sayle among the chyliden of Israel: For it is I the Lorde, that speake it: and whatsoever I the Lorde speake, it shalbe performed. And not be slacke in comminge. Yea, euen in

Will I denie some thing, and bringe it to passe, sayeth the Lord God. And the worde of the Lord came vnto me, saying: Beholde, thou sonne of man: The house of Israel sayth on this maner: Cushe, as for the vision that he hath seene, it will be manye a daye or it come to passe: It is farre off yet, the thinge that he prophesieth. Therefore saye vnto theym. Thus sayth the Lord God: All my wordes shall no more be slacke: Like what I speake, that same shall come to passe, sayth the Lord.

The .xiiij. Chapter.

The word of the Lord came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man: Speke, prophecy against those prophetes, that preache in Israel, and say thou vnto them that prophecy out of their owne herts. Heare the worde of the Lord, thus sayth the Lord God: Wo be vnto those foolish prophetes, that folowe their owne spirit, and speake where they see nothing. O Israel, thy prophetes are like the foxes vpon the dyke field: For they stand not in the gappes, neither make they an hedge for the house of Israel, that men might abyde the battell in the day of the Lord. Mayne thinges they see, and tell yves, to maintaine their preachings withal. The Lord (saye they) hath spoken it, when in verie deede the Lord hath not sente them. Mayne visions haue ye seene, and spoken false prophecies, when ye saye: the Lord hath spoken it, whereas I neuer sayde it. Therefore thus sayth the Lord God: Because your wordes be vayne, and ye seeke out yves: Beholde, I will vpon you, sayeth the Lord. Mine handes shall come vpon the prophetes that looke oute vayne thinges, and preach yves: they shall not be in the counsell of my people, nor written in the booke of the house of Israel, neither shall they come in the lande of Israel, that ye may knowe, how that I am the Lord God, And that for because they haue disceyued my people, and told them of peace, where no peace was, One setteth vp a wal, and they daube it with loose claye. Therefore tell theym which daube it with vntempered morter, that it shall fall. For there shall come a great shower of rayne, great hayle stones shall fall vpon it, and a sore storme of winde shall breake it, so shall the wall come downe. Shall it not then be said vnto you: where is nowe the morter, that ye daubed it withall? Therefore thus saith the Lord God: I will breake out in my wrathfull displeasure, with a stormy winde, so that in mine anger there shall come a mighty shower of rayne, and hayle stones in my wrath to destroye withall. As for the wall that ye haue daubed with vntempered morter, I will breake it downe, make it euen with the grounde, so that the foundation thereof shall remoue, and it shall fall: yea, and ye poure sculles shall perishe in the middes thereof, to learne you for to know, that I am the Lord. Thus will I persourne my wrath vpon this wal, and vpon them that haue daubed it with vntempered morter, and then will I say vnto you: The wall is gone, and the daubers are away. These are the prophetes of Israel, which prophesye vnto the cite of Jerusalem, and looke out visions of peace for them, wher as no peace is, sayth the Lord God. Therefore (O thou sonne of man) set thy face against the daughters of thy people, which prophesye out of their own heartes, and speake thou, prophesye against theym, and saye: Thus sayeth the Lord God: Wo be vnto you that some pillowes vnder all arme holes, and bolsters vnder the heades bothe of younge and olde, to catche soules withall. For when ye haue gotten the soules of my people in youre captiuitie, ye promise them life, and dishonoure me to my people, say an handefull of barley, and for a peece of bread: when ye kill the soules of them that dye not, and promise life to them, that liue not. Thus ye dissemble with my people that beleneth your eyes. For euery manne (whether he be of the house of Israel, or a stranger, that sojourneth in Israel) whiche departeth fro me, and carieth Idoles in his heart, purposing to go still stumbling in his owne wickednesse, and cometh to a prophet, for to aske counsell at me through him: vnto that manne will I the Lord geue answer, by myne owne selfe. I will set my face agaynst that man, and will make him to be an example for other, yea, and a common byword: and will roote him out of my people, that he may knowe howe that I am the Lord, and yf that Prophete be disceatued, when he telleth him a worde, then I the Lord my selfe haue disceatued that prophete, and will stretch forth mine hande vpon him, and roote him out of my people of Israel: and they bothe shalbe punished for their wickednes. Accordyng to the sinne of him that asketh, shall the sinne of the prophete be: that the house of Israel be led no more fro me through erreure, and be no more despyed in their wickednes: but that they maye be my people, and I theyr God, sayth the Lord God. And the worde of the Lord came vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man, when the lande synneth agaynst me, and goeth forth in wickednes, I will stretche out mine hande vpon it, and destroye all the prouision of their breade, and sende dearth vpon them, to destroye manne and beaste in the lande. And though Ioseph, Daniell, and Job, these three men were among them, yet shall they in theyr righteousnesse deliuer but their owne soules, sayth the Lord God. If I bringe noysome beastes into the lande to walke it vpon, and it be so desolat that no man may go therein for beastes: if these three men also were in the land, as truly as I liue (saith the Lord God) they shal save neither sonnes nor daughters, but be only deliuered them selues: and as for the land, it shalbe walke. Or yf I bringe a sword rough the land, so that I slaye downe man & beaste in it, and if these three men were therein: As truly as I live (sayth the Lord God) they shall deliver neither sonnes nor daughters, but onely be saved them selves. If I send a pestilence into the lande, and powze oute my soze indignation vppon it in bloude, so that I roote out of it both man and beast: And if Moze, Daniell, and Job were therein: as truly as I live (sayth the Lord God) they shall deliver neither sonnes nor daughters, but save theyr owne soules in their righteousnesse. Moreover, thus sayth the Lord God: Muche moze when I sende my .four. troublous plagues vpon Jerusalem: the sword, hunger perillous beastes, and pestilence, to destroy man and beast out of it. Beholde, there shall be a remnant saved therein, whiche shall bring forth their sonnes and daughters. Beholde, they shall come forth vnto you, and ye shall see their waye, and what they take in hand, and ye shall be comforted, as touching all the plagues that I have brought vpon Jerusalem. They shall comforte you, when ye see their waye and woekes: and ye shall knowe how that it is not without a cause that I have done so agaynst Jerusalem, as I did, sayth the Lord God.

The .xv. Chapter.

The word of the Lord came vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of manne, what commeth of the vyne among all other trees, and of the wilde vine trees amonge all other tymber of the groue? Do men take wodde of it to make any woike with all? Or may there a nayle be made of it, to hang any thing vpon. Beholde, it is caste in the fyre to be brynte, the fyre consumeth bothe the endes of it, the myddest is brynte to ashes. Is it mete then for any woike? No. Seing then that it was mete for no woike, being whole, muche lesse maye there any thing be made of it, when the fyre hath consumed and brynt it. And therfore thus sayth the Lord God: Like as I cast the vine into the fyre for to be brynte, as other trees of the wodde:

Even so will I doo with them that dwell in Jerusalem, and set my face agaynst them, they shall go out from the fyre, and yet the fyre shall consume the. Then shall ye knowe, that I am the Lord, when I sette my face agaynst them, and make the land wast, because they haue so soze offended, sayeth the Lord God.

The .xvi. Chapter.

Aayne, the word of the Lord I spake vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man, shewe the Citie of Jerusalem, theyr abominations, and say: Thus sayth the Lord God vnto Jerusalem: Thy progenie and kindred came out of the land of Canaan, thy father was an Amozite, thy mother a Cethite, thus was the manner of thy byrthe. In the day of thy byrth when thou wast borne, the string of thy navell was not cutte of, thou wast not bathed in water to make thee cleane. Thou wast neither rubbed with salte, nor swabed in cloutes. No man regarded thee so muche as to do any of these thinges for thee, or to shewe thee such favour: but thou wast bitterly cast out vpon the field, yea despised wast thou in the day of thy birth. Then came I by thee, and sawe thee troden downe in thine owne bloude, and sayde vnto thee: Aline, although thou be defiled in thine owne bloude: yea, even I (I tell thee) sayde vnto thee: Aline, although thou be defiled in thine owne bloude. So I planted thee, as the blossome of the fild: thou art growen by, and warren great, thou hast gotten a marvellous pleasant beautie, thy breasts are come vpper, thy beare is goodly growen, where as thou wast naked and bare afore. Nowe when I went by thee, and looked vpon thee: Beholde, tyme was come, yea, even the tyme to woe thee. Then spread I my clothes over thee, to cover thy dishonestie: yea, I made an othe vnto thee, and marped my selfe with thee (sayth the Lord God) and loo thou becamest mine owne: Then washed I thee with water, & purged thy blonde from thee. I an-nointed thee with oyle, I gaue thee change of raymentes, I made thee shoes of Capus leather, I girded thee aboute with white silke, I clothed thee with karcheses, I decked thee with costly apparrell, I put rynges vpon thy fengens, a cheyne about thy necke, spanges vpon thy forehead, earringes vpon thy eares, and set a beautifull crowne vpon thine heade.

Thus was thou decked with syluer and gold, and thy raiment was of fine white silke, of nedle worke, and of di-uers colozs. Thou didst eate nothing but spinnels, hony, and oyle, maruey-lous goodly was thou and beautifull: yea, euen a verie Queene wast thou.
In somuch, that thy beantie was spoken of amonge the Heathen: for thou wast excellent in my beaultie, whiche I put vpon thee, saith the Lord God.
But thou hast put confidence in thine owne beantie, and played the harlot, when thou hadst gotten thee a name, Thou hast committed whozedome with all that went by thee, and hast fulfilled their desyres: yea thou hast taken thy garmentes of dyuers colours, and deckt thyne aultares therewith, wherewith thou mightest fulfill thine whozedome, and of suche a fallyon, as neuer was done, nor shall be. The goodlye ornaments and I Jewels, whiche I gaue thee of mine owne gold and gyluer, hast thou taken and made thee mens ymages therof, & committed whozedome withall. Thy garmentes of dyuers coloures hast thou taken, and deckt them therewith, myne oyle and incense hast thou sette besyde them. My meat whiche I gaue thee, as spinnels, oyle, and honye (to feede thee withall) that hast thou set besyde them, for a swete sauour. And this came also to passe, saith the Lord God. Thou hast taken thine owne sonnes and daughters, whome thou haddest begotten vnto me: and these hast thou offered by vnto them, to be their meate. Is this but a smal whozdome of thine (thinkest thou) that thou hast my chyldren, and geuest them ouer, to be bynt vnto them? And yet in all thy abhominations & whozdome, thou hast not remembred the dayes of thy yowthe, howe naked and bare thou wast at that time, & troden downe in thine owne bloude. After all these thy wickednesses (woe woe vnto thee, saith the Lord) (thou hast buyded thy strewes and bozdel houses in euery place.) Thou hast buyte hye places, yea, at the heade of euery strete hast thou buyded thee an auter. Thou hast made thy beantie to be abhored, thou hast layde oute thy legges to euery one that came by, and multiplied thine whozedome. Thou hast committed fornication with the Egyptians thy neyghbours, whiche hadde muche fleshe: and thus hast thou encreased thyne whozedome, to anger me. Beholde, I did stretch out myne hande ouer thee, and didde myne the thy store of foode, and delyuered thee ouer into the willes of the Philistines thine enemies, whiche are ashamed of thy abhominable way. Thou hast played the whoze alsoo with the Assyrians, because thou wast insatiable: Yea, thou hast (I saye) with them played the harlotte, and yet haddest thou not ynoughe.

Thus hast thou furthermoze committed thy fornication from the lande of Canaan vnto the Chaldees, and yet thy lust not satisfied. Howe obstinate is thyne heart (saith the Lord God) seyng thou doest all these woorkes of an errant whoze, building thy strewes at the head of euery strete, and thy bozdel houses in all places: Thou hast not ben as an other whoze, that holdeth scoine of a small rewarde, but a wife that breaketh wedlocke, and taketh other in steede of her husbände. Gyftes are geuen to all other whozes, but thou geuest rewarde vnto all thy leuers, and offerest them gyftes, to come vnto thee out of al places, and to commit fornication with thee. It is come to passe with thee in thy whozedome, contrarie to the vse of other women, yea, there hath no such fornication ben committed after thee, seyng that thou

I will geue thee ouer into their power, that breake downe thy steeles, and destroy thy bordell houses: they shall strippe thee out of thy clothes, all thy fayre & beautifull Jewels shall they take from thee, and so let thee sit naked and bare: • yea, they shall bring the comon people vpon thee, which shall stone thee and slay thee downe with their swordes. • They shall burne by thy houses, and punish thee in the syghte of many women. Thus will I make thy whoredome to cease, so that thou shalt geue oute no more rewardes. Should I make my wrath to be still, take my ialousy from thee, be content and no more to be displeased? seying thou rememberest not the daies of thy yowth, but hast prouoked me to wrath in all these thinges? beholde therefore I will bring thine owne wayes vpon thine head, saith the Lord God: howbeit I neuer did vnto thee according to thy wickednesse and all thy abominations. Behold, all they that vse common prouerbes, shall vse this prouerbe also agaynst thee, such a mother, suche a daughter. chylidren: • Yea, thou art the sister of thy sisters, whiche forsake their husblandes and their chylidren. Your mother is a Cethite, and your father an Ammonite. Thy eldest sister is Samaria, shee and her daughters that dwell vpon thy lefte hande. But thy youngest sister that dwelleth on thy ryghte hande, is Sodom, and her daughters. Yet haste thou not walked after their wayes, nor doone after their abominations, but thou standest a little and verie small time, and in all thy wayes thou haste bene more corrupte then they. As truly as I lyue, sayth the Lord God, Sodom thy sister with her daughters, hath not done so euill as thou & thy daughters. Beholde, • the synnes of thy sister Sodom were these: Pride, fulness of meate, aboundsance, and delicie, these thinges hadde she and her daughters. Besides that they reached not their hand to the poore and needy, but were proude, and vnder abominable things before me: therefore I toke them awaye, as pleased me. Nayther had Samaria done halfe of thy synnes: • yea thou hast exceeded them in wickednes: in so muche that in comparison of all the abominations which thou haste done, thou haste made thy sisters good women. Therefore thou (whiche diddest condemne thy sister) beare thine owne shame for thine owne offences, that thou hast committed, more abominable then they did, whiche in dede art more righteous then thou art. Be thou (I saye) ashamed, and beare thy shamefull rebuke, seying that thou hast proued thy sisters, in comparison of thee, righteous. As for their captiuitie, namely the captiuitie of Sodom, and her daughters: the captiuitie of Samaria and her daughters, I will bring them agayne: so will I also bring agayne thy captiuitie among them: that thou maiest take thine owne confusion vpon thee, and be ashamed of all that thou hast done, and to comforte them. Thus thy sisters (namely) Sodom and her daughters, Samaria, and her daughters, with the saith, & thy daughters shalbe broughte againe to your old estate. When thou wast in thy pryde, and befoze thy wickednes came to light, thou wouldest not heare speake of thy sister Sodom, untill the time that the Syrians with all their towncs, and the Philistines with all that lye round about them, brought thee to shame and confusion, that thou mightest beare thine owne filchines and abhominacion, sayth the Lord God. For thus sayeth the Lord God: I shoulde (by right) deale with thee as thou hast done. Thou hast despised the oth, and broken the couenaunte. Nevertheless, I will remember thy couenaunt that I made with thee in thy youth, in so muche that it shalbe an euering couenaunt: so that thou also remember thy wayes, and be ashamed of them, then shalt thou receaue of me thy elder and yonger sisters, whome I will make thy daughters, and that besyde thy couenaunt. And so will I renew my couenaunt with thee, that thou mayest knowe that I am the Lord, that thou mayest thinke vpon it, be ashamed, and excuse thine owne confusion no more: when I haue forgren thee, all that thou hast doone, saith the Lord God.

The word of the Lord came vnto me, sayinge. Thou sonne of man, put forth a darke speaking and a notable, vnto the house of Israel and say: Thus sayeth the Lord God: Here came a great Eagle with great wings, yea, with a mighty longe bodie, and full of fethers of diuers coloures, vpon the mount of Libanus, & toke the hyest bough of a Cedar tree, and brake off the top of his twig, and carryd it into the lande of Canaan, and set it in a cille of merchants. He toke also of the sede of the land, & planted it in a fruitful ground, he brought it vnto great waters, and set it as a willowe tree therby. Then did it growe, and was a great byne tree, and low by the ground, whose branches turned into it selfe, and the rootes of it, were fastened vnder it, thus there came of it a byne, and it brought forth blossomes, and sprede out boughes. But there was another Eagle, a great one, whiche hadde great wings and many fethers, and beholde, the rootes of this vine had an hunger after him, and spread out his boughes towarde him, that he might water her with the orcharde that he had planted. Nevertheless it was planted vpon a good ground besyde great waters, so that (by reason) it should haue brought out boughes and fruit, and haue ben a goodly vine. Speake thou therfoze, thus saith the Lord God: Shal this vine prosper? Shall not his rootes be pluckt out, his fruit be broken off, his grene boughes wither and fade away: yea withoute either stronge arme or manye people, that it be plucked vp by the rootes. Beholde, it was planted, shall it prosper therfoze? Shal it not be dyed vp and withered, yea euen in the shoting out of his blossomes, as sone as the East Wind bloweth? Moreover, the word of the Lord came vnto me, sayinge: D Speake to that frowarde householdr, knowe ye not, what these thinges do signifie? Tell the: Behold, the king of Babilon came to Jerusalem, & toke the king and his princes, & led the to Babilon. He toke of the kinges seede, and made a couenaunt with him, and toke an othe of him: The princes of the lande toke he with him also, that the land might be holden in subiection, & not to rebel, but kepe the conent, and fulfil it. But he fel from him, & set his Embassadors into Egypt, that he might haue helpe and muche people. Should that prosper? Should he be kept safe, that doth such thinges. Should he escape, that breaketh his couenaunt? As truly as I liue saith the Lord God: He shal die at Babilon, in the place where the king dwelleth that made him King, whose othe he hath despised, and whose couenaunt he hath broken. Neither shall Pharaon with his great host, and multitude of people, mayntayne him in the warre: when when they cast by dykes, and set by bulwarkes to destroye muche people: For seeing he hath despised the othe, and broken the couenaunt (where as he yet gaue his hande therevpon) and done all these thinges, he shall not escape. & herefoze thus sayth the Lord God: As true as I live, I will bringe mine othe that he hath despised, and my couenant that he hath broken, vpon his owne head. • I will cast my net about him, and catche him in my arme. • To Babylon will I carrye him, there will I punish him, because of the great offence that he made me. As for those that flee from him out of the hooſte, they shall be slayne with the sword. • The residue shalbe scattered toward all the windes, and ye shall knowe, that I the Lord haue spoken it. • Thus saith the Lord God: I will also take a bzaunche from an hye Cedre tree, and will set it: & take the vppermost twig, that yet is but tender, and plant it vpon an hye hill: Namely, vpon the hye hill of Zion will I plant it, that it maye bringe forth twiggges, and geue fruite, and be a great Cedre tree, so that all manner of foules maye builde in it, and make their nestes vnder the shadowe of his bzaunches. And all the trees of the field shall knowe, that I the Lord haue brought downe the hye tree, and set the low tree by: that I haue dyed by the greene tree, and made the drye tree to flourish: • Euen I the Lord that spake it, haue also broughte it to passe.

The word of the Lord came vnto me, on this manner: What meane ye by this common proverb, that ye vse in the lande of Israel, saying: • The fathers haue eaten sowze grapes, and the childrens teeth are set on edge. As truly as I live, sayth the Lord God, ye shall vse this byword no more in Israel. Beholde, • all foules are mine. Like as the father is mine, so is the sunne myne also. • The soule that sunneth shall dye. • If a man be godly, and do the thing that is equall and right, he eateth not vpon the hilles: he listeth not by his deuils of Israel, he defileth not his neighbors wife, he medleth with no mens trons woman, he greueth no body, he greueth his detter his pledge agayne, he taketh none other mans good by violence, • he payeth his meate with the hangrye, he clotheth the naked, • he lendeth nothing vpon vsury, he taketh nothing ouer, he withdraueth his hand from doinge wronge, he dealeth saythfully betwixte man and man, and walketh in my commandementes, and keepeth my lawes, and persformeth them faithfully: • This is a righteous man, he shall surely liue sayth the lord God. • If he now get a sonne that is a murderer, a shedder of blood: yf he do one of these thinges (though he do not all) eateth vpon the hilles, he defileth his neighbours wife, he greueth the poore and needy, he robbeth and spoileth, he getteth not the detter his pledge agayne, he listeth by his eyes vnto ydols, and medleth with abhominable thinges, he lendeth vpon vsury, and taketh more ouer. • Shall this manne liue? • He shall not liue, seeing he hath done all these abhominations, he shall die, his blood shalbe vpon him. • Now if this man get a sonne also, that feareth all his fathers sinnes, which he hath done, and feareth, neyther doth such lyke: Namely, he eateth not vpon the mountains, he listeth not his eyes by to the ydols of Israel, he defileth not his neighbors wife, he detteth no man, he keepeth my lawes, he neither spoileth nor robbeth any man: he dealeth his meate with the hangrye, he clotheth the naked, he appyleth not the poore, he receaueth no vsury, nor any thing ouer, he keepeth my lawes and walketh in my commandementes. • This manne shall not dye in his fathers sinne, but shall liue without faile. As for his father, because he oppressed and spoyled his brother, and did wickedly among his people: he is deade in his owne sinne. • And yet say ye: wherefoze then should he not this sonne beare hys fathers synne: therefore, because the sonne hath don equitie and ryghte, hath kepte all my commandementes, and done theym: therefore shall hee lyue in dede. The sonne soule that sinneth, shall dye.

Mat. 24. 6. The sonne shall not beare the fathers offence, neyther shall the father beare the sonnes offence. The ryghteousnes of the ryghteous shall bee vpon him, and the wyckednes of the wycked shall bee vpon him selfe also.

Jer. 18. But yf the vngodlye wil tourne away from all hys synnes that he hath done, and kepe al my commandementes, and do the thing that is equal and right: doubtles hee shall liue, and not dy.

Isa. 55. b. For all his synnes that hee dyd before, they shall not be thought vpon: but in his ryghteousnes that he hath done, he shall lyue. For haue I any pleasure in the death of a sinner, saith the Lord God, but rather that he conuert and lyue: Agayne: if the ryghteous turne away from hys ryghteousnes, and do iniquitie, accordyng to all the abhominations that the wycked man doeth: shall he lyue? All the ryghteousnes that he hath done, shall not bee thought vpon: but in the faulte that he hath offended wythall, and in the synne that he hath done, he shall die. And yet ye saye: Cusse, the waye of the Lord is not indifferente.

Isa. 55. b. Hear therefore ye house of Israel: Is not my waye ryghte? Or are not your wayes rather wycked? When a righteous man turneth away from hys ryghteousnes, and medleth wyth vngodlines, he must die therin, ye, for the vngodlines that he hath don, he shall dye. Agayne: When the wicked man turneth away from his wickednes that he hath done, and doeth the thing which is equal and ryghte: he shall liue, he shall not dye.

For in so much that he remembereth hym selfe, and turneth him from hys vngodlines that he hath don, he shall lyue and not dye. And ye saye: the house of Israel. Cusse, the waye of the Lord is not equal. Are my wayes vngodly? Ye house of Israel: Are not your wayes rather vngodly. As for me, I will iudge every man accordyng to hys wayes, O ye house of Israel, saith the Lord God. Wherefore, bee conuerted, and turne you cleane from all your wyckednes, so shall there no synne do you harme. Cast away from you all your vngodlines, that ye haue done: make you newe heartes and a newe spyryte. Wherefore shall ye dye, O ye house of Israel: for I haue no pleasure in the death of him that dyeth, saith the Lord God. Turne you then, and ye shall lyue.

The xix. Chapter.

At thou sonne of man mourne thou for the princes of Israel, and saye. Wherefore lay thy mother the lionesse among the Lyons, and nourished her ponge ones among the Lyons whelpes? One of her whelpes she brought vypp, and it became a Lyon, it learned to spoyle, and to deuoure folke. The heathen hearde of hym, and tooke him in their nettes, and brought hym in chaynes vnto the lande of Egypt. Nowe when she sawe that al her hope and comforte was awaye, shee tooke another of her whelpes, and made a Lyon of hym: which went among the Lyons, and became a scarce Lyon: learned to spoyle and to deuoure folke, he destroyed their palaces, and made their cities waste. In so much that the whole land and every thyng therein, was utterly desolate, through the very voice of his roaring. Then came the heathen together on every side out of al countreys against him, laied their nettes for hym, and toke him in their pytte.

So they bound hym wyth chaynes and brought him to the kynge of Babylon: whiche put him in pryson, that hys voyce should nomore be heard vpon the mountaynes of Israel. As for thy mother, shee is lyke a vyne in thy bloud, planted by the water syde: her frutes and braynches are growen out of many waters, her stalkes were so strong, that men mighte haue made staves therof for officers: she grew so hye in her stalkes: so when men sawe that he exceeded the heighth & multitude of her branches, she was rooted out in displeasure, and cast downe to the ground. The East wynde dyed by her fruite, her stronge stalkes wer broken of, withered and brente in the fyre. But now she is planted in the wilderness, in a dry and thyrsty ground And there is a fyre gone oute of her stalkes, whiche hath brente vppon the branches and her fruite, so that shee hath no mo stronge stalkes, to be shames for officers. This is a pitious and miserable thing.

The .xx. Chapter.

Eze. 24 a In the vii. yeare the tenth daye of the fifth month. it happened, that certayne of the elders of Israell came vnto me, for to aske counsell at the Lorde, and sat them downe by me. Then came the woorde of the Lorde vnto me on this maner: Thou sonne of man: speake vnto the elders of Israell, and say vnto theym. Thus sayth the Lorde God: are ye come hither to aske any thing at me? As truly as I lyue (saith the Lorde) I will geue you no answer. Wilt thou not reprove them (thou sonne of manne) wilt thou not reprove them? Shewe them the abhominations of their fathers, and tel them: Thus saith the Lorde God: In the daye when I chose Israel, and lyft by mine hande vppon the seede of the house of Iacob and shewed my selfe vnto them in the lande of Egypt: Yea, when I lyft by myne hand ouer them, and sayd: I am the Lorde your God, euen in the daye that I lyft by myne hande ouer them to bryng the them oute of the lande of Egypt, into a land that I had prouided for theym, whiche floweth wyth mylke and honye, and is a pleasaunte lande amonge all other. minations of hye eyes, and to forsake the ydols of Egypt. Then I made mes to poure myne indignation ouer them, and to satisfie my wrath vppon theym: yea euen in the myddell of the lande of Egypt. But I would not do it, for my names sake: that it should not be vnhalowed before the heathen, among whom they dwelt, and among whom I shewed my selfe vnto them, that I would bryng them out of the lande of Egypt. Nowe when I had carped them out of the land of Egypt and brought them into the wilderness I gaue them my commaundementes, and shewed them my lawes, which whoso keepeth shall lyue in them: I gaue them also my holy dayes, to be a token betwixt me and them, and ther by to knowe, that I am the Lorde, which halowe the. And yet the house of Israell rebelled agaynst me in the wilderness, they would not walke in my commaundementes, they haue call awaye my lawes (whiche whoso keepeth shall lyue in them) and my Sabbath dayes haue they greatlye vnhalowed. Then I made mee to poure out myne indignation vpon the, and to consume them in the wilderness. Yet I would not do it, for my names sake: least it should be dishonored before the heathen, from the whyche I had carped them away. But I swore vnto theym in the wilderness, that I would not bryng them into the land which I gaue them: a lande that floweth wyth mylke and hony, and is a pleasure of all landes: and that because they refused my lawes, and walked not in my commaundementes, but had vnhalowed my Sabbathes, for their hert was gone after their idols. Neuerthelesse, myne eye spared them so that I wold not bitterly slay them, and consume them in the wilderness. Whoeuere I sayd vnto theyr sons in the wilderness. Walke not in the statutes of youre fathers, keepe not their ordynances, & defile not your selues with their ydols, for I am I your god, But walk in my statutes, lift up my hand over them also in the the heathen, and that ye may knowe, that I am the Lord, whiche haue brought you into the land of Israel: yea, into the same land, that I sware to your fathers. There shall ye call to remembrance your owne wayes, and all your ymaginations, wherein ye haue bene defyled: and ye shall iudge your selues worthy to be destroyed, for all your wickednes, that ye haue done. And ye shall knowe, that I am the Lord: when I entreate you after my name, not after your wicked wayes, no, according to your corrupt workings: O ye house of Israel, sayth the Lord. Moreover, the worde of the Lord came vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man, sette thy face toward the south, and speake to the south wynd, and saye to the wood toward the south: Heare the word of the Lord, thus sayth the Lord God: Behold, I will kindle a fire in thee, that shall consume the greene trees with the drye. No man shall be able to quench his flame, but all that loketh from the South to the North, shall be burnt therein: and all fleshe shall see, that I the Lord haue kindled it, so that no man may quench it. Then sayde I: O Lord, they wyll saye of me: Cursed, they are but fables, that he telleth.

The .xxi. Chapter.

The worde of the Lord came to me saying: Thou sonne of man, set thy face toward Jerusalem, speake agaynst the Sanctuary, and prophesye agaynst the land of Israel, say to the land of Israel, Thus saith the Lord: Behold, I will vpon thee, and will drawe my sword out of the sheath, and rote out of thee both the righteous and the wicked. Seynge then that I will rote out of thee both the righteous & wicked, therfore shall my sword go out of his sheath agaynst all fleshe from the north to the south: that all fleshe maye knowe howe that I the Lord haue drawen my sword out of the sheathe: and it shall not be put in agayne. Mourne therfore (O thou sonne of man) that thy sword cracke withal, ye mourne bitterly for them in their presence. And yf they saye, wherfore mournest thou: Thou tell them: for the tydynes that cometh, at the which all hertes shall melt, all handes shall be litten down, all stomackes shall faynt, and all knees shall swaie feeble. Beholde, it cometh and shall be fulfilled, sayth the Lord God. Agayne, the worde of the Lord came vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man, prophesye, and speake. Thus sayth the Lord God: speake. The sword, the sword is sharpened, and well scoured. Sharpened is it for the slaughter, and scoured that it may be bright. Shall we then make mirth? Agaynst the tribe of my sonne it is gone forth, destroying all trees. He hath put his sword to the dyghtyng, that good holde may be taken of it. This sword is sharpened and dyght, that it may be geuen vnto the hande of the manslayer. Crye (O thou sonne of man, and howle, for this sword shall smyte my people, and all the rulers in Israel: my people shall be feared therfore this sword. Smyte therfore thou vpon the thyghe, for it is gone forth to make a cryall. And what cryall shall this be, when euen my scepter shall be repproued: it shall not be sayth the Lord God. Prophesye thou sonne of man, and smyte thine handes together, make the sword two edged, yea, make it thye edged, that manslayers sword, that sword of the greates slaughter, which shall smyte them: euen in their priety chambers: to make them abashed and faynt at the hertes, and in all gates to make some of them fall. I haue geuen a fearful sword, O howe bright and sharpe is it, howe well dyght and mete for the slaughter. Get the some place alone, cryest thou the right hand or on the left, whether so euer thy face turneth: I will smite my handes together also, and will shewe my wrathfull indignation: Euen I the Lord haue sayde it. The word of the Lord came yet vnto me agayne, saying: Thou son of man, make

 Nevertheless, as for the sothfayinge, they shal holde it but for vanitie. And esteeme them as those to whom they haue often sworn. Not withstanding he shal remember their wickednes, so that by ryght they must be taken and

 For so much as ye pour selues shewe your offence, and haue opened youre wickednes, so that in all your workes men may see your sinnes: therfore are ye come to remembraunce, and ye shal be taken by violence. O thou shame-full wicked guyde of Israel, whose day is come: euen the tyme that wyckednes shall haue an end. Thus saith the Lord God: Take away the garland, and put of the crowne, and so is it awaye: the humble is exalted, and the proude brought lowe. Punyshe, punyshe, yea, punyshe them wyll I, and destroy them: and that shal not be fulfilled but till he come, to whom the iudgement belongeth, and to whome I haue geuen it. And thou (O sonne of man) prophesye, and speake: Thus wickednes was full. Should I put it by agayne? Naye I will punyshe thee, in the land where thou wast no-ryshed and bozne, and pour my indignation vpon the, and will blowe vpon thee in the fire of my wrath, and deliuer the vnto cruell people, which are learned to destroye. Thou shalt

And the word of the Lord came vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man, • the house of Israel is turned to dross. All they that should be brasse, tynne, yron and leade are in the fyre become dross. Therefore, thus sayth the Lord God : For so muche as ye all are turned into dross, beholde, I will byng you together vnto Ierusalem, lyke as syluer, brasse, yron, tynne and leade are put together in the fornaçe, and the fire blowen therevnder to melte them. Thy rulers in the are lyke ranshyng wolues, to shedde blood, and to destroy soules, for their owne couetous lucre. • As for thy prophetes, they dawbe with vntempered claye, they see tannities, and prophesse lyes vnto them, saying: the Lord God sayth so, wher as the Lord hath not spoken. The people in the lande bseth wycked extorcion and robberye. They bare the poore and nedye, and • oppresse the stranger agaynste ryghte. And I soughte in the lande for a man, that wold make by the hedge, and let him selte in the gap before me in the lands behalfe, that it shoulde not be corrupted: but I could fynd none. Therefore I will poure out my cruell displeasure vpon them, and burne the in the fyre of my wrath: theyr owne wayes will I recompence vpon their heades sayth the Lord God.

The. xlii. Chapter.
The word of the Lord came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, there were two women, that had one mother: these (whiche they were yong) began to play the harlots • in Egypt. There were their brestes brosed, and the pappes of their maiden head dyd the Egyptians destroy. The eldest of them was called Oholah and her yongest sister Oholibah. These two were my wyues, and bare sonnes and daughters. Theyr names were Samaria, and that was Oholah: and Ierusalem, that was Oholibah. As for Oholah, she began to go a whoringe, when I had taken her to me. • She was set on fire vpon her loners the Assyrians, as her neighbours whiche hadde to doo with her, even the princes and lordes that wer deckt in costly aray, saye yong men, lusty ryders of hoxles. Thus thozow her whordome, she cleued vnto all the yonge men of Assiria. Yea, shee was mad vpon them, and despyled her selfe with all their Idols. Yetther ceased she from the fornication, that she bled with the Egyptians, for in her youth they lay with her, they brosed the bzestles of her maydenhead, and poured their whordome vpon her. wherfore,

• I deliuered her into the hands of her louers, euen the Assirians, who she so loued. These discovered her shame, toke her sons & daughters, and slew her with the sword. An euil name gat she of all people, & they punished her.

ster in whordome, • she loued the Assirians (which also say with her) namely, the princes and greates lordes, that wer clothed with all manner of gaudious apparell, all lusty hoxsmen & faire younge persons. Then I sawe that they both were defiled alike. But she increased still in whordome, for whe she sawe men painted vpon the wall, the ymages of the Chaldees set forth with fresh colours, & saye girdles about them, and goodly honettes vpon their heades, loking all lyke princes (after the maner of the Babilonians and Chaldees in their owne lande, wher they be bozne) immediately, as sone as she sawe the, she bent in loue vpon them, and sente messengers for them into the lande of the Chaldees.

Now when the Babilonians came to her, they lay with her, and defiled her with their whordome, and so was she polluted with them. And when her luste was abated from them, • her whordome and shame was dyscouered and sene: then my hert forsoke her lyke as my herte was gone from her sister also. Nevertheless, she bled her whordome euer the longer the more, and remembred the daies of her youth the lande of Egypt: • she bent in lust vpon them, whose flesh was lyke the fleshe of asses, and their sede lyke the sede of hoxles. Thus thou hast reued the fylthynes of thy pouth, when thy louers brosed thy paps, and marred thy brestes in Egypt. Therefore, (• Holibah) thus sayth the Lord God: I wyll rayle vppon thy louers (with whom thou haste satisfied thy luste agaynst thee, and gather them together round about thee: namely the Babilonians, & all the Chaldees, rulers, mightye men and tyrantes, with all the Assirians: all younge and saye louers: princes and lordes, knightes, and gentilmens, whiche be all good hoxsmen. These shall come vpon thee with hoxles, charrettes, and a greates multitude of people: whiche shall be harnessed aboute thee on euery syde, with brest plates, shydes and helmetes, I wyll punishe thee before them, yea, they theym selues shall punishe thee, accordyng to their owne iudge-mente. I wyll put my gealousye vpon thee, so they shall deale cruelly with thee. They shall cutte of thy nose and thine eares, and the remnaunte shall fall thozowe the sword. They shall cary away thy sons and daughters, and the residus shalbe bren in the fire.

They shal stryppethee out of thy clothes, and carye thy costly Jewelles awaye with them. Thus wyll I make an end of thy fylthynes & whor-dome, whiche thou haste brought out of the lande of Egypt: so that thou shalte turne thyne eyes nomore after them, and cast thy mind nomore vpon Egypt. For thus sayth the Lord: behold, I will deliuer thee into the han-des of them, whome thou hatest: yea, euen into the handes of them with whome thou haste fulfilled thy luste which shall deale cruellye with thee.
All thy labour shall they take with them, and leaue thee naked and bare, & thus the shame of thy fylthy whor-dome shall come to lyght. All these things shall happen vnto thee, because of thy whordome whiche thou haste bled among Gentiles, with whose Idoles thou haste despyled thy selfe.
Thou

Thou hast walked in the way of thy sister, therefore wyl I geue thee her cuppe in thy handes. Thus sayth the Lord God: Thou shalt drynke of thy sisters cuppe, howe depe and farre so ener it be to the bottome. Thou shalt be laughed to scoorne, and had as gretlie in derision, as it is possible. Thou shalt be full of drunkenness and sorow for the cuppe of thy sister. Samaria is a cup of destruction and wastinge, the same shalt thou drynke, and suppe it oute euen to the dregges, yea, thou shalt eate by the broken pyeces of it, and so teare thyne owne bresten. For euen I haue spoken it sayth the Lord God. Therefore thus saith the Lord God: For so much as thou haste forgotten me, and caste me a side behynd thee, so beare now thyne owne syl-thyness and whooredome. The Lord sayde moreover vnto me: Thou sonne of man write thou notreproue Dholah and Dholibah, shewe them theyr abhominations, namely that they haue broken their wedlocke, and stayned their handes wpth bloude: yea, euen with their ydoles haue they committed adoutrye. and offered them by the fyre their owne chyldren (to be deuou-red) whom they had borne vnto mee.
 Yea, and they haue theyr doone vnto me also: they haue defyled my sanctuary in that same waye, and haue vn-halowed my Sanctuary. For whē theyr had slaine their chyldren for theyr idols, they came the same day into my sanctuary to defyle it. For this haue they done in my house: Beside al this thou hast sent thy messengers for me, out of farre countreys: and whē they came, thou haste bathed and paynted, thyne eyes wpth colours, trymmed, and set forth thy self of the best fashio, thou sattest vpon a goodly bed, and a table spred before the, wher vpon thou hast set myne incense and mine oyle.
 Then was there greute cheare wpth her to obtayn peace, and though with those men many gueneame, yet were there also brought men of Saba from the wyldernes: whiche gaue theym bracelets vpon their handes, and sette glorious crownes vpon their heads, and I sayde vnto her: that seinge she was strikē in age in her whooredoms: now shal her fornications come to an ende wpth her. And they wente into her as vnto a comen harlot. Euen so wente they (I saye) to Dholah, and Dholibah those sylthy women. Wal-ye that loue vertue and ryghteousnes iudge them, punish them, as adoutrers and murderers oughte to be iudged and punished. For they are breakers of wedlocke, and the bloude is in their handes. Wherefore thus sayth the Lord God: I wyl byng a great multitude of people vpon them and make them be scattered and spoy-led: these shall stone theym, and goze theym wpth their swerdes. They shal slay their sonnes and daughters, and burne by their houses with fyre.

 Thus wil I destroye al such sylthy-nes oute of the land: that all women maye learne, not to do after your vn-cleannes. And so they shall laye their filthines vpon your owne fetters, and ye shalbe punished for the synnes that ye haue commytted with your ydols: and ye shal know that I am the Lord God.

The xxxiii. Chapter.

In the nynte yere, in the tenth moneth, the tenth daye of the mo-neth came the word of the Lord vnto me, saying: O thou son of man, write by the name of this day, yea, euen the houre of this presente daye: when the king of Babilon sette him selfe agaynst Ierusalem. He w that speaks vnto theym. Thus saith the Lord God: Get thee a pot, set it on and poure water into it: putte al the pyeces together in it all the good pyeces, the loine and the shoulder, and fill it wpth the best bones. Take one of the best sheepe, and an heape of domes wpth it: let it boyle wel, and lette the bones seeth wel therein. With that said the Lord God on this manner, • Wa be vnto the bloudy cite of the pot, wher vpon the rustines hangeth, and is not yet scorred awaye. Take out the peeces that are in it, one after another, there nedee not lots to be caste therfore, for the blood is yet in it. Upon a playne dype stone hath she poured it, and not vpon the grounde, that it might be couered with duste. And therfore haue I letten her power, her blood vpon a playne dype stony rocke, because it shuld not be hid, and that I might bringe my wrathfull indignation and vengeance vpon her. Wherfore thus sayth the Lord God: Wo be vnto that blood thirstie Citie, for whom, euen I my selfe will make a greete fyre and set muche wood, and kindle the fyre, and seethe the fleshe, and spye the potte, so that the berpe bones shalbe brynt: Moreover, I will set the potte emptye vpon the coles, so that his metal shalbe brynt and molten also for heate, and the filthynes of it shalbe molten in it, and the drosse of it shalbe consumed. Thou tokest gret payne thus to defile thy selfe. And it will not be purged from the exceeding drosse of it: but throught fyre shall the drosse of it be purifyed. In thy filthynes, euen in thy mischieuous deedes, thou doest continue, and because thy filthynes is abhominable, for I haue clenched thee, but thou art not clenched: Thou shalt not be purged from thyne uncleynesse, till I haue powred my wrathfull indignation vpon thee. Euen I the Lord haue so deuised. Yea, it is come therto already, that I will do it, I will not go backe, I will not spare, I will not be entreated, but according to thy wayes and ymaginations, thou shalt be punished, sayeth the Lord God. And the worde of the Lord came vnto me saying: Thou son of man, beholde, I will take awaye the pleasure of thine eyes with a plague, yet shalt thou neyther mourne, nor wepe, nor water thy cheekes: therfore thou mayest mourne by thy self alone but be no deadly lamentation. Holde on thy boner, and put on thy shoes vpon thy fete, couer not thy face, & eate no mourners bread. So I spake vnto the people betimes in the morning and at euen my wyfe dyed: then vpon the next morowe, I did as I was commaunded. And the people sayde vnto me, Wylte thou not tell vs what this signifyeth towarde vs, for this thou doest for our sake? I answered them, the worde of the Lord came vnto me, saying: Tell the house of Israel, thus sayth the Lord God: beholde, I will suspend my sanctuary, euen the glory of your power, the pleasure of your eyes, and the thing that ye lone, your sonnes and daughters whom ye haue left, shall fall throughte the swerde. Like as I haue done, so shal ye doo also: Ye shal not hide your faces, ye shal eate no mourners breade, your bonnets shall ye haue vpon your heades, and shoes vpon your fete. Ye shal neither mourne nor wepe, but in your sinnes ye shall be sorrowfull, and one repēt with an other. Thus Ezechiel is your shewe token. For like as ye haue done, so (when this cometh) ye shall do also, that ye maye learne to knowe that I am the Lord God. But behold I thou sonne of man: In the daye when I take from them theyr power, their tope and honour, the lust of their eyes, the burthen of their issues: namely, their sonnes and daughters, shall not this be knowne? Then shall there one escape, and come vnto the, for to shewe thee. In that day shall thy mouth be opened to him, whiche is escaped, that thou mayest speake, and be no more domme. Yea, and thou shalt be their shewe token, that they may knowe howe that I am the Lord.

The worde of the Lord came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, set thy face agaynste the Ammonites, prophesye vpon them, and say vnto the Ammonites: Heare the worde of the Lord God. Thus sayth the Lord God: For so muche as thou spekest ouer my sanctuary, I haue trowe it be nowe suspended, and ouer the lande of Israel: I trowe it be nowe desolate, yea, and ouer the house of Iuda, I trowe they be nowe led awaye prisoners: Beholde I will de-litter thee to the people of the east, that they may have thee in possession, these shall set their castles and houses in thee. They shall eat thy fruit, & drink up thy milke. As for Rabath, I will make of it a stall for camelles, and of Ammon a shepfold, and ye shall know that I am the Lord. For thus sayth the Lord God: In so much as thou hast clapped with thine handes, and

W stamped with thy fete, yea, reioysed in thine heart ouer the lande of Israell with despite, beholde, I will stretche out mine hande ouer thee also, & deliuer thee, to be spoyled of the Heathen, and roote thee out frō among the people, and cause thee to be destroyed out of all landes: yea, I will make thee to be laid wast, that thou mayest know that I am the Lord. Thus sayth the Lord God: For so muche as Moab and Seir do say: As for the house of Juda, it is but like as all other Gentiles be: Therefore beholde, I will open the side of Moab, and take away their strength, their cities and chiefe coastes of their lande, whiche are the piraures of that countrey. As namely, Bethi, Simoth, Baalmeon and Cariathaim, these will I open vnto them of the caste, that they may fall vpon the Ammonites, & will geue it them in possession, so that the Ammonites shall nomore be had in remembrance amonge the Heathen. Euen this will I punishe Moab also, that they may knowe, howe that I am the Lord. Moreover, thus sayth the

with the sword. Though my people of Israell will I auenge me againe vpon Edom, they shall handle him, according to my wrath and indignation, so that they shall knowe my vengeance, sayth the Lord God. Thus sayth the Lord God: For so much as the Philistines haue done this, namely, taken vengeance with despitefull stomackes, and of an old euill will set them selues to destroy: Therefore, thus sayth the Lord God: Behold, I will stretche out mine hande ouer the Philistines, and destroye the destroyer, and cause all the remnant of the sea coast, to perish. A great vengeance will I take vpon them, and punishe them cruelly, that they may knowe, howe that I am the Lord, which I haue auenged me of them.

The. xxvi. Chapter.

It happened that in the eleuenth I pere, the firste daye of the moneth the worde of the Lord came vnto me saying: Thou sonne of man, because that Tyre hath spoke vpon Ierusalem: I ha, nowe I trow the power of the people be broken, and she turned vnto me, for nowe that she is destroyed, I shall be filled. Yea, therefore sayth the Lord God: Behold O Tyre, I will vpon thee, I will bring a great multitude of people agaynst thee, like as when the sea ariseth with his waues: These shall breake the walles of Tyre, and caste downe her towres: I will scrape the grounde from her, and make her a bare stone: yea, as the dying place, where the flithers hang vpon their nettes by the sea side. Euen I haue spoken it, sayth the Lord God. The Gentiles shall spoyle her: her daughters vpon the fieldes shall perishe with the sword, that they may knowe howe that I am the Lord. For thus sayeth the Lord God: Beholde, I will bringe hither Nabuchodonosor (whiche is the king of Babilon, and a kinge of kinges) from the north vpon Tyre: with horses, charettes, horsemen, and with a great multitude of people.

His daughters that are in the lande, shall be slaine with the sword, but agaynst thee, he shall make bulwarkes, and graue vpon ditches about thee, and lift vpon his shield agaynst thee. His slinges and battell rammes shall be prepare for thy walles, and with his weapons breake downe thy towres. The duste of his horses shall couer thee, they shall be so many, thy walles shall shake at the noise of the horsemen charrets, and wheles, when he cometh to thy portes, as men do into an open cite. With the hooves of his horsefete shall he treade downe all thy streetes. He shall slaie the people with \dagger sword, and breake downe the pylles of the strength. They shall walke away thy ryches, and spoyle thy marchaundise. Thy walles shall they breake downe and destroye thy houses of pleasure. Thy stones, thy tymber, and foundations shall they caste in the water.

Jer. 7. b. Thus will I brynge the melody of thy songes, and the voyce of thy minstrelly to an ende, so that they shall no more be heard. I will make a bare stone of thee: yea, a dyping place for nettes, and thou shalt neuer be baptyzed againe. For euen I the Lord haue spoken it, sayth the Lord God. Thus hath the Lord god spoken concerning Tyre. The Isles shall be moued at the noise of thy fall, and at the cry of the flayne that shall be murdered in thee.

D Withinges of the sea shall come down from their seates regall, they shall lay away their robes, and putte of theyr costly clothing. Yea, with trembling shall they be clothed, they shall syt vpon the ground, they shall be afraide at thy sobeing fall, and be abashed at thee.

Eze. 18. a They shall mourne for thee, and saye vnto thee: O thou noble Citie, that Eze. 18. c haste bene so greatly occupied of olde, thou that hast ben the strongest vpon the sea, with thine inhabitants, of whō all men stode in feare. Howe art thou now so utterly destroyed? Howe at the time of thy fall, the inhabitants of the Isles, yea & the Isles them selues shall stande in feare at thy hande. For thus sayth the Lord God: When I make thee a desolate Citie, as other Cities be, that no man dwell in: and when I bryng the depe vpon thee, that great waters may couer thee: the will I cast thee downe vnto them, that descende into the pyt, vnto a people that hath bene longe dead, and set them in a land that is beneath, like the old wilderness, with them which go downe to their graues, so that no man shall dwell more in thee. And I will make thee to be no more in honour, in the land of the liuing. I will make an end of thee, & thou shalt be gone. Though thou be sought for, yet shalt thou not be founde for euermore, sayth the Lord God.

Eze. xxxij. Chapter.

The word of the Lord came vnto me, saying: O thou sonne of man, make a lamentable complaynte vpon Tyre, and saye vpon Tyre, thou whiche art a port of the sea, that occupyest with much people, and many Isles: Thus speaketh the Lord God. O Tyre thou haste sayde: What, I am a noble Citie, thy borders are in the middest of the sea, and thy builders haue made thee marueylous goodly. All thy tables haue they made of Ciprus trees of the mounte Sanyr. From Libanus haue they taken Cedre trees, to make thee Gallies: and the Okes of Bafan to make thee rowers. The boordes haue they made of pnyoz, and all costly woodde out of the yle of Cethim. Thy sayle was of dyuers colours, small nedle woozke out of the lande of Egypte, to hange vpon thy masse: and the hanginges of pcalowe silke, purple out of the yles of Elisah. They of Sydon and Arnad were thy mariners, & the wisest in Tyre were thy shippemasters. The eldest and wisest at Geban, wer they, that mended and stopped thy shippes. All shippes of the sea with theyr shippmen occupied their marchaundise in thee. The Perses, Lydians, and Chutens were in thyne hoole, and helped thee to fyght, these hanged by their shields & helmets with thee, these set forth thy beautie. They of Arnad were with thyne holle rounde about thy walles, and the Pigmenians wer thy watchmen vpon thy towers, these hanged by their quiuers rounde about thy walles, and made thee marueylous goodly. Charis occupied thee in all maner of wares, in silver, yron, tiume, & lead, and made thy market greate: Iauan, Tuball, and Mesech were thy marchantes, whiche brought the men, and ornaments of metall for thy occupying. They of the house of Chogarma broughte vnto thee at the time of thy marte, horse, horsemenne, and mules.

Eze. 25 They of Dedan were thy marchantes: and manye Isles that occupied with thee, brought thee wethers, Elephant bones and Pecoakes for a present. The Hytians occupied with thee, because of thy diuerse woorkes, and increased thy marchandise, with Smaragdes, with scarlet, with needle woрке, with white linnen clothe, with silke & with cristall. Iuda & the

D lande of Israel occupied with thee, and broughte vnto thy markettes, wheat of Minith and Danneg, balme hony, oyle, and triacle. Damascus also bled marchandise with thee, in the beste wyne of Helbon, and with wool: because thy occupying was so greate, and thy wares so many: Dan, Iauan, and Mensal haue brought vnto thy markettes, yron readye made, wyth Cassia, and Calamus, according to thyne occupying. Dedan occupied with thee in saye tapestrie woorkes and rushings. Arabia and all the Dynities of Cedar haue occupied with thee, in shepe, wethers, and goates. The marchantes of Seba, and Rama haue occupied also with thee, in all costly spices, in all precious stonies and golde, whiche they broughte vnto thy markettes. Haram, Chene, and Eden, the marchantes of Saba, Miria and Chelmad, were all doers with thee, and occupied with thee. In costly rayment of yelow silke and of needle woorkes (very precious, and therefore pacted and bounde together with ropes.) Yea, and in Cedar wood, at the time of thy markettes. The shippes of Charis were the chiefe of thy occupying. Thus thou art full and in great worship, euen in the myddell of the sea. Thy robbers shall bring thee into great waters, the east wind shall ouer beate thee into the myddell of the sea: so that thy wares, thy marchandise, thy ryches, thy mariners, thy shipmasters, thy builders of thy houses, thy occupiers (that brought thee thynges necessarie) the menne of warre that are in thee: yea, and all thy comens shall perishe in the myddell of the sea: in the day of thy fall. The suburbs shall shake at the loud cry of the shipmen. All whirrie menne, and all mariners vpon the sea, shall leape out of theyr boates, and set them selues vpon the lande. They shall lift by their voyce because of thee, and make a lamentable crye. They shall cast dust vpon theyr heades, and lye downe in the ashes. They shall haue them selues, and put sackclothe vpon them for thy sake. They shall mourne for thee with heartfull sorowe, and heauy lamentation, yea, they also shall weepe for thee. Alas, what cite hath so bene destroyed in the sea, as Tyre is: when thy wares and marchandise came from the seas: Thou gauest all people ynough. The kinges of the earth hast thou made ryche, through the multitude of thy wares and occupyinge. But thou art nowe caste downe into the depe of the sea, al thy resoyt of people is perisshed with thee. All they that dwell in the yles are abashed at thee, and all their kinges are astoyde, yea, theyr faces haue chaunged colour. The marchants of the nations wondred at thee: In that thou arte so cleane brought to naughte, and comest no more by.

The worde of the Lord came vnto me saying: thou sonne of man tel the princes of Tyre: Thus sayth the Lord God, because thou hast a proud heart, and hast saide: I am a God, I haue my seate in the myddell of the sea like a God: where as thou arte but a man and not God, and yet standest in thyne owne conceyte, that thou arte God. Beholde, thou shalt keel thy selfe wiler then Daniel, that there is no secrettes hydde from thee. With thy wisdoms and thy vnder-standing thou haste gotten thee great wealthines, and gathered treasure of silver and golde, with thy great wis-dome and occupying, hast thou increased thy power, & because of thy great riches, thy heart is proude. Therefore, thus sayth the Lord God: For so much as thou haste lyste by thine heart as though thou were God: behold I will bring enemies vpon thee, even the tyrants of the heathen: these shall drawe out their swordes vpon thy beautie and wisdom, and shall despoyle thy glory. They shall caste thee downe to the pitte, so that thou shalt dye in the middes of the sea, as they that be slayne. Let see, yf thou wilt save thy self (before them that slay thee) I am God, whereas thou arte but a man, and not God, in the handes of them that slay thee. Dye shalt thou, even as the vnchurched in the han-des of the enemies, for I my self have spoken it, saith the Lord God. Moreover, the word of the Lord came vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man, make a lamentable complaynt over the henge of Tyre, and tell him: Thus sayth the Lord God: thou art a scale of a likenesse, full of wisdom and excellent beautie. Thou haste bene in the pleasant garden of God: thou art deckt with all maner of precious stones, with Rubie, Topas, Chrysall, Jacint, Onix, Iaspis, Saphir, smarradge, Carbuncle, and Golde. Thy beautie and the holes that be in thee, were set forth in the day of thy creation. Thou art a fayre Cherub, exalted by the anoynting, stretched wide out for to cover. I have sette thee in this dignitie vpon the holy mount of God, there haste thou bene, and walked amonge the fayre glistering stones. From the tyme of thy creation thou hast ben right excellent, till wickednes was found in thee. Because of thy great marchaundise, thy heart is full of richednesse, and thou hast offended. Therefore will I cast thee from the mount of God (O thou covering Cherub) and destroye thee amonge the glistering stones. Thy hearte was proude in thy fayre beautie, and tho-rowe thy beautie thou haste destroyed thy wisdom. I will cast thee downe of the grounde, and that in the sight of Kinges. Thou haste despoyled thy Sanctuary, with the greates wickednes of thy vnrighteous occupying. I will bring a fyre from the middell of thee to consume thee, and will make thee to ashey in the sighte of all them that looke vpon thee. All they that have bene acquainted with thee as amonge the heathen, shall be abashed at thee, seeinge thou arte so cleane broughte to naughte, and comest no more vp. And the word of the Lord came vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man, let thy face agaynst Sydon.

 Prophecy vpon it, and speke: Thus sayth the Lord God: Behold, O Sy-don, I will vpon thee, and get me honour in thee, that it maye be knowne, howe that I am the Lord; when I punishe her, and gette me honour in her. For I will sende pestilence and bloudshedding into her streets, so that those which be slaine with the sword, shall lye rounde aboute in the middell of her, and they shall knowe that I am the Lord. She shall no more be a pickinge thorne, and an hurtinge byer vnto the house of Israel, nor vnto them that lye round about her, and hate her, and they shall knowe that I am the Lord God. Thus sayth the Lord God: when I gather the hous-holdes of Israel together agayne from the nations among whom they be scattered, the shal I be sanctified in them, in the sighte of the Gentils, and they shall dwell in the lande, that I gaue to my servant Jacob: they shal dwell safely therein, byside houses, and plant vineyards, pea safely. Shall they dwell therein: when I have punished all those, that despise them round about, and then shall they knowe, that I am the Lord their God.

The xix. Chapter.

In the tenth yere, vpon the twelfth day of the tenth month, the word of the Lord came vnto me, saying:

 O thou ſonne of man, let nowe thy face agaynſt Pharao the kinge of Egypt: prophesye agaynſt him, and agaynſt the whole lande of Egypt. Speake and tell him, thus ſayth the Lord God: beholde, O Pharao, thou kinge of Egypt, I wil vpon thee thou great dragon, that liest in the waters, thou that ſaieſt: the water is mine, I haue made it my ſelfe. I will put an hook in thy chawes, and hang all the fiſhe in thy waters vpon thy ſcales. After that I wil draw thee out of thy waters: yea, and al the fiſh of thy waters that hang vpon thy ſcales. I wil caſt thee out vpon the drye lande with the fiſhe of thy waters, ſo that thou ſhalt lye vpon the field. Thou ſhalt not be gathered nor taken vp: but ſhalt be meate for the beaſts of the field, and for the ſoules of the ayre, that all they which dwell in Egypt, maye knowe, that I am the Lord: becauſe thou haſt bene a ſtaffe of reed to the houſe of Iſrael. When they toke hold of thee with their hand, thou brokeſt and prickedſt them on euery ſide: and yf they leaned vpon thee, thou brakeſt & hurtedſt the raiues of their backes. Therefore, thus ſaith the Lord God: Beholde, I will bring a ſword vpon thee, and rote out of thee both man and beaſt: Yea, the land of Egypt ſhall be deſolate & waſt, and they ſhall knowe, that I am the Lord. Becauſe he ſaid: The water is myne, I my ſelfe haue made it. We hold therefore, I will vpon thee, & vpon thy waters, I will make the land of Egypt waſte and deſolate, and in a baſhement, fro the tower of Siene vnto the borders of the Moſaite land: ſo that in fortye yeares there ſhall no foote of man walke there, neither ſote of cattell go there, neyther ſhall it be inhabited. I will make the lande of Egypt to be deſolate, amonge other waſte countreys, and her cities to lye voyde fortye yeres, among other voyd cities. And I will ſcatter the Egyptians among the heathen and nations and drawe them in the landes about. Agayne, thus ſayeth the Lord God: When the 41. yeres are expired, I will gather the Egyptians together againe out of the nations, among whom they were ſcattered, and will bringe the priſoners of Egypt agayne into the lande of Pathures their owne native cuntry, that they may be there a ſmall ſpace ſmall kingdome: yea, they ſhall be the ſmalleſt amonge other kingdomes, leaſt they exalt them ſelues aboue the heathen, for I will ſo miniſhe them that they ſhall no moze rule the heathen. They ſhall no moze be as hope vnto the houſe of Iſrael, neyther pponoketh them any moze to wickednes, to cauſe them turne backe, and to ſolowe them, and they ſhall knowe that I am the Lord God. In the xxvij. yere, the fyrſte daye of the fyrſte moneth, came the worde of the Lord vnto me, ſaying: Thou ſonne of man, Nabuchodonosor the kinge of Babilon hath made his hoſt with greates trauaile and labour to come beſeye Egypt, that euery heade may be balde, and euerye ſhoulder bare. Yet hath Egypt geuen neyther him, nor his hoſt any reward for the great trauaile that he hath taken there. Therefore thus ſayth the Lord God: Behold, I will geue the land of Egypt vnto Nabuchodonosor the kinge of Babilon, that he may take away al her ſubſtance, rob her robberies, and ſpoile her ſpoyles, to pay his hoſte their wages withall. I will geue him the lande of Egypt for his labour that he toke for me beſeye Egypt. At the ſame time will I cauſe the hozne of the houſe of Iſrael to growe ſooth, and open thy mouth agayne among them, that they maye knowe, howe that I am the Lord.

The .xxx. Chapter.

The worde of the Lord came mozeouer vnto me, ſaying: Thou ſonne of man, prophesie and ſpeake, Thus ſayeth the Lord GOD: Mourne, woe worth thy daye: For the daye is here, the daye of the Lord is come, the darke daye of the heathen, the houre is at hande, the ſword cometh vpon Egypt.

4. Reg. 18
E. say. 30
31. E. 36

When the wounded men fall downe in Egypt, when her people are taken away, and when her foundations are destroyed, the Moziars lande shall be asrayde, yea, the Moziars land, Libia, and Libia, all their commen people, and Chub, and all that be confederate vnto them, shall fall with them through the swerde. Thus sayeth the Lord: The maintainers of the land of Egypt shall fall, the pryde of her power shall come downe euen vnto the towre of Sienez shall they be slayne downe with the swerde, saith the lord God, among other desolate countreys they shalbe made desolate, and among other wast cities they shalbe wasted. And they shall knowe, that I am the Lord, when I kindle a fyre in Egypt, and when all her helpers are destroyed. At that time shall their messengers go forth from me in shippes, to make the carelesse Moziars afraid, and sorowe shall come vpon them according to the day of Egypt, for doubtles it shal come. Thus sayth the Lord God: I will make an end of the people of Egypt throughte the hande of Nabuchodonosor the king of Babilon. He and his people with him, yea, and the cruell tyrauntes of the Heathen shall be broughte to destroye the lande. They shall drawe oute their swordes vpon Egypte, and fill the land full of slaine men. I will dry vp their foudes of water, and sell the land into the handes of wicked people. The land and all that is therein, will I destroy through the enemyes. Euen I the Lord haue sayde it. Thus saith the Lord God. I will destroy the ydoles, and bringe the Images of Noph to an end. Ther shal nomore be a prince of Egypte, and a fearefulnesse will I send into the Egyptians lande. As for Pathures, I will make it desolat, and kindle a fire in Zoan the cite. No, I will punish and poure my wrathfull indignation vpon Sin, which is the strength of Egypt. All the substance of Alexandria will I destroy, & kindle a fire in Egypt. Sin shalbe in gret heauynes, Alexandria shalbe rooted out, and Noph shall haue dayly sorowe. The best men of Heliopolis and Bubasto shalbe slayne with the swerde, and carped away captiue. At Taphnis the day shalbe darke, when I breake the scepter of the lande of Egypt, and when the pompe of her power shall haue an ende. A cloude shall couer her, and her daughters shall be led away into captiuitie. Thus will I punish Egypt, that they maye knowe howe that I am the Lord. It happened in the eleuenth yere, vppon the seventh day of the first moneth, that the lords word came vnto me, saying: Behold, thou sonne of man, I will breake the arme of Pharaos king of Egypt, and lo, it shall not be bounde by to be healed, neyther shall any playster be laide vpon it, for to ease it, or to make it so strong as to hold a swerde. Therfore thus sayth the Lord God: Beholde, I will vpon Pharaos the king of Egypt, and bruse his stronge arme (yet it is but a broken one) and will smite the swerde oute of his handes. As for the Egyptians, I will scatter them among the Heathen, and strawe them in the landes about. I gayne, I will strength the arme of the kinge of Babilon, and geue him a swerde in his hande, but I will breake Pharaos arme, so that he shall holde it before him piteously, like a wounded man. Yea, I will stablishe the kinge of Babilons arme, and the armes of Pharaos shall fall downe, that it maye be knowne, that I am the Lord which gaue the kinge of Babilon my swerde in his hand, that he may drawe it out vpon the lande of Egypte, and that when I scatter the Egyptians among the Gentiles, and strawe them in the landes about, they may knowe, that I am the Lord.

The xxxi. Chapter.

Moreouer, it happened in the xxi. yere, the firste daye of the third moneth, that the word

vpp. g.

of the Lord came vnto me, saying: thou sonne of man, speake vnto Pharao the king of Egypt, and to all his people. Whom art thou like in thy greatness? Behold, I was like a Cedre tree vpon the mount of Libanus with saye bjaunches, so thicke, that he gaue shadowes, and shot out berpe hys. His top reached vnto the clouds. The waters made him great, and the dept set him vp an hys. I could about the rootes of him ranne there fountes of water, he sent out his little riuers vnto all the trees of the field. Therefore was he hyer then all the trees of the field, and through the multitude of waters that he sent fro him, he obtayned many longe bjaunches. All foules of the ayre made their nestes in his bjaunches, vnder his bowes genzied all the beastes of the field, and vnder his shadow dwelt all people. Saye and bewtyfull was he in his greatness, and in the length of his bjaunches, for his rote stode beside great waters, no Cedar tree might hide him. In the pleasaunt garden of God, there was no fyre tree like his bjaunches, the playne trees were not like the bowes of him. All the trees in the garden of God might not be compared vnto him in his bewtye, so faire and goodly had I made him with the multitude of his bjaunches. In so much that all the trees in the pleasaunt garde of God had enuy at him.

Therefore thus saith the lord God: for so much as he hath lift vp him self to hys, and stretched his top to the clouds, and seeing his heart is proude in his highnes, I will deliuer him into the handes of the mightiest among the hethen, which shall rose him out. According to his wickednes will I cast him away, the enemye shall destroy him, and the mightie men of the heathen shall so scatter him, that his bjaunches shall lye vppon all mountaynes and in all halleys, his bowes shall be broken downe to the ground throughout the lande. Then all the people of the lande shall go from his shadow, and forsake him, when he is fallen, all the foules of the ayre shall sit vppon him, and all wilde beastes of the ficke shall go about among his bjaunches, so that from hence forth no tree in the water shall attayne to his highnes, nor reach his toppe vnto the clouds, neyther shall any tree of the water stande so hye, as he hath done. For vnto death shall they all be deliuered vnder the earthe, and go downe to the graue lyke other men.

Howeuer, thus saith the Lord God: In the day when he goeth downe to the graue, I will cause a lamentation to be made, I will couer the depe vppon him, I will stanch his fountes, and the great waters shall be restrained. I shall cause Libanus to be sorrowfull for his sake, and all the trees of the ficke shall be smitten. I will make the heathen shake at the sound of his fall, when I caste him downe to hell with them that descende into the pit. All the trees of Eden, with all the chosen and best trees of Libanus, yea, and all they that are planted vpon the waters, shall mourne with him also in the lower habitations, for they shall go downe to hell with him, vnto them that be slayne with the sword, which dwell afore vnder the shadowe of his arme among the heathen. To whom shalt thou be likened, that art so glorious and great, among the trees of Eden? Yet art thou cast downe vnder the earth (among the trees of Eden) where thou must lye among vncircumcised, with them that be slayne with the sword. Euen thus is it with Pharao and all his people, sayth the Lord God.

In the eleuenth yere, the first daye of the twelfth moneth, the word of the Lord came vnto me saying: thou sonne of man, take vp a lamentation vpon Pharao the king of Egypt and saye vnto him, thou art reputed as a lyon of the heathen, and as a whalefish in the sea: thou callest thy waters about thee, thou troublest the waters with thy ferte, and stampest in their clouds, thus sayth the righteousnesse, and do sinne, then shall his righteousness be no more thought upon, but in the wickednes he hath done, he shall die. • Again, if I say vnto the wicked, thou shalt surely dye, & so he turne from his sinnes, and do the thing that is lawfull and right: In so much that he same wicked man geueth the pledge again, restozeth that he had taken away by robbery, walketh in the commaundementes of. life, and doth no wrong. • Then shall he surely liue, and not dye. Yea, the sinnes that he hath done, shall neuer be thought vpon. For in so much as he doth now the thing that is lawfull and right, he shall liue. And yet the children of thy people say: • Cull, the way of the Lord is not righte, but they lie, where as their owne way is rather vnright. When the righteous turneth from his righteousness, and doth the thing that is wicked, he shall die therefore. But yf the wicked turne from his wickednes, doing the thing that is lawfull and right, he shall liue therefore. Yet

• In the .xij. yere, the .v. day of the tenth month of our captiuitie, it hapned that one which was fled out of Ierusalem, came vnto me, and saide: • The City is destroyed. Now the hand of the Lord had ben vpon me the euening afore this man (which was escaped) came vnto me, and had opened my mouth, vntill the morning that he cam vnto me: yea he opened my mouth, so that I was no more dumbe. Then came the word of the Lord vnto me, and saide: • Thou son of man, these that dwell in the wasted land of Israel, say: • Abraham was but one man, and he had the lande in possession, now are we many, and the land is geuen vs to possesse also. And therefore tell them. • Thus sayeth the Lord God: • In the blood haue ye eaten, your ciies haue ye lift vp to idols, and haue shed blood: shall ye then haue the land in possession? Ye leane vpon your swordes, ye worke abominations, euery one defileth his neibours wife, and shall ye then possesse the lande? • Saye thou these wordes vnto them: • Thus saith the Lord God. As truly as I liue, all ye that dwell in this wilderness shall be slaine with the sword: what soeuer is vpon the field, I will geue vnto the beastes to be deuoured: those that be in strong holdes and denues, shall dye of the pestilence. For I will make the land so desolate and waste, and the pompe of her strength shall come to an ende. • The mountaynes of Israel shall be so wast that no men shall trauail therby. • Then shall they learne to knowe, that I am the Lord, when I make the land waste and desolate, because of all their abominations, that they haue wrought. And thou sonne of man, the children of thy people that talke of thee, by the walles and in the doores of their houses saying one to another: • Come, let vs heare, what word is gon forth from the Lord. These shall come vnto thee after the maner of a great people: yea, as who saith, they were my people, they sit downe before thee and heare thy wordes, but they do not thereafter: • for in theyr mouthes they make a iast of them, and their heart goeth after their owne couetous lustre. And as a ballet that hath a swete tune, and is pleasaunte to singe, so shalt thou be vnto them: thy wordes shall they heare, but they wille not doo thereafter. When this commeth to passe (for so, it commeth in dedde) then shall they know, that there hath bene a prophet among them.

Shuld not the shepherdes fede the flocke? Ye haue eaten of the fatte, ye haue clothed you with the wooll. • The best fed haue ye slaine, but the flocke haue wil I seke after my sheepe, and gather them together out of al places, where they haue bene scattered in the cloudy and darke day. I will bring them out from al people, and gather them together out of all landes. I will bringe them into their owne lande, and fede them vpon the mountaignes of Israel, by the riuers and in all the places of the countrey. I will fede them in right good pastures, and vpon the hye mountaignes of Israel shal their fold, and in a fat pasture shal they fede euen vpon the mountaignes of Israel,

I will fede my sheepe my selfe, and bringe theym to their rest, sayth the Lord God. Such as be lost, will I seke, such as go astraye will I bringe agayne, such as be wounded, will I binde vp, suche as be weake, will I make strong, such as be fat and strong those will I roote out, and fede them with the thing that is lawfull. And as for you (O my sheepe) sayth the Lord God. I will put a difference among the sheepe, among the wethers, and the goates. Was it not ynough for you, to eat vp the good pasture, but ye must treade downe the residue of your pasture with your fete also? Was it not ynough for you to drinke cleare water, but ye muste trouble the residue also with your fete? Thus my sheepe muste be sayne to eate the thinge that ye haue troden downe with your fete, and to drinke it, that ye with your fete haue defiled. Therefore thus saith the Lord God vnto them: Behold I wil scuer the fat sheepe from the leane: for so muche as ye haue shot the weake sheepe vpon the sides and shoulders, and runne vpon theym with your hornes, so longe till ye haue bitte-lye scatred the mabrode. I will helpe my sheepe, so that they shal nomore be spoyled: yea, I wil discerne one shepe from another. I will rayse vp vnto them one only shepherd, euen my seruant. Dauid, he shal fede them, and he shal be their shepherd. I the Lord will be their God, and my seruante Dauid shal be their prince. Euen I the Lord haue spoken it. Moreover, I will make a couenaunte of peace with them, and bringe all euill beastes out of the land, so that they may dwel safely in the wilderness, and slepe in the woods. Good fortune and prosperitie wil I geue them, and vnto al that be rounde about my hill. I prosperous shouer and rayne wil I sende them in due season, that the trees in

They shall no more be spoyled of the heathen, nor deuoured with the beastes of the land, but safely shal they dwell, and no man shall fraye them. ¶ The xxxv. Chapter.

Mozouer, the worde of the Lord came vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man, turne thy face towarde the mounte. Seir, propheticke vpon it, and saye vnto it. Thus sayth the Lord God: Beholde, (O thou mount Seir) I will vpon thee, I will reach out mine hande ouer thee, yea, wast and desolate wil I make thee. Thy cities wil I breake downe, and thou shalt lye boide, that thou mayest knowe, howe that I am the Lord. For so much as thou bearest an olde enemie agaynst the children of Israel, and hast drawen the children of Israel vpon the sword. What time as they were troubled and punished for their sinne: Therefore, as truly as I liue, sayth the Lord God,

I will prepare thee vnto blood, yea, blood shall folowe vpon thee: seing thou layest wayte for blood, therefore shall blood persecute thee. Thus wil I make the mount Seir desolate and wast, and bring to passe that ther shall no manne go thither, nor come from thence. His mountaynes wil I fill with his slayne men, thy hilles, valleys, and riuers, shall lye full of them, that are slayne with the swerde. I will make thee a perpetuall wilderness, so that thy cities shal not returne to their former estate, that ye maye knowe, howe that I am the Lord. And because thou hast sayde: What, bothe these nations and both these landes must be mine, and I will haue them in possession. Wher as the Lord was there. Therefore, thus sayth the Lord God: As truly as I liue, I wil handle thee according to thy wrath and gelousie, like as thou hast dealt cruelly with them, that I may be knowen among them, howe I haue punished thee. Yea, and that thou also mayest be sure, that I the Lord haue heard all thy despitefull wordes, whiche thou hast spoken agaynst the mountaynes of Israel, sayinge: Lo, they are made wast, and geuen vs to deuour. Thus with youre mouthes ye haue made your boast agaynst me, yea, and multiplied your proude wordes agaynst me, whiche haue hearte altogether. Wher vnto thus sayth the Lord God: to the tope of all the worlde wil I make thee waste. And like as thou (O mount Seir) wast glad, because the heritage of the house of Israel was destroyed, euen so wil I do vnto thee also, that thou and whole Edom shalbe destroyed, and know that I am the Lord.

Thou sonne of man, propheticke vpon the mountaynes of Israel, and speake: Heare the word of the Lord, O ye mountaynes of Israel. Thus saith the Lord God: Because your enemy hath sayd vpon you: Aha, the hye euertlasting places are now become ours, propheticke therfore, and speake: thus sayth the Lord God. Seing ye be walled and troden downe on euery syde, and become a possession vnto the residue of the Gentiles, which haue brought you into menues mouthes, and vnto an euill name amonge the people. Therefore, heare the worde of the Lord God, O ye mountaynes of Israel. Thus sayth the Lord God vnto the mountaynes and hilles, valleys and dales, to the voyde wilderness and desolate cities, whiche are spoyled, and had in derision on euery syde, among the residue of the heathen. Yea, euen thus

 God: Behold, this haue I deuised in my gelousie and terrible wrath. For so much as ye haue suffered reprove of the Heathen, therfore thus saith the Lord God. I haue sware that the Gentiles whiche lye about you, shall for you (O mountaynes of Israel) ye shall hote out your braunches and bring forth your fruite to my people of Israel, for it is hard by that it will be repayred agayne. I will prouyde you with much people and cattell, whiche shall increase and bring fruit, I will restore you also to youre olde then euer ye had before, wherby ye shall know that I am the Lord. Yea people will I send vnto you (O my folke of Israel, whiche shal haue thee in possession, and thou shalt be their inheritance, so that thou shalt noo sayth the Lord God. For so much as they saye vnto you, thou art an eater vp of men, and a waster of thy people: therfore thou shalt eate no mo manne, suffer thee for to beare thine owne confusion amonge the Gentiles from hence forth. Thou shalt not beare the reprove of the nations, nor cast out D thine owne people any more, saith the Lord God. Moreover the worde of the Lord came vnto me, sayinge: O thou sonne of man, when the house of Israel dwelt vpon their owne ground, they despyed theym selues with their owne wayes and ymaginations, so that in my sight their way was lyke the vncleennesse of menstruous women, wherfore, I poured my wrath full displeasure vpon thee, because of the bloud that they had shedde in the land, and because of their ydols wher with they had defiled them selues. I scattered them also amonge the Heathen, so that they were strowed aboute in the landes. According to their wayes and after their owne intentions, so did I punish the ym. * Nowe when they were gone vnto the Heathen, and come in amonge them, they dishonored my holy name, so that it was sayde of them: Are these the people of God, and must go out of their owne land?

 Then spared I my holy name, which the house of Israel hadde dishono-redde amonge the Gentiles, to whom they camme. Therfore tell the house of Israel: Thus sayth the Lord God: I doe not this for youre sakes (O house of Israel) but for my holy names sake which ye dishonou-red amonge the Heathen, when ye came to them. Therfore, I wil halowe my great name againe which amonge the Gentiles is euill spoken of: for yee youre selues haue dishonoured it amonge them. And the Gentiles shall knowe that I am the Lord, when I am honored in you before their eyes, sayth the Lord God. As for you, I will take you from amonge the Heathen, and gather you together oute of all countreys, and bring you agayne into your owne land. * Then will I poure cleane water vpon you, and ye shalbe cleane: yea, from all your vncleennesse and from al your ydols shall I cleanse you. A newe heart also will I geue you, and a newe spirite will I put into you. As for that stonye heart, I will take it out of youre bodey, and geue you a fleshy heart, I will geue my spirite amonge you.

 mandementes, to keepe my lawes, and to falfill them. And fo ye shall dwell in the lande, that I gaue to your forefathers, and ye shall be my people, and I will be your God. I will helpe you out of all your vncleannes. I will call for the corne, and will encrease it, and let you haue no hunger, I will multiplie the frutes of the trees and the increase of the fiede for you, so that ye shall beare no more reproofe of hunger among the heathen.

E Then shall ye remember your owne wicked wayes, and your ymaginations whiche were not good: so that ye shall thinke that ye were worthis to be destroyed, for your sinnes and abominations. But I will not doo this for your sakes (sayth the Lord God) be ye sure of it. Therefore, O ye house of Israel, be ashamed of your synnes. Moreover, thus sayeth the Lord God: What time as I shall cleanse you from all your offences, then will I make the cities to be occupied agayne, and will repayre the places that be decayed. The desolate lande shall be buyded agayne, whiche afore time laye waste in the sighte of all them that wente by. Then shall it be sayde: this wast lande is become like a garden of pleasure, and the boyde desolate and broken downe cities are nowe stronge, and defenced agayne. Then the residue of the heathen that lye round about you, shall knowe that I am the Lord, which repayre that that was broken downe, and plante agayne that, that was made waste. Euen I the Lord haue spoken it, and will do it in deede. Thus saith the Lord God: I will yet once be found agayne of the house of Israel, and do this for them: I shall increase them as a flocke of men. Aske as the holy flocke and the flocke of Ierusalem are in the hye solemne feastes, so shall also the wilde wasted cities be filled with flockes of men: and they shall knowe that I am the Lord.

C The xxxviij. Chapter.

The hand of the Lord came vpon me, and caried me out in the myde of the lande, and let me

doone in a playne fiede that laye full of bones, and he led me rounde about by them: and beholde, the bones that laye vpon the fiede, were very many, and marueilous dye also. Then saide he vnto me: Thou sonne of man, thinkest thou these bones may liue agayne. I answered, O Lord God, thou knowest. And he saide vnto me: Prophecise thou vpon these bones, and speake vnto them. Ye dye bones, heare the worde of the Lord. Thus sayth the Lord God vnto these bones: Behold, I will put breath vnto you, that ye may liue: I will geue you sinowes, and make fleshe to growe vpon you, & couer you ouer with skinne, and so geue you breath, that ye may liue, and knowe that I am the Lord. So I prophesied, as he had comanded me. And as I was prophesying, ther came a noyse and a great motion, so that the bones ranne euerye one to another. Now when I had looked, behold, they had sinowes, and fleshe grewe vpon them, and aboue they were couered with skinne, but there was no breath in theym. Then sayde he vnto me. Thou sonne of man, prophesie thus towarde the winde: prophesie and speake to the winde. Thus sayth the Lord God. Come (O thou ayre) from the foure windes, and blowe vpon these slayne that they may be restored to lyfe. So I prophesied as he hadde commaunded me: then came the bryeth into theym, and they receaued lyfe, and stode vp vpon their fete, a marueilous great soyre. Moreover, he saide vnto me: Thou sonne of man, these bones are the whole house of Israel. Behold, they say, our bones are dried hyppre, our hope is gone, we are cleane cut off. Therefore prophesie thou, and speake vnto theym: thus sayeth the Lord God. Beholde, I will open your graues (O my people) and take you oute of your Sepulchres, and bring you into the lande of Israel agayne. So shall ye knowe that I am the Lord, when I open your graues, and bring you out of them. My wyte also will I put in you, & ye shall liue.

Gen. 2. d.

Ier. 33. a

I will set you agayne in your owne lande, and ye shall knowe that I am the Lord which haue sayde it, and fulfilled it in deede. The worde of the Lord came vnto me, saying: thou sonne of man, take a sticke, and write vpon it. Vnto Juda, and to the children of Israel his companions. Then take another sticke and write vpon it. Vnto Ioseph the stocke of Ephraim, and to all the householde of Israel his companions. And then take bothe these together in thine hande, so shall there be one sticke therof. Now if the children of the people saye vnto thee: wilt thou not shewe vs what thou meanest by these? Then geue them this aunswere: thus sayth the Lord God: Behold. I will take the stocke of Ioseph, which is in the hande of Ephraim, and of the tribes of Israel his selowes, and will put them to the stocke of Juda, and make them one stocke, and they shalbe one in my hand. And the two stickes wherevpon thou writest, shalt thou haue in thine hand, that they may see, and shalte saye vnto them. Thus saith the Lord God: behold, I will take awaye the children of Israel from among the heathen, vnto whom they be gone, and will gather them together on euery syde, and bringe them agayne into their owne lande: yea, I will make one people of them in the lande, vpon the mountaynes of Israel, and they all shal haue but one kinge. They shall no more be two peoples from hence forth, neither be deuided into two kingdomes, they shall also despyle them selues no more with their abhominations, their filthes, and all their wicked doinges. I will helpe them out of all their dwelling places, wherein they haue synned: and will so cleanse them, that they shall be my people, and I their God. E David my seruante shalbe their kinge, and they all shall haue one shepheard onely. They shal walke in my lawes, and my commandementes shall they both kepe and fulfill. They shal dwell in the lande, that I gaue vnto Iacob my seruante, where as your fathers also haue dwelt: yea, euen in the same lande shall they, their children, and their childrens children dwell for euermore, and my seruante David shalbe their euermore prince. Moreover, I will make a bonde of peace with them, which shall be vnto them an euermore covenant. I will settle them also, and multiplie them, my sanctuarie will I set among them for euermore. A My dwelling shall be with them: yea, I will be their God, and they shalbe my people. Thus the he then also shall knowe that I the Lord am the holie maker of Israel, when my sanctuarie shalbe among them for euermore. E The xxxviij. Chapter.

AND the worde of the Lord came vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man, tourne thy face towardes Gog the lande of Magog, which is the chiefe prince at Mesech and Tuball, propheticke agaynst him, and saye. Thus saith the Lord God: O Gog, thou chiefe prince of Mesech and Tubal: behold, I will vpon thee, and wil turne thee about, and put a bitte in thy chawes, I will bringe thee forth and all thy hoste, both horse and horsemen, which be all weaponed of the best fashon: a great people that handle together speares, shieldes, and swordes: the Perses, Moztians, and with them the Libians, which all beare shieldes and helmettes: Gomer and all his hostes, the house of Thogorma, out of the north quarters, and all his hostes, yea, and muche people with thee. Therefore prepare thee, set thy selfe in aray with all thy people, that are come vnto thee by heapes, and be thou their defence. After many dayes thou shalt be visited, and in the latter yeres thou shalt come into the lande that hath beene destroyed with the swerde, and nowe is replenished agayne with diuers people vpon the mountaynes of Israel, which haue long lien waste. Yea they be brought out of the nations, and dwell all safe. Thou shalt come vppon like a storme whether to couer the lande, and as it were a darke cloude, thou shalt al thine hostes horses, and a great multitude of people with thee. Whosoever thus sayth the Lord God, at the same time shall many things come into thy minde. so that thou shalt imagine mischief, and saye: I will be to yonder playne lande, seeing they sit at ease, and dwell so safely (for they dwell all withoute any walles, they have neither barres nor doores) to spoyle them, to rob them, to laye hande vpon their so wel inhabited wildernesses, agaynst that people that is gathered together from among the heathen, which haue gotten cattel and good, and dwell in the midst of the lande. Then shall Gaba, and Dedan, and the marchants of Charma with all their worthies say vnto thee. Art thou come to rob? Hast thou gathered thy people together because thou wilt spoyle, to take siluer and golde, to carpe away cattell and good, and to haue a great praye? Therefore, O thou sonne of man, thou shalt prophete and say vnto Gog. Thus sayeth the Lord God. In that day thou shalt knowe that my people of Israel dwellleth safe, and shalt come from thy place oute of the north partes, thou & much people with thee which ride vpon horses, wherof there is a great multitude and an innumerable hoste. Yea, thou shalt come vppon my people of Israel, as a cloude to couer the lande. This shall come to passe in the latter dayes: I will bring thee by into my lande, that the heathen maye knowe me, when I get me honour vpon thee (O Gog) before their eyes. Thus sayeth the Lord God. Thou art he, of whom I haue spoken afore tyme by my seruantes the prophetes of Israel, which propheted in those dayes and yeres, that I should bring thee vppon them. At the same time, when Gog cometh by into the land of Israel (sayth the Lord) shall my indignation go forth in my wrath. For in my glorious and hore displeasure I haue deuised, that there shall be a great trouble in the land of Israel at that time. The very fishes in the sea, the fowles in the ayre, the beastes of the field, and all the men that are vpon the earth shall tremble for feare of me. The hills also shall be turned by syde downe, the stappes of stone shall fall, and all the walles shall sinke to the ground. I will call for a sword vpon them in all my mountaynes, sayth the Lord God: so that euery mans sword shall be vpon another. With pestilence and blud will I punish him, stormes raine and hayle stones, fyre and brimstone will I cause to raine vpon him and all his heape, yea, and vppon all that great people that is with him. Thus will I be magnified, honored, and known among the heathen, that they may be sure, howe that I am the Lord.

The xxxix. Chapter.

Therefore, O thou son of man, prophete against Gog, and speake. Thus sayeth the Lord God: Behold, O Gog thou chiefe prince at Mesch and Cubal, I will vppon thee, & punish thee with sixe plagues, and leade thee from the north partes, and bring thee by to the mountaynes of Israel. As for thy bowe, I will smite it out of thy left hand, and caste thine arrowes out of thy right hande. Thou with all thine heape, & all the people that is with thee, must fall vpon the mountaynes of Israel. Then will I geue thee vnto foules and wilde beastes of the fildes, to bee deuoured, there must thou lye vppon the fildes for euen I the Lord haue spoken it, sayeth the Lord God. Into Magog and amonge those that sit so carelesse in the fles, will I sende a fyre, and they shall knowe, that I am the Lord. I will make also the name of my holynesse to be known among my people of Israel, and I wil not lette my holy name be euil spoken of any more, but the very heathen also shall knowe that I am the Lord, the holie one of Israel: Behold, it cometh, and shall be fulfilled in dede, sayeth the Lord God. This is the daye wherof I haue spoken. They that dwell in the cities of Israel, shall go forth and see sette vpon the weapons, and burne them, shieldes and speres, bowes and arrows, billes and clubbes, seuen yeeres shall they be burninge thereof, so that they shall els bringe no stiches from the fiede, neyther haue neede to he we do wne any out of the woodde.

E For they shall haue weapons pnowgh to burne. They shall robbe those that robbed them, and spoyle those that spoyled them, sayth the Lord God. At the same time will I geue vnto Gog a place to be buried in Israel, euen the valley wherthrough men go from the east to the seawarde. Those that trauaile thereby shall stop their noses for the stench. There shall Gog and all his people be buried, and it shall be called, the valley of the people of Gog. Seuen monethes long shall the house of Israel be buryng of them, that they may cleanse the lande. Yea, all the people of the land shall bury them. D It shall be a glorious daye, when I get me that honour, sayth the Lord God.

They shall ordeyn men also to be dead buryers, euer going through the land, and appoynt them certayne places to bury those in, which remaine vpon the field, that the land may be cleansed. From ende to ende shall they seke, and that seuen monethes longe. Howe those that go through the land, where they see a mans bone, they shall set vp a token by it, till the deade buryers haue buried it also, in the valley of the people of Gog. And the name of the citie shall be called Hanionah (that is a multitude) Thus shall they make the lande cleane. And thou sonne of manne, thus saith the Lord God: Speake vnto all the foules and euery birde, yea, and to all the wilde beastes of the fiede, heape you together, and come, gather you round about vpon my slaughter, that I haue slayne for you, euen a great slaughter vpon the mountaynes of Israel, eate flesh and drinke bloud. Ye shall eate the fleshe of the worthies, and drinke bloude of the princes of the land, of the worthies of the lambs, of the goates, and of the oxen that be all slayne at Basan. Eate the fat your bealpe full, and drinke bloud, til ye be dronken of the slaughter, whiche I haue slayne vnto you. Fill you at my table with horses and stronge horsemen, with captayns and men of warre, sayth the Lord God. I will bring my gloze also amonge the Gentiles, that all the heathen may see my iudgement that I haue kepte, and my hande whiche I haue layed vpon them, that the house of Israel may knowe, howe that I am the Lord God from that day forth. And the heathen shall knowe, that where as the house of Israel were ledde into captiuitie, it was for their wickednesse sake, because they offended me. For the which cause I hid my face from them and deliuered them into the handes of their enemyes, that they might be all slayne with the sword. According to their vniennes and vnfaithful dealings, so haue I entreated them, and hid my face from them. Therefore, thus sayeth the Lord God: How will I bring agayne the captayns of Iacob, and haue mercy vpon the whole house of Israel, and be gelous for my holpe names sake. All their confusion and offence that they haue don against me shall be taken away, and so safelpe shall they dwell in their lande, that no manne shall make them afraide. And when I haue brought them agayne from among the people, when I haue gathered them together oute of their enemyes landes, and am prayesed in them before many heathen: Then shall they knowe that I am the Lord their God which suffered them to be led into captiuitie among the heathen, but nowe haue I brought them agayne into their owne land, and not left one of them ponder. After that will I hide my face no more from them, but will poure out my spirite vpon the house of Israel, sayth the Lord God.

C The .xli. Chapter.

In the fiftenth yere of oure captiuitie, in the beginninge of the yere, the tenth daye of the month that is the fourteenth yere after that the Citie was smitten downe: the same day came the hande of the Lord vpon me, and caried me forth: euen into the land of Israel, brought he me in the visions of God, and sette me downe vpon a maruelous hye mountayne, wherevpon there was a buylding (as it had ben of a citie) towarde the North. Thither he caried me, and behold, there was a man, whose similitude was like brasse, whiche had a shpde of flare in his hand, and a mette rodde also. He stode in the dooze, and sayde vnto me: thou sonne of manne marke well with thine eyes, hearken so with thyne eares, and fasten it in thine heart, whatsoeuer I shall shewe thee, for to that intent that they might be shewed thee, therefore arte thou brought hyther. And whatsoeuer thou seest, thou shalt certify the house of Israel thereof. Behold, there was a wall on the out syde rounde aboute the house: the metroddde that he had in his hande, was fyve cubites long and a spanne. So he measured the bzeadth of the buylding, whiche was a metroddde, and the height also a metroddde. Then came he vnto the east dooze, and wente by the stayres, and measured the postes of the dooze, wherof euery one was a meterod thicke. Euery chamber was a meterodde longe and broade: betwene the chambers were fyve cubites. The poste of the dooze within the porch was one metroddde. He measured also the porch of the innermer doze, whiche conteyned a metroddde. Then measured he the entrie of the dooze that contayned eyght cubites, and his pylers twoo cubites: and this entrie stode inward. The chambers of the doze eastward, were thre on euery syde, a like broade and longe. The pylers also that stode of bothe the sydes were of one measure. After this he measured the widenes of the dooze, whiche was tenne cubites, and the height of the doze. xij. cubites. The edge befoze the chambers was one cubite broade vpon bothe the sides, and the chambers fyve cubites wyde on eyther syde. He measured the dooze from the ridge of one chamber to another, whose widenes was. xxv. cubites, and one doze stode agaynst another. He made pylers also. lx. cubites hye rounde aboute the court dooze. Beside the inward part vnto the soze entrie of the innermer doze were fyftie cubites. The chambers and their pylers within, round aboute vnto the dooze had fyde windowes. So had the soze entrie also, whose windowes wente rounde about within. And vpon the pylers there stode date trees. Then brought he me into the soze court wheras were chambers and pained woorkes, made in the soze courte rounde aboute, thirtie chambers vpon one pained woorkke. Nowe the pained woorkke was a longe besyde the doozes, and that was the lower pained woorkke. After this he measured the bzeadth from the lower dooze, vnto the innermer courte of the outsyde, which had an C. cubites vpon the East and the North part. And the dooze in the bittermost court toward the North, measured he after the length and bzeadth: his thre chambers on eyther syde with his pylers, and soze entries, whiche had euen the measure of the first dooze. His height was fifty cubites, in bzeadth. xxv. cubites, his windowes, and porches with his date trees, hadde euen the measure as the doze toward the East: there were seuen steppes to go vpon, and their porche befoze them. Nowe the dooze of the innermer courte stode straight ouer agaynst the dooze, that was toward the northeast. From one doze to another he measured. C. cubites. After that he brought me to the southsyde, where there stode a dooze toward the south, whose pylers and porches he measured, these had fyftie measure, & with their porches they had windowes round about, like the first windowes. The height was fyftie cubites, the bzeadth. xxv. with steppes to go vpon: his porche stode befoze with his pylers & date trees on either side. And fyve dozes of the innermer court stode toward the south, & he measured fra one doze to another an C. cubites.

So he brought me into the innermost court, thowse the doze of the south syde, which he measured, and it hadde the measure aforesaide, In like maner his chambres, pillers, and sozentrees, had euen the foresaide measure also. And he had with his porches rounde aboute windowes of fyrie cubites heigth, and .xxv. cubites broade. The porches round about were .xxv. cubites longe, and fyue cubites broade: and his porch reached vnto the vtermoste court, vppon his pylers, there were date trees, and epght steppes to go by vpon. He brought me also into the innermost court vpon the east side, and measured the dooze according to the measure aforesaide, his chambres, pillers, and porches, had euen the same measure, as the first had, and with his porches he had windowes round about. The height was fyftie cubites, the breadth .xxv. Cubites, his porche reached vnto the vtermoste court: his pillers also had date trees on epyther side, and .viij. steppes to go by vpon. And he brought me to the north dooze, and measured it, whiche also hadde the foresayde measure. His chambres, pillers, & porches, had windowes round about: whose height was .l. cubites, and the breadth .xxv. His pillers stode towarde the vtermoste court, and vpon them bothe were date trees, and .viij. steppes to go by vpon. There stode a chamber also, whose entrance was at the dooze pillers, and there the burnte offerings were washed. In the dooze porche, there stode on epyther syde two tables for the slaughting: to slea the burnt offerings, synoffringes, and trespass offerings ther vpon. And on the outsyde as men go south to the north dooze, there stode two tables. Foure tables stode on epyther syde of the doze, that is, .viij. tables, wher vpon they slaughtered. Foure tables were of hewen stone for the burnt offerings, of a cubite and a halfe long and broade, and one cubite hie, wher vpon were layed the vessels and ornaments, whiche were vled to the burnt and slayne offerings, when they were slaughtered.

And within, there were hookes foure fingers broade, fastened rounde about to hanks fleshe vpon, and vpon the table was layd the offering fleshe. On the out side of the innermoze doze were the syngers chambers in the inwarde court beside the north dooze ouer agaynst the south. There stode one also besyde the east dooze northwarde. And he sayd vnto me: This chamber on the South syde, belongeth to the priestes, that kepe the habitation: and this towarde the north, is the priestes that waite vpon the altair, whiche be the sonnes of Sadoch, that doo seruice befoze the Loyde, in strede of the childzen of Leui. So he measured the fore court, whiche hadde in length an .C. cubites, and as muche in breadth by the foure corners. Howe the altair stode befoze the house. And he brought me to the fore entrie of the house, and measured the walles by the entrie dooze, whiche were .v. cubites long on either side. The thikenes also of the doze on epyther side was thre cubites. The length of the porche was .xx. cubites, the breadth .xl. cubites, and vpon steppes wente men by to it: by the walles also were pillers on epyther syde one.

After this, he brought me to the temple, and measured the postes, whiche were of bothe sydes sixe cubites thicke, accordinge to the widenes of the tabernacle. The breadth of the dooze was ten cubites, and the walles of the dooze on epyther syde .v. cubites. He measured the length thereof, whiche conteyned .xl. cubites, and the breadth .xx. Then went he in, and measured the dooze postes, which were two cubites thicke, but the doze it self was sixe cubites, & the breadth of the doze was .viij. cubites. He measured the length and breadth thereof, which were euery one .xx. cubites before the temple. And he sayde vnto me: This is the holpest of all. He measured also the wall of the house, which was .vi. cubites, The chambers that stode round about about the house, were entyre one sower cubites wyde, and one stode hard bypon another, wherof there were thye and thirtie, there stode postes beneath by the walles rounde about the house, to beare them by, but in the wall of the house they were not fastened. The side chambers were the hier and wyder, and had steppes thoroough them rounde about the house. Thus was it wyder aboue, that from the lowest, men might go to the hiest, by the midde chambers. I sawe also that the house was very hye round about.

The foundation of the syde chambers was a metrodde, that is fyre cu-bites broad. The thikeness of the side wall without, conteyned fyue cubi-tes, and so did the outwal of the chambers in the house. Betwene the chambers was the widenes twentie cubi-tes round about the house. The chamber doozes stode ouer agaynst the out-wall, the one dooze was toward the North, the other toward the South: and the thikeness of the oute wall was fyue cubites round about. Now the buylding that was separated toward the west, was .lxx. cubits wide, the wal of the building was fyue cu-bites thicke rounde aboute, and the length four scoze cubites and ten. So he measured the house, whiche was an hundred cubites longe, and the separated building with the wall was an hundred cubites longe also. The wydenes before the house, and of it that was separated toward the East, was an hundred cubites. And he mesured the length of the buyldinge be-foze and behinde with the chambers bypon both the sydes: and it conteyned an hundred cubites. The innermer temple, the porch of the foze court, the syde postes, these thye had syde windowes and pillers rounde about ouer agaynst the postes, from the grounde by to the windowes. The windowes therm selues were sieled ouer with bozdes: and thus was it aboue the dore into the inmost house: and with out also. Yea, the whole wall on euery syde bothe within and without was sieled ouer with great bozdes. There were cherubins and date trees made also, so that one date tree stode ouer betwixte two cherubines. One cherub had two faces, the face of a man looking asyde toward the date tree, and a Lyons face on the other syde.

Thus was it made round about in all the house. Yea the cherubins and date trees were made from the grounde by aboue the dooze, and so stode they also bypon the wall of the temple. The hye postes of the temple were square red, and the fashion of the sanctuarie was. euen as it appeared vnto me as foze in the vision. The table was of wood. .iij. cubites hye, and .ij. cubites long: his coznors, the length and the walles were of wood. And he sayde vnto me: This is the table that shall stande before the Lozde. The temple and the holiest of all, hadde cyther of them two doozes, and euery doze had two litle wickettes which were folden in one bypon another, on euery side two. And bypon the dozes of the temple, there were made cherubines and date trees, like as bypon the walles, and a great thicke balke of wood was before on the outside of the porch. Up-pon bothe the sydes of the walles of the porch, there were made depe windowes and date trees hauing beames and balkes, like as the house had.

The .xliij. Chapter.

Then carried he me oute into the foze court toward the North, and brought me into the chamber that stode ouer agaynst the backebuylding northwarde, which had the length of an hundred cubites, whose dore turned toward the North. The wydenes contayned fyfte cubites: ouer agaynst the twentie cubites of the innermer court, and agaynst the paued worke that was in the court, beside all these thye, there stode pyl-lers, one ouer agaynst another. And before this chamber there was a wal-kinge place of ten cubites wyde, and within was a way of one cubite wide and their dozes toward the North.
Thus the hiest chambers wer alway narro-

The temple

narrower then the lowest and myddlemooste of the buyldinge, for they bare chamber vpon chamber, and stode three together one vpon another, not hauinge pylers lyke the fore court: therefore were they smaller then those beneath and in the middell, to reckon from the ground vpward. The wall without that stode by the chambers toward the vtmoost court vpon the fore syde of the chambers, was fiftie cubites long: for the length of the vtmoost chambers in the fore court was fiftie cubites also: but the lengthe therof befoze the temple was an hundred cubites. These chambers hadde vnder them an interaunce of the East syde, whereby a man might go into them out of the fore court through the thicke wall of the fore court towarde the east, righte ouer agaynst the separated buylding. Befoze the same building vpon this side, there were chambers also which had a way vnto them lyke as the chamber of the northsyde, of the same lengthe and wydenesse.

Their intraunce, fashion, and doozes wer also of the same maner. Yea, euen like as the other chamber dozes were, so were those also of the Southsyde.
 And befoze the way toward the syn-gers steppes on the Eastesyde, there stode a doze to go in at. Then saide he vnto me: The chambers toward the north and the south, which stande be-foze the backe buylding: those be holy habitations, wherein the priestes that do seruaice befoze the Lorde, must eate the moost holpe offerings: and there must they laye the moost holy offerin-ges, meate offerings, sinne offerings, and trespassse offerings: for it is an holy place, when the priestes come therein, they shal not go out into the forecourt, but seing they be holy, they shal leaue the clothes of their ministracion, and put on other garmentes, when they haue anye thinge to do with the prople. Nowe when he had measured all

Thus saith the Lord God: O house of Israel, ye haue now done ynough with all your abhominations, seeing that ye haue brought into my sanctuary strangers, hauing vncircumcised heartes and fleshe, where through my sanctuary is defiled, whē ye offer me bread, fat and bloud. Thus with all your abhominations ye haue broken my couenaunte, and not kept the holy ordinaunces of my sanctuary: but set keepers of my sanctuarye, euen after your owne mind. Therefore thus

E sayth the Lord God, of all the strangers that dwel among the children of Israel, no strangers whose hert and fleshe is not circumcised, shall come within my sanctuary: No, nor the Leuites that be gone backe from me, and haue disceaued the people of Israel with all errorres, going after their ydoles: therfore shall they beare their owne wickednes. Should they be set and ordayned to minister vnder the doores of the house of my Sanctuary? And to do seruice in the house, to slaye burntofferings and sacrifices for the people, to stand before them, & to serue them, seeing the seruice that they do them, is before their ydoles, and cause the house of Israel to stūble through their wickednes? • For the whiche

Ex. 47. Vhen ye deuide the lād by the lot, ye shall put aside one part for the Lorde, to be holy from other landes, namely. xlv. M. mette rodde longe, and. x. M. broade. This shalbe holpe, as wyde as it is round about. Of this part there shall belong vnto the sanctuary five C. met rodde in all the foure corners, and. l. cubites wyde rounde about to the suburbs. And from this measure, namely of. xlv. M. met rods longe, and ten M. brode, thou shalt measure wherein the sanctuary & the holiest of all may stand. The residue of that holy ground shalbe the priestes, which do seruice in the sanctuary of the Lorde, & go in before the Lorde to serue him, that they maye haue room to dwell in. As for the sanctuary, it shall stand for it selfe: and to the Leuites, that serue in the house, there shall be geuen. xx. habitations of the. xlv. M. length, & x. M. breadth: ye shall geue also vnto the citie a possession of fyue M. met rodde broade, and xlv. M. longe, besyde the part of the sanctuarie, that shalbe for the whole house of Israel. • Upon both the sides of the sanctuaries part, and by the citie, ther shalbe geuen vnto the prince, whatsoeuer lyeth ouer agaynst the citie, as farre as reacheth westward and eastward: which shall be as long as one part, from the west vnto the east. This shalbe his owne land in Israel, that my princes be no more chargeable vnto my people. And suche as remaineth yet ouer in the land, shalbe geuen to the house of Israel, according to their tribes. Thus sayth the Lorde God: • Ye princes ye haue nowe oppressed and destroyed enough: nowe leaue of, handle according to the thing that is cquall and lawfull, and thruste out my people no more, sayth the Lorde God. • Ye shall Leui. 19. haue a true weight, a true Epha, and deu. 15. e a true bathe. The Epha and the bath Psal. 20. shalbe lyke. This is the heaue offering that ye shall geue to be heaued: namely, the xlv. part of an Epha, out of an homer of wheate, and the xlv. part of an Epha, out of an homer of barley. The oyle shalbe measured with the bathe, euen the tenth part of one bath out of a Cor. Ten bathes make an homer, for one homer filleth ten bathes. And one lambe fro two C. shepe out of the pasture of Israel: for a meat offering, burnt offering, and health offering, to reconcile them, saith the Lorde God. All the people of the lande shall geue this heaue offering with a freewill for the people of Israel. Agayne, it shall be the princes part to offer burnt offerings, meate offerings and drinke offerings vnto the Lorde, in the holy daies, new moones, sabbathes, and in all the hye feastes of the house of Israel. The sin offering, meat offering, burnt offering & health offering shall he geue to reconcile the house of Israel. Thus sayth the Lorde God: The first day of the first month, thou shalt take a yong bullock without blemish & cleanse the sanctuary. So the priest shall take of the blood of the synofferings, and sprinkle it vpon the postes of the house, and vpon the foure corners of the altar, with the doore postes of the innermost court. For the meatofferings he shall geue euer an ephah to a bullocke, an ephah to a ram, and an hyn of oyle to an ephah. Upon the fiftenth daye of the seuenth moneth, he shall kepe the seven dayes holy, one after another, euen as the other seven daies, with the sinneofferinge, burnt offeringe, meate offeringe, and with the oyle.

Thus sayth the Lord God: the doze of the innermer court toward the east shalbe shut the fyve working dayes, but in the Sabbath, and in the day of the new mone, it shalbe opened. Then shal the prince come vnder the doze porch, and stande still without by the doze cheeke. So the priestes shall offer by his burnt and healt he offerings. And he shall worship at the doze poste, and go his waye forth agayne, but the doze shall no moze be shut till the euening. On the same maner shall the people of the lande also do their worship befoze the Lord without this doze vppon the Sabbathes and newe moones. This is now the burnt offeringe, that the prince shall bringe vnto the Lord vppon the sabbothe, sixe lambes without blemishe, and a ram without blemishe, and an ephah for a meate offering, with the ramme. As for the lambes, he may geue as many meate offerings to them as he will: and an hyn of oyle to an ephah. In the day of the newe moneth it shalbe a yong bullocke without blemishe, sixe lambes & a ram also without blemishe: with the bullocke he shall geue an ephah, and with the ram an ephah also for the meate offering, but to the lambes, what he may come by. And euer an hyn of oyle to an ephah. When the prince cometh, he shall go vnder the doze porch, and euen there depart forth agayne. But when the people of the lande come befoze the lord in the hye soleinne feast, as many as com in by the north doze to do worship, shall go out agayne at the south doze. And they that come in at the south doze, shal go forth agayne at the north doze. There shall none go out at the doze where he came in, but shall go right forth ouer on the other syde, and the prince shall goo in and out among them. Upon the soleinne & hye feast daies this shalbe the meate offering. An ephah to a bullocke, & an ephah to a ram, and to the lambes, as many as he will: but euer an hyn of oyle to an ephah. Now when the prince bringeth a burnt offering or an helth offering with a free will vnto the Lord, the east doze shalbe opened vnto him, that he may do with his burnt and healt he offerings, as he doth vpon the sabboth: and when he goeth forth, the doze shalbe shut after him agayne. He shall dayly bring vnto the Lord a lambe of a yere olde without blemishe for a burnt offering: this shall he do euery morning. And for a meate offering he shall geue the sixt part of an ephah, and the thirde part of an hyn of oyle, to myngle with the cakes euery morning. Yea, this shalbe a dayly meate offering vnto the Lord, for an euerlasting ordinance: and thus shall the lambe, the meate offering and oyle be geuen euery morning; for a dayly burnt offering. Whoeuer thus sayth the Lord God: If the prince geue a gift vnto any of his sonnes, then shall it be his sonnes heritage perpetuall, that he maye possesse it. But if he will geue one of his seruantes some of his heritage, it shalbe his to the free yere, and then to retorne agayne vnto the prince: for his heritage shalbe his sonnes only. The prince also shall take none of the peoples inheritance, nor put the from their possession: but to his owne sonnes shall he geue his possession, that my people be not scattered abroad, but that euery man maye haue his own. And he brought me thow the entrance at the syde of the doze to the habitation of the Sanctuary, that belongeth to the priestes and shode to ward warde the north, and beholde, there was a place vpon the west syde, then sayde he vnto me. This is the place where the priestes shal dight the trespasses and sin offerings, and bake the meate offerings, that they neede not beare them into the outwarde court: and so to vnhalowe the people. So he brought me into the vtmoste court round about all the four corners. Behold, in euery corner of the court, ther was yet a litle court. Yea, in all the foure corners of the court, there was made a litle court of .xl. cubites longe, and .xxx. cubites brode: these foure litle courtes were of one like measure, and there went a ridge wall round about them all foure, vnder the which there were hearthes made rounde about. Then sayd he vnto me: This is the kitchin wher the ministers of the house shal dight the dayne offerings of the people.

Chapter.

After this, he brought me agayne before the doore of the house: and behold, ther gushed out water from vnder the postes of the house eastward, for the house stode toward the east, that ran downe vpon the right side of the house, whiche lyeth to the sulter southward. Then carried he me out to the north doore, and brought me forth there rounde about by the vtmost doore that turneth eastward. Behold, there came forth the water vpon the right syde. Nowe when the man that had the metrod in his hand went vnto the east doore, he measured a .M. cubites, and then he brought me through the water, euen to the ancles: so he measured yet a .M. and brought me through the water agayne vnto the knees: yet mesured he a thousande, and brought me through the water vnto the loynes. After this he measured a thousande agayne, then was it such a riuer, that I might not wade through it. The water was so deepe, that it was needefull to haue swimmid, for it might not be waded over. And he sayde vnto me: hast thou sene this, O thou sonne of man? and with that, he brought me to the riuer bank agayne. Nowe when I came there, there stode manye trees vpon eyther syde of the riuer banke. Then sayde he vnto me: This water that floweth out toward the east, and runneth down into the playne field, cometh into the sea: and from the sea, it runneth out, and maketh the waters whole. Yea, all that liue and moue, wher vnto this riuer cometh, shall recover. And wher this water cometh, there shalbe much fishe. For all that cometh to this water shall be lusty and whole. By this riuer shall the fishers stand from Engaddi vnto En Eglaim, and there spied out their nettes: for there shalbe great heapes of fishe, like as in the mayne sea. As for his clay and pittes, they shall not be whole, for why? it shalbe occupied for salte. By this riuer vpon bothe the sydes of the shore, there shal grow all maner of fruitfull trees, whose leaues shall not fall off, neyther shall their fruite perishe, but euer be ripe at their monethes: for their water runneth out of the sanctuarie. His fruite is good to eate, and his leafe profitable for medicine. Thus sayeth the Lord GOD: Lette this be the border, wherinye shall dwelde the lande vnto the twelue Tribes of Israell, with the Iyne. Parte it indifferentlye vnto one as vnto another: of the whiche lande I swaie vnto youre fathers, that it should fall to youre inheritance. This is the border of the lande vpon the Northsyde, frome the mayne sea, as men go to Zabadah: namely, Hemath, Berotha, Sabarim from the borders of Damascus and Hemath vnto Hazer Eitho, and that lyeth vpon the costes of Hauaran. Thus the borders from the sea south, shall be Hazer Euan: the border of Damascus, the north and the borders of Hemath, that is y north part. The east side shall ye measure from Hazeran and Damascus, from Galead and the land of Israell by Jordan, and so south, from the sea coaste, that lyeth eastward: and this is the east parte.

The first Chapter.

In the third yeare of the reigne of Iehoa-kim king of Iuda, cam Nabuchodonosor king of Babilon vnto Ierusalem, and besieged it, and the 4th Re. 248

Lord deliuered Iehoa-kim the kinge of Iuda into his hand, with certayne ornamentes of the house of God, which he caried away into the lande of Semmer, to the house of his God, and there he brought them into his gods treasure. And the king spake vnto Isphanaz the chiefe chamber-layne, that he should bring him cer-tayne of the children of Israell, that were come of the kinges seede and of princes yonge springaldes withoute any blemishe, but saye and well fauoured, instruct in all wisdome, conning and vnderstanding, which were able to stande in the kinges palace, to reade and to learne for to speake Caldeishe. Vnto these the king appoynted a certayne portion of his owne meate and of the wine, whiche he dyanke him selfe, so to nourishe theym thre yere, that afterwarde they might stande before the kinge. Amonge these now were certayne of the children of Iuda, namely Daniell, Ananias, Misaell and Azarias. Vnto these, the chefe chamberlayn gaue other names, and called Daniell, Balthasar, Ananias, Sidrach, Misael, Mifach, and Azarias, Abednago. But Daniell was at a poynt with him selfe, that he would not be defiled through the kings

Thinges meate, nor the wine whiche he drinke. And this he desired of the chiefe chamberlayne, least he shoulde defyle him selfe. So God gaue Daniel fauour and grace befoze the chiefe chamberlayne, that he saide vnto him: I am afrayde of my Lorde the kinge, which hath appointed you your meate and drinke, least he spy your faces to be worse liking then the other springalds of your age, and so ye shal make me lose my head vnto the king. Then Daniel answered Melassar, whome the chiefe chamberlayne had set ouer Daniel, Ananias, Misael and Azarias, and sayde: O proue but ten dayes with thy seruantes, and let vs haue potage to eate, and water to drinke, then looke vpon our faces, and theirs that eate of the kinges meate. And as thou seest, so deale with thy seruantes. So he consented to them in this matter, and proued them .x. dayes. And after the ten dayes, their faces were better looking and fatter, then all the yonge springaldes, which did eate of the kinges meate. Thus Melassar toke away their meate and wine, and gaue them potage therfoze. God gaue now these four springaldes cunning and learning in al scripture and wisdom, but vnto Daniell specialllye, he gaue vnderstanding of al visions and dreames. Nowe when the time was expired, that the kinge had appointed to bring in these yonge springaldes vnto him, the chiefe chamberlayne brought them befoze Nabuchodonosor, and the king communed with the. But among them al wer found none such as Daniel, Ananias, Misael and Azarias. Therefore stode they befoze the king, which in all wisdom and matters of vnderstanding, that he enquired of them, found them .x. times better, then all the soothsayers & charmers that were in al his realme. And Daniel abod still, vnto the first yeare of king Cyrus.

Chapter.

In the seconde yeare of the reigne of Nabuchodonosor, had Nabuchodonosor a dreame, wherthyngh his spirite was bereft, and his sleepe brake from him. Then the king commaunded to call together all the soothsayers, charmers, witchers, and Chaldees, for to shewe the king his dreame. So they came and stode befoze the king. And the king sayde vnto them: I haue dreamed a dreame, and my spirite was so troubled therewith, that I haue cleane forgotten what I dreamed. Vpon this the Chaldees answered the king in the Syriack spech: O kinge, God saue thy life for ever. Shewe thy seruantes thy dreame, and we shal shewe thee, what it meaneth. The kinge gaue the Chaldees their answer and sayde. It is gone from me. If ye wil not make me vnderstand the dreame with the interpretation thereof, ye shall dye, and your houses shalbe pyred. But if ye tell me the dreame and the meaning thereof, ye shall haue of me giftes, rewards and great honour: onely shewe me the dreame and the signification of it. They answered agayne, and sayde: the king must shewe his seruantes the dreame, and so shall we declare what it meaneth. Then the kinge answered, sayinge: I perceaue of a trueth, that ye dooe but prolonge the tyme, for so muche as ye see that the thinge is gone from mee. Therefore, if ye will not tell mee the dreame, ye shall haue all one iudgemente. But ye sayne and dissemble with bayne wordes, whiche ye speake befoze me, to putte off the time. Therefore tell mee the dreame, and soo shall I knowe, if ye canne shewe mee what it meaneth. Vpon this, the Chaldees gaue answer befoze the kinge, and sayd: there is no man vpon earth, that can tell the thinge whiche the kinge speaketh of: yea, there is neither king, prince, nor lord, that euer as keth suche thinges at a soothsayer, charmer, or Chaldee, for it is a very harde matter that the kinge requyret. Neyther is there anye that canne certifie the king thereof, except the gods, whose dwelling is not among the creatures. For the which cause the kinge was wooth with great indignation, and commaunded to destroy all the wise men at Babylon: and the proclamation went fourth, and the wise men were slayne. They sought also to slea Daniell with his companions. Thenne Daniell enquired of Arioch the kinges steward, of the iudgment and sentence, that was gone fourth already to kill suche as were wise at Babylon.

He answered and saide vnto Arioch, being then the kinges deputie: why hath the kinge proclaymed so cruell a sentence? So Arioch told Daniel the matter. Upon this went Daniell vp, and desired the kinge, that he mighte haue leysure, to shew the kinge the interpretation, and then came he home again, and shewed the thing to Inanias, Misael, and Azarias, his companions, that they shoulde beseeche the God of heauen for grace in this secrete, that Daniell and his fellows with other such as were wise in Babylon, perished not. Thenne was the misterpe shewed vnto Daniel in a vision by nighte. And Daniell prayesd the God of heuen. Daniell also cryed

GOD of heauen hath geuen thee a kingdome, riches, strengthe, and maiestie, and hath deliuered thee all thinges that are among the children of men, the beastes of the field, and the fowles vnder the heauen, and geuen thee dominion ouer them all. Thou art that golden heade. After that there shall arise another kingdome, whiche shalbe lesse then thine. The third kingdome shalbe like copper, and haue domination in all landes. The fourth kingdome shalbe as stronge as yron. For like as yron breaketh and breaketh all thinges: yea, euen as yron beatech euery thinge downe, so shall it beate downe and destroye. Whereas thou sawest the sete and tocs, part of earth and parte of yron: that is a denided kingdome, whiche neuertheless shall haue some of the yron grounde mixte with it, for so much as thou hast seene the yron myrte with the claye. The tocs of the sete that were part of yron and parte of claye, signifeth, that it shalbe a kingdome partly strong, and partly weake. And where as thou sawest yron mixte with claye, they shall mingle theym selues with the seede of simple people, and yet not continue one with another, lyke as yron wil not be souldered with a potsherd:

En the dayes of these kinges, shall the God of heauen set vp an euering kingdome whiche shall not perishe, and his kingdome shall not be geuen oter to another people: yea, the same shal breake and destroy all these kingdomes, but it shall endure for euer. And where as thou sawest, that without any handes there was cutte out of the mounte a stone whiche brake the yron, the copper, the earth, the syluer and golde in peeces: by that hath the great God shewed the king, what will come after this. This is a true dreame, and the interpretation of it is sure. Then the king Nabuchodonosor fel downe vpon his face, and bowed him selfe vnto Daniell, and commaunded that they shoulde offer meatoffringes and swete odoures vnto him. The king answered, Dant-ell, and said: Yea of a truth your God is a God aboue all goddes, a Lord aboue all kinges, and an opener of secretes: seying thou canst discouer this mistery. So the kinge made Daniell a greate man, and gaue him many and great giftes. He made him ruler of all the countreys of Babilon, & Lord of all the nobles that were at Babilon. Now Daniel intreated the kinge for Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednago: so that he made them rulers ouer all the officers in the land of Babilon: But Daniell him selfe remayned still in the court by the king.

Nabuchodonosor the king caused a golde ymage to be made, which was .xl. cubits hie, and vi. cubites thicke. This he made to be set vp in the field of Dura in the land of Babilon, and sent out to gather together the dukes, lordes and nobles, the iudges and officers, the debities, and shryues, with all the rulers of the land, that they might come to the dedication of the ymage, which Nabuchodonosor the kinge had set vp. So the dukes, lordes and nobles, the iudges and officers, debities and shryues, with all the rulers of the lande gathered them together, and came vnto the dedicating of the ymage, that Nabuchodonosor the kinge had set vp. Now when they stood befoze the ymage, whiche Nabuchodonosor set vp, the bedle cryed out with all his might: O ye people, kyndredes and tongues to you be it sayde, that when ye heare the noyle of the trompettes, whiche shalbe blowe, with the harpes, shawmes, psalteries, symphonies, and al maner of musike, ye fall downe and wooshippe the golden ymage that Nabuchodonosor the kinge hath sette vp. Who so then falleth not downe and boweth him selfe, shall euen the same hour be cast into an hot burning oven. Therefore when all the folke herd this noyle of the trompets that were blowe with the harpes, shawmes, psalteries, symphonies and all kinde of melodie, then all the people, kindes, and nations fell downe, and bowed theym selues vnto the golden ymage, that Nabuchodonosor the kinge had set vp. Now were there certain men of the Chaldees, that went even then and accused the Jewes, and sayd vnto the king Nabuchodonosor: O kinge god saue thy life for euer. Thou being kinge haſt geuen a commaundement, that all men, when they here the noyse of the trumpets, hautines, psalteries, simphonies, & all the other melodyes, shal fall downe and bowe them selues, toward the golden image, who so the fell not downe & worshipped not, that he should be cast into an hote burning ouen. Now are ther certaine Jewes, whom thou hast set ouer the officers of the land of Babilon: namely, Sydach, Misach, and Abednago. These men (O king) regarde not thy commaundement, yea they will not serue thy goddes, nor bowe them selues to the golden Image that thou hast set vp. Then Nabuchodonosor in a cruell wrath and displeasure, commaunded, that Sydach, Misach, and Abednago should be brought vnto him.

 So these menne were brought befoze the kinge. Then Nabuchodonosor spake vnto them, and sayde: What? O Sydach, Misach, & Abednago, will not you serue my goddes? nor bowe your selues to the golden Image that I haue set vp? Well, be ready hereafter. Whenne ye heare the noyse of the trumpets blow with the harpe, haumes, psalteries, simphonies, and all the other melodyes, that ye fall downe, and worship the Image whiche I haue made. But if ye worship it not, ye shal be cast immediately into an hot burning ouen. Lette see, what God is there that maye deliuer you out of my hands. Sydach, Misach, and Abednago answered the king, and said: O Nabuchodonosor, we ought not to consent vnto thee in this matter, for why? our God, whom we serue, is able to keepe vs from the hot burning ouen (O kinge) and can right well deliuer vs out of thy hands. And though he wille not, yet shalte thou knowe (O kinge) that we will not serue thy goddes, nor do reuerence to that Image which thou hast set vp.
 Then was Nabuchodonosor full of indignation, so that the countenance of his face chaunged vpon Sydach, Misach, and Abednago. Therefore he charged and commaunded, that the ouen should be made. vij. times hotter then it was wont to be, and spake vnto the strongest woozthies that were in his holte, for to binde Misach, and Sydach, and Abednago, and to caste them into the hote burning ouen.
 So these men were bounde in their cotes, hosen, shoes, with their other garmentes, and caste into an hote burning ouen, for the kinges commaun-dement was so straitte, and the ouen was exceeding hote. As for the men that put in Sydach, Misach, and Abednago, & flame of the fyre destroyd them. And these three men Sydach, and Misach and Abednago fell down in the hote burning ouen, beinge false bounde. Then Nabuchodonosor the kinge meruailed, and stood vp in all haste, he spake vnto his counceill and sayd: Did not you cast these thre men bound into the fire? They answered and sayd vnto the king: Yea, O king.
 He answered and sayd: Lo, for all that yet doe I see foure men goinge loose in the midst of the fire, and nothinge corrupte, and the fourth is like the sonne of God to looke vppon. Vpon this went Nabuchodonosor vnto the mouth of the hote burning ouen, he spake also and sayde: O Sydach, Misach, and Abednago, ye seruants of the hie God, go forth, and come he-ther. And so Sydach, Misach, and Abednago went out of the fire. Then the dukes, lordes, and nobles, and the kinges counceill came together to see these men, vpon whom the fire had no maner of power in their bodyes.
 In so muche that the verye heare of their head was not burnt, and their cloathes vunchanged, yea there was no smel of fyre felt vpon them: Then spake Nabuchodonosor, and sayde:

Dan. 6. c N • Nabuchodonosor king vnto all people, kindredes and congurs that dwell vppon the whole earth: peace be multiplied among you. I thought it good to shewe the tokens and maruailous workes, & the hve god hath wrought vpon me. O, howe greate are his tokens, and howe mighty are his won-and sloppinge in my palace, sawe a dreame, whiche made me afraide, and bed, with the visions of mine heade, commission, that all they which were of wis dome at Babilon shoulde bee brought befoze me, to tel me the interpretation of the dreame. • So there came the sothslayers, charmers, Chaldedes, & conurers of deuils, to whō I told & dreame, but what it betokened they coulde not shewe me, till at the lasse there came one Daniel (otherwise called Balthazar, according to the name of my God) which hath the spirite of the holpe goddess in him, to whom I tolde the dreame saying: O Balthazar, thou prince of Southslayers: for so much as I know that thou hast the spirite of the holy gods and no secrets is hidde from thee, tell me therfoze, what the vision of my dreame (that I haue scene) maye signifie. I sawe a vision in my head vpon my bed, and beholde, there stood a tree vpon the grounde, which was very hie, great and mighty, the height reached vnto the heaue; and the bredth extended to all the endes of the earth. his leaues were sayze, he had verie much fruite, so that euery man had ynough to eate therein. The beastes of the fielde had shadowes vnder it, and the foules of the ayre dwell in the bowes therof. Shortly, al creatures fed of it. I saw in my head a vision vpon my bed: and beholde, a watcher and a holy one cam down from heauen, and cryed mightely, saying: Hewe downe the tree, bzeake off his bzaunches, shake off his leaues, and scatter his fruite abrode, that all the beastes maye get them away from vnder him, and the foules from his bzaunches. Henerthelesse, leaue the grounde of his roote still in the earth, and binde him vpon the playne fielde, with cheynes of yron and Steele. With the dewe of heauen shall he be wet, and shall haue his parte in the herbes of the ground with other wild beastes. That mans heart of his shalbe taken from him, and a beastes heart shall be geuen him till seuen yeres be come and gone vpon him. This errand of the watcher is a commaundement grounded and sought out in the counsel of him, that is most holy, to learne men for to vnderstande, that the hpest hath power ouer the kingdomes of men, and geueth them, to whome it liketh him, and bringeth the verie outcastes of men ouer them. This is the dreame, that I kinge Nabuchodonosor haue sene. Therfoze O Balthazar, tel thou me what it signifieth: for so much as all the wise men of my kingdome are not able to shewe mee what it mea-neth. But thou canst do it, for the spi-rite of the holy gods is in thee. Then Daniell (whose name was Balthazar) helde his peace by the space of one hour, and his thoughtes troubled him.

So the king spake, and sayd: O Balthasar, let neyther the dreame nor the interpretation therof feare thee. Balthasar answered, saying: O my lord, this dreame happen to thine enemies, and the interpretation to thine aduersaries. As for the tree that thou sawest which was so great & mightie, whose height reached vnto the heauen, and his breadth into all the worlde, whose leaues wer fayre, and the frute much, vnder the whiche the beastes of the fildes had their habitation, and vpon whose branches the foules of the ayre did syt. Euen thou (O king) art the tree, great and strong. Thy greatnes increaseth, and reacheth vnto the heauen, so dothe thy power to the endes of the earthe. But whereas the king sawe a watcher, euen an holy angell, that came downe from heauen, & sayd: Hewe downe the tree, and destroye it, yet leaue the grounde of the roote of the earth, and bind him vpon the plaine field with cheynes of yron and Steele. He shalbe wet with the dewe of heauen, and his part shalbe with the beastes of the field, till. vij. yerres be come and gone vpon him. This (O king) is the interpretation, yea, it is the very deuice of him, that is hiest of all, and it toucheth my Lord the king. Thou shalt be cast out from men, and thy dwelling shalbe with the beastes of the field, with grasse shalt thou be fed lyke an oxe. Thou must be wetted with the dewe of heauen: yea, seuen yeres shall come and go vpon thee, till thou knowe, that the hiest hath power vpon the kingdomes of men, and geueth them to whom he lyst. Moreover, whereas it was said, that the roote of the tree should be left still in the ground, it betokeneth, that thy kingdome shall remaine whole vnto thee, after thou hast learned to know, that the power cometh from heauen. Wherefore, O king, be content with my counsell, that thou mayst redeeme thy synnes with almesse, and thine offences with mercy to poore people, for this shalbe an healing of thine erroure. All these thyngs touche the king

Babuchodonosor. So after. xij. monethes, the king walked by and down in the palace of his kingdome of Babilon, and said: This is the great city of Babilon, which I my selfe (with my power and strength) haue made a kinges court, for the honour of my maiestie. While these wordes were yet in the kinges mouth, there fell a voyce from heauen, saying: O king Babuchodonosor, to thee be it spoken: Thy kingdome shall depart from thee, thou shalt be caste out of mens company, thy dwelling shalbe with the beastes of the fildes, so that thou shalt eate grasse lyke an Oxe, till seuen yeres be come and gone ouer thee: euen vntill thou knowest, that the hiest hath power ouer the kingdomes of men, and that he may geue them vnto who it pleaseth him. The very same houre was this matter fulfilled vpon Babuchodonosor, so that he was cast out of mens company, and did eate grasse lyke an oxe. His body was wet with the dewe of heauen, till his heares were as great as Eagles feathers, and his nayles lyke birdes clawes. When this time was pake, I Babuchodonosor lifte vp myne eyes vnto heauen, and myne vnderstanding was restored vnto me agayne. Then gaue I thanks vnto the highest, I magnified and prayled him that liueth for euermore, whose power endureth alway, and his kingdome from one generation to another: in comparison of whom all they that dwell vpon the earth, are to be reputed as nothing. He handled according to his will, among the powers of heauen, and among the inhabitants of the earthe, and there is none that may resist his hande, or say: What doest thou? At the same time was mine vnderstanding geuen me agayne, and I was restored to the honour of my kingdome, to my dignity, & to mine owne shape agayne. My great estates and princes sought vnto me, & I was sette in my kingdome agayne, so that I had yet greater worshippe. Then did I Babuchodonosor loue, magnify and praise the king of heuen, for all his woordes are true, and his waies right. As for those that go on proudly, he is able to bringe them downe.

Yng Balthazar made a great banquet to his thousand lordes: with all these thousand hee made greates cheare, and when he was dronken with wine, he commanded to bring him the golden and silver vessels. which his father Nabuchodonosor had taken out of the temple at Jerusalem: that the king and his lordes, with his queene and concubines mighte drinke thereout. So they brought the golden vessel that was taken out of the temple of the lordes house at Jerusalem.

Then the king and his lordes with his queene and concubines dronke out of them. They dronke wine, and prayed their ydols of gold, silver, copper, iron, woodde, and stone. In the very same houre there appeared light, as it had bene of a mans hande writing, right ouer against the candlestick vpon the playne wall in the kinges palace, and the king sawe the palme of the hand that wrote.

Then changed the king his countenance, and his thoughtes troubled him, so that the ioyntes of his bodie shooke, and his knees smote one against the other.

Wherefore the king cryed mightelie, that they should bring him the charmers, Chaldees, and coungerers of deuils. The king spake also to the wise men of Babilon, and sayd: Who so canne rede this writing, and shewe me the playne meaning thereof, shalbe clothed with purple, haue a chayne of golde about his necke, and rule the thirde parte of my kingdome. Vpon this came all the kinges wisemen, but they coulede neyther rede the writing, nor shewe the king what it signified.

Then was the king sore afrayde, in so muche that his colour changed, and his lordes were sore vexed. So by reason of this matter, that had happened so the king and his lordes, the queene went by her selfe into the banquet house, and spake vnto the king, saying: O king, God saue thy life for ever. Lette not the thoughtes trouble thee, and let not thy countenance be changed. For why: there is a man in thy kingdome, that hath the spirite of the holpe goddes within him, as it was seene in thy fathers dayes. Hee hath vnderstandinge and wisdom like the goddes. Yea, the king Nabuchodonosor thy father made this man chiefe of the southsayers, charmers, Chaldees, and readers of deuities, because that suche an abundant spirite knowledge and wisdom to expound dreames, to open secrettes, and to declare harde doubtles was in him: yea, euen in Daniell, whom the king named Balthazar. Let this same Daniell be sent for, and he shall tell what it meneth. The king was Daniell brought before the king. So the king spake vnto Daniell and said: Art thou that Daniell one of the prisoners of Iuda, whom my father the king broughte out of Iewrye? I haue heard speake of thee, that thou hast the spirit of the holpe goddes, experience, and vnderstandinge, and that there hath bene greates wisdom founde in thee.

Nowe haue there bene broughte me wise and cunning charmers to rede this writinge, and to shewe me the meaning thereof: But they could not tell me what this matter signified. Then heard I say, that thou canst expound darke thinges, and declare harde doubtles. Well then, if thou canst rede this writing, and shewe me the meaning thereof, thou shalt be clothed with purple, haue a chayne of gold about thy necke, and rule the thirde part of my kingdome. Daniell answered and sayde before the king: As for thy rewardes, keepe them to thy selfe, or geue thy riche giftes to another: yet not the lesse, I will rede the writing vnto the king, and shewe him the interpretation thereof.

O king heare: The hiest gaue vnto Nabuchodonosor thy father, the dignitie of a kinge, with worship and honour, so that that all people, kinredes and tonges stood in awe and feare of him, by reason of the hye estate, that he had lente him. For whye, he chose whom he would, he smote whom it pleased him agayne, whom he would he sette vp, and whom he list he put downe. But because his heart was so proude, and his stomacke set so faste vnto wilful-nes, he was deposed from his kingly throne, and his Maiestie was taken from him. He was shutte out from among men, his heart was like a beastes hearte, and his dwellinge was with the wilde asses, he was sayne to eate grasse lyke an oxe, and his bodye was wet with the dew of the heauen till he knewe that the hick hath power vpon the kingdomes of men, and setteth ouer them whom he list. And thou his sonne (O Balthazar) for all this, thou hast not submitted thine heart though thou knowest all these thin-ges: but hast magnified thy self aboue the Lord of heauen, so that the vessels of his house were broughte before thee, that thou, and thy lordes, with thy quene and concubins might drinke wine therout. And haste praysed the ydols of syluer and golde, copper and yron, and woode and stone, whiche nether see, heare nor vnderstande. As for the G O D in whose hand consisteth thy breath and all thy waies, thou hast not loued him. Therfore is the palme of this hand sent hither from him, to token by this writing. And this is the scripture, that is witten by: Mene, Mithel, Phares.

 Nowe the interpretation of the thing is this: Mene, G O D hath numbred the kingdome, and brought it to an end: Mithel, thou art weied in the balance, and art found to lighte: Phares, thy kingdome is deale in partes, and geuen to the Medes and Perses.
 Then commanded Balthazar, to cloth Daniell with purple, to hange a chayne of golde aboute his necke, and to make a proclamation concerninge him, that he should be the ruler of the thirde parte of his kingdome. The very same night was Balthazar the king of the Chaldees slaine, and Darius out of Medea toke in the kingdome, being. lxxij. yere of age.

The. vi. Chapter.

It pleased Darius to set ouer his kingdome an hundred and twenty lordes, whiche should be in all his kingdome aboute. Aboue these he set thre princes (of whom Daniell was one) that the lordes mighte geue ac-ccountes vnto them, and the kinge to be vndiseased. But Daniell excused all these princes and lordes, for the spirit of God was plenteous in him: so that the kinge was minded to sette him ouer the whole realme. Wherefore the princes and lordes soughte to picke out in Daniell some quarell against the kingdome: yet coulde they fynde none occasion nor faulte vpon him. For whye: he was so faythfull, that there was no blame nor dishonestie founde in him. Then saide these men: We can get no quarell agaynst this Daniell, except it be in the lawe of his God. Vpon this, wrote the princes and lordes together vnto the king, and saide thus vnto him: King Darius, God saue thy life for euer.
 All the great estates of the realme: as the Princes, Dukes, Senatours, and iudges, are determined to put out a commaundement of the kinge, and to make a sure statute: namelpe, that whoso despyeth any petition, eyther of any God or man (within this thirtie dayes) except it be onely of thee, O king, the same person may be cast into the lions denne. Wherefore, O kinge confirme thou this statute, and make a writing, that the thing whiche the Medes and Perses haue ordeyned, be not altered nor broken. So Darius made the writinge, and confirmed it.
 Now when Daniell vnderstode that the writinge was made, he went into his house, and the windowes of his wall toward Jerusalem stood open. There kneeled he downe vpon his knees, thre tymes a daye, there he made his petition, and prayesd his God, lyke as his maner was to do afore time, Then these men made serch,

And,

and founde Daniell making his petition, and praying vnto his God. So they came to the kinge, and spake befoze him concerning his commaundement, saying: O kinge, hast thou not subscribed the statute, that within xxx. dayes, who so requirerth his petition of any God or man, but onely of thy selfe, O kinge, he shalbe caste into the den of the Lions? The kinge answered, and sayde: yea, it is true. It must be as a lawe of the Medes and Perses, that may not be broken. The kinge answered they, and sayde vnto the king: Daniell one of the prisoners of Iuda, O king, regardeth neither thee nor thy statute, that thou haste made, but maketh his petition thre times a daye. When the kinge hearde these wordes, he was sore grieved, & would haue excused Daniell, to deliuer him, and put of the matter, vntill the sunne wente downe, to the intent that he mighte saue him. These men perceauing the kinges minde, sayde vnto him: Knowe this (O kinge) that the lawe of the Medes and Perses is, that the commaundement and statute which the king maketh, maye not be altered. • Then the kinge badde them bringe Daniell, and they cast him into the Lions den. The kinge also spake vnto Daniel, and sayd: thy God, who thou alway serueth, euen he shall defende thee. And there was brought a stone, and layde vpon the hole of the denne, thus the kinge sealed with his owne ringe, and with the signet of his princes: that the Kinges commaundemente concerninge Daniell, shoulde not be broken. So the kinge went into his palace, & ate no meate that night, neither was there any mirth vnto him brought in befoze him, neither coulde he take any sleepe. But betimes in the morninge, at the brake of the day, the king arose, and wente in all haste vnto the denne of the Lyons. Nowe as he came nye vnto the den, he cryed with a piteous voyce vnto Daniel: yea, the king spake, and laide vnto Daniell: O Daniell, thou seruant of the liuinge God, is not thy god (whom thou alway serueth) able to deliuer thee from the lions? Daniell sayde vnto the king: O king, God saue thy lyfe for euer. • My God hath sent his aungell, whiche hath shut the Lyons mouthes, so that they mighte not hurte me. For why? mine vngl- times is founde out befoze him. And as for thee, O king, I neuer offended thee. Then was the king exceeding glad, and commaunded to take Daniell out of the denne. So Daniell was brought out of the denne, and no manner of hurte was founde vpon him. For he put his trust in his God. And as for those men, whiche had accused Daniell, the king commaunded to bring them, and to caste them in the Lions denne: them, their childe, and their wyues. • So the Lyons hadde the maistrise of theym, and brake all they bones a sunder, or euer they cam at the grounde. • After this wrote king Darius vnto al people, kindes and tongues, that dwelt in all landes: Peace be multiplied with you. My commaundement is, in all my domynion and kingedome, that men feare and stande in awe of Daniels God. • For he is the liuinge God, whiche abydeth euer, his kingdome shall not faile, and his power is euermoring. • It is he that deliuereth, and saueth, he doeth wondrous and marueylous woorkes, in heauen and in earth, he hath preserued Daniell from the power of the Lions. This Daniel prospered in the reigne of Darius and Cyrus of Persia.

The vij. Chapter.

In the fyrste yere of Belshazzar kinge of Babylon, saue Daniell a dreame, and a vision was in his heade vpon his bed. whiche dreame he wrote, and the summe of the matter is this. Daniel spake and laide: I saue in my vision by night, and beholde, the four win- des of the heauen stode vpon the Sea, and saue greates beastes came vp from the Sea, one vnto another.

Jer. 4. ab
Eze. 17 a
The first was as a Lion, and yet had he. Eagles winges. I sawe that his winges were plucked from him, and he taken away from the earth, that he stode upon his fete as a man, and that there was geuen him a mans hearte.

Pro. 18 c
Behold, the seconde beast was like a beare, and stode vppon the one syde. Amonge his teeth in his mouth, he had thre great long teeth, and it was sayde vnto him: Arise, eate vp muche flesh. Then I looked, and behold, there was another like vnto a leopard, this had winges as a foule, . euen foure vpon the backe. This beast had foure heades, and there was power geuen him. After this I sawe in a vision by night, and beholde, the fourth beast was grimme and horrible, and marvellous strong. It had grete yron teeth it deuoured and destroyed, and stamped the residue vnder his fete. It was farre vnlike the other beastes, that were before it, for it had . ten hornes, wherof I tooke good heede. And beholde, there came vp amonge them another litle horne, before whō there was thre of the first hornes plucked away. Beholde this horne had eyes like a man, and a mouth speaking presumptuous thinges. . I looked till the seates were prepared, and till the old aged sat him downe, his clothing was as white as snow, and the heares of his heade like the pure wooll. His chryone was lyke the fyerie flame, and his wheeles as the burning fyre. There dyd hee foorth a sterie streame, and went out from him. . A thousand times, a thousande serued him. x. . times ten thousand stode before him. The iudgement was set, and the booke opened. Then toke I heede ther vnto, because of the voice of the proud words, which the horne spake. I behelde till the beast was slaine, and his bodie destroyed, . geuen ouer to be burnt in the fire. As for the power of the other beastes also it was taken away, but their liues were prolonged for a time and season. I sawe in a vision by night, and behold, . there came one in the cloudes of heauen lyke the sonne of man, whiche wente vnto the olde aged, before whom they brought him. Then gaue he him . power and dignitie regall, that all people, tribes, and tongues should serue him. . His power is an euerlastinge power, which shall neuer be put downe: and his kingdom endured vncorrupt. My heart was vexed, and I . Daniel had a troubled spirite within me, and the visions of my head made me astrayde: till I gat me vnto . one of them that stode by, to knowe the trueth concerninge all these thinges. So he tolde me, and made me vnderstande the interpretation of these thinges. These four great beastes are foure kinges whiche shall arise out of the earthe. These shall take in the kingdome of the sayntes of the most hiest, and possesse it still more and more for a longe season. After this I required diligently to knowe the trueth concerninge the fourth beast, which was so farre vnlike the other beastes, and so horrible: whose teeth were of yron, and his nayles of brasse, which deuoured & destroyed, & staped the residue vnder his fete. I despyed also to knowe the truth as touching the . ten hornes that he had vpon his head, and this other, whiche came vp afterwarde, before whose face there fel downe thre, which horn had eyes and a mouth, and spake presumptuous thinges, and looked with a grimmer visage then his fellows. I beheld, and the same horne made battaile against the sayntes: yea and gate the victoype of thrym, vntill the time that the old aged came, that the iudgement was geuen to the chiefest Sainctes: and till the tyme that the sainctes had the kingdome in possession. He gaue me this aunswere.

That fourth beast shalbe the fourth kingdome vppon earthe: it shall bee more thenne all other kingdomes, it shall deuoure, treade downe, and destroye all other landes. . The tenne hornes, are tenne kinges, that shall arise oute of the kingdome, after whom there shall stande by another, whiche shalbe greater then the firste.

The viij. Chapter.

In the thirde yere of the reigne of King Balthasar, there appea-Dan. 7 a red a vision vnto me Daniell after that I had sene the first. I sawe in a vision (and when I sawe it, I was at Susis in the chiefe city, whiche lyeth in the land of Elam) and in Ier. 49. f the vision, me thought I was by the Eze. 32 d riuier of Ulai. Then I looked vp and sawe: and beholde, there stode before the riuier a ramme, which hadde two hornes, and these two hornes were hye, but one was hyer then another, and the best came vp behind. I sawe that this ramme pushed with his hornes, agaynst the west, agaynst the north, and agaynst the south, so that no beastes might stande before him, nor defend them from his power: but he did as him list, and waxed greatly. I toke heed vnto this, and then 28 came there an hee goate from the west ouer the whole earth and touched not the ground. This goate had a maruelous withen horne betwixt his eyes and cam vnto the ramme, that had the two hornes (whom I had sene asofore by the riuier syde) and ranne fearcelye vpon him with his might. I sawe him drawe npe vnto the ramme, being very fierce vpon him: yea he gaue him suche a stroke, that he brake his two hornes. Neyther had the ramme so muche strengthe as to stande before him: but he cast him downe, trode him vnder his feete, and no man was able to deliuer the ramme out of his power. The goate waxed exceedingly great, and when he was at the strongest, his great horne was broken also.

 • Then grew there other foure such like in the sheade, towarde the foure windes of the heauen. Yea, out of one of the least of these hornes, there came vp yet another horne, whiche waxed maruelous great, towarde the south, toward the east, and toward the sayre pleasant land. It grew vp to the host of heauen, whereof it did cast some downe to the ground, and of the stars also, and trode them vnder feete. Yea, it grew vp vnto the prince of the host, from whom the dayly offerings was taken, and the place of his Sanctuary casten downe. And a certayne season was geuen vnto it, agaynst the dayly offeringe (because of wickednes) that it might cast downe the be-ritie to the ground, and so to prosper in all thinges, that it wente aboute.
 Vpon this I herd one of the sayntes D speaking, whiche saynt sayde vnto one that asked this question. Howe long shall this vision of the dayly sacrifice and of the waiting abhomination endure, that the Sanctuarye and the power shall so be troden vnder fote? And he answered him: Vnto the evening and the morning, euen two thousand and three hundredth dayes: then shall the Sanctuarye be cleansed agayne. Nowe when I Daniell had scene this vision, and soughte for the vnderstanding of it: beholde, there stode before me a thinge lyke vnto a man. And I herd a mans voyce in the riuier of Ulai, which cryed, and sayde: O Gabziell, make this man vnderstande the vision. So he came, and stode by me. But I was afrayde at his comminge, and fell downe vpon my face. Then sayde he vnto mee: O thou sonne of man, marke well, for in the last time shall this vision be fulfilled filled. Nowe as he was speaking vnto me I waxed faynt, so that I ranke doſtne to the grounde. But he tooke hold vpon me, and sette me vp againe, saying: Beholde, I will shewe thee what shall happen in the laste wyath: for in the time appoynted it shall be fulfilled. The ramme whiche thou sawest with the two hoznes, is the king of the Medes and Perses: but the goate is the king of Greke lande: the greates hozne that stood betwixte his eyes, that is the principall kinge. But wheras it brake, and foure other rose vp in the steede, it signifyeth, that out of this people shall stande by foure kingdomes, but not so mightie as it. After these kingdomes (whyle vngodlynesse is a growinge) there shall aryshe a kinge of an vnshamefast face, whiche shalbe wise in darke speakinges. He shall be mightie and strong, but not in his owne strength. He shall destroye aboue measure, and al that he gorth about, shall prosper: he shall sea the strong and holy people. And thowhe his craftines, falshode shall prosper in his hande, his hearte shall be proude, and many one shall be put to deathe in his welchynesse. He shall stande by agaynst the Prince of Princes, but he shall be destroyed without hande. And this vision that is shewed vnto thee, is as sure as the euening and the morning. Therefore write thou by this sight, for it will be long or it come to passe. Upon this, was I Daniell very faynt, so that I lay sicke certayne dayes: but when I rose vp, I went about the kinges busines, and marueiled at the vision, neuerthelesse no man knewe of it.

In the fyrste yere of Darius, the sonne of Bhasuerus, whiche was of the seide of the Medes, and was made king ouer the realme of Chal-dees: yea, euen in the fyrst yere of his reggne, I Daniell desired to knowe the verily number out of the booke, wherof the Lord spake vnto Jeremye walke. lxx. yeaues: I tourned me vnto God the Lord, for to praye and make mine intercession, with fastinge sackcloth and ashes, I prayed before the Lord my God, and knowledged saying: O LORD, thou great and fearefull God, thou that keepest couenaunte and mercye with them whiche loue thee, and do thy commaundementes. We haue sinned, we haue offended, we haue bene disobedient, and gone backe: yea, we haue departed from all thy preceptes and iudgements. We woulde neuer folowe thy seruantes the Prophetes, that spake in thy name to our Kinges and Princes, to our forefathers, and to all the people of the land. O LORD righteounesse belongeth vnto thee, vnto vs parteyneth nothinge but open shame: as it is come to passe this daye vnto euery man of Iuda, and to them that dwell at Jerusalem. Yea, vnto all Israel, whether they be farre or nye, throughout all landes, wherin thou hast strawed them, because of the offences, that they hadde done agaynst thee. Yea, O Lord, vnto vs, to our kinges and princes, to our forefathers, euen to vs all, that haue offended thee, belongeth open shame. But vnto thee, O Lord our God, parteyneth mercy and forgiveness. As for vs, we are gone backe from him, and haue not obeyed the voyce of the Lord our God, to walke in his lawes, whiche he layde before vs by his seruantes, the Prophetes: yea, all Israel haue transgressed, and gone backe from thy lawe, so that they haue not hearkened vnto thy voyce. Wherefore, the curse and othe that is written in the lawe of Moyses, the seruant of God (agaynst whom we haue offended) is poured vpon vs. And he hath perſourmed his wordes, whiche he spake agaynst vs, and agaynst our Iudges, that iudged vs, to bringe vpon vs suche a greates plague, as neuer was vnder heauen, lyke as nowe it is come to passe in Jerusalem. Yea, all this plague, as it is written in the lawe of Moyses les is come vpon vs. Yet made we not our prayer befoze the Lord our God, that we mighte turne agayne from our wickednes, and to be learned in the veritie. Therefore hath the Lord made halt, to bring this plague vpon vs, for the Lord our God is righteous, in all his workes whiche he doeth: for why? we would not hearken vnto his voyce. And now, O Lord our god, thou that with a mighty hand haste brought thy people out of Egypt, to get thy selfe a name whiche remaineth this day: we haue sinned, O Lord, and done wickedly agaynst all thy righteousness: yet lette thy wrathfull displeasure be turned away (I beseech thee) from thy citie of Jerusalem, thy holy hill. And why? for our sinnes sake, and for the wickednesse of our forefathers, is Jerusalem and thy people abhored, of all them that are about vs: Nowe therefore, O our God, heare the prayer of thy seruante, and his intercession. Let thy face shine ouer thy Sanctuary that lieth waste, for the Lordes sake. O my God, encline thine eare, and hearken (at the leaste for thine owne sake) open thine eyes: behold howe we be desolated, yea and the citie also, whiche is called after thy name: for we do not cast our prayers befoze thee in our owne righteousness, no, but only in thy great mercies. O Lord heare, O forgiue Lord, O Lord consider, tary not ouer long, but for thine owne sake do it, O my God: for thy citie, and thy people is called after thy name. As I was yet speaking at my prayers, knowledginge myne owne sinnes, and the sinnes of my people, makinge so mine intercession befoze the Lord my God, for the holy hill sake of my people: yea, while I was yet speakinge in my prayer, beholde, the man Gabriell, (whom I hadde sene afore in the vision) came flying to me, and touched me about the offering time in the euening. He informed me, and spake vnto me: O Daniell saide he, I am nowe come to make the vnderstand it. For as soon as thou begannest to make thy prayer, it was so deuised, and therfore am I come to shewe thee. And why? For thou art a man greatly beloued. Wherefore ponder the matter well, that thou mayest learne to vnderstande the vision. xx. weekes are determined ouer thy people, and ouer the holy citie: that the wickednes may be consumed, that the synne maye haue an ende, that the offence maye be reconciled, to bringe in euerlastinge righteousness, to fulfill the visions, and the prophetes, and to annoynt the moste holpe one. Vnderstand this then, and marke it well: that from the time it shalbe concluded, to goe and repaie Jerusalem agayne, vnto Christ (of the annoynted prince: there shalbe seuen weekes. Then shall the streets and walles be buyded agayne. lxij. weekes, but with harde troublous time. After these. lxij. weekes, shall Christ be slayne, and they shall haue no pleasure in him. Then shall there come a people with the Prince, and destroye the citie, and the Sanctuary, and his ende shal come as the water floode. But the desolation shall continue till the ende of the battell. He shall make a stronge bonde with many for space of a weke, and when the weke is halfe gone, he shall put downe the slayne and meate offering. And in the temple there shall be an abhominable desolation, till it be destroyed all. And it is concluded that this wasting shall continue vnto the ende.

In the thirde yere of king Cyrus of Persia, there was shewed vnto Daniell (otherwise called Balthazar) a matter: yea, a true matter, but it is yet a longe time vnto it. He vnderstode the matter well, and perceived what the vision was. At the same tyme, I Daniell mourned for the space of thre weekes, so that I had no luste to eate breade: as for fleshe and wyne, there came none within my mouth: So, I did not once annoynt my selfe, till the whole three weekes were out. Upon the .xxiiij. day of the first moneth, I was by the grete floud called Egris. I lift vp mine eyes, and looked, and beholde, a man clothed in linnen, whose loynes were girded by with fine golde of Traby: his bodye was like the Chrysolite stone, his face (to loke vpon) was lyke lightening, his eyes as the flame of fyre, his armes and feete were like sayre glittering metall, but the voyce of his wordes was like the voyce of a multitude. I Daniell alone sawe this vision, the men that were with me, saw it not: but a great fearefulness fel vpon them, so that they fled away and hid them selues. I was left there my selfe alone, and sawe this great vision, so long til there remained no moze strength within me: yea, I losse my colour cleme, I wasted away, and my strength was gone. Yet hearde I the voice of his wordes, and as sone as I heard it, sayntnes came vpon me, and I fell downe flat to the grounde, vpon my face. And beholde, an hande touched me, which set me by vpon my knees, and vpon the palmes of my handes, saying vnto me: O Daniel, thou welbeloued man, take good hede of the wordes, that I shall saye vnto thee, and stand right by, for vnto thee am I nowe sente. And when he had sayde these wordes, I stode by, trembling. He sayd he vnto me, feare not Daniell, for whye? since the firste daye that I set thine heart to vnderstande, and didst chaste thy selfe before the God, thy wordes haue ben heard. And I had come vnto thee, when thou beganest to speake, had not the prince ouer the kingdom of the Perses with stand me .xxi. dayes. But lo. Michael one of the chiefe princes came to helpe me, and I was left to continue there with the kinges of Persia, and am come to shewe thee, what shal happen vnto the people in the latter dayes. For it wilbe long yet of the vision be fulfilled. Nowe when he had spoken these wordes vnto me, I cast downe my head to the grounde, and helde my tonge. Behold, there touched my lips one very lyke vnto a man. Then opened I my mouth, and sayde vnto him that stode before me: O my Lord, my toyntes are losed in the vision, & there is no moze strength within me. How maye my Lordes seruauent then talke with my Lord: seeinge there is no strength in me, so that I can not take my breath: Upon this heere touched me agayne, one much like a man, and comforted me, saying: O thou manso welbeloued, feare not, be content, take a good hert vnto thee, and be stronge. So when he had spoken vnto me, I recovered, and sayde: Speake on my Lord, for thou hast refreshed me. He said he, knowest thou wherfore I am come vnto thee? now wil I go again to fight with the king and prince of Persia. As sone as I go forth, lo, the prince of Greke land shall come. Nevertheless I wil shewe thee that thing that is fast noted in the scripture of truthe. And as for all ponder matters, there is none that helpeth me in them, but Michaell your prince.

And in the firste yere of Darius of Media, I stode by him to comforte him, and to strength him, and now wil I shewe thee the trueth. Beholde, there shall stand by yet the kinges of Persia, but the fourth shalbe far richer then they al. And when he is in the chiefest power of his riches, he shall prouoke every man against the realm of Greke lande. Then shall there arise yet a mightye kinge, that shall rule with great dominio, and do what him list. And as sone as his kingdome cometh by, it shall be destroyed, and deuoyded towardes the foure windes of the heanen. They that come after him, shall not haue suche power and dominion as hee, but his kingdome shall be scatred, yea, euen among other then those. And the kinge of the south shalbe mightyer, then his other princes. And one shalbe stronger then he, and shall rule his dominion

With great power. And in the ende of yeares, they shall be toynd together, and the kinges daughter of the south shall come to the kinge of the North, for to make frendshippe, but she shall not obtayne the power of that arme, neyther shall shee be able to endure throught his might, but she and suche as brought her (yea and he that begat her, and comforted her for his tyme) shall be deliuered by. Out of the braches of her rote, there shall one stande by in his stead which with power of armes shall go through the kinges land of the north, and haile him according to his strength. As for their Idoles and princes, with their costlie Jewels of golde and silver, he shall cary them away captiues into Egypt, and he shall regyne moze yeares then the kinge of the North. And when he is come into the kinges realme of the south, he shall be fayne to turne agayne into his owne land. Wherefore his sons shall be displeased, and shall gather together a mightie great host of people: and one of theym shall come, and go through like a water flood: then shall he turne, and go forth with despyng and boasting vnto his owne lande.

Ehen the king of the south shall be angry, & shall come forth to fight against the kinge of the North: yea, he shall bring a great multitude of people together, and a great heape shall be geuen into his hand: these shall he cary away with great pryde, for so much as he hath cast downe so many thousandes, neuertheless, he shall not preuaile. For the king of the north shall gather (of the newe) a greater heape of people then afoze, and come forth (after a certaine time and yerres) with a mightie hoste, and exceeding grate good. At the same time there shall many stande by agaynst the king of the southe, so that the wicked childre of the people also shall exalt them selues (to fulfill the vision) and then fall. So the king of the north shall come to lay sege, and to take the stronge fenced cities. And the power of them of the south shall not be able to abide him, and the beste men of the people shall not be so strong, as to resist him. Shortly, when he cometh, he shall handle him as he liste, and no man shall be so hardy as to stande against him. He shall stande in the pleasant countrey, whiche throught him shall be destroyed. He shall set his face with all his power to obtayne his kingdome, and to be like it. Yea, that shall he doo, and geue him vnto the daughters among women, to destroy him. But he shall sayle, neyther shall he obtayne his purpose. After this shall he set his face vnto the Isles and take many of them. A prince shall stop him, to do him a shame: beside the confusion that els shall come vnto him.

Thus shall he turne agayne to his owne lande, stumble and fall, and be nomore found: so he that came bypon him and did him violence, shall stande in his place, & haue a pleasant kingdome, and after a few days he shall be destroyed, and that neyther in wrath, nor in battell. In his stead there shall arise a byle person, not holden worthy of a kinges dignitie: this shall come in peaceably, and obtayne the kingdom with fayne wordes: he shall fight agaynst the armes of the mightie (and destroye them) yea, and against the prince of the covenant. So after that he hath taken truce with him, he shall handle disceitfully, that he maye get by, and overcome him with a small flocke, and so with craftynesse to get him to the fattest place of the land, and to deale otherwys, then either his fathers or graundfathers did. For he shall destroy the thing, that they had robbed and spoyled, yea, and all the substance, ymagining thoughtes agaynst the strong holdes, and that for a time. His power and heart shall be slered by with a great armie agaynst the king of the south, where throught the kinge of the south shall be moured then vnto battell, with a greate and mightie hoste also. Neuertheless, he shall not be able to stand, for they shall conspire against him. Yea, they that eat of his meat shall hurt him, so that his hooft shall fall, and manye be slayne.

downe. These two kinges shall be minded to do mischefe, and talk of discrepte at one table: but they shall not prosper, for wyse & the ende shall not come yet, vnto the time appointed.

Amos. 5. a. Then shall he go home agayne into his owne lande with great good, and set his heart agaynst the holpe couenant, he shall be busy agaynst it, and then returne home. At the same time appointed he shall come agayn, and go toward the south. So shall it happen otherwise then at the firste, yet once

Ps. 24. d. agayne. And why? the shippes with Italians shall come vpon him, that he may be smitten and turne agayn, that he may take indignation agaynst the covenant of holines, to medle against it. Yea, he shall turne him, and drawe such vnto him, as leaue the holy couenant. He shall sette mightye men to vnhallowe the sanctuary of strength, to put downe the dayly offeringe, and to set vp the abhominable defoliation. And such as breake the covenant shall be flatter with fayre words. But the people that will knowe their God, shall haue the ouerhand and prosper. Those also that haue vnderstanding among the people shall ensurme the multitude, and for a longe season, they shall be persecuted with sword, with fire, with captiuitie, and with the taking away of their goodes. Howe whe they fall, they shall be set vp with a litle helpe, but many shall cleaue vnto them faynedly. Yea, some of those which haue vnderstanding shall be persecuted also, that they maye be tryed, purified and clenfed, till the tyme be out: for there is yet another time appointed. The kinge shall doo what

Eccl. 2. a. him list, he shall exalt and magnifye him self agaynst al, that is God. Yea he shall speake maruelous thinges against the God of all goddes, wherein he shall prosper so long til the wrath be fulfilled, for the conclusion is deuised alreadye. He shall not regarde the God of his fathers, but his lust shall be vpon women. Yea, he shall not care for any God, for he shall magnifye himselfe alone all. In his place shall hee worship the mighty stoute God, and the God who his fathers knew not, shall he honour with gold and siluer, with precious stones and pleasant Jewels. Thus shall he do, throughe his stronge fenced places, settinge by his strange god, whom he confesseth, and encreasing his glozre. Suche as will receaue him, and take him for God, he shall geue the great worship and power, yea, and make them lordes of the multitude, and geue them the lande with rewardes. In the latter tyme shall the Kinge of the south stryue with him, and the kinge of the north in like maner shall come against him with charrets, hoysmen, and with a great nauye of ships. He shall come into the landes, destroye go throughe: he shall enter also into the fayre pleasant land. Many cities and countreys shall decay. except Edom, Moab, and the beste of the children of Ammon, which shall escape from his hande. He shall stretch forth his hands vpon the countreys, and the land of Egypt shall not escape him. For throughe his goinge in, he shall haue dominion ouer the treasures of siluer and golde, and ouer all the precious Jewels of Egypt, Libia, and Ethiopia. He shall thelesse, the tydinges out of the East and the North shall trouble him, for the which cause he shall go forth to destroye and rote out a great multitude. The tentes of his palace shall be pitched betwixt the two seas, vpon the hill of the noble sanctuary, for he shall com to his death, and then shall no man helpe him.

The booke of the Prophce of Oseas.

The first Chapter.

This is the worde of the Lord, that came vnto Oseas, the son of Beerī. in the daies of Oseas, Joathan, Ahaz and Iezekias kings of Iuda, and in the tyme of Jeroboam the sonne of Joas king of Israel. Firste, when the Lord spake vnto Oseas, he sayd vnto him: • Go thy way, take an harlot to thy wife, and gette children by her: for the land hath committed great whoredome against the Lord. So he went, and toke Gomer the daughter of Deblaim, whiche conceived and brought forth a sonne. And the Lord sayde vnto him: call his name Israel, for • I will shortlye auenge the blud of • Israel vpon the house of Iehu, and will bring the kingdome of the house of Israel to an end. The will I breake the bowe of Israel, in the balley of Israel. She conceived yet agayne, and bare a daughter. And he sayde vnto him: Call her name Loruhamah (that is, not obtaining mercy) for I will haue no pitie vpon the house of Israel, but forget them, and put them cleane out of remembraunce.
• Neuertheles, I will haue mercy vpon the house of Iuda, and will saue theym, euen through the Lord they God. But I will not deliuer theym through any bow, sword, battell, horses, or horsemen. Now when she had weined Loruhamah, she conceived a-gayne, and bare a son. Then sayde he: call his name Loany. For whye, ye are not my people, therefore will not I be your God. And though the nu-ber of the children of Israel be as the sande of the sea, which can neyther be measured nor tolde: yet in the place where it is sayd vnto the, • ye be not my people: euen there shall it be thus reported of theym, • they be the chilben of the lining God. • Then shall the children of Iuda, and the children of Israel be gathered together again, and chose them selues one head, & then depart out of the land, for great shall be the day of Israel.

Tell your brethren, that they are my people, and your sisters, that they have obtained mercy. As for your mother, ye shall chide with her, & reprove her: • for she is not my wife, neither am I her husband, onlesse she put away her whoredome out of my sight, and her aduoutrie from her beastes. If no, I shall strippe her naked, and sette her • euen as she came into the worlde: yea, I shall laye her wast, and make her like a wilderness, and slea her for thirst. I shall haue no pittie also vpon her children, • for they be the children of fornication. Their mother hath broken her wedlock, and she that bare them • is come to confusion. For she sayd: I wil go after my louers, that geue me my water & my bread, my wool and flaxe, my oyle and my drinke. But I will hedge the way with thornes, and stoppe it, that she shall not fynd her foote steps: and though she runne after her louers, yet shall she not get them, she shall seeke them, but not finde them. • Then shall she say: wel, I wil go turne againe to my first husband, for at that time was I better at ease, then nowe. But this would she not know, where as I yet gaue her coyne, wyne, oyle, spicer, and golde, • whiche she hath hanged vpon Baal. wherfoze, now will I go take my coyne and wyne again in their session, and sette agayne my wool and my flaxe, whiche I gaue her, to couer her shame. • And nowe will I discouer her foolishnes, euen in the sight of her louers, and no man shall deliuer her out of my handes. Whozouer I will take away all her myrrhe, • her holpe dayes, her newe moones, her Sabbothes, and all her solemne feastes. I will destroy her vineyardes, and fig-trees, though she sayth: lo, here are my rewardes, that my louers haue geuen me. I will make it a wood, and wilde beastes shall cate it vp. I will punish her also for the dates of Baal, wherin she censed him, decking him with her rare ringes and cheynes whiche she solowd her louers, & forgate me, saith & Lord. wherfoze behold I will cal her again, bying her into a wilderness, and speke frendly vnto her: there will I geue her her vineyardes again, yea, and the • valley of Achor also, to shewe her hope & comfort. Then shall she syng there, • as in the time of her youth, and • like as the day when she came out of the land of Egypt. Then (sayth the Lord) she shall saye vnto me, O my husbande, and shall call me no more Baal: for I will take away those names of Baal from her mouth yea, she shall neuer remember theyr names anye more. • Then will I make a conenant with them, with the wilde beastes, with the foules of the ayre, & with euery thinge that crepeth vpon the earth. • As for bowe, sword and battell. I will destroy such out of the lande, and will make them to slepe safely. • Thus will I marry thee vnto mine owne selfe for euermore: yea, euen to my selfe will I marry thee in righteousnesse, in equitie, in louinge kindnes and mercy. In sayth also wil I marry thee vnto my selfe, and thou shalt know the Lord. At the same time will I shewe my selfe frendly & gracious vnto the heuens, saith the Lord, and the heuens shall helpe the earth, & the earth shall helpe the coyn, wyne and oyle, & they shall helpe Israel. • I will sowe the vpon earth, for a seede of mine owne selfe, and will haue mercy vpon her, that was without mercy. And to them whiche were not my people, I will saye: thou art my people, and he shall saye: thou art my God.

Then sayd the Lord to me: • Go yet thy way, and wowe an aduoutrous woman, whom thy neighbour loneth, as the Lord doeth the children of Israel: howe be it, they haue respecte to strange goddesses, • and loue the wine cannes.

So I gather for .xv. silverlinges, and for an homer and an halfe of barley, and sayd vnto her: Thou shalt abide with me a longe season, but see that thou playest not the harlot, and looke thou medle with none other man, and then
2. pa. 15c will I kepe my selfe for thee. • Thus the childzen of Israel shall sit a great while without king or prince, without offeringe and aulter, withoute priest and reuelation. But afterward shall the childzen of Israel conuert and seeke the Lord their God, and • Dauid their king: and in the latter daies they shall worship the Lord, and his louing kindnes.

The .iiij. Chapter.
Hear the worde of the Lord, O ye childzen of Israel. For the Lord must punish them, that dwell in the lande. And whye? there is no trueth, there is no mercy, there is no knowledge of God in the land: but swearing, lying, manslaughter, these and aduourie, haue gotten the ouerhand, and one bloudgyltines foloweth another. Therefore shall the lande be in a miserable case, and all they that dwell therein, shall be rooted out. The beasts in the field, the fowles in the ayre, & the fishes in the sea, shall dye. Yet is ther none that wil chasten nor reprove another. • For thy people rebuketh the priests, whiche should reforme other men. • Therefore stum-wicked waies, and rewarde them according to their owne imaginations. • They shall eat, and not haue inough. • They haue bled whoredome, therefore shall they not prosper: and whye? they haue forsaken the Lord, and not regarded him. Whoredome, wine & drunkennes taketh the heart away. • Why people aske counsell at their stockes, their stasse must tell the. For an whorish minde hath disceined them, so that they commit fornication agaynst their god. • They make sacrifices vpon the hye mountaynes, & burne their incense vpon the hilles: yea, among the oaks, groues, and bushes, for there are good shadowes. Therefore your daughters are become harlottes, and your spones haue broken their wedlocke: I wil not punish your daughters for being defiled, and your bydes that became whoores: • seying the fathers themselves haue medled with harlottes, and offered with unthriftes: but the people that will not vnderstand must be punished. Though thou Israel art disposed to playe the harlot, yet shouldst not thou haue offended, O Iuda, thou shouldst not haue runne vnto Gilgal. nor haue gone vnto Bethauen, nor haue sworn, the Lord liueth. For Israel is gone backe lyke a wanton cowe. The Lord therefore shall make her feede, as the lambe that goeth astraye. And where as Ephraim is become partaker of Idols: wel, let him go, their drunkennes hath put them backe, and brought them to whoredome. Their rulers lone rewardes, bringe (saye they) to their owne shame. I wind shall take hold of their fethers, and they shall be confounded in their offerings.

The .v. Chapter.
O ye priests here this, take hede • O thou householde of Israel: gene eare • O thou kingly house for it were your part to see iudgement done, but you are become a snare vnto Mizpah, & a spred net vnto mount of Ephraim: they kill sacrifices by heapes, and turne far from the Lord, and I haue bene a rebaker of them all.

I know Ephraim well ynough, and Israel is not hid fro me: for Ephraim is now become an harlot, and Israel is defiled. They are not minded to turne vnto their God, for they haue an whorish heart, so that they canne not knowe the I D R D E. But Old. 7. d the pride of Israel will be rewarded him in his face, yea both Israel and Ephraim shall fall for their wickednesse, & Juda with them also. They Jer. 3. d shall come with their sheepe and bul-locks, to seke the lord, but they shall not finde him, for he is gone frome them. As for the Lord, they haue refused him, and brought by bastard children: a moneth therfore shall deuoure them with their portions. Blowe with the shalumes at Gibeon, & with the trompet in Ramah, cry out at Be-thanen vpon the one side of Ben Jamin. In the time of the plague shall Ephraim be layd wast, therfore did I faithfully warn the tribes of Israel.
Yet are the princes of Juda become like them: that remoue the land markes, therfore will I poure oute my wrath vpon them like water. Ephraim is oppressed, and can haue no right of the lawe: for why? they folowe the doctrins of f vngodly men. Therfore will I be vnto Ephraim as a mothe, and to the house of Juda as a caterpillar. When Ephraim saw his siknes, and Juda his disease, Ephraim went vnto Assur, and sent vnto kinge Iared, yet could not he helpe you, nor ease you of your paine. I am vnto Ephraim as a lyon, & as a lions whelpe to the house of Juda. When I will spoyle them, and go my waye. I will take them with me, and no man shall rescue them. I will go, and retourne to my place, till they knowledge that they haue sinned, and seke me.
E. vi. Chapter.
In their aduersitie they shall early seeke me, and saye: Come, lette vs turne agayne to the Lorde: for hee hath smitten vs, and he shall heale vs: he hath wounded vs, and hee shall binde vs by agayne: after two dayes shall he quicken vs, in the thirde daye he shall rayse vs by, so that we shall liue in his sight. Then shall we haue vnderstanding, and endeavour our selues to knowe the I D R D E. He shall go forth as the spring of the day, and comme vnto vs, as the evening and morning rayne vpon the earthe. O Ephraim, what shall I do vnto thee?

O Juda, howe shall I intreate thee? seeing your loue is lyke a morninge cloude, and like a dew that goth early away. Therfore haue I cut downe the Prophetes, and let them be slayne for my woordes sake: so that thy punishment shall come to light. For I haue pleasure in louing kindnesse, and not in offering: yea, in the knowledge of God, more then in burnt sacrifice. But euen like as Adam did, so haue they broken my couenant, and set me at naught. Gilad is a Citie of wicked dooers, of malicious people, and bludshedders. And as they are armed, wayt for him that passeth by the way, suche is the counsell of the pie-ties, which with one agreed counsell, murder cruelly such as kepe the way yea, they dare do all vnspcakable mischiefes. Horrible thinges haue I sene in the house of Israel, there playeth Ephraim the harlot, and Israel is despised: yea, and thou Juda keepest an harlotte for thy selfe, when I retourne the captiuitie of my people.

E. vii. Chapter.

Vhen I vndertake to make Israel whole, then the vngraciousnes of Ephraim, and the wickednes of Samaria commeth to light: then go they about with lies therfor the thefe robbeth within, and without the spyler destruction. They consider not in their herts, that I remember all their wickednesse. Nowe their own inuentions haue beset them.
Which I se wel ynough. They make the king and the princes, to haue ple-sure in their wickednes and lyes. All these burne in adnourtie, as it wer an ouen that the baker heateth, when he hath left kneading, till the dowgh be lenened. Eue so goth it this day with our kings & princes, for they begin to be be wood broken through wine: they vse familiaritie with such as disceane them. They with the imagination of their heart are like an ouen, their slepe is all the night like the sleepe of a baber: in the morning is he as hot as the flame of fyre, they are altogether as hote as an oue. They haue deuoured their owne iudges, all their Kinges are fallen, yet is there none of the that callet byon me. Therefore must Ephraim be mixt amonge the heathen.

Ephraim is become like a cake that no man turneth, strangers haue de-uoured his strength, yea he regardeth it not: he waxeth full of gras heares, yet will he not know it, and the pride of Israel is cast downe before their face, yet will they not turne to the Lorde their God, nor seeke him for all this. Ephraim is like a doue, that is begiled, and hath no bert: Now call they vpon the Egyptians, now goe they to the Assirians: but whyle they be going here and there, I will spread my net ouer them, and drawe theym downe as the fowles of the ayre, and according as they haue bene warned, so will I punishe them. Wo be vnto them, for they haue forsaken mee.
They must be destroyed, for they haue set me at naught. I am he that haue redemed them, and yet they dissemble with me. They call not vpon me with their hartes, but I see howlinge vpon their beddes. Whereas they come together, it is but for meate & drinke, and me will they not obeye. I haue caught them, and defended their arme, yet do they imagin mischef against me.
They turne theym selues, but not to the mooste hyest, and are become as a broken bowe. Their princes shall be slayne with the sword, for the malice of their tanges, suche scorners shall they haue in the land of Egypt.

The. viij. Chapter.

Set the horne to thy mouth, and blow: swifte (as an Eagle) shall the enemye come agaynst the house of the Lorde: for they haue broken my couenant, and transgressed my lawe. Israel should haue said unto me, thou art my God, we know the: but he hath refused the thing that is good, therefore shall the enemye fo-lowe vpon him. They haue orde-ned kinges, but not through me: they haue made princes, and I muste not knowe of it. Of theyr siluer and golde haue they made theym ymages, to bring them selues to destruction.

Thy calfe, O Samaria, shall be taken away, for my wrathfull indignation is gone forth agaynst thee. How long will it be, or they can be censed.
For the calfe came from Israel, the workman made it, therefore can it be no God, but euen in peeces shall the calfe of Samaria be broken. They haue sowne wind, therefore shall they reape a storme. Their seede shall beare no coine, there shall no meele be made of their increase: though they reape, yet shall strangers deuoure it. Israel shall perishe, the Gentiles shall intreate him as a foule vessel. Hence they went vp to the Assirians, they are become like a wilderness in the desert. Ephraim geueth rewardes to get louers, and though they hye them among the heathen, yet now we wil gather them vp. They shall begin to be wried with the burthen of kinges and princes. Ephraim hath made many aultars to do wickednes, his aulters (I saye) he hadde to his synne.
Though I shewe them my lawe neuer so much, they count it but strange doctrine. Where as they do sacrifice, offering the fleshe and eatinge it: the Lorde will haue no plesure therein: but will remember their wickednes, and punishe their sinnes. Israel tour-neth agayne into Egypte, they haue forgotten him that made them, they build saye palaces, and Iuda maketh many stronge Cities, therefore will I sende a fyre into their cities, and it shall consume their palaces.

rael, make no boasting ouer things among the Assirians. They poure out no wine for a drinkeoffring vnto the Lord, neither geue they him their saine offerings, but they be vnto them as mourners meates, wherin all they that eat them are defiled. For the bread that they haue such lust vnto, shall not come into the house of the Lord. What will ye do then in the solemne days, & in the feast of the Lord?

No, they shall get them awaye for the destruction. Egypt shall receyue them,

B Noph shall burie them. The nettles shall ouergrowe their pleasant goods, burres shall be in their tabernacles.
Wepe sure (O Israel) the time of visitation is come, the daies of recompensing are at hand. And then shall Israel knowe, that they were deceaued by a prophete foolish, mad, and in a fren-sie, for the multitude of thine iniquitie, god shall multiply enemies against thee. Ephraim hath made him selfe a watchman of my God, a prophet, that is become a snare to do hurte in euery crete, and abomination in the house of his God. They be gone to farre, and haue destroyed them selues, lyke begette, conceaue, nor beare children.

And though they brynge vp anye, yet will I make them childlesse amonge men. Yea, wo shall come to theyr, geue them an vnfruitful wombe and dry brestes. All their wickednesses is done at • Gilgall, there do I abhorre them. For the vngraciousnes of their owne inuentions, I will drue them out of my house. I will loue them no more, for all their princes are vnfaithfull. Ephraim is heuen downe, their rote is dried vp, so that they shal bryng no more fruite, yea, and thoughte they bryng forth any, yet will I slea euen the beste beloued fruite of their body.

My God shall caste them awaye, for they haue not ben obedient vnto him: therfore shall they go astraye amonge the heathen.

The .x. Chapter.

I Israel was a goodly vine, but he hath broughte forth vnprofitable fruite: yea, the more fruite he had, the moe aulcers he made, the more good I did to their land, the more frendship shewed they to theyr ymages. They heartes is deuided, therfore will they be destroyed. The Lord shall breake downe their ymages, he shall destroy their aulcers. Then shall they say: we haue no kinge, for why? we haue not scared the lord. And what shal then king do vnto vs. They comē together & sweare vaine othes, they be confederate together, therfore groweth their punishment, as the wedes in the sozo-wes of the land. They that dwell in Samaria haue worshipped the calfe of Bethauen: therfore shall the people mourne ouer them. Yea, and the priestes also, that in their welthines re-ioyled with them: and why? it shall passe away fro them. I shalbe brought to the Assirian: for a present vnto king Zarub. Ephraim shall receaue full punishment. Israel shalbe confounded for his owne imaginations. Samaria with his king shall vanishe away as the scumme in the water. The hye palaces of Iuen, where Israel do sinne, shalbe cast downe: thistles and thornes shal growe vpon their aulcers.

Exod. 26

He found him at Bethel, and there he talked with vs. Yea, the Lord God of hostes, euen the Lord him selfe remembred him. The turne to thy God kepe mercye and equitie, and hope still in thy God. But thou arte lyke the marchant that hath a false weight in his hande, he hath a pleasure to occupy extortion. Ephraim thinketh thus. • Cusse, I am riche, I haue good ynough, in all my workes shall not one fault be founde that I haue offended. Yet am I the Lord thy God, euen as when I brought thee out of the land of Egypt, and sette thee in thy tentes, and as in the hye feast dayes. I haue spoken throughe the Prophetes, and shewed diuers visions, and declared my self by the ministracion of the prophetes. But at Galaad is the abhominacion, they are fallen to banitie. At Gilgal they haue slayne open: as many heapes of stones as they hadde in their lande forswes, so many altiers haue they made. • Jacob slid into the lande of Siria, and Israel serued for a wife, and for a wife he kepte shepe. By a prophet the Lord brought them out of Egypt, and by a prophet he preserued them. But Ephraim hath prouoked him to displeasure throughe his abhominacions, therfore shal his blud be poured vpon him self, and the Lord his God shal reward him of his blasphemies.

The. xliij. Chapter.

Vhen Ephraim spake, the he then trembled, and he was exalted among the Israelites, but he is gone backe to Babil. Therfore must he die. And now they sinne moze and moze: of their syluer they make them moulten ymages, after the ymaginations of their owne braynes, that is verpe pholis, and yet all is nothing but the worke of the craftsman. Not withstanding they preach of the same to such as there sacrificeth: who so will hysle the caines offereth perfectelpe. Therfore they shalbe as the morning clowde, and as the dewe that early passeth away, and like as dust that the wynde winde taketh awaye from the

sooze, and as smoke that goeth out of the chimney. I am the Lord God which brought thee out of the lande of Egypt, that thou shouldest knowe no God but me only, and that thou shouldest haue no sauour, but onely me. I toke diligent hede of thee in the wilderness, that day land. But when they were well fedde and had ynough, they waxed proude, and forgot me, therfore will I be vnto them as a lyon, and as a leoparde in the wyages, to the Assirians. I will come vpon them as a she beare, that is robbed of her whelpes, and I will breake the stubberne heart of theirs. There will I deuoure them as a lyon: yea, the wilde beastes shal teare them. • O Israel, thine iniquitie hath destroyed thee, but in me onely is thy helpe. Where are thy kinges now, that shoulde helpe thee in all thy Cities? Yea, and thy Iudges of whom thou saydest. geue me a kinge and princes (wel) I gaue thee a king in my wyathe, and in my displeasure wil I take him from thee again. The wickednes of Ephraim is bound together, and his sinne lieth hid. Therfore shal forswes come vpon him, as vpon a woman that trauspleth. An vndiscrete son is he, for he considereth not, that he shoulde not haue bene able to haue endured in the tyme of his byrth, had not I defended him fro the graue, and deliuered him from death. • O death, I wil be thy death: O hel, I will be thy stinge, yet can I see no consozt, for when he is now the goodliest among the brethren, the east wind (euen the wynde of the Lord) shal come downe from the wilderness, and dye by his condites, and drinke by his welles: he shal spoyle the treasure of all pleasante vessels. As for Samaria, they shalbe made wast, and why: they are disobedient vnto their God. They shal perishe with the sword, their children shalbe slayne, and their women great with child shalbe ript by.

As for the workes of our handes, we will nomore call vpon them: For it is thou that art our God, thou thyselfe euer mercy vnto the fatherlesse. O (yf they would do this) I should heale their sores: yea, with all my heart would I loue them, so that my wrath should cleane be turned away from the. Yea, I would be vnto Israel as the dewe, and he should growe as the liue, and his roote should breake out as Libanus. His branches should spread out abroade, and be as fayre as the Oliue tree, and smel as Libanus. They that dwell vnder his shadowe, should come againe, and grow vp as the corne, and flourish as the vine. We should haue as good a name as the wine of Libanus. O Ephraim what haue I to do with ydols any more? I will graciously heare him, and leade him forth. I will be vnto thee as a greene figge tree: vpon me shalt thou find thy fruit. Who so is wyle, shall vnderstande this, and he that is right instruct will regard it. For the wates of the Lord are righteous, suche as be godly will walke in them. As for the wicked, they will stumble therein.

The end of the prophecie of Oseas.

The booke of Joel the Prophet.

The first Chapter.

This is the worde of the Lord that came vnto Joel the sonne of Phatuel. Heare, O ye elders, ponder this well, O ye that dwell in the lande, yf ever there hapened suche a thing in your dayes, or in the days of your fathers. Tell your children of it, and let them shewe it vnto their children, and so they to certifye their posteritie thereof. Looke what the caterpillar hath lefte, that hath the greshopper eaten vppon, what the greshopper lefte, that hath the locust eatē vp, and what the locust hath lefte, that hath the blasting winde consumed. Wake vp ye dronkards, & wepe, mourne all ye wine suppers, because of your sweete wine, for it shall be taken awaye from your mouth. Yea, a myghtie and an innumerable people shall come vp into my land, these haue teeth like the teeth of lions, & chaw bones like the lionesses. They shall make my vineyard waste, they shall pill of the barches of my figgetrees, strippe them bare, caste them awaye, and make the branches white. Make thy mone as a virgin doeth, that gyrdeth her selfe with sacke, because of her bydegroom. For the wine and drinke offering shall be taken awaye from the house of the Lord, and the priests the Lords ministers shall mourne. The field shall be wasted, the land shall be in a miserable case, for the corne shall be destroyed, the sweete wyne shall come to confusion, and the oyle bitterly desolate. The husbandmen and the wyne gardeners, shall looke pitously and make lamentation, for the wheate wine & barley, and because the harvest vpon the feild is so cleane destroyed. The grape gatherers shall make gret mone when the vineyard and figgetrees be so bitterly wasted: yea al the pomgranats palme trees, appletrees, and the other trees of the feild shall wither away. Thus the mery cheare of the children of men shall come to confusion. Gird you, and make your mone, O ye priestes, mourne ye ministers of the altar: go your way in, and slepe in sackcloth, O ye officers of my God, for the meat and drinke offering shall be taken awaye fro the house of your God. Proclaime a fasting, call the congregation, gather the elders, and all the inhabitors of the land together into the house of the Lord your God, and cry vnto the Lord: alas, alas for this day. And whype the daye of the Lord is at hande, and cometh as a destroyer from the almighty. Shall not the meates be taken awaye before oure eyes, the mirth also and ioye from the house of our God? The sede shall perishe in the grounde, the Garners shall lye wast, the flookes shalbe broken downe, for the corne shalbe destroyed. What a sighing make the kine: the bullockes are in very euill liking, because they haue no pasture, and the shepe are famished away. O Lord, to thee will I cry, for the fire hath consumed the goodly pastures of the wilderness, and the flame hath bent vp al the trees of the field. Yea, the wilde beastes cry also vnto thee, for the water riuers are dyed vp, and the fyre hath consumed the pastures of the wilderness.

Blowe out the trumpet in Zion, and crye vpon my holy hill that all suche as dwell in the lande, maye tremble at it: for the daye of the Lord cometh, and is harde at hande: a darke day, a gloming daye, a cloudye daye, yea, a stormy day, like as the morning spreadeth out vpon the hillies. Namelye, a great and mightye people, such as haue not ben since the beginning, neyther shall bee after them for euer moze. Before him shalbe a consuming fyre, and behinde him a burning flame. The lande shall be as a garden of pleasure before him, but behind him shal it be a very waste wilderness, and there is no man that shal escape him: They are to loke vpon like barbed horses, and runne like hoysmen. They skippe vp vpon the hillies as it were the sound of charettes, as the flame of fyre that consumeth the straws, and as a mightye people readye to the battayle. The folke shal be afrayde of him, all faces shalbe as blacke as a pot: These shal runne like grauntes, and leape ouer the walles lyke men of warre. Every manne in his going shal kepe his aray, and not go oute of his path. There shall not one dyue another, but eche shal kepe his owne waye. They shal breake in at the windowes, and not be hurte: They shal come into the citie, and run vpon the walles. They shal climbe vp vpon the houses, and slippe in at the windowes like a thefe. The erth shal quake before him, yea the heuens shalbe moued. The Sunne and the Moone shalbe darkened, and the starres shal withdrawe their shine. The Lord shall shew his voyce before his holste, for his host is great, strong and mighty to fulfil his commaundement. This is that great and maruailous fearful daye of the Lord. And who is able to abyde it? Now therfore say eth the Lord. Turne you vnto mee with all your heartes, with fasting, sweepinge and mourning, rente your heartes and not your clothes. Turne you vnto the lord your god, for he is gracious and merciful, long suffering, and of great compassion, and ready to pardon wickednes. Then (no doubt) he also shal turne, and forgene, and after his chastening, he shal let your increase remayne, for meate and drinke: offerings vnto the Lord your God. Blowe oute with the trompette in Zion, proclaime a fasting, cal the congregation, and gather the people together, warne the congregation, gather the elders, bring the childeyn and sucklinges together. Let the bzidegroome go forth of his chamber, and the birde out of her closet. Let the prestes serue the Lord betwixt the porche and the aultar, weping and saying: be fauorable, O Lord, be fauorable vnto thy people, lette not thine heritage be brought to suche confusion, leaste the Heathen be lordes thereof. Wherefore should they saye among the Heathen, where is nowe they? God: The Lord shal the Lord be gelous ouer his land, & spare his people: yea the Lord shall answer and say vnto his people: Behold, I wil sed you corne, wine & oyle.

so that ye shall haue plenty of them: and I will no more greeue you ouer to be a reppose amonge the heathen. I will gaue, as for him of the north, I shall dreyne him farre from you, and shutte him out into a drye and wast land, his face toward the east sea, and his hinder partes toward the vtmoste sea. The stinke of him shal go by, and his filthy corruption shall fall vpon him selfe, because he hath dealt so proudly. Feare not (O land), but be glad, and reioyce, for the Lord will do greates things. Be not ye asrayde, neither (O ye beasts of the field) for the pastures shalbe greene, and the trees shall beare their fruite, the figtrees and vineyardes shall geue their encrease. Be glad then (O ye children of Sion) and reioyce in the Lord your God, for he hath geuen you a teacher of righteousness, and he it is that shall sende you downe shoures of rayne, early & late in the firste moneth, so that the garners shalbe full of corne, and the presses plenteous in wine and oyle. And as for the eares that the grethopper, locust blasting, and caterpillar (my gret host, which I sent among you) haue eaten by, I shall restore them to you agayne, so that ye shall haue ynough to eate, and be satisfied, and praise the name of the Lord your God, that so maruailously hath deale with you. And my people shall neuer be confounded any more. Ye shall well knowe, that I am in the myddest of Israel, and that I am the Lord your God, yea, and that there is none other, and my people shall no more be brought to confusion. After this, will I powze out my spirite vpon all flesh, and your sonnes and your daughters shall propheticke, youre olde men shall dreame dreames, and your yonge men shal see visions, yea, in those dayes I will poure out my spirite vpon seruantes and maydens. I will shew wonders in heauen aboue, and tokens in the earth beneath, bloud and fyre, and the vapoure of smoke. The sunne shal be turned into darknes, and the moone into bloud, before the great and notable daye of the Lord come. And the time shal come, that whosoener calleth on the name of the Lord shall be saued, for vpon the mount Sion and at Jerusalem, ther shalbe a saluation, like as the Lord hath promised: yea, and among the other remnant, who the Lord shall call.

For take heede, in those dayes and at the same time, when I turne agayne the captiuitie of Iuda and Jerusalem: I shall gather all the people together, & bring them in the balley of Josaphat, and there will I reason with them, because of my people and heritage of Israel, whom they haue scattered about in the nations, and parted my land: yea, they haue caste lottes for my people, the yonge men haue they set in the border house, and solde the damseles for wine, that they might haue to drinke. Thou Tirus and Sidon, and all ye borders of the Philistines: what haue ye to do with me? will ye defye me? well, yf ye will nedes defye me, I will recompence you, euen vpon your heade, and that right woorthelpe: for ye haue taken away my siluer and golde, my sayre and goodly Jewels, & brought them into your goddes houses. The children also of Iuda and Jerusalem haue ye sold vnto the Grekes, that ye might bring them farre from the borders of their owne countries. Behold therfore, I will rayse them out of the place, where ye haue sold them, and will rewarde you eue vpon your heade. Your sonnes and your daughters will I sell through the handes of the children of Iuda, and so they shall geue them forth to sell, vnto the of Saba, a people of a farre countrey, for the Lord him selfe hath sayde it. Crye out these thinges amonge the Gentiles, proclaim warre, wake vpon the ghautes, let them drawe nye, let them come by all the iust warreours of them. sende a fyre into the walles of Tyre, that shall consume her palaces. Thus sayth the Lorde: For thye and foure wickedneses of Edom, I will not spare him, because he perlecuted his brother with the swearde, destroyed his mothers wombe, bare hatred beye longe, and so kept indignation alway by him. Therefore will I sende a fyre into Cheman, whiche shall deuoure the palaces of Bozra. Thus sayth the Lorde: For thye and foure wickedneses of the children of Ammon, I will not spare them: because they ript by the women great with child in Galaad, to make the borders of their lands the wider. Therefore will I kyndle a fyre in the walles of Rabbath, that shall consume her palaces: with a greete crye in the daye of battayle, in tempest and in the daye of storme, so that their king shall go into captiuitie, he and his princes together, sayth the Lorde.

Esa. 16 a

Thus sayth the Lorde: For thye and foure of the wickedneses of Moab, I will not spare him, because he bzent the bones of the king of Edom to ashes. Therefore will I sende a fyre into Moab, which shall consume the palaces of Carioth, so that Moab shall peryshe with noyse, and the sounde of a shawme. I will roote out the iudge from among them, and slea all his princes with him, sayth the Lorde. Thus sayth the Lorde:

For thye and foure wickedneses of Juda, I will not spare him, because he hath caste asyde the lawe of the Lorde, and not kept his commaundementes: for why? they woulde nedes be disceaued with the eyes that their forefathers folowed. Therefore will I sende a fyre into Juda, which shall consume the palaces of Ierusalem. for shoes. They treade bypon poore mens heades in the duste of the earth, and crooke the wayes of the meekes.

The sonne and the father go to the harlot, to dishonoure my holy name, they lye besyde every aulter vpon clothes taken to pledge, and in the house of their goddes, they drinke the wyne of the oppressed. Yet destroyed I the Amozites befoze them, that was as hye as the Cedre trees, and as stronge as the okes: notwithstanding I destroyed his fruite from aboute, and his roote from vnder. Againe, I brought you out of the lande of Egypt, and led you fortye yeaeres throughe the wilderness, that ye might haue the Amorites landes in possession. I raised by prophetes amonge your children, and abstayners from amonge your yonge men. Is it not so, O ye children of Israel, sayth the Lorde? But ye gaue the abstayners wyne to drinke: yea, ye commaunded the prophetes, saying: Prophecie not. Behold, I will crash you in sunder, lyke as a wayne crasheth, that is ful of sheaues, so that the swyfte shall not escape, neyther the stronge be able to do anye thing: no the giant shall not saue his owne life. The archer shall not abyde, and the swifte of foote shall not escape. The horseman shall not saue his life, and he that is as manly of stomake as a giant, shall in that day be sayne to runne his way naked, sayth the Lorde.

Ch. iii. Chapter.

Hear, what the Lorde speaketh vnto you (O ye children of Israel) namely, vnto all the trybes, whom I brought out of Egypt, and sayde: you onely haue I accepted from all the generations of the earth: therefore will I visit you in all your wickedneses. May twayne walke together, excepte they bee agreed amonge them selues? Doeth a Lyon roare in the woode, excepte he haue a praye? Or cryeth a Lions whelp out of his denne, excepte he haue gotten some thinge? Doeth a birde fall in a snare bypon the earth where no fouler is? Taketh a man his snare by from the ground, afore he catch somwhat. Cry they out Iair, with the trumpet in the Citie, and the people not afrayde? Cometh there any plague in the Citie without it be the Lordes doinge? Howe doeth the Lord God no manner of thing, but he telleth his secrete befoze unto his seruantes the prophetes. When a Lion roareth, who will not be afrayde? Seeing then that the Lord God him selfe speaketh, whoe will not prophesye? Preache in the palaces of Asdod, and in the palaces of the land of Egypt, & saye: gather you together vppon the mountaynes of Samaria, so shall ye see great murther and violent oppression amonge them: for why? they regard not the thing that is right sayeth the Lord: they gather together euell gotten goodes, and laye by robbery in their houses. Therefore, thus sayth the Lord God: This land shall be troubled and besieged round about, the strength shall be pluckt from ther, and the palaces robbed. Thus sayeth the Lord, like as an heardman taketh two legges of a peece of an eare out of the lions mouth: Euen so the childre of Israel (that dwel in Samaria) hauing their couches in the corner, their beds at Damascus, shall be plucked awaye. • Heare and beare record in the house of Jacob (saith the Lord God of hosts) that when I beginne to visite the wickednes of Israel, I will visite the altars at Bethel also, so that the hornes of the altar shall be broken off, and fall to the ground. As for the winter house and sommer house, I will smite them downe, and the houses of quoy, yea and many other houses shall perish, and be destroyed, sayth the Lord.

Hearc this worde ye fat kine, that be vpon the hill of Samaria, ye that do poore menne wrong, and oppresse the nedye, ye that say to your lordes, bringe hit her, let vs drinke. Therefore, the Lord hath sworn by his holynesse. The dayes shall come vpon you, that the enemies shall carry you awaye in shippes, and your possessions shall be carried awaye by your fishers hookes. Yet shall get you out at the gappes one after another, euen the kinges palace shall you overthrowe, to make a way to escape, sayeth the Lord. Ye came to Bethel for to worke vnglaciousnes, and haue increased your sinnes at Gilgall: yee broughte your sacrifices in the morning, and your tithes vnto the thirde day. Ye made a thankoffring of leuen ye promised frewill offerings, and proclaimed them. Suche lust had ye, O ye childzen of Israel, sayth the Lord God. Therefore haue I genen you pble teeth in all your cities, and scarcenes of breade in all your palaces, yet will ye not turne vnto me, sayeth the Lord. When there were but thre monethes vnto the harvest, I withheld the rayne from you: yea, I rayned downe one citie, and not vppon another: one peece of grounde was mofstured with rayne, and the grounde that I rayned not vpon, was dry. Wherefore two, yea, thre cities came vnto one to drinke water, but they were not satisfied, yet will ye not turne vnto me, saith the Lord. I haue smitten you with drought and blastinge, and looke howe manye orchardes, vineyardes, figtrees and oliuetrees ye hadde, the caterpillar hath eaten them by: But yet will ye not tourne vnto me, sayeth the Lord. Pestilence haue I sente among you, as I did in Egypt: your younge men haue I slayne with the sword, and caused your horses to bee taken captiue: I made the stinking sauour of your tentes to come by into your nostrils, Yet will ye not tourne vnto me sayeth the Lord. Some of you haue I onerthrowen, • As I ouerthrowe Sodome and Gomorra, so that ye were as the brande plucked out of the fire: Yet will ye not turne vnto me, sayeth the Lord. Therefore, thus will I handle thee agayne, O Israel, yea euen thus will I handle thee. Make ther readye then to meeete thy God, O Israel. For loe, he maketh the mountayns, he ordaineth the winde, he sheweth man what he is about to do, he maketh & morninge the darkness, he treadeth vpon the hie places

Che. v. Chapter.

Hear this woꝛde, O ye house of Israel, and why? I muste make this mone for you.

The virgin Israel shall fall, and neuer rise vp againe, shee shall be caste downe vpon her owne ground, and no man shall heape her vp. For this saith the Lord God: Where as there dwelt a. M. in one Citie, there shalbe left scarce an hundred therein, and where there dwelte an hundred, ther shal scarce ten be left in the house of Israel.

Neuetheless thus saith the Lord vnto the house of Israel: Seke after me, and ye shall liue, but seke not after Bethell. Come not at Gilgail, and go not to Bersaba, for Gilgail shalbe caried away captiue, and Bethel shall come to naught. Secke the Lord, that ye may liue, least the house of Ioseph be brent with fire, and consumed, and lest ther be none to quench Bethel. Ye turne the law to woozwood, and cast downe righteousnesse vnto the ground. Ye forsake the lord, that maketh the .vij. starres and the Orions, that turneth the nighte into day, and of the day he maketh darknes.

If no (saith the Lord God, the God of hostes) there shalbe mourning in al stretes, yea thei shall say in euery streete: Alas; alas. They shal call the husbandman to lamentation, and such as can mourn, to mourninge. In all vineyardes there shalbe heuines, for I wil come among you, sayeth the Lord. Wo be vnto the that desire the day of the Lord. Wherefore would ye haue it? As for the day of the Lord, it shalbe darke & not clere. Yea, like as when a man runneth fro a Lyon, and a beare meteth with him: or when he cometh into the house, and leaneeth his hand vpon the wall, a serpent byteth him. Shall not the day of the Lord be dark, & not clere? shall it not be cloudy, and no shine in it? I hate & abhorre your holy daies, and where as ye cense me whenne ye come together, I will not accepte it. And though ye offer me burnt offerings and meate offerings, yet haue I no pleasure therein. As for your fatte thanke offerings, I will not looke vpon them. I way with that noyle of thy songs, I will not heare thy playes of Musike, but see that Equitie flowe as the water, and righteousnesse; as a mighty streame. O ye house of Israel, I gaue ye me offerings and sacrifices those forty yeres long in the wilderness: yet haue ye sette vppon Tabernacles to your Moloch, and ymagines of your Idoles, yea, and the statue of your God Remphs, figures, whiche ye made to woozship them. Therefore will I cause you to be carried awaye beyonde Damascus, sayeth the Lord, whose name is: The God of hostes.

The Lord God shewed me this vision, and beholde, there was a maunde with sommer fruite. And he sayd: Amos, what seest thou? I answered: A maunde with sommer fruite. Then sayd the Lord vnto me: The ende cometh vpon my people of Israell, I will nomoze ouersee them. In that daye shall the songes of the temple be turned into sorowe, sayeth the Lord God: many dead bodies shal lye in every place, and be caste forth Ela. 5. c secretly. Heare this, O ye that oppress the poore, and destroy the needy in the lande, sayinge: When will the newe moneth be gone, that we maye sell vitaille, and the Saboth, that we maye have scarcenes of coine to make the bussel lesse, and the sicke greater: we shall set by false weightes, that we may get the poore vnder vs, with their money, and the needye also for shoes: yea, lette vs sell the chaffe for coine. The Lord hath sworn against the pryde of Jacob, these wooches of theirs will I neuer forget. Shall not the land tremble, & all they that dwell therein, mourne for this? Shall not their destruction come vpon them like a water streame, and flowe ouer them as the floude of Egypt? At the same time (sayeth the Lord God) I shall cause the sunne to go downe at noone, and the lande to be darke in the cleare day. Your hye feastes will I turne to sorowe, and your songes to mourning: I will bringe sackcloth vpon all backs, and baldnesse vpon every heade: yea, suche a mourning will I sende them, as is made vpon an onely begotten sonne, and they shall haue a miserable end. Behold, the time cometh (sayeth the Lord God) that I shall sende an hunger into the earth, not the hunger of bread, nor the thirst of water, but an hunger to heare the word of the Lord, so that they shall go from the one sea to the other, yea from the north vnto the east, runninge about to seeke the word of the Lord, and shall not finde it. In that time shall the saye virgins, and the ponge men perishe for thirst: yea, euen they that swore in the execrable cark of Samaria, and saye, as truly as thy God liueth as Dan, and as true as thy God liueth at Bersaba. These shall fall, and neuer rise by agayne.

The. ix. Chapter.

I sawe the Lord standinge vpon the altar, and he saide, smite the doore cheeke, that the postes maye shake withall. For their conetousnes shall fall vpon all their heades, and their posteritie shalbe slaine with the swerd. They shall not flee awaye, there shall not one of them escape, nor bee deliuered. Though they were buried in the hell, my hand shal fetch them from thence, though they clyme by to heauen, yet shall I caste them downe, though then hide them selues vpon the toppe of Carmell, yet shall I seeke them oute, and bringe them from thence, though they clype downe fro my sight into the deepe of the sea, ¶ The woorde of the Lord cam vnto • Jonas the sonne of • Je-muthai, saying: • • Jeruple, and get thee to Nineue that • great city, & preache vnto the how that • their wickednes is come by before me. And Jonas made him ready to flee vnto Charris from the presence of the Lord, and gatte him downe to Toppa, where he founde a shippe ready for to go vnto Charris.

So he payde his fare, and wente aboard, that he might go with them vnto Charris, from the presence of the Lord. But the Lord hurled a great winde into the sea, and there was a mightie tempest in the sea, so that the shippe was in leopardsie of goyng in peeces. Then the mariners wer afraid and cryed euery man vnto his God: and the goodes that were in the ship, they cast into the sea, to lighten it of them. But Jonas gat him vnder the hatches, where he layed him downe and slombzed. So the mayster of the ship came to him and sayde vnto him why slombzest thou? Up, call vppon thy God: Yf God happily witt thinke vpo vs that we perishe not. And they sayde one to another: come let vs caste lottes, that we may knowe, for whose cause we are thus troubled. And so they cast lottes, and the lot fell vppon Jonas. Then sayd they vnto him: tel vs for whose cause are we thus troubled: what is thine occupatio: whēce comest thou, and whither goest thou? What countrey man arte thou, and of what nation? He answered them: I am an Ebrie, and I feare the Lord God of heauen, which made both the sea, and dry land. Then were the men exceedingly afrayde, and sayde vnto him: why diddest thou so? for (they knewe that he was fled from the presence of the Lord, because he had told them) and sayde mozeouer vnto him: what shall we do vnto thee, that the sea may cease from troubling vs: for the sea wrought and was troublous, he answered them: take me and caste me into the sea, so shall it let you be in rest, for I wote, it is for my sake, that this great tempest is come vpon you. Neuerthelesse, the men assayed with rowing, to bring the ship to land, but it wold not be, because the sea wrought so, and was so troublous against the. wherfore they cryed vnto the Lord, and sayd: O Lord, let vs not perishe for this mans death, neither laye thou innocent blood vnto our charge: for thou, O Lord, hast done euē as thy pleasure was. So they tooke Jonas, and caste him into the sea, and the sea leste raging. And the men feared the Lord exceedingly, doing sacrifices, and making bowes vnto the Lord.

The. ij. Chapter.

At the Lord prepared a great fish to swallowe vp Jonas. So was Jonas in the belly of the fish, thre dayes and thre nightes. And Jonas prayed vnto the Lord his God, out of the fishes belly, and said: In my trouble I called vnto the Lord, and he heard me, out of the belly of hel I cryed, and thou herdest my voyce. Thou haddest cast me downe in the middelt of the sea, and the flūd compassed me about, yea, all the waves and roules of water went ouer me, I thought that I had bene cast away out of thy sight. But I wil yet agayne lōke towarde thy holy temple. The waters compassed me, euen to the very soule, the depe lay about me, and the weedes were wrapt aboute mine heade. I went downe to the bottome of the hilles, and was barred in with earth for euer. But thou, O Lord my God, hast brought vp my lyfe agayne out of corruption. Whē my soul fainted within me, I thought vppon the Lord, and my prayer cam in vnto thee euen into thy holy temple. They that holde of vayne vanities, will forsake his mercy. But I will do thee sacrifice with the voyce of thanckesgiving, and will pay that I haue bowed: for why? saluation cometh of the Lord. And the Lord spake vnto the fish, and it cast out Jonas agayne vpon the dry lande.

The. iij. Chapter.

Then came the word of the Lord vnto Jonas agayne, sayinge: vp, and gette thee to Ninie that great Citie, and preache vnto the the preaching which I bad thee. So Jonas arose, and went to Ninie at the Lords commandement. Ninie was a great Citie vnto God, namely, of thre dayes iourney. And Jonas wente to, and entred into the Citie, euen a dayes iourney, and cried, saying: Here are yet fortye dayes, and then shal Ninie be ouerthrowē. And the people of Ninie beleued God, and proclaymed fastinge, and arayed them selues in sackcloth, as wel the great as the small of them. And the ybnges came vnto the kinge of Ninie, which which arose out of his seate, and did his apparel off, and put on sackcloth and sat him downe in ashes. And it was cried and commanded in Pinne, by the ancthoritie of the king and his Lordes, saying: • see that neyther man nor beast, oxe or shepe tak ought at all, and that they neyther feede nor drink water, but put on sackcloth both man and beast, and crye mightely vnto God. Yea, se that every man turne from his euil way, and from the wickednes, that he hath in hand. who can tell? God may turne, and repent and cease from his fierce wrath, that we perishe not. And when God sawe their woorkes howe they turned from theyr wicked wayes, he • repented on the euill, which he sayd he woulde do vnto them, and did it not.

Therefore Jonas was sore discontent and angry. And he prayed vnto the Lord, and sayd: O Lord, was not this my sayinge (I praye thee) when I was yet in my countrey: therfore I hated rather to flee vnto Charris, • for I know wel ynough that thou art a merciful God, full of compassion, long suffering, and of great kindnes, and repentest when thou shuldest take punishment. And nowe O Lord, take my life from me (I beseeche thee) for I had rather dye then liue. Then sayde the Lord: arte thou so angry? And Jonas gat him out of the cite, and sat downe on the eastside thereof, and there made him a booth, and sat vnder it in the shadow, till he might see what should chaunce vnto the cite. And the Lord God prepared a wild byne, which sprang vpon ouer Jonas, that he might haue shadowe aboue his heade, to deliuer him out of his payne. And Jonas was exceeding glad of the wild vine. But vpon the nexte morow agaynst the spring of the day, The Lord ordeined a worme, which smote the wilde vine, so that it withered away. And when the Sunne was vp, God prepared a seruente Eastwinde, and the Sunne beat ouer the head of Jonas, that he saynted agayne, and wisshed vnto his soule, that he might dye, and sayde: It is better for me to dye, then to liue. And God sayde vnto Jonas: Art thou so angry for the wild vine? And he said: yea, verie angry am I, euen vnto the deathe. And the Lord sayde: thou hast compassion vpon a wild vine, whereon thou bestowedst no labour, nor made it grow, which sprang vp in one night, and perished in another: And shoulde not I then haue compassion vpon Pinne that great Cite, wherein there are about an hundred and twenty thousand persons that know not their right hande from their left, besides much cattell and eight prynces vpon them: these shall subdue the lande of Assur with the swerd, and the landes of Myrror with their naked weapons. Thus shall he deliuer vs from the Assirian, when he commeth within our lande, and setteth his foote within our bozders. And the remnaunt of Jacob shal be among the multitude of people, as the dew of the Lord, and as the drops vpon f grass, that tarieth for no man and wapteth of no body. Yea, the re-sydue of Jacob shall be among the Gentils and the multitude of people, as the Lion among the beastes of the wood, and as the lions whelp among a flocke of shepe, which (when he goeth thowse) treadeth downe, teareth in pces, and there is no man that can helpe. Thine hand shalbe lift vp vpon thine enemies, and all thine aduersaries shall perishe. The time shall come also, sayth the Lord, that I will take thine horses from thee, and destroy thy charettes. I will breake downe the cities of the lande, and ouerthowse all thy strong holdes. All witchcraftes will I roote out of thine hande, there shall no mo south saynges be within thee. Thine Idols and thine Images, will I destroy out of thee, so that thou shalt nomoze bowe thy selfe vnto the workes of thine owne handes.

Thy groues will I plucke vp by the rootes, and breake downe the cities.
Thus will I be auenged also, vpon all the heathen that will not heare.

¶ The .vi. Chapter.

Herken nowe what the Lord sayth: Up, reproue the moun-taynes, and let the hilles heare thy voyce. I heare the punishment of the Lord, ye mountaynes, and ye mightie foundations of the earth: for the Lord will reproue his people, and reason with Israel. O my prople what haue I done vnto thee: or wherin haue I hurte thee: Geue me answere. Because I brought thee fro the lande of Egypt, and deliue-red thee out of the house of bondage: Because I made Moyses, Aaron
and

and Miriam to lead thee: Remember Ex. 22. (O my people) • What Balach the king of Moab had ymagined agaynst thee, and what answere that Balaam thim vnto Gilgal, that ye may know the louinge kyndnes of the Lorde.

What acceptable thinge shall I offer vnto the Lorde: shall I bowe my knee to the hye God: shall I come befoze him with bent offeringes, and with calues of a yere, olde: hath the Lorde a pleasure in many thousande rams: or innumerable streames of oyle: Or shall I gene my fyre bozne for mine offences, and the fruite of my body for the synne of my soule: I will shewe thee, O man, what is good, and what the Lorde requireth of thee. Namely, to do right, to haue pleasure in louing kindnes, to be lowely, and to walke with thy God. • The Lordes voyce cryeth vnto the citie, and the man that shalbe sated considereth thy name (O Lord.) Herken what is your rod, and heare him that warneth you. • Shalld sures, therefore will I make thee walk, and cause thy inhabitants to be abhorred, O my people: and thus shalt thou bear thine owne shame.

The vij. Chapter.

Vclo is mee, I am become as one that goeth a gleaning in the harvest. There are no mo gapes to eat, yet woulde I sayne (with all my heart) haue of the beste fruite. • There is not a godly vypon earthe, there is not one righteous among men. They labour all to shed bloud, and euery man hunteth his bother to death, yet they say they do wel, when they do euill. As the pyete will, so saith the iudge, that he may do him a pleasure againe. The great man speaketh what his heart desireth, and the hearers aloswe him. The beste of them is but as a thistle, and the most righteous of asen is but as a hyer in the hedge. But when the daye of thy preacher cometh, that thou shalt be dispyed, then shall they be wasted away. • Let no man beleue his frende, nor put his confidence in a brother.
Kepe the port of thy mouth from her that lieth in thy bosom, for the sonne shall putte his father to dishonour, the daughter shall ryle agaynst her mother, the daughter in lawe agaynst her mother in lawe: and a mans foes shalbe euen they of his owne household.
Neighbourlesse, I will looke vp vnto the Lord, I will patiently abide God my sauoure, my God shall heare me.
• O thou enemye of mine reioyce not at my fall, for I shall get vp agayne: and though I sytte in darknesse, yet the Lorde is my lychte. I will beare the punishment of the Lorde (for why? I haue offended him) till he se in iudgment vpon my cause, & see that I haue righte. He will bringe me forth to the lychte, and I shall see his righteousnes. Shee that is mine ene-mie shall lye vpon it and be confounded, which now sayth: • Where is the Lorde thy God: Whine eyes shall be-holde her, when shee shall be troden downe as the claye in the streets.
• The time will come that the gapes shalbe made vp, and the lawe shall go abrode, and at that time shal they come into thee from Iſtar vnto the ſtrong cities, and from the ſtrong cities vpon the river: from the one ſea to the other, from the one mountayne to the other: Not withſtandinge, the lande muſt be waiked, becauſe of them that dwell therein, and for the fruites of their owne ymaginations. Therefore ſide thy people with the rod, the ſtock of thine heritage which dwell deſolate in the wood, that they may be fed vpon the mount of Carmell, Baſan, and Gilead, as afore time. Exo. 13 I ſhew them, like Job. 39 as when they came oute of Egypte. Gen. 3 This ſhall the heathen ſee, and be ſhamed for all their power, ſo that they ſhall laye their hande vpon their mouth, and ſtop their eares. They ſhall likke the duſte like a ſerpent, and as the womes of the earth, that tremble in their holes, they ſhalbe afraid of the Lorde our God, and they ſhall feare thee. Where is there ſuche a God as thou: that pardonelt wickedneſſe, and forgoeſt the offences of the remnant of thine heritage? He keepeth not his wrath for ever, and why? his deſyre is to haue compaſſion: he ſhall turne agayne, and be mercifull to vs, he ſhall put downe our wickedneſſes and caſte all our ſinnes into the bottoſome of the ſea. Thou ſhalte hepe thy truth with Iacob, and thy mercy for Abraham, like as thou haſte ſwoyne vnto our fathers long ago.

The firſt Chapter.

This is the heape burden of Minie, which Nahum of Elchoſ did write as he ſawe it. The Lorde is a glorious God, and a taker of vengeance is the Lorde, & wrathfull. The Lorde taketh vengeance of his enemyes, and reſerueth diſpleaſure for his aduerſaries. The Lorde ſuffreth longe, he is of great power, and ſo innocent: that he leaueth no man faultleſſe before him. The Lorde goth forth in the tempeſt & ſtorme weether, the cloudes are the duſte of his ſeete, when he reynoueth the ſea, he dyeth it vp, and turneth all the ſloundes to drye lande: Baſan is deſolate, Carmell and the pleaſure of Abanias waſteth awaye. The mountaynes tremble for him, the hilles conſume. At the ſight of him, the earth quaketh, yea, the whole world, and all that dwell therein. Whomay endure beſore his wrath? Who is able to abide his grim diſpleaſure? His anger taketh on lyke fyre, and the harde rockes are clouen a ſunder beſore him. Full gracious is the Lorde and a ſtrong hold in the time of trouble, he knoweth them that put their truſt in him: when the ſoud runneth ouer, and deſtroieth the place, & when the darknes foloweth ſhill vpon his enemyes. What doo ye ymagine them agaynſte the Lorde on this manere? (Cuſhe when he hath once made an ende, there ſhal come nomore trouble) For like as the thornes that ſtype together, and as the drye ſtrawe, ſo ſhal the dyonkards be conſumed together, euen when they be full. There come out of thee ſuch as ymagin miſchiefe, and geue vngraceous counsell agaynſte the Lorde. Therefore thus ſayth the Lorde: Let them be as well prepared: yea, and as manye as they can, yet ſhall they be hewen doſone and paſſe awaye. And as for the, I wil bere thee, but not bitterly deſtroy thee. And now will I breake his rodde from thy backe, and burſte thy bonds in ſunder. But the Lorde hath geuen a comauendement concerning thee: that there ſhall come no more ſeede of thy name. He carued & caſten ymages will I roote oute of the houſe of thy God. Thy grane ſhall I prepare for thee, and thou ſhalt be confounded.

I stode vpon my wathe, and set me vpon my bulwarke, to looke and see what he woulde saye vnto me, and what aunswere I should geue him that reproveth mee. But the Lord aunswered me, and sayde: Write the vision playnely vpon thy tables, that whoso cometh by, maye rede it: • for the vision is yet far of for a time, but at the laste it shall come to passe and not fayle. • And thoughe he tarpe, yet waite thou for him, for in verie deede he will come, and not be slacke. Behold the vnrightheous thinketh him selfe in sauegarde, as in a stronge holde: • but the lust shall liue by his sapth. Like as the winde dyscureth the dyonhard, euen so the proud shall fayle and not endure. He openeth his desyre wyde vp as the hell, • and is as vnfatiable as death. All heathen gathereth he to him, and heapevnto him all people. But shall not all these take vp a prayerbe agaynst him, and mocke him with a byword, and saye: Wo vnto him that heapevnto by other mennes goodes: How long will he lode him selfe with thicke clope: How sodenly will they stand vp, that shall byte, and awake, that shall teare thee in peeces: yea thou shalt be their praye. • Being thou hast spoyled many heathen, therefore shall the remnant of the people spoyle thee: because of mens blud, and for the wrong done in the lande, and in the citie, and vnto all them that dwell therein. • Wo vnto him that couetously gathereth euill gotten goodes into his house, that he may set his nest on hye, to escape from the power of misfortune. Thou hast deuided the shame of thine own house for thou hast slayne to muche people, and haste wilfully offended, so that the very stones of the wal shall crye out of it, and the tymber that lieth betwixt the ioyntes of the building shall answer. • Wo vnto him that buildeth the towne with bloud, and mayntaineth the citie with vnrightheousnes. Shall not the Lord of hostes bring this to passe, that the labourers of the people shall be burnt with a great fire: and that the thinge where vpon the people haue swerted them selues, shall be loste: • For the earth shall be full of knowledge of the Lords hono, lyke as the waters that couer the sea. What helpe then will the ymage doe, whom the workman hath fashioned? The .iij. Chapter.

O Lord, when I heard speake of thee, I was afayde. The worke that thou hast taken in hande, shalte thou perfourme in his tyme, O Lord: and when thy tyme commeth, thou shalt declare it. In thy very wrath thou thinkest vpon mercy. God commeth from Cheman, and the holy one from the mount of Sabaran. Selah. His glorie couereth the heauens, and the earth is full of his prayle. His shine is as the sunne, and beames of light go out of his handes, there is his power hid. Destruction goeth before him, and a pestilent sickness goeth from his feete. • He stan-deth, and mensureth the earth. He looketh, and the people consume awaye, the mountaynes of the world fall downe to powder, and the hills are faine to bowe them selues, for his go-inges are euermlasting and sure. I saw that the pavilions of the Moorsians, and the tentes of the land of Arabian were rexed for werines. Walke thou not angrie, O Lord, in the waters: was not thy wrath in the shoudes, and thy displeasure in the Sea: Yea, when thou sattest vpon thine horse, and when thy charittes had the victoyre. Thou shewedst thy bowe openly, lyke as thou haddest promised with an oth. vnto the tribes. Selah Thou diddest deuide the waters of the earth. When the mountaynes saw thee, they were afayde, the water stream went away, the depe made a noyle at the lifting vp of thine hande.

The. Sunne and Moone remayned still in their habitation. Thine ar-rowes went out glisteringe, and thy speares as the shine of the lightning.

Thou trodest downe the lande in thine anger, and diddest breke the hethen in thy displeasure. Thou camest forth to helpe thy people, to help thine anointed. Thou smotest downe the head of the house of the yngodly, and discoueredst his foundations, euen vnto the necke of him. Selah. Thou diddest strike through with his scy-ter the heades of his playne people: which come as a stormy wind to scatter me abroad, and are glad when they may eat by the pooze secretly, Thou makest a way for thine hoyses in the sea, euen in the middes of great waters. When I heare this, my bodye is vexed, my lippes tremble at the voyce therof, my bones corrupt. I am afraid where I stand. O that I might rest in the daye of trouble, that I might go by vnto our people, which are already prepared. For the figtrees shall not be grene, and the bynes shall beare no fruite. The labour of the Oliue shall be but lost, and the land shall bring no corne: the shepe shall be taken out of the fold, and there shall be no cattell in the stables. But as for me, I will be glad in the Lord, and will reioyce in God my Sautour. • The Lord God Psal. 124.

E Amin our selues, and search I thou nation, that hast no desire to the lawe, of the thing go forth that God hath concluded, and of the time come wherein man shall passe away as the duste: of the fearsfull wrath of the Lord come vpon you, yea, of the daye of the Lords displeasure come vpon you. Seke the Lord all ye meke hearted vpon earth: ye that wooke after his iudgements, seeke righteousness, • seeke lowynesse, that ye may be defended in the wrathfull daye of the Lord: For Gaza shall be destroyed, and Ascalon shalbe layde waste. They shall caste out blood at the none day, & Accaron shalbe pluckt by by the rootes. Woe vnto you that dwell vpon the sea coaste yee murderous people, the woode of the Lord shal come vpon you. • Canaan thou lande of the Philistines, I will destroye thee, so that there shall no man dwell in thee any moze, and as for the sea coaste, it shalbe herdmennes cogges and sheepefoldes, yea, it shall be a position for suche as remayne of the house of Iuda, to feede ther vpon. In the houses of Ascalon shall they rest towarde night: for the Lord they God shal visite them, and turne away their captiuitie. • I haue heard the despite of Moab, & the blasphemys of the children of Ammon, how they haue shamefully intrated my people, and magnified them selues within the borders of their lande. Therefore as truly as I liue (sayeth the Lord of hostes, the God of Israel) Moab shall be as Sodom, and Ammon as Gomorra, euen by the thorne hedges, salt pities, and a perpetuall wildernes. The residue of my folke shall spoile them, the remnant of my people shall haue them in possession. • Thys shall happen vnto them for their pride because they haue dealt so shamefully with the Lord of hostes people, and

Ezr. 1.1 magnified them selues among them. The Lord shall be grimme vpon them, and destroy al the goddes in the land. And all the fles of the heathen shall worship him, every man in his place. Ye Moabites also shall perishe with my sword: Yea, he shall stretch out his hand ouer the north, and destroy Assur. • As for Hittite, he shall make it desolate, byr and waste. The flockes and all the beastes of the people shall lye in the midst of it. Pelicanes and fowles shall abide in the upper postes of it, foules shall sing in the windowes and raunches shall sit vpon the balkes, for the boordes of Cedre shall be riuen downe. • This is the proude and carelesse citie, that said in her heart, I am, and there is e's none. • Howe is she made so waste, that the beastes lye therein: who so goeth by, mocketh her and poynteth at her with his finger.

Vnto that abhominable, filthy, and cruell Citie, whiche will not heare, nor be reformed. Her truste is not in the Lord, neyther will shee holde her to her God. Her rulers within her are as roaring lions, her iudges are as wolues in the evening, which leaue nothing behinde them til the morow. Her prophetes are light persons and vnfaithfull menne, her priestes vnhalow the sanctuary, and do wrong vnder the pretence of the lawe. But the iust Lord that doth no vnrighht, was among them, euery morninge shewing them his lawe clearly, and ceased not. But the vngodlye will not learne to be ashamed. Therefore will I roote out this people, and destroye their towres: yea, and make their streets so boyd, that no man shall go therein. Their cities shall be broken downe so that no body shall be left, nor dwell there any more. I sayd vnto them: • Feare me, and be content to be reformed. • That their dwelling should not bee destroyed, and that there should happen vnto them none of these thinges, wherewith I shall visite theym. But neuerthelesse, they stand byr as lye, to folowe the filthyness of their swone ymaginations. • Therefore yee shall wait vpon me (sayeth the Lord) vntill the time that I stand byr: for I am determined, to gather the people, and to bring the kingdomes together that I may poure out mine anger, yea at my wrathful displeasure vpon the

• For all the worlde shall be consumed with the fire of my gealousye. And then will I cleanse the lippes of the people, that they may euerychone call vpon the name of the Lord, and serue him with one shoulder. • Suche as I haue subdued, and my children also, whom I haue scattered abroad, shall bring me presentes beyonde the waters of Ethiopia. In that time shalt thou nomore be confounded, because of al thy ymaginations, wherthrough thou haddest offended me: for. • I will take away the proud bolster of thyne honour from thee, so that thou shalt nomore triumph because of my holpe hill. In thee also will I leaue a small poore simple people, which shall trust in the name of the Lord. • The remnant of Israel shall do no wickednes, nor speake lyes, neyther shall ther any disceatfull tongue be founde in their monthes. • For they shall be sedde, and take their rest, and no man shall make them afraid. • Gue thanks, O daughter Sion, be ioyful, O Israel, reioyce and be glad from thy whole heart, O daughter Ierusalem, for the Lord hath take away thy punishment, & turned backe thyne enemies. • The king of Israel, euen the Lord him selfe, is with thee:

In that time it shall be sayd to Jerusalem: feare not, and to Sion, let not thine handes be slacke, for the Lord thy God is with thee, it is he that hath powet to save: he hath a speciall pleasure in thee, and a marvelous loue toward thee: yea, he rejoyceth over thee with gladnesse. Such as have bene in heavynes, will I gather together, and take out of thy congregation, as for the shame and reproche that hath ben layed upon thee, it shall be farre from thee. And lo, in that time will I destroie all those that vex thee: I will helpe the lame, and gather up the castaway: yea, I will gette them prayse and honoure in all landes, where they have bene put to shame. At the same time will I bring you in, and at the same time will I gather you. I will gette you a name, and a good report among all people of the earth, when I turne backe your captivitie before your eyes, (sayeth the Lord.)

In the seconde yeare of Kinge. Darius in the sixte moneth the firste daye of the moneth, came the worde of the Lord (by the prophet Aggeus) unto Jozobabell the sonne of Salathiel the prince of Juda, and to Iesua the sonne of Josedech the hye prieste, saying: Thus speaketh the Lord of hostes, and sayth. This people doeth save: The tyme is not yet come to builde up the Lordes house. Then spake the Lord by the prophet Aggeus, and sayde, • Ye your selves can finde tyme to dwell in sieled houses, and shall this house be waste? Consider nowe your owne wayes in your heartes (sayth the Lord of hostes) • ye sowe muche, but ye bring litle in, ye eat, but ye have not enough: he drink but ye are not filled, ye drinke your selves, but ye are not warme, and he that earneth any wages, putteth it in a broken purse: I thus sayth the Lord of hostes. Consider your owne wayes in your heartes, get you up to the mountayne, fetch woodde, and build up the house • that it maye be acceptable unto me, and that I may shewe mine honour, sayth the Lord. Ye looked for muche, and lo, it is come to litle, and though ye bring it home, yet do I blowe it away. And why so sayth the Lord of hostes? • Even because that my house lyeth so waste, and ye runne every man unto his owne house. Wherefore, the heaven is forbidden to geue you anye dewe, and the earth is forbidden to geue you increase. • I have called for a drought, both upon the land and upon the mountaynes, upon corne, upon wyne, and upon oyle, upon every thinge that the ground bringeth forth, upon men and upon castell, yea, and upon all handye labour. Nowe when Jozobabel the sonne of Salathiel and Iesua the son of Josedech the hye prieste, with the remnant of the people, herd the voyce of the Lord their God, and the wordes of the prophet Aggeus (lyke as the Lord their God had sent him) the people did feare the Lord. Then Aggeus the Lords Angell, sayde the Lordes message unto the people: I am with you, sayeth the Lord. • So the Lord waked up the spirite of Jozobabel the prince of Juda, and the spirite of Iesua the soome of Josedech the hye prieste, and the spirite of the remnant of all the people, that they came and laboured, in the house of the Lord of hostes, their God.

Jer. 44. a

In the eight moneth of the seconde yere of king Darius, came the word of the Lord vnto Zacharie, the sonne of Barachias, the son of Addo, the Prophete, saying: The Lord hath beene sore displeased at your forefathers. And say thou vnto them: Thus sayth the Lord of hostes: Come you vnto me (sayth the Lord of hostes) and I will turne me vnto you, sayth the Lord of hostes. We ye not lyke your forefathers, vnto whom the prophets cryed afore tyme, saying: Thus saith the Lord God of hostes: Turn you from your euill waies, and from your wicked ymaginations. But they would not heare nor regard me, sayth the Lord. What is now become of your forefathers, and the prophets: are they still alque? But did not my wordes & statutes which I commanded by my seruantes, the prophets, touche your forefathers? Upon this, they gaue answer and said: Alike as thy Lord of hostes deuided to do vnto vs, according to our owne waies and ymaginations, euen so hath he deide with vs. Upon the xxiij. day of the xi. moneth, whiche is the moneth Shebat, in the seconde yere of Darius, came the word of the Lord vnto Zacharie, the sonne of Barachias, the sonne of Addo the prophet, saying: I saw by night and so, there sat one vpon a red horse and stode still among the myre trees that were beneath vpon the ground, and behynd him were there red speckled and whyte horses. Then sayde I: O my Lord, what are these? And the angell that talked with me, sayde vnto me: I will shewe thee what these bee. And the manne that stode among the myre trees, answered, and sayde: These are they, whom the Lord hath sent to go thozough the world. And they answered the angell of the Lord, that stode among the myre trees, and sayde: We haue gone thozow the world, and beholde, all the world dwelleth at ease, and are carelesse. Then the Lordes angel gaue answer, and sayde: O Lord of hostes, howe long wilt thou be vnmerticfull to Jerusalem, and to the Citie of Iuda? With whom thou hast been displeased nowe these thre score and tenne yeres. So the Lord gaue a louing and a comfortable answer vnto the Angell, that talked with me. And the Angell that commened with me, sayde vnto me: Crye thou, and speake. Thus saith the Lord of hostes: I am exceeding gelous ouer Jerusalem and Sion, and sore displeased at the carelesse heathen. For where as I was yet but a little angrie, they did theyr beste that I might disrope them. Therefore thus sayth the Lord: I wil turne me againe in mercie towards Jerusalem, so that my house shall be builded in it, sayth the Lord of hostes; yea, and the plommet shall be layde abroade in Jerusalem, sayth the Lord of hostes. Cry also, and speake: Thus sayth the Lord of hostes. My cities shalbe in good prosperitie agayne, the Lord shall yet comforte Syon, and chooseth Jerusalem. Then sayte I vppon myne eyes, and saide, and beholde foure hornes. And I sayde vnto the Angell that talked with me: What be these? He answered me: These are the hornes, whiche haue scattered Iuda, Israhell, and Jerusalem abroade. And the Lord shewed me foure carpenters. Then sayd I: What wil these do? He answered & said: These are the hornes, which haue so strawed Iuda abroad, that no man durst lift by his head. But these are come to fray them a way, & to calt out the hornes of the Gentiles: which lifte by their hozne ouer the lande of Iuda, to scatter it abroade.

The .ij. Chapter.

I lift vp mine eyes agayne, and looked: and beholde, a man with a measure lyne in his hande. Then sayd I: Whither goest thou? and hee sayd vnto me: To measure Ierusalem, that I may see, howe longe and howe bryde it is. And behold, the angell that talked with me, wente his way sooth. Then went there out another angell to mete him, and sayd vnto him: Runne, speake to this younge man, and say: Ierusalem shall be inhabited without any wall, for the verie multitude of people and cattell that shall be therein. Yea, I my selfe (sayth the Lord) will be vnto her a wall of fyre round about me, and will be honoured in her. O get you sooth, O flee from the land of the north, sayeth the Lord, yee. Whom I haue scatred into the foure windes vnder heauen, sayeth the Lord. Haue thy selfe, O Sion, thou that dwellest with the daughter of Babilon. For thus sayeth the Lord of hostes, After that glorious power hath he sent me out to the heathen, which spoyled you: for who so toucheth you, shall touche the apple of his own eye. Behold, I will lift vp mine hande ouer them: so that they shall bee spoyled of those which afore serued them, and ye shall know, that the Lord of hostes hath sent me. Be gladde, and reioyce, O daughter of Sion, for loe, I am come to dwell in the midst of thee, sayth the Lord. At the same time there shall manye heathen cleaue to the Lord, and shall be my people. Thus will I dwell in the midst of thee, and thou shalt know that the Lord of hostes hath sente me vnto thee. The Lord shall haue Iuda in possession for his part in the holy ground, and shall chose Ierusalem yet agayne. Let all aske he be still before the Lord, for he is risen out of his holy place.

The .iij. Chapter.
And he shewed me Iesua the hye Priest, standinge before the angell of the Lord, and Sathan stode at his right hand to recuse him. And the lord said vnto Sa-

than: The Lord reppone thee (thou Sathan) yea, the Lord that hath chosen Ierusalem, reppone thee. Is not this a bzande taken out of the fire? Now Iesua was clothed in vnclean rayment, and stode before the angell, which answered and sayd vnto those that stode before him: Take awaye the foule clothes from him. And vnto him he sayde: Beholde, I haue taken awaye thy sinne from thee, and will decke thee with chaunge of rayment. He sayde moreover, sette a sayze myter vpon his heade. So they set a sayze myter vpon his head, and put on cloathes vpon him, and the angell of the Lord stode there. Then the angell of the Lord testified vnto Iesua, and spake: Thus sayth the Lord of hostes If thou wilt walke in my ways, and kepe my swatche, thou shalt rule my house, and kepe my courtcs, & I will geue thee place among thes that stand here. Heare (O Iesua) thou highe Prieste, thou and thy frendes, that dwell before thee, for they are wonderous people. Beholde, I will bringe forth the bzanches of my seruaunts: for loe, the stone that I haue layde before Iesua: vppon one stone shall be seuen eyes. Beholde I will heve him out (sayth the Lord of hostes) and take awaye the sinne of the lande in one daye. Then shall every man call for his neighbour vnder the vyne, and vnder the figge tree, sayth the Lord of hostes.

The .iiij. Chapter.
And the Angell that talked with me, camme agayne, and waked me bype, as a manne that is rayled out of his sleepe, and sayde vnto me: What seest thou? And I sayd, I haue looked, and beholde: A Candlesticke all of goild, with a boly vppon it, and his seuen lampes therein, and vppon euery lampe seuen stalkes. And two Olive trees thereby, one vppon the right side of the boly, and the other vppon the lefte side. So I answered and spake to the angell

So I turned me, lifting vp mine eyes, and looked, and behold, a flying booke. And he sayd vnto me: what seest thou? I answered: I see a flying booke of twentye cubites long and ten cubites bryde. Then sayde he vnto me: This is the curse, that goeth forth ouer the whole earth: for all theyes shalbe iudged after this booke, and all swearers shalbe iudged according to the same, and I will bringe it forth saith the Lord of hostes, so that it shal come to the house of the theefe, and to the house of him, that falsly sweareth by my name, and shall consume in his house, and consume it with the timber and stones thereof. Then the angell that talked with me, wente forth and sayde vnto me, lyste by thine eyes and see, what is this, y goth forth. And I sayd: what is it? He answered, this is a measure going out. He said moreover: Euen thus are they that dwell vpon the whole earth, to looke vpon. And behold, ther was lyste by a talent of leade: and lo, a woman sat in the middell of that measure. And he sayde, this is vngodlynesse. So he caste her into the middell of the measure, and threw the lumps of leade into the mouth of the measure. Then list I by mine eyes, and looked and behold, there came oute two womenne, and the winde was in their winges (for they had winges like the winges of a stork) and they lyste by the measure betwixt the earth and the heauen. Then spake I to the angell that talked with me: whither wil these beare the measure? And he sayde vnto me, into the lande of. Sinear, to build them an house, which when it is prepared, the measure shalbe sette there in his place.

• The. vi. Chapter.

Moreouer, I turned me, lifting vp mine eyes, and looked, and behold, there came foure charettes out from betwixt the hilles, whiche hilles were of brylle. In the firste charret were red horses, in the seconde charret blacke horses, in the thirde charret were white horses, in the fourth charret were horses of diuerse colour, and stronge. He spake I, and sayd vnto the angell that talked with me, O lord, what are these? The angell answered and said vnto me. • These are the foure windes of heauen, which be come forth to stand before the ruler of all the earth. • That with the blacke horse went into the land of the north, and the white followed them, and the speckled horses wente forth towarde the south. These horses were very stronge and went out, and sought to go & take their iourney ouer the whole earth. And he sayde: Get you hence, and go thorough the world. Then cryed they vnto me, and spake vnto me, saying: Behold, these that go toward & north, shall still my warthe in the North countrey. And the worde of the Lord came vnto me saying: Take of the prisoners that are come from Babilon: namely, Sheibay, Tobiah, and Jada, and come thou the same day, and go in to the house of Josiah, the son of Shophon. Then take golde and spinner, and make crownes thereof, and sette them vpon the heade of Iesus, the son of Iosedech, the hie priest, and speake vnto him: Thus sayeth the Lord of hostes: Behold, the man, whose name is the branch, and he that shall spring by after him, shall build by the temple of the Lord, yea, euen he shall build by the temple of the Lord. He shall beare the mapse, he shall set vpon the Lordes throne, and haue the dominion. A priest shall be also vpon his throne, and a peaceable counsell shall be betwixt them both, And the crownes shall be in the temple of the Lord, for a remembrance vnto Helem, Tobiah, Josiah, and then the sonne of Shophon, & such as be farre of, shall come and build the temple of the lord, that ye maye knowe, howe that the Lord of hostes hath sente me vnto you. And this shall come to passe, yf ye will hearken diligently vnto the voyce of the Lord your God.

The viij. Chapter.

It chaped also in the fourth yere of king Darius, that the worde of the Lord came vnto Zachary in the fourth daye of the ninth moneth, whiche is called Tasseu: what tyme as Sarasar and Bogomelech, and the men that were with them, sent vnto Bethel, for to praye befoze the Lord: and that they shold say vnto the priestes, whiche were in the house of the Lord of hostes, and to the prophetes. Should I wepe in the .xij. moneth, & abstaine as I haue don now certain yeres? Then came the word of the Lord of hostes vnto me, saying: Speake vnto all the people of the lande, and to the Priestes, and saye: when ye fasted and mourned in the fyfthe . and tenth moneth (nowe this .lxv. yeres) dyd ye faste vnto mee? when ye dyd eate also and drinke, dydde ye not eate and drinke for your owne selues? Are not these the wordes whiche the Lord spake by his prophetes afore tyme, when Jerusalem was yet inhabited and welthie, she and the cities rounde about her: when there dwelte men, bothe towarde the southe, and in the playne countreis? And the worde of the Lord came vnto Zacharie, saying: Thus sayth the Lord of hostes. Execute true iudgement, shew mercy and louing kindnes, euery man to his brother: Doe the widow, the fatherles, the stranger & poore no wrong, and let no man ymagine euill agaynst his brother in his heart. For euer theles they would not take hede, but turned their backes, and stopped their eares, that they shoulde not heare: yea, they made theyr heartes as an Adamante stone, least they shoulde heare the lawe and wordes. Whiche the Lord of hostes sent in his holy spirite by the Prophetes afore tyme. Wherefore the Lord of hostes was very wrothe at them. And thus is it come to passe: that like as he spake, and they wold not heare: euen so they cryed, and I wold not heare (sayth the Lord of hostes) but scattered them among all Gentiles, whom they knewe not. Thus the land was made so desolate, that there trauailed no man in it, neyther too, nor fro, for that pleasant land was bitterly layd waste.

Jer. 11. c

Esoz. 1. d in the middes of Ierusalem: so that Ierusalem shall be called a faithfull and a true citie, the hill of the Lord of hostes: yea, & the holy hill. Thus saith the Lord of hostes: There shall yet olde men and we men dwell againe in the streetes of Ierusalem. Yea, and such as go with staves in their handes for verie age. The streetes of the citie also shall be full of yonge boyes and damselles, playing vpon the streets.

W Thus saith the Lord of hostes: if the residue of this people think it to be impossible in these dayes: should it therfore be impossible in my sight, saith the Lord of hostes? Thus saith the Lord of hostes: Behold, I will deliuer my people from the lande of the east and west, and will bring them againe, that they may dwell at Ierusalem.

Ere. 3. f They shall be my people, and I will be their God in truth & righteousness. Thus saith the Lord of hostes: let your hands be strong, ye that now heare these wordes by the mouth of the prophetes, which be in these dayes, that the foundation is layed vpon the Lord of hostes house that the temple may be buylded. For whye? before these dayes, neyther men nor cattell could win any thinge, neyther mighte any man come in and out in rest, for trouble: but I let every man go agaynst his neighbour. Nevertheless I will now intreate the residue of this people nomore as afore time, saith the Lord of hostes, but they shall be a sede of peace. The vineyard shall geue her fruite, the ground shall geue her increase, & the heauens shall geue their dewe: and I shall cause the remnant of this people, to haue all these in possession. And it shall come to passe, that lyke as ye were a curse among the heathen (O ye house of Iuda, and ye house of Israel:) men so will I deliuer you, that ye shall be a blessing: feare not, but let your handes be strong. For thus saith the Lord of hostes: lyke as I deuised to punishe you, what time as your fathers prouoked me vnto wrath, saith the Lord of hostes, & spared not: euen so

Page. 1 a The wordes of the Lord shall be receaued at Bzath, & Damascus shall be his offering: for the eyes of all men, and of the tribes of Israel shall looke vpon the Lord. The borders of Hemath shall be heard thereby. Tyus also and Sydon, for they are verie wise. Tyus shall make her selfe strong, heape vpon spire as the sande, and golde as the clape of the streetes. Beholde the Lord shall take her in, and haue her in possession. He shall smite downe her power in to the sea, and shee shall be consumed with fire. This shall I scall see, and be afrayde. Gaza shall be very laye, so shall Accaron also, because her hope am I determined now in these dayes, for to do well vnto the house of Iuda, & Ierusalem, therfore feare ye not. Now the thinges that ye shall do, are these: Speake euery man the truth vnto his neighbour: execute iudgement truly, and peacrablie within your portes, none of you ymagine euill in his hearte agaynst his neighbour, and lone no false othes, for all these are the thinges that I hate, saith the Lord. And the wordes of the Lord of hostes, came vnto me, saying: thus saith the Lord of hostes. The fall of the fourth moneth, the fall of the fyfte, the fall of the seuenth, and the fall of the tenth, shall be top & gladnes, and prosperous hye feastes vnto the house of Iuda: Dnepe, loue the truth and peace. Thus saith the Lord of hostes. There shall yet come people, and the inhabitoures of many cities, and they that dwell in one citie shall go to another, saying. Al, let vs go, and praye before the Lord, let vs seke the Lord of hostes, I will go with you, yea, much people and mightie heathen shall come and seke the Lord of hostes at Ierusalem, and to praye before the Lord. Thus saith the Lord of hostes: In that time shall ten men (out of al manner of language of the Gentile) take one Jewe by the hem of his garment, and say: we will go with you, for we haue heard that God is among you.

The. 11. Chapter. The wordes of the Lord shall be receaued at Bzath, & Damascus shall be his offering: for the eyes of all men, and of the tribes of Israel shall looke vpon the Lord. The borders of Hemath shall be heard thereby. Tyus also and Sydon, for they are verie wise. Tyus shall make her selfe strong, heape vpon spire as the sande, and golde as the clape of the streetes. Beholde the Lord shall take her in, and haue her in possession. He shall smite downe her power in to the sea, and shee shall be consumed with fire. This shall I scall see, and be afrayde. Gaza shall be very laye, so shall Accaron also, because her hope is come to confusion. For the king of Gaza shall perishe, and at Bsalon shall no man dwell. Strangers shall dwell at Bnod, and as for the pride of the Philistines, I shall roote it oute.

cl. 15. d. • Their bloud wil I take away from their month, and their abominations from amonge their teeth. • Has they shalbe left for our God, yea, they shall be as a prince in Juda, and Bccaron like as a Jebusite. And so wil I compasse my house rounde aboute with men of warre goinge to and fro : that no oppressour come vpon them anye more, for that haue I sene nowe with myne eyes. • Reioyce thou greatly, O daughter Zion, be glad, O daughter Jerusalem. For lo, thy king commeth into thee, even the righteous, and mercifull. Lowely and simple is he, he rydeth vpon an Ass, and vpon the foale of an Ass. I will roote out the charrettes from Ephraim, and the horse fro Jerusalem, the battell bowes shalbe destroyed. He shal geue the doctrine of peace vnto the heathen, and his dominion shalbe from the one sea to the other, and from the floudes to the ende of the worlde. • Thou also defende them, they shall consume and devoure, and subdue them with flying it were the passow wine. • They shalbe like the holmes, and as the hozshall deliuer them in the daye, as the worthfull displeasure is moued at the ciously visite his flocke, the house of Juda, and holde them as a goodly fayre horse in the battell. Out of Juda shal come the helmet, the naye, the battelbowe, and all the princes together. • They shall be as the gyantes,

I will turne them also, for I pittie the Lord am their God, and will here them. Ephraim shall be as a gyante, and their heart shalbe chereful as tho-wil redeme them. • They shal increafe, they shal lue with their chyldren, and gayne also from the lande of Egypt, and gather them out of Assiria. I will cary them into the land of Gilead and to Libanus, and they shall wante no-thinge. He shall goo vppon the sea of trouble, and smite the sea waues, so that all the deepe foudes shal be dized bp. The proud boasting of Assur shal be cast downe, and the scripture of. Egipte shalbe taken away. I will conforzte them in the Lorde, that they may walke in his name, saith the Lorde.

The .xi. Chapter.

Open thy doores, O Libanus, that the fyre may consume thy Cedre trees. Howle ye fyre trees for the Cedre is fallen: yea, all the proude are wasted awaye. Howle (O ye oke trees of Basan) for a mighty stronge wood is cut downe. When may heare the shepherdes mourne, for their glorie is destroyed. When maye heare the Lions whelps roare, for the pryde of Jordan is wasted awaye. Thus saith the Lorde my God: Fede the shepe of the slaughter, which shal be slayde of those that possesse them: yet they take it for no sinne, but they that sell them, say: The Lorde be thanked, I am rich: yea, their owne shepherdes spare them not. Therefore will I no more spare those that dwell in the lande, (saith the Lorde) but so, I will deliuer the people, every man into his neighbours hande, and into the hand of his king, that they may smite the lande, and out of their handes I will not deliuer them. I my selfe fedd the slaughter shepe (a poore flocke he- relpe) and tooke vnto me two stanes, the one is called louing kindnes, the other is called destroyer, and so kepte the sheepe. Three shepherdes I put out of office in one moneth, for I might not awaye with them, neyther had they any delite in me. Then saide I: I wil fede you no more, the thing that dieth, let it dye, and that that wil perishe, let it perishe, and let the rem- nant eate, every one the fleshe of his neyghboure. I tooke also my louing mekelasse, and brake it, that I might disannul the coneuant, which I made with all people, And so it was broken in that daye. Then the poore symple shepe, that hadde a respecte vnto me, knewe thereby that it was the wothe of the Lorde. And I saide vnto them yf ye thinke it good, bzing hither my price: if no, the leaue. So they woted down. xxx. syluer pence, the value that I was prised at. And the Lorde sayde vnto me: cast it vnto the potter (a good ly price for me to be vatued at of them) and I toke the. xxx. syluer pence, and cast them to the potter in the house of the Lorde. Then brake I my other staffe also (namely destroyer) that I might losse the brotherhead betwixt Iuda and Israel. And the Lorde said vnto me: Take ther also the staffe of a foolish shepherde, for so, I will rayle bp a shepherd in the land, which shal not seke after the thinges that be lost, nor care for suche as go astray, he shal not heale the wounded, he shal not nozise the thing that is whole, but he shal eate the fleshe of such as be fat, and teare their clawes in peeces. O foolish shepherde, that leaueh the flocke. The swearde shal come vpon his arme, and vpon his right eye. His arme shal be cleane dyled bp, and his right eye shalbe soze blinded.

The .xij. Chapter.

The heauie burthen whiche the Lorde hath deuised for Israel. Thus saith the Lorde, which Ely- spredde the heauens abroade, laide the foundations of the earth, and geneth man the breath of life. Behold, I wil make Jerusalem a cup of surfet, vnto all the people that are rounde aboute her. Yea, Iuda him selfe also shalbe in the syege agaynsle Jerusalem. At the same tyme will I make Jerusa- lem an heauie stoane for all people, so that all such as lyft it bp, shalbe toyned and rente, and all the people of the earthe shal be gathered together agaynsle it. In that daye, saith the Lorde, I will make al horses abashed, and those that ride vppon them, to be oute of their wittes. I will open myne eyes vppon the house of Iuda, and smite all the houses of the people with blindness. And the princes of Juda shall saye in their heartes: The inhabiters of Jerusalem shall geue me consolation in the Lorde of hostes their God. In that time wil I make princes of Juda, like as an hot burning out with wod, & like a cresset of fire among the straw, so that they shal consume all the people rounde about them, both vpon the right hand & the left. Jerusalem also shalbe inhabited again: namely, in the same place where Jerusalem standeth. The Lord shal preserue the tentes of Juda, like as aforetyme, so that the glory of the house of Dauid, and the glory of the citizens of Jerusalem, shalbe but litle regarded, in comparisoun of the glorie of Juda.

In that daye shall the Lorde defende the citizens of Jerusalem, so that the weakest then among them shall be as Dauid, and the house of Dauid shalbe like as Gods house, and as the Angel of the Lord before them. At the same time wil I go about to destroy all suche people as come agaynst Jerusalem. Moreover, vpon the house of Dauid, and vpon the citizens of Jerusalem: wil I poure out the spirit of grace and compassion, so that they shal looke vpon me, whom they haue pearled, and they shal beweepe him as men mourne for their onely begotten sonne: yea, and besoye for him as men are soye for their firste childe. • Then shall there be a greate mourning at Jerusalem, like as the lamentation of Abimelech in the field of Haggadon. And the land shall be woyle every kinred by them selues.
The kinrede of the house of Dauid them selues alone, and their wiues by the selues: The kinred of the house of Nathan them selues alone, and their wiues by them selues. The kinred of the house of Levi, them selues alone and their wiues by them selues. The kinred of the house of Semei them selues alone, and their wiues by them selues. In like maner, all the other tribes, every one by them selues, and their wiues by the selues.

The. xiiij. Chapter.
In that time shall the house of Dauid and the citizens of Jerusalem haue an open • well, to washe off sinne and uncleannesse. And then (sayth the Lorde of hostes). I will destroy the names of the Idoles out of the lande, so that they shal nomore be put in remembrance. • As for the falle prophetes also, and the uncleane spirites, I shall take them oute of the land. So that if any of them prophesy any more, • his owne father and mother that begatte him, shall saye vnto him: Thou shalt die, for thou speakest lyes vnder the name of the Lorde: yea, his owne father and mother that begate him shall wounde him, when he prophesieth. And then shal those prophetes be confounded, euery one of his vision when he prophesieth: neyther shall they weare sackclothes any more, to disceit men withall. But he shal be sayne to say. • I am no pro-phete, I am an husbandman, for so am I taught by. • Adam from my yonthe vp. And if it be sayd vnto him: howe comme these woundes then in thyne handes: he shall answer: Thus am I wounded in the house of mine owne frendes. Arise, O thou swerd, vpon my shepherde, and vpon the prince of my people, sayth the Lorde of hostes.
• Smyte the shepherde, and the shepe shalbe scatred abrode, & so wil I turne myne hande to the litle ones. And it shall come to passe (sayeth the Lorde) that in all the land two partes shalbe rooted out, • but the thirde parte shall remayne therein. • And the same thirde part wil I bring through the fire, and wil cleanse them, as the siluer is cleansed; yea, and trye them lyke as golde is tryed. Then shall they call vpon my name, and I will heare the.
I will say: it is my people. And they shall say: Lord my God.

The. xiiij. Chapter.

wonne, & houses spoiled, & the womē despoyled. The halfe of the citty shal go away into captiuitie, and the residue of the people shal not be caried out of the citty. After that shal the Lorde go forth to fight agaynst those heathen, as men vile to fighte in the day of battell. Then shall his feete stand vpon the mount Oliuet, that lyeth vpon the east side of Ierusalem. And the mount Oliuet shall cleaue in two, eastward and westward, so that there shall be a great valley, and the halfe mount shall remoue toward the north, and the other toward the southe. All ye shall see vnto the valley of my hillies, for the valley of the hillies shall reache vnto Hal. Yea, see shall ye as like as ye fled for the earthquake in the dayes of Olish, king of Iuda. And the Lord my God shall come, and all they that were with him. In that day shall it not be light, other cleare or dimme. • This shalbe a special day, which is knowen vnto the Lord, neither day nor night, but about the euening time it shalbe light • In that time shall there waters of life runne oute from Ierusalem: the halfe parte of them toward the East sea, and the other halfe toward the bittermost sea, and shall continue both summer and winter. • And the Lorde him selfe shall be Kinge ouer all the earth. At that time shall there be one Lord only, a his name shalbe but one.
• When shal go about the whole earth, as vpon a field from Gibeon to Beniamin, and from the southe to Ierusalem. She shall be set vp, and inhabited in her place, from Ben Iamin porte, vnto the place of the first porte, and vnto the corner porte: and frome the power of Hananeel, vnto the hinges wyne pressen. There shall men dwell, and there shalbe nomore curllinge, but Ierusalem shalbe safely inhabited. This shalbe the plage, wherewith the Lorde will smite all people, that haue sought agaynst Jerusalem. Famely, their flesh shalbe consumed awaye, though they stande vpon their feete, their eyes shalbe consumed in their hooles, and their tonge shall consume in their monthes. In that daye shall the Lord make a greatesedition amonge theym, so that one manne shall take another by the hande, and laye his handes vpon his neighbour. • Ierusalem, and the goodes of all the heathen shall be gathered together round about, golde and silver, and a herse great multitude of clothes. And so shall this plague go ouer horses, mules, camels, asses, and all the bestes that shall bee in the hooles, lyke as pouder plague was. Euerie one that remayneth themme of all the people, whiche came agaynst Ierusalem, shall goe vpp yearly, to worshippe the Kinge (even the Lord of hosts) • and to keepe the feast of tabernacles. And looke what generation vppon the earth goeth not to Ierusalem, for to worshippe the Kinge (even the Lord of hosts) • vppon the same shall come no rayne. If the kinde of Egypt go not vpp, and come not, it shall not rayne vppon theym neyther. This shall be the plague wherewith the Lord will smite all the heathen, that come not vp to keepe the feast of tabernacles: yea, this shall be the sinne plague of all people, that go not vpp to keepe the feast of tabernacles. At that time shall the ryd-inge gearre of the horses be holpe vnto the Lord, and the kettles in the house, shall be lyke the basins before the altar: yea, all the kettles in Ierusalem and Iuda, shall be holpe vnto the Lord of hosts, and all they that slea offerings, shal come and take of them, and dwight them therin. And at that time there shalbe no more Cananites

Lord of ho-

The heauye burthen which the Lord shewed against Israel by Malachi. I haue loned you, sayeth the Lord, and yet ye say: wherein haue

Gen. 25. c. thou loned vs? Was not Esau Jacob's brother, sayeth the lord: yet haue I loned Jacob, and hated Esau, yea, I haue made his hills weest, and his heritage a wilderness for dragons. And though Edom sayde: well, wee are destroyed, we will go builde vp agayne the places that be wasted, yet (sayeth the Lord of hostes) what they builded, that brake I downe, so that it was called a cursed land, and a people, whome the Lord hath euer bene angry withall. Your eyes haue seen it, and ye your seines muste confesse, that the Lord hath brought the land of Israel to gret honoz. Shuld not a son honoz his father, & a seruant his master? If I be nowe a father, where is mine honour? If I be the Lord, where am I feared? sayeth the Lord of hostes. Howe to you priests, that despise my name. And yf ye saye: wherein haue we despysed thy name? In this, that ye offer vncleane bryade bypon mine altar. And yf ye will say: wherein haue we offered any vncleane thinge vnto thee? In this that ye say: The altar of the Lord is not to be regarded: If ye offer & blind, it is not that euill? And yf ye offer the lame and sick, is not that euill? Yea, offer it vnto thy priues, shal he be content with thee, or accepte thy person, sayeth the Lord of hostes: And nowe make your prayer before God, that he wape haue mevey bypon vs: for suche things haue ye done. Shal he regard your persons, think ye, sayeth the Lord of hostes? Yea, what is he among you that will do so muche as to shutte the doores, or to kindle the fire bypon mine altar for naught? I haue no pleasure in you, sayeth the Lord of hostes: And as for the meate offeringe, I will not accepte it at your hande. For from the rising vp of the sunne, vnto the going downe of the same, my name is great amonge the Gentils: yea, in euery place shal there sacrifice be done, and a cleane meate offeringe offered by vnto my name: For my name is great amonge the Gentils, sayeth the Lord of hostes. But ye haue vnhalawed it, in that ye say, the Altar of the Lord is not to be regarded, and the thing that is set there bypon not woorthy to be eaten. How say ye: It is but labour and trauayle. And thus haue ye thought scozne at it (sayeth the Lord of hostes) offeringe robberye, yea, the lame and the sick. Ye haue brought me in a meate offeringe, shoulde I accepte it of your hande, sayeth the Lord: Cursed be the dissembler, which hath in his stocke one that is a male, and when he maketh a vowe, offereth a spotted one vnto the Lord. For I am a great king (sayeth the Lord of hostes) and my name is fearefull amonge the Gentils.

The .ij. Chapter.

And nowe (O ye priests) this commaundemente toucheth you: If ye wil not here it, nor regard it, to geue the glozy vnto my name, saith the Lord of hostes, I will send a curse bypon you, & will curse your blessings, yea, curse them with I, yf ye doo not take heede. Behold, I shall corrupte your seece, and caste dounge in your faces, euen the donge of your soleinne feastes, and it shal cleane faste bypon you. And ye shal knowe, that I haue sente this commaundement vnto you, that my couenaunte whiche I made with Levi, might stande, sayeth the Lord of hostes. I made a couenaunte of life and peace with him: Whis I gaue him, that he mighte stande in awe of me: and so he didde feare me, Jer. 18. and

and had my name in reuerence. The lawe of truth was in his mouth, and there was no wickednes found in his lippes. Hee walked with me in peace and equitie, and did turne many one away from their sinnes. • For in the pnesters lippes shoulde be sure knowledge that men maye seeke the lawe at his mouth, for he is a messenger of the Lord of hostes. But as for you, ye are gone cleane out of the way and haue caused the multitude to bee offended at the lawe: • ye haue broken the covenant of Aeni, sayth the Lord of hostes. Therefore will I also make you to be despised, and to be of no reputation amongal the people, because ye haue not kept my wayes, but haue bene partiaill in the lawe. • Haue we not al one father? Hath not one God made vs? • Why doth every one of vs then despise his owne brother, and so breake the covenant of our fathers.

Jach. 7. b

Nowe hath Iuda offended, yea, the abomination is done in Israel, and in Jerusalem. • for Iuda hath defiled the sanctuary of the Lord which he loved, and hath kept the daughter of a strange God. But the Lord shall destroye the man that doeth this: (yea both the master and the scolar) out of the Tabernacle of Jacob, with him that offereth meatofferinge vnto the Lord of hostes. Nowe haue ye brought it to this point agayn, that the altar of the Lord is couered with teares, weeping and mourning, so that I wil nomore regard the meatoffering, neither will I receaue or accepte anye thing at your handes. And yet ye say, wherfore? Euen because that where as the Lord made a covenant betwixte thee, and the wife of thy youth, thou hast despised. • Yet is she thine owne companion and married wife. So did not the one, and yet had he an excellent spirit. What did then the one? He sought the seede promised of God. Therefore looke well to your spirite, and let no manne despise the wife of his youth. If thou hatest her, putte her away sayeth the Lord of Israel sayeth the Lord of hostes. Looke wel then to your spirite, and despyse her not. Ye greue the Lord with your wordes, and yet ye say: wherewithall haue we greued him? In this that ye say. All that do euill are good in the sight of God, and such as please him, O els where is the God that punisheth.

The. 19. Chapter.

BEhold. • I will send my messenger, which shall prepare the way before me, and the Lord whom ye would haue, shall sone come to his temple, yea, euen the messenger of the covenante whom ye longe for. Beholde, he commeth, sayth the Lord of hostes. But who may abyde the dape of his comming? Who shalbe able to endure, when he appereth? For he is like a goldsmithes fire, and lyke washers sope. He shall set him downe to trye and to clesne the siluer, he shall pource the children of Aeni, and purifie theym like as golde and siluer, that they may bring meatofferinges vnto the Lord in all righteousness. Then shall the offering of Iuda and Jerusalem be acceptable vnto the Lord, like as from the beginninge and in the yeares afore time, I will come, and punish you, and I my selfe wilde a swifte witnesse agaynst the witches, agaynst the aduouters, agaynst false swerers: yea and agaynst those that wrongfullye keepe backe the hyelinges dewtye, which were the widdowes and the fatherlesse, and oppresse the straunger and feare not me, sayeth the Lord of hostes. For I am the Lord that change not, and ye (O ye children of Jacob) wil not leaue off, • ye are gone away fro mine ordinaunces, and since the time of your forefathers haue I not kepte them. • Tourne you nowe vnto me, and I will tourne mee vnto you, sayth the Lord of hostes: ye saye, wherein shall we tourne? To the Reader.

In consideration that the booke before ar found in the Hebrew tongue, received of all men: and that the other following, which are called Hagiographa (because they were wont to be read, not openly and in common but as it were in secret, & apart) are neither found in the Hebrew nor in the Chaldee: in which tongues they have not of long time bene written (unless then it were haply the booke of Sapience) whereupon it were now very hard to repaire & amend them: And that also they are not retained nor taken as legitimate & lesull, aswell of the Hebrews of the whole church, as S. Hierom the weth: we have separate them, and set them aside, that they may the better be known, to thintent that men may know of which booke witness ought to be received, and of which not. For the said S. Hierom speaking of the booke of Judith (which is Hagiographa) saith, that the authority therof is not esteemed worthy & sufficient to confirme & stablish the things that light in disputation. And generally of al the booke called Hagiographa: he saith, that men may read them of the edifying of the people: but not to confirme & strengthen the doctrine of the church. I leave out here the law as they call it of Can. c. & an. c. & an. c. Romana. x. d. dist. wher he the weth his iudgement. Likewise the Glose of c. Can. xbi. distinct. which saith that men read them, but not in generall: as though he should say, that generally & thoroughly they are not allowed. And not without a cause. For that they have ben corrupted and falsified in many places, it appeareth sufficiently by Eusebius in his booke called Historia Ecclesiastica. which thing is easy to be knowne when now a daies in certain pointes, namely in the booke of the Machabees, whose seconde booke S. Hierom confesseth, that he found not in the Hebrew, by the meanes wherof, it is become vnto vs the more suspect, & the lesse receaued. In like manner it is of the thirde & fourth booke of Esdras, which S. Hierom protesteth that he would not have translated, esteeming them for drcames: where as Iosephus yet in his booke of antiquities declareth the summe of the matter after the manner of a story, aswell of the booke of Machabees, as of the thirde of Esdras: although he esteem the booke compiled from the reigne of king Artaxerxes vnto his time, to be Hagiographa. Wherefore then, when thou wilt mainteine any thing for certaine, rendering a reason of thy faith, take heede to procede therein by the living and purty Scriptures, following S. Peter, which saith: he that speaketh, let him speake as though he spake the word of God. He saith, the word of God, as a thing most true & certaine, opened by the Prophetes and Apostles, inspired with the holy ghost: of whom we haue witness more clere then the day. Lawiers hauing great desire to confirme & stablish their opinions by the lawe of man, say: that they shame to speake without law. How much more feare & dread then ought he to haue, that saith, he is a Christian, the which holdeth not him self, or reliereth not in the lawes of the living god, but in mens inuentions: Judging of al things according to the, & leaning to an vncertaine imagination & fantasy: Let vs therefore, that are builded on the foundation of the holy Prophetes & Apostles, and on the head corner stone (on which they them selues were founded, and which they preached, that is, Iesus Christ, the sure stone) leave the thinges that are vncertaine to follow the certaine: holding vs, and resting vs in them, and strengthening our anker ther, as in a sure place. For our Christian faith consisteth not in doubtfull thinges, but in plaine & most certaine assurance, and in most true perswasion, taken and confirmed by infallible veritie. In which God graunte vs to walke perpetually, to thintent that accozing to it, fulfilling his holy will in vs, and setting aside all inuentions contrary vnto him, we may live to his honour, and to the edifying of his Church. So be it.

The first Chapter.

AD. Josias helde the feaste of Easter in Jerusalem vnto the Lord, and se we the Passouer the fourteenth day of the first moneth. He sette the Priestes also in order (accordinge to their dayly courses, bringe araped in longe garmentes in the temple of the Lord. And he spake vnto the Levites the holy ministers of Israel, that they should halowe them selues vnto the Lord, to set the holy Arke of the Lord in the house that king Salomon the son of David had builded, and said: Ye that nomore bear the arke vpon your shoulders. Nowe serue your Lord, and take the charge of his people of Israel, after your villages and your tribes, according as kinge David the king of Israel hath ordeined, and according as Salomon his sonne hath honorably prepared: yea, take that ye al do serue in the temple, according to the ording and distribution of the principal men which are appoynted out of the tribes, to do serue for the children of Israel. At the Passouer, and prepare offeringes for your brethren, and do according to the commaundement of the Lord which was geuen vnto Moses. And vnto the people that was found, Josias gaue thirtie thousande of sheepe, lambes, kiddes and goates, and thier thousande oxen. These the kinge (of his kingly liberalitie) gaue vnto the people, according as he had promised: and to the priestes for the Passouer, he gaue two. M. sheepe, and an hundred oxen. Hozeoner Iechonias and Semeiah, and Nathaniell his brethren, and Azabias, Jehiel, and Josabab gaue them to the Passouer. v. thousand shepe and five hundred bullocks. And when these thinges were thought to passe, the priestes and the Levites stode goodly in their order, and had the vbleuened bread throught out the tribes. And after the ording of the principal men in the tribes, they offered vnto the Lord in the sight of the people, according as it is written in the booke of Moses, and so they roasted the Easter lambe, as according was. As for the thankofferings and the other, they dight them in ketels and pottes, and sette them before the people with good wil, and afterward before them selues, and the priestes. For the priestes offered the fat, vntil the time was expired, but the Levites prepared for them selues and for their brethren the children of Aaron. The holy singers also the children of Asaph stode in their order, according as David deuysed. So did Asaph, Zacharie and Idutham, which were appointed by the king. Hozeoner the porters and doze keepers stode by the doozes, and that diligentely, so that none went out of his standinge and serue: for they brethren, the Levites, prepared for them. Thus were all thinges perfourmed, that belonged to the offring of the Lord. In that day they helde the Passouer, and offered thankoffering besyde the sacrifice of the Lord, according to the commaundement of kinge Josias. So the children of Israel which were then presente, helde an honorable Passouer, and the feast of swete bread. viij. dayes long. Yea, suche a Passouer was not kepte in Israel, from the time of the prophete Samuell. And al the kinges of Israel held not such an Easter, as this which king Josias held, and the Priestes, the Levites, the Levites, and all Israel, of all them that were at Jerusalem. And in the threthenteen the yere of the reygne of Josias, was this Passouer kept. And with a perfecte hearte didde kinge Josias order all his woorkes, before the LORD, and the thinges that were writtene of him in tymes passe, concernynge those that synned sinned, and were vngodly agaynst the Lord before al þe people, & that sought northe word of the Lord vpon Israell. After all these actes of king Jo-sias, Pharaos, the kinge of Egypte went vp, and came towarde Carmis by Euphrates, and Josias wente to mete him. Then sent the kinge of Egypt vnto Josias, saying: what haue I to do with thee, O king of Iuda?

D I am not sent of the Lord to fight a-gaynst thee, for my war is vpon Euphrates, go thou thy way home agayn in all the haste. And Josias woulde not turne againe vpon his charret, but vnderooke to fight agaynst him, and hearkened not vnto the woordes of the pophete, which he told him out of the mouth of God, but pitched a bat-taille agaynst him in the field of Mageddo. And the princes plessed to king Josias. Then sayd the king vnto his seruantes: Carpe me away out of the battaille, for I am soze wounded.
And immediatly his seruantes tooke him away out of the front of the bat-taille. Then sat he vp vpon the second charret, came to Ierusalem, dyed, and was buried in his fathers sepulchre.
And in al fure they mourned for Jo-sias, yea, the rulers also with they wittes made lamentation for him vnto this day. And this was doone ever still in Israel. These things ar written in the Booke of the Royes of the Kings of Iuda: namely, all the Actes and workes of king Josias, his kingly power and maiesty, his vnderstanding in the lasse of God, & what he did: yea things, which are not written in the boke of the kings of Israel and Iu-da. And the people tooke Ichonias the soone of Josias, and made him kinge in steede of Josias his father, when he was .xiiij. yere olde. And he reigned ouer Israel thre monethes.
And the king of Egypt put him down that he should not reigne in Ierusalem, and raised vp a kyng of the people: namely, an .C. talentes of siluer & one talent of golde. The kinge of Egypte also made Ioachim his brother king of Iuda and Ierusalem, & soz them of the kingly cotincell, with the kinge himselfe, and Ioracris his brother, he toke them, and carped them awoye prisoners into Egypt. Fine and twen-tie yere olde was Ioachim, when he was made kinge in the lande of Iuda and Ierusalem, and he did euill before the Lord. After this, Nabuchodo-nosor, the king of Babilon, came by, and bound him with bandes of yron, and caried him vnto Babilon. Nabu-chodonosor also tooke all the vessels that were halowed in the Temple of the Lord: and all the Jewels, & caried them vnto Babilon, and brought them into his owne temple at Babilon. Of his uncleannes and vngodlynes, it is written in the boke of the acts of the kings. And Ioachim his son reigned in his steede. He was made kinge, being .xviij. yere olde, and reigned but in .monethes and .x. days in Ierusal-em, and did euill before the Lord. So after a yere, Nabuchodonosor sent and caused him to be brought vnto Babilon with the holy vessels of the Lord, and made Zedechias his brother kinge of Iuda and Ierusalem, when he was .xvi. yere olde: and he reigned .xi. yere.

And he did euill also in sight of the Lord, & cared not for the wordes that were spoken vnto him. by the pphet Ieremy at .x. monthes of the Lord.
And where he had made an othe vnto kinge Nabuchodonosor, he forswore him selfe, and fell from him, heaving a stiffe necke & a heart, and transgressed all the statutes and ordinances of the Lord GOD of Israel. The rulers also, and the headdes of the people of the L O R D E did muche euill, and became vngodlye, more then the heathen, being defyled in all maner of abhominations: Yea, and defiled the holy temple of the Lorde at Ie-rusalem, And the god of their fathers sente his messengers vnto them, to turne them backe, and to call them agayn from their sinnes: for he wolde sayn haue spared them for his holy tabernacles sake. Nevertheless, they had his messengers in derision: and what God spake vnto them by his prophets, they made but a spoyle of it. This dyed on so longe tyll the Lorde was wrothe with his people for their vngodlines, and till he caused the kinges of the Chaldees to come by, which slewe their yong men with the sword, yea, euen in the compasse of their holy temple, and spared no boye, neyther yonge nor olde, neyther mayden nor yonge man: but they wer all deliuered into the power of the kinges of the Chaldees, and all the holy vessels of the Lorde, and the kinges treasures tooke they, and caried them vnto Babilon. • As for the house of the Lorde, they went by into it, & burnt it, and brake downe the walles of Jerusalem, set fyre vpon her towres, destroyed all her noble buildinges, and brought them to naught: and the people that were not slaine with the sword, they caried vnto Babilon. This became they prisoners and bondmen of the king of Babilon, til they wer deliuered, and reigned for theym seines, when the wordes of the Lorde were fulfilled, which he promised them by the mouth of the prophet Jeremy and till the lande had her rest: namely, all the time that it laye waste, had it reste and quietnes. lxxvij. yeres.

The .ij. Chapter.

NOwe when king Cyrus reigned ouer the Persians, and when the Lorde woulde performe the worde that he had promised by the mouth of the prophete Jeremy, the Lorde rayled by the spirite of Cyrus, the king of the Persians, so he caused his writinge to be proclaymed throughout his whole realme, saying: Thus saith the kinge of Persians: The Lorde of Israel, that hys Lorde hath made me king of the land, and commaunded me to builde him an house at Jerusalem in Jewrye. If there be any nowe of your people, the Lorde be with him, and go by with him to Jerusalem. And all they that are come by from yon vnto Babylon round about that place shal help the, whether it be with gold, with silver, with giftes, with horses and neyther cattell, and all other thinges that are brought with a freewill to the house of the Lorde at Jerusalem. Then the principal men out of the tribes and villages of Juda and Benjamin stode by, so did the priestes also & the Leuites (whom the Lorde had moued) to go by, and to builde the house of the Lorde at Jerusalem. And they that were aboute them, helped them with all maner of gold and silver, and cattell also, and with many lyberall giftes: and this did many one, whose minde was stirred by thereto. • King Cyrus also brought forth the vessels and ornaments that wer halowed vnto the Lorde (which Nabuchodonosor the king had caried away from Jerusalem, and consecrated them to his ydol and ymade) and deliuered them to Mithridatus his treasurer, & by him they were deliuered to Salmanasar, the debite in Jewrye. And this was the number of them: Two thousande and. iiij. C. syluer bolles. xxx. syluer basons. xxx. basons of gold. ij. M. and. iij. C. vessels of syluer, and a M. besylde. Til the vessels of gold and silver were. v. M. viij. C. and. lx. These were numbred vnto Salmanasar, and to them that were come agayne with him to Jerusalem out of the captiuitie of Babilon. • Now in the time of king Artaxerxes the king of Persia, these men: Belems and Mithridatus, Sabelius, Balthimus, Semelius the scribe, and other that dwelt in Samaria, and in other places vnder the dominion thereof, wrote a letter vnto kinge Artaxerxes, wherein they complayned vnto the kinge of them in Jewrye and Jerusalem. The letter was made after this maner: Hyy, thy seruants Balthimus the scribe, Sabelius, the scribe, and other iudges of the court in Celosiria and Phenices. We it knowen and manifest to our Lorde the kinge, that the Jewes whiche are come by from yon vnto Babylon to the rebellious and wicked Citie, begynne to builde it agayne, and the walles about it, and to sette by the Temple anewe. Nowe yf this Citie tie and the walles thereof be sette by agayne, they shall not onely refuse to geue tributes and taxes, but also rebell utterly against the king. And for so muche as they take this in hande now about the temple, we thought it reason, to thinke no scoyne of it, but to shewe it vnto our Lorde the kinge and to certifie him thereof, to thintent that yf it please the kinge, he may cause it to be sought in the booke of olde, and thou shalt finde suche warning written, and shalte vnderstande, that this Citie hath alwaye bene rebellious and disobedient, that it hath subdued kinges and citie: and that the Jewes which dwell therein, haue euer bene a rebellious, obstinate, vnfaithfull, and fighting people, for the whiche cause this citie is walled. wherfore now we certifie our Lorde the king, that yf this citie be buylded and occupied agayne, and the walles thereof set by a newe, thou canst haue no passage into Ierosolima and Phenices. Then wrote the king to Rathimus the scribe wyter, to Balthemus, to Sabellius the scribe, and to the other officers, and dwellers in Siria and Phenices, after this maner: I haue red the Epistle whiche thou sentest vnto me, and haue commaunded to make diligente search, and haue founde, that the citie hath euer resisted kinges, that the same people are disobedient, and haue caused muche warre, and that mightie kinges haue reigned in Ierusalem, whiche also haue raysed hye taxes in Siria and Phenices. wherfore I haue commaunded those people that they shall not builde the Citie, that they make no moze in it, and that they proceade no further with the buylding: for so muche as it mighte be the cause of warre, and displeasure vnto kinges. Nowe when Rathimus and Sabellius the scribe, and the rulers in the lande had red the writinge of king Artaxerxes, they gat them together, and came in all the hast to Ierusalem with an hooste of horsemen, and with much people of fote, and for had them to builde. And so they leste of from buylding of the temple, vnto the second yere of king Darius.

The.iiij.Chapter.

Kynge Darius made a gratefull scale vnto his seruantes, vnto all his Court, and to all the officers of Media and Persia, yea, to all the debitties and rulers that were vnder him, from India vnto Ethiopia, an hundred and xxviij. countreys. So when they had eaten and dronken, being satisfied, and were gone home agayne, Darius the kinge wente into his chaumber, layed him downe to slepe, and so awaked. Then the thre pounge men, that kept the kinges person, and watched his bedde, commaoned amonge them selues, and spake one to another: let euery one of vs say some thing, and loke whols sentence is wyser and moze excellent then the other, vnto him shall king Darius geue great giftes, and clothe him with purple. He shall geue him vessels of gold to drinke in, clothes of golde and cooeringes: he shall make him a costie charette and a bydle of golde, he shall geue him a bonette of white flycke, and a chayne of golde about his necke: yea, he shalbe the seconde and principall nexte vnto king Darius, and that because of his wisdom, and shall be called the kynge hinfeman. So euery one wrote his meaning, sealed it, and layed it vnder the kinges pelswe, and said: when the kynge aryseth, we will geue him our writings, and loke whols word the king and his chiefe lordes indge to be the most wisely spoken, the same shall haue the victorie. One wrote: wine is a stronge thing. The seconde wrote: The kinge is stronger. The thirde wrote: We men haue yet moze strength, but aboue all thinges, the trueth beareth awaye the victorie. Nowe when the king was risen vp, they toke their writings and deliuered them vnto him, and so he redde them. Then sent he sooth to call all his chiefe lordes, all the debitties and rulers of the countreys of Media and Persia. And when they were set doſtne in the counsell, the wꝛittinges were read befoꝛe them. And he commanded to cal foꝛ the yong men, that they might declare theꝝ meaninges themselues by mouth. So when they were sente foꝛ, and came in, the kinge sayde vnto them: shewe vs and make Du to vnderstande what the thinges are that ye haue wꝛitten. Then began the firste (whiche had spoken of the strengthe of wyne) and sayde: O ye men, wyne is maruelous strong, and ouercommeth them that drinke it: it disceaueth the minde, and bꝛingeth both the pooꝛe man, and the kinge to dotaꝝe and banittie. Thus doeth it also with the bondeman and with the free, with the pooꝛe and rich: it taketh away their vnderstandinge, and ma-keth them carelesse and merpe, so that none of them remembꝛeth any heauynes, oꝛ det, oꝛ dewty. It causeth a mā to thinke also that the thing which he doth, is honest and good: and remembꝛeth not that he is a king, noꝛ that he is in aucthoꝛitie, and that hee ought not to doo suche thinges. Whoeuer, when men are drinkeing, they forget al frendship, al bꝛotherly faithfulnes and loue: but as soone as they are dronken, they dꝛaw out the sword and will fight: and when they are laped down from the wine, and so risen by againe, they can not tell what they did: iudge ye now, is not wine the strongest? foꝛ who wold els take in hand to do such thinges? And when he had spoken this, he held his tonge.

The. iij. Chapter.

Then the second (which had sayd) that the king was stronger, began to speake saying: O ye men are not they the strongest and mooste excellent, that conquere the lande and the sea, and al that is in the sea, and in the earth? Howe is the kinge Lorde of all these thinges, and hath dominion of them all, and looke what he commandeth, it is done. If he sende his men forth a warfare, they go and bꝛeake down his walles & towꝛes.
They are slayne, and slay (other men) them selues, and ouerpasse not the kinges wooꝛde. If they get the victoꝛye, they bꝛinge the kinge all the spoyle.

A yae-wile, the other that meddle not with warres and fightinge, but tyll the grounde: when they reape, they bꝛing tribute vnto the kinge. And yf the kinge alone do but commaunde to kill, they kill: if he commaunde to foꝛgeue, they foꝛgeue: if he commaunde to smyte, they smyte: yf he bidde dꝛiue away, they dꝛiue away: yf he comaund to build, they build: yf he commaunde to bꝛeake doſtne, they bꝛeake doſtne: if he commaunde to plant, they plante. B
The common people and the rulers are obedient vnto him. And the king in the mean season sitteth him doſtne, eateth and drinketh & taketh his rest: then kepe they watche rounde aboute the king, and not one of them dare get out of the way to doo his owne bu-synes, but must be obedient vnto the king at a wooꝛde. Iudge ye now, O ye men, how should not he go farre aboue, vnto whom men are thus obedient? And when he had spoken thus he held his tongue. The third whose name was Zorobabell, whiche hadde spoken of women, and of tructh, be-ganne to saye after this maner: O ye men, it is not the great king, it is not the multitude of menne, neyther is it wyne that excelleth. who is it then that hath the lordship ouer theꝝ? haue not women boꝛne the king, and al the people that rule those thinges? haue not women boꝛne them, and brought them vp, that plant the bynes, wherout the wine commeth? They make garmentes foꝛ all men, they geue ho-noure vnto all men, and without women can not men liue. If they gather gold and siluer, and all pꝛecious thin-ges, and see a fayre well fauored woman, they leaue al together, and turne their eyes only vnto the woman, and gaꝛe vpon her, and haue moꝛe desyre vnto her, thanne vnto the siluer and gold, oꝛ any maner of pꝛecious thing. Gen. 2. d • A manns leaueth his father that Mat. 19.

the woman, yea he leopardeeth his life with the woman, and remembreth neyther father nor mother, nor countrey.
By this then ye must needes knowe, that women haue the dominion ouer you. Doeth it not greue you? A man taketh his sword, and goeth his way to steale, to kill, to murder, to laye vpon the sea, and seeth a Lion, & goeth in the darkenesse: and when he hath sollen, disceaned and robbed, he bring-geth it vnto his loue. Agayne, a man loveth his wife better then father or mother: yea, many one there be that renne out of their wittes, and become bondmen for theyr wyues sakes: ma-nye one also haue perished, haue bene slayne, and haue sinned because of women. And nowe beleue me, I knowe a king whiche is great in his power, and all landes stande in awe of him, and no man dare laye hand vpon him: yet did I see, that I came (the daughter of the great kinge Bartacus) the kinges concubine, sat beside the king vpon the right hand, and toke off his croune from his heade, and set it vpon her owne heade, and smote the king with her left hande. Whereouer, the kinge looked vpon her with open mouth: yf she laughed vpon him, he laughed also: but if she tooke any displeasure with him, the kinge was fayne to flatter her, and to geue her good woozdes, till he had gotten her fauour againe. O ye men, are not women then stronger? Great is the earth and hye is the heauen. Who doth these things? Then the king and the princes looked one vpon another. So he beganne to speake of the truely. O ye men, are not women stronger? Great is the earth, hye is the heauen, swifte is the course of the sunne: he compasseth the heauen round about, and setteth his course agayne to his owne place in one daye. Is he not excellent that doeth this? Yea, great is the trueth, and stronger then all thinges.
All the earth calleth vpon the trueth, the heauen prayseth it, all woozkes shake and tremble at it, and with it is no vnrighteous thing. Wine is vn-righteous, the king is vnrighteous, women are vnrighteous, all the chyldren of men are vnrighteous, yea, all their woozkes are vnrighteous, and there is no trueth in them, in their vnrighteousnesse also shall they be destroyed and perishe. As for the trueth, it endureth, and is alway stronger, it liueth and conquereth for euermore, world without ende. The trueth ac-cepteth no persons, it putteth no difference betwixte the riche or poore, betwixte the mightye or simple, but doth right vnto euery man, whether they be euill or good, and all men are louinglye deale withall in the wozkes of it. In the iudgement of it there is no vnrighteous thinge, but strength, kingdome, and power, and maiestie for euermore. Blessed be the God of trueth. And with that he held his tonge, and all the people cried, and sayd: Grate is the trueth, and aboue all. Then sayde the kinge vnto him: Aske what thou wilt, more then is appointed in the writing, and I shall geue it thee: for thou art founde wiser then thy companions, thou shalt sit next me, and be my kinsman. Then said he vnto the king: Remember thy promyse and vow, which thou haste vowed and promised (in the day whel thou camest to the kingdome) to build vpon Ierusalem, and to sende agayne all the vessels and Jewels, that were taken away out of Ierusalem, whiche Cyrus separated, when he offered in Babilon, and woulde sende theym a-gayne. And thy minde was to builde vpon the temple, whiche the Edomites brent, when Ierusalem was destroyed by the Chaldees. This onely (O king) is the thing that I require, this is the maiestie: whiche I desyre and aske of thee, that thou performe the vow, whiche thou with thine owne mouthe haste made vnto the kinge of heauen. Then Darius the kinge stode vp, and kissed him, and wrote a letter vnto all the debities and shreues, to all the lordes and nobles, that they shoulde conuey him forth, and all them that wold go vpon with him. He wrote a letter vnto all the shreues that

Were in Celosyria and Phenices, and vnto Libanus, that they should draw Cedre trees from Libanus vnto Jerusalem, to buyde the Citie withall.
 Moreover he wrote vnto al þe Jewes that were gone out of his realm into Jewry because of the freedome, that no officer, no ruler, nor shene shoulde come to theyr dozes, and that all theyr land which they had conquered, shuld be fre and not tributary. And that the Edomites shuld geue over the cities and villages of the Jewes, whiche they had taken in: yea, and that they should yerely geue. xx. talentes to the buildinge of the temple, vntill the time that it were finished, and to the daily halowing of the burntofferings (as it is commaunded) ten talentes yerely also: And that all they whiche come from Babilon to builde the city, shoulde haue free libertye, they and their children, and al the priestes.
 He wrote the greatnes also, and commaunded that the holy garment shuld be geue to the, wherin they ministred: and wrote that commaundementes shoulde be geuen to the Levites, vntill the day that the house were finished, and Jerusalem builded vp: and commaunded that all they that watched the city shuld haue their portions and wages. He gaue ouer also all the vessels that Cyrus had separated from Babilon, and all that Cyrus had geuen in commaundemente, the same charged he also, that it shuld be done and sent vnto Jerusalem. Now whē this ponge man was gone forth, he turned his face towarde Jerusalem, and prayes the kinge of heauen, and sayd: O Of thee commeth the victory, of thee commeth wis dome and cleare-nesse, and I am thy seruante. Blessed art thou, which haste geuen me wise-dome: thee will I prayse, O Lord, thou God of our fathers. And so he tooke the letters, and wente vnto Babilon. And when he came there, he tolde this vnto all his brethren that were at Babilon, and they prayes the GOD of their fathers, that he had geuen theym refreshinge and libertye to go by, and to buyde Jerusalem and the temple (wherē the name of the Lord is called vpon) and they reioyced with instrumentes and gladnes seuen dayes longe.

After this were the principall men of all the villages chosen in the trybes and kindredes, that they should go with their wines and children, with their seruantes and maydens, with al theyr cattel and substaunce. And Darius the kinge sent with them a thousand horsemen, to conuey them safely vnto Jerusale: and their brethren were glad, playing vpon instrumentes and singing. And these are the names of the men, which went by out of the villages, according to the tribes. Of the priestes, the son of Phinehes, the sonne of Aaron: Jesua the sonne of Josede, Joachim, the sonne of. Jozobabel, the sonne of Salathiel (of the kindred of Dauid, out of the kindred of Phares of the tribe of Juda) which spake wonder-full thinges vnder Darius the kinge of Persia, in the seconde yere of his reygne, in the first moneth of Nisan.
 These also are they of Jewry, which came by, and turned agayne vnto Jerusalem, out of the captiuitie that Na-buchodonosor the king of Babilon had brought vnto Babilon. And eue-ry man sought his portion agayne in Jewry, his citie, they that came with Jozobabell, and with Jesua, Nehemias, Saraias, Rarlaias, Elmus, Emmanius, Harдохеус, Beelsc-

kindred was soughte in the register of their generation, but it was not found: and therefore were they forbidden to execute the office of the priest hooche. Unto them sayde Nehemias and Stharas, that they shoulde haue no portion in the sanctuarie, till there rose vp an hye priest, that were well instructe in the playne clearenes and trueth. Of al Israel (beside seruantes and maydens) there were .xliij. thousand and foztie. Nowe were there of seruantes and maydens, seuen thousand, three hundred, thirty and six. Of singing men and singing women there were .ij. hundred and .lxxv. foure hundred and .xxxv. Camelles. Seuen thousand and .xxxvi. hoxses. Two C. and .xlv. Mules. Fyue M. and .xxv. asses. Their heades also and the rulers in the tribes, when they came to Jerusalem, and would builde and sette vp the temple of God agayne in his place, they gaue (after their abilitye) vnto the temple, to the treasure, and to the seruice of the Sanctuarie, .xij. thousande poundes of golde, fyue thousande of syluer, and an hundred priestes garmentes. And so dwelt the priestes and the Leuites, and the people that wente out to Jerusalem, and in the countrey there aboute, the synagogs also and the porters, every one of Israel in his owne land. . So when the seueneth moneth came, and when the childpennet of Israell were euery manne at his busynes, they came all with one consent into the court whiche was before the East doore. And there stode Iesua the sonne of Josedeck and his bryethen the priestes, and Zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel and his bryethen, setting vp an altar, to offer burnt sacrifices vppon it, as it is written in the lawe of Moyses. There came people also of other countreys, and the heathen out of all landes to sette vp an altar in his place, and offered sacrifices and burnt offerings vnto the Lorde in the morninge. And so they helde the feast of tabernacles, as it is commaunded in the lawe. And daylye offered they as accordinge was, and made the sacrifices appoynted, the offerings also of the Sabbathes and the newe moones, and all holy feastes. And all they that bowed offerings vnto the Lorde beganne at the newe moone of the seueneth moneth to offer vnto GOD, for the temple of the LORD was not yet buylded. And they gaue vnto the Masons and Carpenters, money, meate and drinke with cherefulness. Vnto theym of Sydon also and Tyre they gaue carres, that they shoulde carrie Cedre trees from Libanus to be iopstes and beames, and that they shoulde make hyppes in the haven of Joppe, accordinge as it was appoynted and ordeyned by Cyrus kinge of the Persians. And in the seconde yere they came into the temple of GOD at Jerusalem. In the seconde moneth beganne Zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel, and Iesua the sonne of Josedeck and their bryethen the priestes and Leuites, and all they that were comen vnto Jerusalem oute of the captiuitie of Babylon, and layed the foundation of the Temple, in the newe moone of the second moneth in the seconde yere that they were come into Ieremy and Jerusalem. And they appoynted the Leuites, that wer about twenty yere old, vnto the seruice of the Lorde: so Iesua and his sonnes & his bryethen, and all the Leuites stode together, and performed the lawe and ordinaunce in the house of the Lorde. And the priestes stode, and hadde their garmentes and trompettes, and the Leuites, the sonnes of Blaph had Cymbals, geuinge thanks and prayles vnto the Lorde, accordinge as Dauid the kinge of Israel had ordeyned. And the song that they didde singe vnto the Lorde, was after this maner: O synge vnto the Lorde, for he is gracions, and his goodnes vppon Israell endureth for euer. And all the people blewe out with trompettes, and sang with loude voyce, praysing the Lorde together in the rering vp of the house of the Lorde. There came also frō among the priestes, and Leuites, the rulers and elders, according to the trybes, and kynredes, (suche as had sene the house afore) to the buyding of this Temple with great crye and great mourning, many also with trompettes and great ioye. In so much, that the trompetts might not wel be heard for the weping and mourning. For the common people blewe goodly vpon the trompettes.

1 Esd. 4. Then came the enemies of the tribes of Iuda and Benjamin, to know what that trompetting and noyle of shawmes might be. And they perceived that it was they, whiche were come agayne out of captiuitie, and would build the temple by a newe vnto the Lord God of Israel. So they went to Zorobabel and Iesua, and to the rulers of the villages, and sayde vnto them: Shall we buyde with you also? For we likewise haue heard your Lord, and we walke after the same maner, from the dayes of Abazareth the kinge of Siria, which brought vs hither. Then Zorobabel and Iesua, and the rulers of the villages of Israel said vnto them. It is not mete that ye shoulde buyde the temple of our God with vs: we our selues alone will build vnto the Lord, like as Cyrus the kinge of the Persians hath commaunded vs. But the Heathen in the lande layde them selues agaynst those that were in Jewry, held by the building from them, layde wayte vpon them pryncely, stopped suche as broughte anye thing to them, forbad them to buyde, and hindred those that made them passage, that the buyding shoulde not be synpshed, and this continued so longe as king Cyrus dyed, and so they put off the buydinge for the space of two yeres, vntill the reigne of kinge Darius.

The .vi. Chapetr.

1 Esd. 5. Now withstandinge, in the seconde yere of the reygne of Darius. Aggeus and Zacharye the sonne of Iddo prophesied vnto them in Jewry and Ierusalem in the name of the God of Israel,

Then Zorobabel the son of Salathiel, & Iesua the son of Josedech, stode by, and began to build the house of the Lord at Ierusalem, wher the prophets of the Lord helped them. At the same time came Silennes the vnder shene in Siria and Phenices, with the landlordes and his companions, and sayd vnto them: Who hath bidden and commaunded you to buyde the house, to make the rouse, and all other thinges agayne? And who are the workemen that buyde them? Nevertheless the elders of the Jewes hadde suche grace of the Lord, that they would not be let (though they were prouoked thereto) but builded on still, vntill the time that king Darius were certified thereof, and an answer receaued from him. The letter that these men sent vnto kinge Darius was after this manner. Silennes the vnder shene in Siria and Phenices, and the landlordes with their companions, which are head rulers in Siria and Phenices, sende their salutation vnto Darius the kinge. We certifie the Lord the kinge, that we came into the lande of Jewry, and went to Ierusalem: where we founde them buyding the great house of God and the temple, with greates collye free stone, and with goodly timber for the walles: yea they make greates haile with the worke, and helpe one another, and it goeth forth prosperously in their handes, and with greates diligence and worship is it made. Then asked we the elders, who had commaunded them to make by the house and the building, and this we dyd, to the intent that we might certifie thee perfectlye, and write vnto thee, the names of those that wer the rulers of the worke. So they gaue vs this answer: we are the seruantes of the Lord, which made heuen & earth, and as for this house. it hath bene builded and set by afore time by the greates mightie king of Israel. But when oure fathers prouoked God vnto wrath, and sinned against the God of Israel, he gaue them ouer into the power

power of Nabuchodonosor king of Babylon, the king of the Chaldees, whiche brake downe the house, and hente it, and carped awaye the people prisoners vnto Babylon. * Neuertheles, in the first yere that king Cirus reigned at Babylon, Cirus the king wrote, and commaunded to build by his house agayne, and all the ornaments that Nabuchodonosor carped away from Jerusalem vnto Babilon, and appropriated vnto his owne temple: these brought Cirus forth agayn, and deliuered them to Zorobabel, and to Salmanasar the vnder shene, commaunding them that they shoulde bring those same ornaments agayne to Jerusalem into the temple, and to begin from that time forth, to builde the temple agayne in his owne place. Then Salmanasar layed the foundation of the Lordes house at Jerusalem, and euer since haue they builded, and yet is it not ended. And therefore, O king, if thou thinkest it good, let it be sought in the Libraries and rolles of king Cirus, if it be founde then, that it is done with the councell and consent of king Cirus, and if our Lord the king be so minded, let him write vnto vs thereof. * Then commaunded king Darius to seeke in the Libraries: so at Egbatanis in a little city of Media ther was founde such a writinge. In the first yere of the reigne of Cirus, the same king Cirus commaunded, that the house of the Lord at Jerusalem, shoulde be builded agayne (& odours to be made there continually vnto the Lord) whose height shalbe .x. cubites, and the breadth, thre score cubits, and four square with thre heuen stones, with a losse of timber of the same countrey, yea, with a newe losse, and the expenses thereof to be gotten of the house of king Cirus. And the ornaments of golde and silver, that Nabuchodonosor toke out of the house of the Lord at Jerusalem, shall be set agayne in the temple at Jerusalem, where they were layd. Silennes also the vnder shene in Siria and Phenices, the princes and their companions and the other that be heade rulers in Siria and Phenices, shall not medle nor haue anye thinge to do with that place. * And Cirus haue commaunded also, that they shall build the house of the Lord whole by, and haue ordeyned them, to helpe those that be come out of captiuitie, till the house of the Lord be finished: and out of the tribute and taxing that is yereley raysed by in Siria and Phenices, diligently to geue them accertain summe to the offering of the Lord, and the same to be deliuered vnto Zorobabel the officer, that he therewithall may ordeyne oxen, rams, lambes, and corne, salt, wine and oyle, and that continually euery yere: after the expences. * Which the priests that be at Jerusalem, shewe to be made daylye: this shalbe geuen vnto them without delay, that they may offer sacrifices dayly to the best God, for the king and for his seruantes, and to pray for their liues. Let it be proclaimed also on euery syde, that whosoener breaketh or despiseth this commaundement of the king, shalbe hanged by a galous (made of his owne good) and all his goodes shalbe seasoned vnto the king. The Lord therefore (whose name is there called by) roote out and destroye all the kinges and people, that undertake by violence to hinder the same, or to deale vncarteously with the house of the Lord at Jerusalem. * And Darius the king haue ordeyned, that these thinges shalbe done with all diligence.

The vij. Chapter.

The Silennes the vnder shene in Celosiria, and Phenices, and the other landlordes with their companions, obeyed the thinges that king Darius had ordeyned, and were diligent in the holy woorkes, and were felow helpers with the olde rulers of the Jewes. And so the woorkes of the Sanctuary went forth, and prospered, when Aggeus and Zacharye prophesied. And they performed all thinges throughe the commaundes.

mandement of the Lord God of Israel, and after the deuise of Cyrus, Darius, and Artaxerxes, kinges of Persia. And thus was our house finished vnto the .xxiiij. daye of the moneth Adar in the .vi. yeare of Kinge Darius. And the children of Israel, the Priestes and the Leuites, and the other that were come oute of captiuitie, and suche as were toynd vnto theym, did according as it is written in the booke of Moyses. And in the dedication of the temple, they offered an hundred oxen, two hundred rammes, foure hundred lambes, and twelue goates for the sinnes of all the people of Israel, after the number of the tribes of Israel, the Priestes also and the Leuites. Goode arayed in the priestly garmentes, after the tribes, ouer all the woorkes of the Lord God of Israel, according to the booke of Moyses, & the porters by al 4 doers. And the children of Israel (with those that were come out of captiuitie) held the Pasche the fourteenth daye of the firste moneth, when the priestes and the Leuites were sanctified. They that came out of captiuitie, were not all sanctified together: but the Leuites were all sanctified together, and so all they that came out of captiuitie killed the Easter lambe for their brethren, for the priestes, and for them selues. And the children of Israel that came out of captiuitie, and escaped from all the abominations of the heathen, sought the Lord, and kepte the feast of the vnleuened bread seven dayes long, eating and drinking and were mery before the Lord, that the Lord had turned the deuice of the king of Assiria, and comforted their hertes to the woorkes of the Lord God of Israel.

The.iiij. Chapter.

Ad after him. when Artaxerxes the king of the Persians reigned, there went vnto him Esdras the sonne of Sarapas, the sonne of Iarias, the sonne of Helchias, the sonne of Salium, the sonne of Sadoch, the sonne of Achitob, the son of Iarias, the sonne of Iarias, the sonne of Boccus, the sonne of Bolla, the sonne of Phineas, the sonne of Seleazar, the sonne of Aaron the high Priest. This Esdras went by from Babilon (for he had good understanding in the lawe of Moyses, that was geuen of the Lord God of Israel, to be taught and done in dede.) And the king favoured him, and did him great worshippe and honoure after all his desires. There went by with him all socertaynes of the children of Israel, of the priestes, of the Leuites, of the singers, porters and ministers of the temple at Jerusalem. In the seventh yere of the reigne of king Artaxerxes, in the fiftie moneth, that is in the seventh yere of the regyne, they went from Babilon in the newe moone of the .v. moneth, and came the hye way to Jerusalem after his commaundement, like as the Lord had prospered their iourney. For in these Esdras gat great instruction, that he shoulde leaue none of the things behynde, which are in the lawe and commaundements of God. And he taught whole Israel all righteousness and iudgement. Then came the Secretaries of king Artaxerxes, and deliuered the wytynges (that were come from Artaxerxes the king) (to Esdras 4 priest and reader of the lawe of the Lord. And this is the coppye of the letter: King Artaxerxes sendeth his greeting vnto Esdras the priest and reader of the lawe of the Lord. Of frendship & good will, I haue ordeyned & charged if ther be any of the Iewes, of 4 priestes and Leuites in my realme, which desireth and is content to go with thee vnto Jerusalem, that he maye doo it. Therefore, if any man be minded to be with thee company, let them come together and go with thee (like as I am content, and my seven frendes, my counsellers) to see what they do at Jerusalem and in Iewoye, and keepe the thinges according as thou hast in the lawe of the Lord: and to bringe the giftes vnto God the Lord of Israel.

that I and my frendes have promised to Jerusalem, and all the spuer and golde that is in the countrie of Babylon, vnto the Lord to Jerusalem, with the thing that is geuen for the people in the Lordes temple at Jerusalem. Yea, that the same spuer and golde may be gathered: and oxen, rammes, sheepe and goates, and other that be longe to these thinges: and that they offer sacrifices vnto the Lord, vpon the altar of their Lord, whiche is at Jerusalem. And whatsoeuer thou and thy brethren will do with the silver and golde, that do after thy mind, according to the commandement of the Lord thy God, and likewise, with the holy vessels that are geuen thee, for the service of the house of the Lord thy God: and other thinges whatsoever is necessary for thee to the worke of the temple, that shall be geuen thee of the kinges treasure, and loke what thou with thy brethren will do with the golde and spuer, that do after the will of the Lord. And I king Artaxerxes have commaunded the keepers of the treasures in Siria and Phenices, that whatsoeuer Esdras the priest and reader of the lawe of the Lord doth write, it shalbe geuen him: till an hundred talents of spuer, and of golde in like maner. Of coyne also an hundred measures, and till an hundred vessels of wyne, and other plentiful things without number. Lette all thinges be doone after the lawe of the best GOD, that the worship of God aryle not in the realme of the kynge, and of hys sonnes. I commaunde you also, that ye require no taxe nor tribute of the priests, Levites, Syngers, and mynisters of the temple, nor of the writers, and that no man haue auctoritie to meddle anye thyng agaynst them. As for thee (O Esdras) set thou iudges and arbiters in the whole lande of Siria and Phenices, after the will of God, and learne al such as are ignorant in the lawe of God thy lord, and let all them that offend against the lawe be punished: whether it be with death, with payne to be condemned in money, or to be banished. Then saide Esdras the writer. Blessed be the God of our fathers, that hath geuen so good a mind and wil into the heart of the kinge, to magnifie his house that is at Jerusalem, and hath made me to be accepted in the sighte of the kinge, of his counsell, of his frendes, & of his nobles. And so I was steadfast in my mind, according as the Lord my God helped me, and I chose out men of Israel to go by with me. And these are the heades (after their kynredes & houses of their fathers) that went by with me from Babylon, out of the kingdome of Artaxerxes: Of the sonnes of Phares, Gersontius: Of the sonnes of Siemai: th, Imenus. Of the sonnes of Daur, Accus, the sonne of Tectia. Of the sonnes of Phares, Zacharie: and with him there turned agayne an hundred and fiftie men. Of the sonnes of the captaine of Moabylon, Jazai, & with him two C. and l. men. Of the sonnes of Zachnes, Jechonias, Jecholy, and with him two hundred and fiftie men. Of the sonnes of Salamasias, Getholy, and lxx. with him. Of the sonnes of Japharia, Jarias, Whethi, and with him four score. Of the sonnes of Job, Abdias, Jethely, & with him two hundred & twelue men. Of the sonnes of Bania, Salimoth the sonnes of Josaphia, and with him an hundred and thre score men. Of the sonnes of Weer, Zachary Wehei, and with him two hundred and viij. men. Of the sonnes of Ezead, Johannes Ezecham, and with him an hundred and ten men. Of the sonnes of Adoniam those that were the last, & these are their names. Eliphalan the sonne of Gebel and Semeias, & with him lxx. men. All these called I together by the water of Chis, where we pitched our tentes thre daies, and there I mustered them. As for the sons of the Priests and Levites, I found none there. Then sente I vnto Eleazar, and Eccelum, and Masmam, and Halabam, and Enathan, and Sares,

and Josiabimathan, Eunagan, Zacharie, Mosollaman, these were the Elders and menne of experience: and I sente them woorde, that they shoulde come vnto Hoddeus, whiche was by the place of the tresurpe, and commaunded them that they shold speake vnto Hoddeus and to his brethren, and to those that were in the tresurie, to sende vs suche men, as might execute the priestes office in the house of the Lord our God. And with the mighty hand of our Lord G D W, they brought vnto vs men of good experience, from among the sonnes of Hoddeus, the sonne of Leuy, the son of Israel, Heberiam, and the sonnes, and his brethren Vbin and Nin, of whō there were eyghtene. From amonge the childzen of the sonnes of Cananeus, and their sons were twentie men. And of them that serued in the temple, whom David had ordeyned, and the principall men that ministred for the worke vnto the Leuites in the temple, two hundred and twentie menne, whose names are all tokened hye in wytyng. • Then commaunded I a fasting vnto the ponge men besyde the Lord, that I myghte desyre of him a prosperous iourney, and a good waye for vs, yea, for vs, for our childzen, and for the cattell, because of the lapinges awayte, and I durste not require of the kinge men of horse and of foote, to conueye vs safely agaynst oure enemies: for we had saide vnto the king, that the power of the Lord our God should be with them that seeke him with their whole hearte. And therefore we besought God our Lord earnestly because of these thinges, and he was mercifull vnto vs, and heard our prayer. And I separated from among the rulers of the people, and from the priestes of the temple twelue men, and Sebeia and Asania, and tenne men of their brethren with theym. And I weyed them the golde and the syluer and all the priestly ornaments of the house of our God, whiche the kinge, and his counsell, and his princes, and whole Israel had geuen. And when I had weyed it, I gaue them an hundred and fiftie talentes in syluer, and an hundred talentes of syluer besell, an hundred talentes of golde, and of golden besell seven times twenty, and vessels of other metal (yea, of good metal) twelue glistering as the gold, and sayd vnto them: ye are holpe vnto the Lord, and the vessels are holy, and the golde and the syluer is promised vnto the Lord God of our fathers. Be diligent now and kepe it, vntill the tyme that ye deliuer it to the rulers of the people, to the priestes, to the Leuites, and to the principall men of the cities of Israel in Jerusalem, and in the chamber of the house of our God. • So the Priestes and the Leuites, which receaued of me the golde the syluer and the besell, brought it vnto Jerusalem, into the temple of the Lord. And from the river of Chin we brake by the twelue day of the fyrst moneth, till we came to Jerusalem. And when the thirde daye was past, the weyed golde and syluer was deliuered in the house of the Lord the fourth day, vnto Marimoth, the son of Jos the priest, and with him was Eleazar the sonne of Ahineas, and with them were Josabbus the sonnes of Isnet, Medias, and the sonne of Banas, and certayne of the Leuites to the number and to the weight: and the weight of them was written hye the same time. As for those that were come out of captiuitie, they offered sacrifice vnto the Lord the God of Israel: euen twelue oxen for al Israel. lxxv. rammes. lxxij. sheepe. xij. goates for synne, twelue kyne for a thankoffering, all to the sacrifice of the Lord. And the kinges commission deliuered they vnto the swardes and debittes of the kinges, and to the vnderthynges in Celosiria and Phenices. • Nowe, when these thinges were done, the rulers came vnto me, and sayde: The generation of Israel, the princes, the priestes, and Leuites, the strange people, and indwellers of the land, haue not put away their uncleannes, fro the Cananites, Hethites, Heretites, from the Moabites, Egyptians, & Edomites. For both they and their ſonnes haue mingled them ſelues with the daughters of the, and the holpe ſerde is mixte with the outlandiſh heathen, and ſence the beginning of their reigne haue the rulers and heades beene partakers of their 1. El. 9. a wickednes. As ſone as I had hearde theſe thinges, immediatly I rente my holpe garmentes, and pulled out the haire of my head and my berd, and ſat me downe ſorrowfull and heauy. So all they that were moued thow the word of the God of Iſrael, came vnto me: and I ſat ſtill, full of heauines, vntill the euening ſacrifice. Then ſtoode I vp from ſitting, hauing rente clothes and the holp garment, kneeled downe vpon my knees, helde vp my handes vnto the Lord, and ſayde: O Lord, I am confounded and aſhamed before thy face, for our ſinnes are become many vpon our heades, and our wickednesſes are exalted vnto the heauen, for ſence the time of our fathers, we are in great ſinne vnto this daye.

And for the ſinnes of vs and our fathers, we with our brethren and with our priettes haue bene deliuered vnto the kynges of the earth, into the ſword, and into captiuitie, and became a people, with confuſion and ſhame vnto this day. And now, O Lord God, how great is thy mercy that we haue gotten of thee: in that thou haſt leſte vs a rote & a name in the place of thy ſanctuarie, to diſcouer our light in the houſe of the lord our god, & haſt geuen vs meate at al times of our miniſtration. And when we were in capti-uety we were not forſaken of the Lord our god: but he made the kings of Perſia, gracious and fauourable vnto vs, ſo that they gaue vs vittayles and meate, yea, and leaue to buyde by the temple of our Lord God againe, to repoyſe the waſted places of Iſion, and to dwell in Ieremy and Ieruſalem.
And now, O Lord, what ſhal we ſay, hauing al theſe thinges in poſſeſſion?
For we haue broke thy commandements which thou gaueſt vnto vs by the han-des of thy ſervants the prophets, ſaying: The lande that ye go vnto and that is geuen you for an herptage to haue in poſſeſſion, is defiled with the vncleenneſſe and ſpythines of the heathen, and with their abhominacion haue they polluted it altogether. Therfore, ſhal ye not ioyne your daughters vnto their ſonnes, nor marrye your ſonnes vnto their daughters. More-ouer, ye ſhall not ſeeke to make peace with them, that ye maye increaſe and eate the beſte in the lande, and that ye maye deuide the inheritance of the land vnto your children for euermore.

As for the thinge that now we hapneth vnto vs, it cometh all for our wicked workes and great ſinnes, yet haſt thou geuen vs ſuch a rote, that we are come agayne into our owne land, and we are ſo wicked, that we haue broken thy ſtatutes and commaundemen-tes agayne, and mingled our ſelues with the vncleennes of the outlandiſh heathen. O lord, art thou angry with vs, wilt thou rote vs cleane out, that our rote and name remayne nomore?
O Lord God of Iſrael thou art true, for our roote endureth yet vnto this preſent daye. And behoide, now we are we before thee in our ſinnes, now can we not ſtand before thee in them. And when Eſdras with this prayer had knowledged the ſynne, weeping, and lying flat vpon the ground before the temple, there gathered vnto him from Ieruſalem a great multitude of men and women, of yonge men and may-dens, for there was a very great we-ping and mourning in the congregation. So when Iechonias the ſonne of Ieheli one of the children of Iſ-rael cryed, he ſayde vnto Eſdras: we haue ſynned agaynſte the Lord, becauſe we haue maryed outlandiſhe women of the heathen. Nowe arte thou ouer all Iſrael. We will ſweare an othe therefore vnto the Lord, that we ſhall put awaye all our wyues, which we haue taken of the heathen, with their children: lyke as it is appointed thee by our forefathers. Stand by then, open thou it, and declare it playnely vnto vs, accordinge to the lawe of the Lord: for the matter belongeth vnto thee, and we will helpe thee, quite thy selfe manly. So Esdras arose, and toke an othe of the rulers, of the priests, and of the Leuites, and of Israel, to do after these thinges, and they swore.

The. ix. Chapter.

Then Esdras stode by from the court of the temple without, and went into the chamber of Jonathas, the sonne of Pasabus, and remayned there, and dyd eate no meate, nor drinke drinke, for the multitude of the wickednesse of the people. And there was made a proclamation in all Ieremy and at Jerusalem, for all such as wer gathered at Jerusalem out of captiuitie, that whosoener came not to Jerusalem within two or thre dayes (according to the iudgement of the old lordes of the councel) his goodes should be taken from him, and be excluded from the congregatiō of the captiuitie. And in thre dates were all they of the trybe of Iuda and Benjamin gathered together at Jerusalem, the twentieth daye of the ninth moneth. And the whole multitude sat trembling in the court of the temple, for it was winter. So Esdras arose by, and sayde vnto them: ye haue done vnrighteouslye, in that ye haue taken outlandishe wyues in marriage, and so to increase the synnes of Israel. And now we knowledg the fame, and geue prayse vnto the Lord god of our fathers, and perfourme his will departing from the heathen of the lande, and from the outlandishe wyues. Then cryed the whole multitude with a loude voyce, and said: like as thou hast spoken, so will we do: but for so muche as the people are many, and the wynter here, we maye not stand without the house: agayne, this worke is not a thinge, that can be fynished in a day or two, for we be many that haue synned in these thinges. Wherefore therefore that the rulers of the multitude, and they that dwelt with vs, and as many as haue outlandish wyues that the priests also and iudges of euery place may stand in the time appoynted, till they swage the swathe of the Lord in this busynes. Then Ionathas the sonne of Eziel, and Ozias and Thecan receyued the charge of this matter, & Bozaiamus and Aeyus, and Sabathens helpe them thereto. After this all they stode by that were come oute of captiuitie. And Esdras the priest chose vnto him the principall men from amonge the fathers, according to their names, and the newe moone of the tenth moneth they sat together, to examine this matter. And so the matter was a determining (concerning the men that hadde outlandishe wyues) untill the newe moone of the first moneth. And of the priests that hadde mixte themselves with outlandishe wyues, there were found: Of the sons of Ielus, the sons of Iosedec and his byrthen, Hazeas, Eleazar, Jozibus and Josedus, which offered themselves to put away their wyues, and to offer a ram for their ignorance. And of the sons of Semmeri, Malas, and Elis, and Ieelech, Azarias. Of the sonnes of Folsa, Amosias, Milmaen, Hethana, Jusio, Jedus, and Galas. And of the Leuites, Josabbus, Semais, and Colnis, Caletas, Factas, Colnas, and Elionas. Of the singers of the sanctuarie, Elitarib, Zacharus. Of the porters, Sallamas and Colbanes. And of Israel, of the children of Foz, Osi, and Remias, and Gedias, and Melchias, Michelus, Elazarus, Jemmebias, & Bannas. And the children of Jolaman, Chanias, zachary, Jetzrelius, Jodius, Erimoth and Elias. And of the sonnes of Jethotm, Eliadas, Iaslamus, and Jorchias, Larimoth, Sabbis, and Ebedias. And of the sonnes of Jech, Joannes, Amarias, Zabbas, and Cammus. And of the sonnes of Bannus, Olanmus, Malachus, Jedus, Jafuk, Alabus, & Jerimoth. And of the sonnes of Joden, Hatus and Hoosias, and Calcius, and Raasnas, Maasias, Mathathias, Besell Bannus, and Manasses. And of the sonnes of Sane, Sones, Atras, Melchias, Samas, Simon, Benjamin, Malchus, and Marras. And of the sonnes of Isom, Cariancus, Mathathias, Bannus, Eliphalach, Manasses, Semei. Of the sonnes of Bannus, Jeremie, Hoodias, Abamas, Johell, Baneas, Delias, Iona, Arrimoth, Eliasib, Mathancus, Eliasias Ozias, Drius, Semeidus, Zambus, and Ioseph. Of the sonnes of Robeins, Idelus, Mathathias, Sabadus, Zerchek, Sedmi, Jelleus, and Baneas. All these had taken outlandish women to marriage, and they put them away with their children. The Priests and Leuytes, and all they that were of Israell, dwelte at Jerusalem, and throughout all the land, in the newe moone of the seuenth moneth, and the children of Israell were in their dwellinges. And the whole multitude came together, vpon the floore at the East syde of the holie port of the Temple. And they spake vnto Esdras, the hie Priest and reader, that he would bring the lawe of Moyse, whiche was geuen of the LORD GOD of Israell. So Esdras the hie Prieste broughte the lawe vnto the whole multitude, to man and woman, and to all the priestes, that they might heare the lawe, in the newe moone of the seuenth moneth. And he readde in the floore that is before the holy port of the temple, from the morning early vnto the eueninge, before menne and women. And they applyed their minde all vnto the lawe. And Esdras the Prieste and reader of the lawe stode by vpon a pulpit of wood, whiche was made therefoze: and vpon his ryght hande there stode by him Mathathias, Samus, Ananias, Azarias, Aris, Ozechias, and Balsamus. Vpon his left hand stode Saldeus, Malachias, Abulchias, Sabus, Sabadus, and Zacharye. Then toke Esdras the Booke before the whole multitude: for he was the principall, and hadde in moste honoure of them all. And when he hadde read out the lawe, they stode all straght vpon their feete. So Esdras prayesed the LORD, the moste hie GOD, the Almighty GOD of Hoosies. And all the people answered, Amen: and held by their handes, fell downe flatte vpon the earth, and prayesed the Lord. And Iesus, Baneas, Sarchias, Jaddimus, Accubus, Sabatheus, Caluthes, Azarias, Jozadus, Ananias, and Philias, the Leuytes, lyfte their handes vwarde, and bowed their faces to the ground, and prayesed the Lord. Those were they which taught the lawe of the LORD: and read the lawe of the Lord in the congregation: and euery man set them before, that vnderstode the lawe. Then spake Scharates vnto Esdras, the hie Priest and Reader, and to the Leuytes, that taughte the multitude, sayinge: Thyse daye is holie vnto the Lord, and all they that hearde the lawe wepte. So Esdras sayde: Departe your way then, and eate the beste, and drinke the sweetest, and sende giftes vnto them that haue nothinge: for this daye is holie vnto the Lord, and bee not ye sozpe: for the Lord will bring you vnto honoure. Then went they their waye euerychone, and did eate and drinke, and were mery, and sent rewards vnto them that had nothing, that they also mighte eate with gladnesse: for they were exceeding reioiced, through the wordes that were read vnto them in the law. And so they were gathered together at Jerusalem, to hold the feast, according to the coneuant of the LORD god of Israell.

ſlaughter. Yee haue not forſaken me, (in a maner) but your owne ſelues, ſaith the Lord. Thus ſaith the almighty Lord: Haue I not prayed you, as a father his ſonnes, as a mother her daughters, and as a nurſe her yong babes, that ye ſhould be my people, and I ſhould be your God: that ye ſhould be my children, and I ſhould be your owne father?

Mat. 23. I gathered you together, as an Henne gathereth her chickens vnder her winges. But now what ſhall I do vnto you? I ſhall caſt you out from my face: When you offer vnto me, I ſhall tourne my face from you, for your ſolemne feaſt daies, your newe Moones, and your circumciſions haue I forſaken. I ſent vnto you my ſeruauntes the prophets whom ye haue taken and ſlayne, and toꝝne their bodieſ in peces, whole blond I will require of your handes, ſaith the Lord. Thus ſaith the almighty Lord: Your houſe muſt be deſolate. I wil caſt you out as the wind dothe the ſtrawe, your children ſhall not be fruitfull, for they haue deſpiſed my commaundement, and done the thing that is euill befoꝝe me. Your houſes wil I geue vnto a people that ſhall come, & they that neuer herd me, ſhall beleue in me, & they vnto whom I neuer ſhewed token, ſhall doo the thing that I commaunde them. They haue ſene no Prophets, yet ſhall they call their ſinnes to remembraunce, and knowledg theym. I report me vnto the grace, that I will do for the people whiche is come, whole chyldꝝen reioyce in gladnes, and though they haue not ſene me with bodily eyes, yet in ſpꝝrite they beleene the thinge that I ſay. And now brother, beholde what great worſhip, and ſee the people that cometh from the Eaſt, vnto whom I will geue the Dukedome

Eſa. 65. Ro. 10. of Abraham, Iſaac, and Iacob, of Moſes, Amos, and Michaeas, of Joel, Abdi, Ionaſ, Nahum, and Iſaiac, of Iſophonye, Aggeus, Zacharye, and Malachie, whiche is called alſo an Angelle, (or meſſaunger) of the Lord.

Thus ſaith the LORD: I broughte this people out of bondage, I gaue them my commaundementes by my ſeruauntes, the Prophets, whiche they woulde not heare, but deſpyſed my counſayles. The mother that bare theym, ſayth vnto theym: Goe your waye ye children, for I am a widowe, and forſaken: I brought you vnto this gladneſſe, but with ſorow and heauynelle haue I loſte you, for ye haue ſynned befoꝝe the Lord your God, and doone the thinge that is euill befoꝝe him. But what ſhall I now doo vnto you? I am a widowe, and forſaken: Goe your way, & my children, and aſke mercy of the Lord. As for me, O father, I cal vpon thee for a witneſſe ouer the mother of theſe children, whiche woulde not keepe my covenant, that thou bring them to conſuſion, and their mother to a ſpoyle, that ſhe bear no moꝝe. Let their names be ſcattered amonge the heathen. Let them be put out of the earth, for they haue thoughte ſcoꝝne of my covenant. Wo be vnto thee Aſſur, thou that hydeſt the brightcouſneſſe by thee. Thou wicked people, remember. What I dyd vnto Sodom and Gomorra, whole lande is tourned to pitche and aſhes. Euen ſo alſo will I doo vnto all theym, that heare me not, ſaith the Almighty Lord. Thus ſaith the Lord vnto Eſayas. Tel my people, that I will geue theym the Kingdome of Ieruſalem, whiche I would haue geuen vnto Iſrael. Their gloꝝy alſo I toke vnto me, & gaue the the euertlaſting tabernacles, whiche I had prepared for theſe. The tree of life ſhalbe vnto them a ſweete ſmelling oymntment, they ſhall neyther labour, nor be weery. Goe ye your waye, and ye ſhall receaue it. Pray for your ſelues a ſewe daies, that they may dwell therein. Nowe is the kingdome prepared for you, therfoꝝe watche. Take heauen and earth to witneſſe, for I haue broken the euill in peces, and created the good: for I lyue, sayth the Lord, Mother embrace thy chyldren, and bringe the vp with gladnes: make their sete as fast as a pillar, for I haue chosen thee, sayth the Lord. And those that be deade will I raipe vp agayne from their places, and bringe them out of the graues, for I haue knowen my name in Israell. Feare not thou mother of the chyldren, for I haue chosen thee, sayth the Lord. And for thy helpe I shall sende thee my seruantes E- say and Jeremy, after whose counsell I haue sanctified & prepared for thee twelue trees with diuerse frutes, and as many welles, flowing with milke and honye, and seuen mountaynes, wherupon there growe roses and ly- lyes, wherein I will fyll my chyldren with ioy. Execute iustice for the wid- dowe, be iudge for the fatherles: geue to the poore, defende the comfortlesse, clothe the naked, heale the wounded and sicke, laughe not a lame man to scozne, defende the crepell, and let the blind come into the lycht of my clear- nes: • Where soeuer thou fyndest the dead, take them, and bury them, and I shall geue thee, the fyrste place in my resurrection. Holde still (O my peo- ple) and take thy rest, for thy quietnes is come. Feede thy chyldren, O thou good nurse, stablish the their sete: Is for the seruantes whom I haue geuen thee, there shall not one of theym pe- ryshe. For I will seke them from thy number, bere not thy selfe. For when the day of trouble and heauynes com- meth, other shall wepe and be sorow- full, but thou shalt be mery and plen- tious. The heathen shall be gelous, but they shall be able to do nothing agaynst thee, sayth the Lord. My handes shall couer thee, so that thy chyldren shal not see the fire euerlastyng. Be ioyfull, O thou mother with thy chyldren, for I will deliuer thee, sayth the Lord. Re- member thy dead chyldren, for I shall bring them out of the earth, and shew mercy vnto them, for I am mercifull, sayth the Lord almightie. Embrace thy chyldren, vntill I come, and shew mercy vnto them, for my welcomme ouer, and my grace shall not fayle. I Esayas receiued a charge of the Lord vpon the mount Oreb, that I should go vnto Israell. But when I came vnto Israell, they sette me at naught, and despised the commaundement of the Lord. And therefore I sape vnto you, O ye heathen that heare and vnderstand. Loke for your shephearde, he shall geue you euerlastyng rest, for he is nye at hande, that shall come in the ende of the woylde. Be ready to the rewarde of the kingdome, for the euerlastyng lycht shall shyne vpon you for euermoze. Flee the shadow of this woylde, receaue the ioyfulness of your glory. I testifie my sauour open- ly, O receaue the gifte that is geuen you, and be glad, geuing thanks vnto him that hath called you to the hea- uenly kingdome. Dryfe vp and stande fast: beholde the number of those that be sealed in the feast of the Lord, whiche are departed from the shadowe of the woylde, and haue receaued glory- ous garments of the Lord. Take thy number, O Syon, and shut vp thy pu- rified, whiche haue fulfilled the lawe of the Lord. The number of thy chil- dren whom thou longest for, is fulfil- led, beseech the power of the Lord, that thy people whiche haue bene called from the beginning, may be halowed. • I Esayas saw vpon the mount Si- on a great people, whom I could not number, and they all prayled the Lord with songes of thankesgeuyng. And in the midst of theym there was a yonge man of an hie stature, moze ex- cellent then all they, and vpon every one of their heades he sette a crowne, and was etier higher and higher, whiche I marcelled at greatly. So I asked the aungell, and sayde: Why, what are these? He answered and saide vnto me: These be they that haue put off the mortall clothyng, and put on the immortall, & haue testified and know- ledged the name of God. Nowe are they crowned, & receaue the rewarde. Then sayd I vnto the aungell: What yong person is it, that crowneyth the, and geueth them the palmes in them handes: So he answered, and sayde vnto me: It is the sonne of God, who they haue knowledged in the worlde. Then began I greatly to conuende them that stode so stiffly for the name of the Lord. And so the aungell sayde vnto me: Go thy way, and tel my people, what maner of thinges and howe great wonders of the Lord thy God, thou haste seene.

The. iij. Chapter.

In the thirty yere of the fall of the cite, I was at Babilon, and laye troubled vpon my bedde, and my thoughtes came vpon my heart: for I sawe the desolation of Sion, and the plenteous wealth of the city that dwelt at Babilon: and my spirit was sore moued, so that I began to speake fearfull wordes to the most hiest, and sayd: O Lord, I orde, thou spakest at the beginning, when thou plantedst the earth (and that thy seife alone) and gauest commaundement vnto the people, and a bodie vnto Adam, whiche was a creature of thy hands, and hast breathed in him the breath of life, and so he liued befoze thee, and thou leddest him into Paradise, whiche garden of pleasure thy right hande had planted ouer the earth was made: And vnto him thou gauest commaundemente to loue thy way, which he transgressed, and immediatly thou appoyntedst death in him, and in his generations. Of him came nations, tribes, people, and kinredes out of number. And every people walked after theyr owne will, and did nice thinges befoze thee: and as for thy commaundements, they despised them. But in procelle of time thou broughtest the water flood vpon those that dwelte in the worlde, and destroyedst them. And like as the death was in Adam, so was the water flood also in these. Neuertheless, one of them thou leftest: namely, Noe with his household, of whom came the righteous men. And it happened that when they that dwelt vpon the earth began to multiplie, and had gotten many children, and were a great people, they began to be moze vngodlye then the first. Now when they all liued so wickedlye befoze thee, • thou diddest choose thee a man from among them, whose name was Abraham. Him thou louedst, and vnto him only thou shewedst thy will, and madest an euerlasting couenaunt with him, promisinge him, that thou wouldest neuer forsake his seede. And vnto him thou gauest Isaac, • vnto Isaac also thou gauest Jacob and Esau. As for Jacob thou diddest chose him, and put backe Esau. And so Jacob became a great multitude. And it happened that when thou leddest his seede out of Egypt, • thou broughtest them vnto the mount Sion, bowinge downe the heauens, settinge fast the earthe, mouinge the ground, makinge the depthes to shake, and troublinge the worlde. And thy gloze wente throughe four portes of sye, and earth quakes and windes, and colde: that thou mightest gene the lawe vnto the seede of Jacob, and diligence vnto the generation of Israell. And yet tokest thou not awaye from them that wicked heart, that thy lawe might bringe forth fruite in them. For the first Adam bare a wicked hert, transgressed, and was overcome, and so be all they that are bozne of him. Thus remained weakenes with the lawe in the hertes of the people, with the wickednes of the rote: so that the good departed away, and the euil abode still. So the times passed away, and the yeres were brought to an ende. Then diddest thou rapse thee vpon a seruant called David, • whom thou commaundedst to builde a cite vnto thy name, and to offer vpon incense and sacrifice vnto thee therein. This was don now many yeres. Then the inhabitants of the cite forsoke thee, and in al thinges did euen as Adam and all his generations had done: for they also had a wicked hert. And so thou gauest thy city ouer into the hands of thine enemies. Are they of Babilon then better & moze righteous then thy people, that they shall therefore haue the dominion of Sion: For when I came there, and saw their vngodlynes, and so great wickednes, that it coulde not be numbred: yea when my soule sawe so many euill doers (in the city yere) my heart sayled me: for I sawe howe thou sufferest them in their vngodlynes, and sparest the wickedners: but thine owne people hast thou voted out, and preserved thine enemies: and this hast thou not shewed me: I cannot perceauie how this happeneth. Do they of Babilon then better, then they of Sion? Or is there any other people that knoweth thee, sauing the people of Israel? Or what generation hath so beleued thy couenauntes as Iacob? And yet their rewarde appeareth not, and they labour hath no fruit. For I haue gone here and there through the heathen, and I see that they be rich and wealthie, and thinke not vpon thy commaundements. Weepe thou therefore our wickednesse now in the balaunce, and theirs also that dwell in the worlde, and so shall thy name be no where sounde but in Israel. Or where is there a people vpon earth, that hath not sinned before thee? Or what people hath so kept thy commaundementes? Thou shalt fynde, that Israel by name hath kept thy preceptes, but not the other people and heathen.

And the Angell that was sente vnto me (whose name was Uriell) gaue me an aunswere and sayd: Thy hert hath takē to much vpon it in this worlde, and thou thinkest to comprehend the waye of the highest. Then sayde I: Yea my Lord. And he aunswere me, and sayd: I am sent to shewe thee the wayes, and to set forth three similitudes, before thee: whereof if thou canst declare me one I will shewe thee also the way, that thou desirest to see, and I shall shewe thee from whence the wicked heart cometh. And I sayde: Tell on my Lord. Then sayde he vnto me: So thy way, weepe me the waye of the fire, or measure me the blast of the winde, or call me agayne the day that is past. Then aunswere I, and sayde: What man bozne is able to do that? Why requirest thou such of me? And he saide vnto me: If I should aske thee, howe deepe dwellinges are in the sea? Or howe great water springes are vpon the firmament? Or howe great water springes are in the beginning of the deepe? Or which are the outgoinges of Paradise? Peradventure thou wouldest say vnto me: I neuer wente downe yet into the depe nor hell, neyther did I euer clime vp into heauen.ouerthelste, nowe haue I asked thee but onely of fire and winde, and of the day, wherethrough thou hast traueled, and from the which thou canst not be separated: and yet canst thou geue me no aunswere of them. He saide mozeouer vnto me: Thine owne thinges and suche as are growen by with thee, canst thou not knowe: how shuld thy besell then be able to comprehend the waye of the highest, and nowe outwardly in the corrupt worlde, to vnderstand the corruption that is euident in my sight? Then sayd I vnto him: It were better that we were not at all, then that we should liue in wickednesse, and to suffer, and not to knowe whereto. He aunswere me, and sayd: I went in a wood, and the trees toke such a deuice, & saide. Come let vs go, and fighte agaynst the sea, that it may depart a way before vs, and that we may make vs yet moze woods. The flouds of the sea also in like manner toke this deuice, and sayd: Come, let vs go vp, and fighte agaynst the trees of the wood that we maye make our land the wider. He thought and deuise of the wood was but vayne and nothing woorth, for the fire came and consumed the wood: He thought of the floudes of the sea came likewise to naughte also, for the lande stood vp and stopped them. If thou wer indge nowe betwixt these two, whom wouldest thou iustifie, or whom wouldest thou condemne? I aunswere & said: Woe is it in a foolish thought that they bothe haue detroyed. For the ground is geuen vnto the wood, and the sea also hath his place to beare his flooden. Then answered he me, and sayd: thou haste geuen a righte iudgement, why iudgest thou not thy selfe also? For like as the ground is geuen vnto the wood, and the sea, to his floudes: even so. they that dwell vppon earth, may vnderstande nothing, but that which is vpon earth: and he that dwelleth aboue the heuens, may only vnderstande things, that ar aboue the heuens. Then answered I, & sayd: I beseech thee, O lord, let me haue vnderstanding: for it was not my minde to be curious of thy hye thinges, but of such as we daily medle withat, namely: wherfore that Israell is blasphemed of the heathen, and for what cause the people (whothou euer hast loved) is geuen ouer, to be punished of vngodlye nations: and whye, the laue of oure fathers is broughte to naught, and the wrytten couenantes come to none effect, and we passe away out of the worlde as the greshoppers, and our life is a verye feare, and we are not woorthye to obayne mercye: what will he do then vnto his name, whiche is called vpon ouer vs? Of these thinges haue I asked question.

Then answered he me, and said: The moze thou searchest, the moze thou shalt maruell: for the worlde hasteth fast to passe away, and cannot comprehend the thinges that are promised for the righteous in time to come: for this worlde is full of vnrigheteousnes and weakenes. But as concerning the thinges wherof thou askest me, I will tell thee. The euill is sowen, but the destruction therof is not yet come. If the euill nowe that is sowen, be not turned vpsyde downe, and yf the place where the euill is sowen, passe not away, then can not the thing come that is sowen with good. For the corne of euill seede hath bene sowen in the heart of man from the beginning, and howe muche vngodlynes hath he broughte vnto this time: and how much shall he yet bying forth, vntill he come into the barne. Wonder nowe by thy selfe, when the corne of euill seede is cut downe, howe great a barn shall it full? I answered and sayde: Howe and when shall these thinges come to passe? wherfore are our yerres fewe and euill? And he answered me, saying: Hast not thou to much vpon the hysell, for thy hastynes to be aboue him? but dayn, thou makest to much a doo. Did not the soules also of the righteous aske question of these thinges in their holynes, sayinge: Howe longe shall I hope of this fashion? when cometh the fruite of my barn, and my reward? And vpon this Ieremiell the Archangel gaue them answer, and said: Euen when the number of the seedes is filled in you, for he hath weyed the worlde in the balance: in measure and number hath he measured the time, and moueth it not vntill the same measure be fulfilled. Then answered I, and said: O Lord, Lord, now are we all ful of synne, and for oure sake peraduenture it is not, the barne of the righteous shall not be filled, because of the synnes of them that dwell vpon the earth. So he answered me, and sayde: Go thy waye to a woman with child, and aske of her when she hath fulfilled her nyne monethes, if her childbed maye keepe the birth any longer within her. Then sayde I: No Lord, that can she not. And he sayde vnto me: In hell the secret places of soules are like the pryuy chamber of a woman. For like as a woman that tranapleth, maketh haste, when the time and necessitie of the birth is at hande. Euen so doeth shee haste to deliuer it, that is committed vnto her. Like what thou desirest to see, it shalbe shewed thee from the beginning. Then answered I, and sayde: If I haue founde grace in thy sighte, and if it bee possible, O, If I bee meete therefore, shewe me thenne, whether there be moze to come then is passe, or moze passe then is for to come. What is passe I knowe, but what is for to come, I knowe not. And he said vnto me: Stand.

by hypon the right side, and I shall expound the similitude vnto thee. So I stode, and behold, an whot burning ouen went ouer befoze me: and it happened that when the flame was gone by, the smoke had the vpper hand. After this, there went ouer befoze me a waterpe cloude, and sent do wne much rayn with a storme: and when the stormy rayne was past, the droppes remained still. Then sayde he vnto me: like as the rayne is moze the droppes, and as the fyre exceedeth the smoke, euen so the mesure of the thynges that are past, hath the vpperhand. Then wente the droppes and the smoke aboue: and I prayed, and sayde: Maye I lue (thinkest thou) vntill that time? O what shall happen in those dayes? He answered me and sayde: As for the tokens whereof thou askest me, I may tel thee of them in parte: but as touching thy lyfe, I may not shew thee, for I am not sent thereto.

N Euerthelesse, as concerninge the tokens, marke this: Behold, the dayes shal come, that they which dwell vpon earth, shalbe taken in a great number, and the way of the truth shalbe hid, and the lande shalbe barren from sayth, but iniquitie shall haue the vpper hande, lyke as thou hast seene nowe, and as thou hast heard longe agoe. And the land that thou seest now to haue rule shalt thou shortly see waste. But yf God graunt thee to lyue, thou shalt see after the thynde trompette, that the sunne shal suddenly hyne agayn in the nyght, and the moone thre tymes in the daye, and blud shal droppe out of wood, and the stoane shall geue his voyce, and the people shalbe in quiete: and euē he shal rule, whom they hope not, that dwel vpon erth, and the foules shal flye, and the Sodomitish sea shall caste oute his fishe, and make a noyse in the night, which many shall not knowe, but they shall all heare the voyce thereof, There shalbe a confusion also in manye places, and the fire shalbe ofte sent agayne, and the wilde beastes shall go theyr waye, and manerous women shall beare monstros, and salte waters shalbe founde in the swete, one frende shall fight agaynste another: then shall all wit and vnderstandinge be hydde, and put asyde into theyr secreete places, and shalbe sought of manye, and yet not be founde: then shall vnrighteousnes and voluptuousnes haue the vpper hande vpon earth. One land also shall as be another, and saye: Is righteousness gone throughe thee? And it shall saye: No. At the same tyme shal men hope, but nothinge obteyne: they shall labour, but theyr wayes shal not prosper. To shew thee such tokens I haue lette, and yf thou wilt praye agayne, and wepe as now, and faste seuen dayes, thou shalt heare yet greter thynges. Then I awaked and a fearfulness wente throughe all my bodey, and my minde was feeble and carefull, so that I almost sownd withall. So the aungell that was come to talke with me, helde me, comforted me, and set me vpon my seate. And in the seconde night it happened, that Salathiel the captain of the people, came vnto me, saying: Where hast thou bene? and whye is thy countenance so heauy? Knowest thou not that Israel is committed vnto thee, in the lande of theyr captiuitie? Up then and eate, and forsake vs not, as the shepherde that leaueth his flocke in the hands of the wicked wolues. He sayde I vnto him: Go thy waye from me, and come not nye me: and he heard it, and as I sayd, so went he his way from me. And so I fasted seuen dayes, mourning and weeping, lyke as Wri-el the aungell commaunded me. And after seuen dayes it happened, that the thoughts of my heart were very greuous vnto me agayne, and my soule receaued the spirite of vnderstanding, and I began to talke with the moste hyest agayne, and said: O Lord Lord, of euery wood of the earth, and of all the trees therof, thou hast chosen thee one only vineyard, and of all landes of the whole world, thou hast chose thee one pit, and of all floures of the ground thou hast chosen thee one iylce, and of all the depthes of the sea thou hast filled the one ryuer, and of al builded cities thou hast halowed Syon vnto thyselfe, and of all the soules that are created thou hast named thee one done, and of all the cattel that are made, thou hast provided thee one sheepe, and among all & multitudes of folkes, thou hast gotten thee one people, and vnto this people whom thou louest, thou gauest a law, that is proued of al. And now, O Lorde, why hast thou geuen this one people ouer vnto many? and vpon the one roote thou hast prepared other, and why hast thou scattered thy one onely people among many? which treade them downe: yea which haue ener withstand thy promises, and neuer beliened thy couenauntes? And though thou werest enemy vnto thy people, yet shouldest thou punishe them with thine owne hands. Now when I had spoken these wordes, the Angell that came to me the night afore, was sent vnto me, and sayde vnto me: Here me, and herken to the thing that I say, and I shal tel thee moze. And I sayd: Speake on my Lorde. Then sayd he vnto me: Thou art fore beread and troubled for Israels sake. Louest thou that people better then him that made them? And I sayd: No Lorde, but of be ryre grefe and compassion haue I spoken. For my raynes payne me every houre, because I would haue experience of the way of the most hyest, and to seeke out parte of his iudgemente. And he saide vnto me: that thou mayest not. And I saide: wherfore Lorde, wher vnto was I borne then? O why was not my mothers childbed then my graue? So had I not seene the misery and trouble of Jacob, and the trauayle of my people of Israell. And he sayde vnto me: Stumber the thinges that are not yet come: gather me together the dropes that are scattered abroad, make me & floures greene agayne that are withered, open me the thing that is closed, and bring me forth the windes, that are shut vpper. Shewe me the ymage of a boyce, and then shall I declare the thinge that thou labourest to knowe. And I said: O Lorde, Lorde, who may knowe these thinges, but he that hath not his dwelling with men? As for me, I am vnwise, how may I then speake of these thinges wherof thou asked me. Then saide he vnto me: lyke as thou canst do none of these thinges that I haue spoken of, euen so canst thou not fynde out my iudgement, or in the ende the loue that I haue promised vnto my people. And I sayd: Behold, O Lorde, yet art thou nye vnto them that haue no ende, and what shall they doe, that haue bene before me, or we that be now, or they that shall come after vs? And he saide vnto me: I will lyken my iudgement vnto a ringe. Lyke as there is no slackenesse of the laste, euen so is there no swiftnesse of the fyrste. So I answered and saide: couldest thou not make those (that haue bene made, and be now, and that ar for to come) in one, that thou mightest shewe thy iudgement the sooner? Then answered he me, and sayd: The creature maye not haste aboute the maker, neyther may the world hold the at once, that shalbe created. And I sayd: How hast thou said then vnto thy seruauant, that thou liuing maker, haste made the creature, liuing at once, and the creature bare it? euen so myght it now also beare them that be present at ones. And he said vnto me: Alske the childbed of a woman, and say vnto her If thou bringest forth children, why doest thou it not together, but one after an other. Prye her therfor, to bring forth ten children at ones. And I said. She can not, but muste do it one after another. Then said he vnto me: Euen so haue I geuen a childbed vnto the earthe, for those that be sown vpon it by procelle of tyme. For lyke as a ponge childe maye not bringe forth thinges that belonge to the aged: euen so haue I ordeyned the world whiche I made. And I asked, and sayde: Sleepng thou hast nowe geuen me away.

The .iii. booke away, I will speake before thee: for our mother of whom thou hast tolde me, is yet yonge, and now she draweth nye vnto age. He answered me, and sayd: Aske a woman that beareth children, and she shall tell thee. Shewe vnto her: wherfore are not they (whō thou haste nowe brought forth) lyke those that were before thee, but lesse of stature. And she shall answer thee: They that be borne in the yowthe of strength are of one fashion, and they that are borne in the time of age (whē the childbed fayleth) are otherwyse. Consider nowe thy selfe, how that ye are lesse of stature, then those that wer before you, and so are they that come after you lesse then ye, as the creatures whiche nowe begynne to be olde, and haue passed ouer the strength of youth. Then sayde I: Lord I beseeche thee, yf I haue found fauour in thy syghte, shewe thy seruante, by whom doest thou visite thy creature?

The .vi. Chapter.

AND he saide vnto me: In the beginning when the ground was made: before the world stood, or euer the wyndes blew, before it thondred and lyghtened, or euer the foundations of Paradise were layed, before the fayre founteynes were seene, or euer the moueable powers were stablyshed, before the innumerable multitude of aungelles were gathered together, or euer the highnesses of the ayre were lyfted vp, afore the measures of the firmament were named, or euer the chimneyes in Syon were hote, and of the present yeres were sought out, and of euer the inuentions of them that now synne, were put aside, before they were sealed that nowe gather saythe for a treasure: then did I consider and ponder all these thynges, and they al were made throught me, and throught none other: by me also they be ended, and by none other. Then answered I and sayd: which shalbe the parting asunder of the tyme? Or when shalbe the ende of the syfte, and the beginning of it that foloweth? And he sayd vnto me: From Abraham vnto Isaac, when Jacob and Esau were borne of him, Jacobs hande helde fast the heele of Esau: for Esau is the ende of this world, and Jacob is the beginning of it that foloweth. The hand of man betwixte the heele and the hande. Other question (Esau) as he not thou. I answered then and said: O Lord, Lord, yf I haue found fauour in thy sighte, I beseeche thee, shewe thy seruante the ende of thy tokennes, wherof thou shewdest me parte the laste night. So he answered, and saide vnto me: Stande by vpon thy feete, and heare the perfect voyce and sounde. There shall come a great motion, but the place wher thou standest shal not be moued. And therfore when thou hearest the wordes, be not afraid, for of the ende shall the word and the foundation of the earth be vnderstand. And why? the word therof trembleth and quaketh, for it knoweth; that it must be chaunged at the ende. And it happeneth that when I had heard it, I stood by vpon my feete, and herkened: and beholde, there was a voyce that spake, and the sounde of it was lyke the sounde of many waters, and it sayde: Beholde the dayes come, that I will begynne to drawe nye, and to visite them that dwell vpon earth, and will begynne to make inquisition of them, what they be that haue hurt equitie with vnrightheousnesse, and when the lowe estate of Syon shall be fulfylled, and when the world that shall banyshe away, shall be ouerfallen, then will I do these tokens. The bookes shall be opened before the firmamente, and they shall see altogether, and the chyldren of a yere olde shall speake with their voyces: the women with childe shall brynge forth vntymely chyldren of thre or foure monethes olde, and they shall lye, and be raysed vp: and sodenly shall the lowen places appere as the vntowen, the full stowe houses shall sodenly

he founde emptye, and the trompette shall geue a sounde, which when euer man heareth, they shalbe hastelye strayed. • At that time shall frendes fyght one agaynst another lyke enemies, and the earth shall stand in fear with them. • The springes of the welles shal stand stil, and in thre houres they shall not renne. who so euer remaineth from all these thinges that I haue tolde thee, shall escape, and see my saluation, and the ende of youre woyle. And the men that haue receyued, shall see it, they that haue not tasted death from their byrthe, and the heart of the indwellers shalbe chaunged, and turned into another mening: for euil shalbe put out, and disceyt shalbe quenched. As for saith, it shall flourish, corruption shalbe overcome, and the truth, which hath beene so longe without fruite, shalbe declared. And it happened whenne he talked with me, that I looked demurely vpon him, before whom I stode, and these wordes sayde he vnto me: I am come to shewe thee the time of the nighte for to come. If thou wilt praye yet moze and faste seuen dayes agayne, I shall tell thee moze thinges, and greater then before: for thy voyce is heard before the hyest: for whye? the myghtye hath seene thy righteous dealing: he hath seene also thy chastitie, whiche thou haste had euer since thy yowthe: and therefore hath he sent me to shewe thee all these thinges, and to saye vnto thee: Be of good comfort, and feare not, and haste not with the times that are passe to thinke dayne thinges, and make not hast of the latter times. And it hapned after this, þ I wept agayn, and fasted seuen dayes in like maner, that I might fulfill the thre weekes: whiche he tolde me: In the eyghte nyghte was my hearte vexed withyn me agayne, and I beganne to speake before the hyest: for my spirite was greatiye sette on fyre, and my soule was in distresse, and I saide: O Lord, thou spakest vnto thy creature from the beginning (euen the fyrste daye) and saydest. • Lette heauen and earth be made, and thy word was a perfect worke. And then was there the spirite, and the darkenesse were yet on every side, and stille: there was no mans voyce as yet from thee. • The commaundedst thou a saye lighte to come forth out of thy treasures, that thy worke might appeare and be seene. Upon the second day thou madest the spirite of the firmament, and commaundedst it to part a sunder, and to make a diuision betwixt the waters, that the one part might remaine aboue: And the other beneath. Upon the thyrde day thou broughtest to passe, that the waters were gathered in the seuenth part of the earth: sixe partes hast thou dyed by, and kept them, to thintent that men might sowre and occupy husbandry therein. As soone as thy worde wente forth, the worke was made. For immediatly there was great and innumerable fruite, and many diuers pleasures and desires of temptation, flowres of changeable colour & smell and this was done the third day. • Upon the fourth daye, thou commaundedst that the Sunne should geue his shine and the Moone her light: the starres diddest thou set in order, • and gauest them a charge, to do seruice euen vnto man, that was for to be made. Upon the fift day, thou saydest vnto the seuenth part (where the waters were gathered) that they shold bring forth diuers beastes, foules, and fishes. And so it came to passe, that the dombe waters, and withoute soule, brought forth liuing beastes, at the commaundement of God, that all people might prayse thy wonderous works. • Then didst thou preserue two soules, & one thou callest Enoch, and the other Lemeathan, and diddest separate the one from the other: for the seuenth parte (namely, wher the water was gathered together) might not holde them bothe. Vnto Enoch thou gauest one part, which was dyed by the thyrde day, that he shoulde dwell in the same part, wherin at a thousand hils. But vnto Lemeathan, thou gauest the seuenth part, namely the moyst, and haste kept him.

him to deuoure what thou wilt, and when. Upon the sixte daye thou gavest commandement vnto the earth, that befoze thee, it should bring forth, beastes, cattel, and all that creepe, and (besides this) Adam also, whome thou madest Lord of all thy creatures. Of him come we al, and the people also, whom thou hast chosen speciall vnto thy selfe. All this haue I said now and spoken befoze thee, that I might shewe how that the worlde is made for our sakes. As for the other people which also come of Adā, thou hast sayd, that they are nothinge but be like a spetle, and haste spkened the aboundance of them vnto a drop that falleth frō the rooffe of the house. And nowe O Lord, the heathen which haue euer bene reputed as nothing, haue begonne to be lordes ouer vs, and to deuour vs: but we thy people (whom thou hast called the firste borne, thy onely begotten, and thy firste loue) are geuen into their handes and power. If the worlde nowe be made for our sakes, why haue we not the inheritance in possession wryth the worlde. How longe shall this endure?

The. v. Chapter.

AD it happened after that I had spoken out these wordes, there was sente vnto me an angel, which had bene by me also the nightes afore, and he sayde vnto me: Up El dias, and heare the wordes that I am comye to tell thee. And I sayde: speake on Lord my God. The sayde he vnto me: The sea is set in a wyde place, that it might be depe and great: but the entraunce is narrowe and smal like a riuer. For who wolde goe into the sea, to looke vpon it, and to rule it? If he went not throughe the narrowe, howe might he come into the brode? Item another: A Citie is builded, and set vpon a brode sicke, and is ful of all goodes, the entraunce is narrow and sodaine, like as if there were a fyre at the righte hande, and a deepe water at the left, and as it were onely one strait path betwixte them both, so small that there could but one man go there. If this citie now were geuen to an hepe and he neuer wente throughe the perillous waye, howe wolde he receaue his inheritance? And I sayde: It is so Lord. The sayde hee: Euen so is Israell also a position. And whi, for their sakes haue I made the worlde: and when Adam transgressed my statutes, then was the thinge indged that was done. Then were the entraunces of the worlde made narrowe, full of sorowe and transple. They are but fewe and euill, full of perils and labour. For the entraunces of the fore worlde were wide and sure, and brought immortall fruite. If they nowe whiche are entred into this worlde may not comprehend these strapte and dayne thinges, much lesse may they comprehend and vnderstand the secrete thinges. Whye disquietest thou thy selfe then, seing thou art but a corruptible man? And what wouldest thou knowe, wheras thou art but mortall? And why haste thou not reuealed into thine heart the thinge that is for to comye, but that is present? Then sayde I: O Lord Lord, thou haste ordeyned in the lawe, that the righteous should inherite these thinges, but that the vnfaithfull and vngodly should perishe. Neuerthelesse the righteous shal suffer strapte thinges, and hope for wyde: for they that haue liued vngodly and suffred strapt thinges, shal not see the wyde. And he sayde vnto me: There is no iudge as bone God, and none that hath vnderstandinge aboue the hyst. For there be manye that perishe, because they despise the lawe of God, that is set befoze them. For God hath geuen strait commandement to such as come, that they knowe what they do, and howe they should liue, and if they kept this, they should not be punished. Neuerthelesse they were not obedient vnto him, but spake agaynst him, ymagined dayne thinges, and purposed to synne, and sayde moreouer, that there was no God, and that God regarded it not, whys wayes haue they not knowen

Wen, his lawe hane they despised, and denied his promises: in his statutes and ordinaunces hane they not beene faithful and stedfast, and hane not per-fourmed his woordes. And therefore Eldas: vnto the full, plentie: and to the emptie, emptines. Beholde, the time shal come, that these tokens whiche I haue tolde thee, shal come to passe, and the hyde shal appeare, and the earth, that now passeth away, shal be shewed, and whosoener is deliue-red from the foresaide euils, shal see my wonders. For my sonne Iesus shal be openly declared, with those that be with him: and they that re-mayne, shal be mery in foure hundred yeres. After these same yeres shal my sonne Christ dye, and all menne that haue lyfe, and the worlde shal be turned into the old silence seuen daies, lyke as in the fore iudgements, so that no man shal remayne. And after seuen daies, the worlde that yet awake not, shal be raysed vp, and shal dye corrupte. And the earth shal restore those that haue slepte in her, and so shal the duste those that dwell in science, and the secreete places shal deli-uer those that be commytted vnto C theym. And the moste hyest shal be openly declared vpon the seat of iudge-ment, and all miserie shal vanysh awaye, and longe suffering shal be gathered together. But the iudgement shal continue, the truth shal remaine, and faith shal waxe strong, the worke shal folowe, and the rewarde shal be shewed: the righteousnes shal watch, and the vnrightheousnes shal beare no rule. Then saide I: Abraham prayed for the fathers that synned in the wilderness, and he that camme after him for; Israel, in the time of Ahas and Samuel: and Dauid for the destruction, and Salomon for theym that came into the Sanctuarie, and Elias for those that receaued rayne, and for the dead, that he mighte lyue: and Ezechias for the people in the time of Sennacherib: and diuerse other in lyke maner, which haue prayed for many. Then so now, seying the corrupte is growen vp, and wickednes increased, and the righteous hane prayed for the vngodlye, wherefore shal it not be so now also? He aun-swered me and sayde: This presente worlde is not the end, there remaineth muche honour in it. Therefore hane they prayed for the weake. But the daye of doome shal be the ende of this tyme, and the begynning of the im-mortalitie for to come, wherein all corruption vanyshed, all voluptuousnes is losed, al misbeliefe taken away, righteousnes growne, and the veritie spronge vp. Then shall no man be able to saue him that is destroyed, nor to oppresse him that hath gotten the byctorie. I answered then and saide: This is my spyt and last saying: that it hadde bene better, not to haue geuen the earth vnto Adam: or els when it was geuen him, to keepe him that he should not synne. For what profit is it for men now in this presente tyme to liue in heauines, and after death to looke for punishment? O thou Adam what halte thou done? For though it was thou that synned, thou arte not fallē alone, but we al that come of the, for what profit is it vnto vs, if there be promysed vs an immortall time, whereas we medle with deadly wokes: and that there is promysed vs an euerlasting hope, where as our selues are euill and vayne, and that there are laied vp for vs dwellinges of health & freedome, whereas we haue liued euill, and that the worship of the hyest is kept to defend them, which haue led a pacient life, whereas we haue walked in the most wicked waies of al? And that there shal be shewed a paradyse, whose fruit endureth for euer, wherein is freedome and medicine, whereas we shall not go in: for we haue walked in vnpleasunt places: And that the faces of them, which haue abstey-ned, shal shine aboue the starres, wher-as our faces shal be blacke and darke: For while we liued and did vnryghteouslye, we considered not that we shoulde suffer therefore after death: Then

The .iiii. booke

Then answered he me, and said: This is the consideration and thoughte of the battayle, whiche man hath vpon earth: that yf he be ouercome, he shall suffer as thou hast saide. But if he get the victorie, he shall receaue the thing that I saie. For this is the ype, wherof Moyses spake vnto the people, whyle he lyued, saying: «Chose the life, that thou mayest liue. Fewer thelesse, they beleued him not, neyther the prophetes after him. No nor mee whiche haue spoken vnto them that heauines should not reache vnto them to their destruction, ype as ioye is for to come ouer those that haue suffered them selues to be enfourmed in saluation. I answered then, and saide: I knowe Lord, that the best is mercifull, in that he hath mercy vpon them which are not yet in the world, and vpon those also that walke in his lawe: and that he is patient and longe sufferinge towards those that haue sinned in their workes, and that he is liberal to geue where as it requireth: and that he is of great mercye, for he multiplied his louing kindenes towards those that are present, and that are paste, and to them which are for to come. For yf he multiply not his mercies, the world shall not be made iynge, with those that dwell therein. He geueth also, for yf he gaue not of his goodnes, that they which haue done euill might be eased from their wickednes, the tenne thousand part of men should not be made liuing. And yf the iudge forgau not those y maye be healed with the word, & yf he wold destroye the multitude that strineth, there should be very fewe lefte in an innumerable multitude.

The .viij. Chapter.

AND he answered me, saying: The mooste hyest made this world for many, but the world to come for few. I wil tel thee a similitude, Elysas: As when thou askest the earth, it shall saie vnto thee, that it geueth muche mouid, wherof earthen vessels are made, but little of it that gold cometh of. Euen so is it with the worke of this world. There be many created, but fewe shalbe preferred. Then answered I and sayde: Then shalowe vypp the witte (thou soule) and deuour the vnderstanding, for thou art agreed to hearken and to geue care, and willinge to prophete: for thou haste no longer space geuen thee, but onely to lyue. O Lord, wille thou not geue thy seruants leane that wee maye praye before thee, and that thou maiest geue seede vnto our heart, and buyde our vnderstandinge, that there may come fruite of it: and that euery one which is corrupt, and beareth the state and place of a man, maye lyue: For thou art alone, & we all are one workmanship of thy hands, ype as thou hast said. And like as the body is fashioned nowe in the mothers wombe, and geueth the members, and thy creature is preferred in fyre and water: and nine monethes doth thy worke suffer thy creature, which is fashioned in her: but the thing that preferred, and it, that is preferred, shall bothe be kepte together: and whenne time is, the wombe deliuereth the thyng that is kepte and growen in her. For thou haste commaunded the bestes to geue mylke vnto the fruite, that the thing which is created and fashioned, may be nourished for a time: and then thou disposelst and orderest it with thy mercye, byngest it by with thy ryghteousnes, nuturest it in thy lawe, and refourmest it with thy vnderstanding, mortifiest it as thy creature, and makest it liuing as thy worke. Saying then that thou destroyedst him, which with so great labours is created and fashioned throughe thy commandements, thou couldest lyghtly ordeyne also, that the thinge which is made, might be preferred. And this I speak now of all men in generall: as thou knowest, but of thy people: for whose sake I am sope: and of thy inheritance, for whose cause I mourne: and of Israel for whom I am woeful: and of Jacob, for whose sake I am grieved, therefore begin I to praye before thee, ther, for my self and for them, for I see the fall of vs, euen of vs, that dwell vpon earthe. But I haue hearde the swiftnesse of the iudge, whiche is to come; therfore heare my voice, and vnderstand my wordes, and I shall speke before thee. This is the beginning of the wordes of Edras, before he was receaued: O Lord, thou that dwellest in euertlastingnesse, whose eyes are left by in the ayre, whose scoole is exceeding hye, whose glozpe and maiestie may not be comprehended, before whō the hostes of heauen stande with trembling, whose keeping is turned in wynde and fyre, whose worde is true, whose talking is stedfast, whose commandement is stronge, whose ordynance is fearefull, whose loke drieth by the depthes, whose wyath maketh the mountaynes to melte awayne, and whose truth beareth witnes. O heare the prayer of thy seruauant, and marke with thine eares the petition of thy creature. For whyle I lyue, I will speake, and so longe as I haue vnderstanding, I will answer. O loke not vpon the synnes of thy people, which serue in the trueth. Haue no respect vnto the wicked studies of the heathen, but to the desyre of those that kepe thy testimonies with sorowes. Thinke not vpon those that do walke sluggedly before thee, but vppon them, which with will haue knowen thy feare: let it not be thy will to destroye them, whiche haue had beastlye maners, but to loke vppon them that haue clearly taught thy lawe. Take thou no indignation at them, whiche are worse then bestes: but loue them, that alway put their trust in thy righteousness and glozpe: for we and our fathers haue all the same sickenes and disease, but because of our synnes thou shalt be called mercifull. For yf thou haue mercy vpon vs, thou shalt be called mercifull, where as we haue no workes of righteousness: for the righteous whiche haue layed vppon many good workes together, shall out of their deues receiue reward. For what is man that thou shouldest take displeasure at him? O what is the corruptible & mortall generation, y thou shouldest be so rough towarde him? For of a trueth there is no man among them that be bozne, but he hath dealt wickedly, and among the saphfull ther is none, which hath not done amisse. For in this (O Lord) thy righteousness and thy goodnes shall be praised and declared, yf thou be mercifull vnto them, which are not rich in good workes. Then answered he me, and sayd: Some thinges hast thou spoken aright, and according vnto thy wordes it shall be. For I will not bereyve consider the workes of them, whiche haue synned before deathe, before the iudgement, before destruction, but I wil reioyce ouer the worke & thought of the righteous. I will remember also the pilgremage, the holy making, and the reward. Like as I haue spoken now, so shall it come to passe. For as the husbandman soweth many seede vpon the ground, and planteth many trees, and yet alway the thing that is sowne or planted is not all kept safe, neyther dothe it all take rote: Euen so is it of theym that are sown in the world, they shall not all be preferred. I answered then and sayd: If I haue found grace, then let me speake. Like as the husbandmans seede perpereth, if it receaue not rayne in due season, or if ther come to much rayne vpon it: Euen so perpereth man also, whiche is created with thy handes, and is like vnto thyne owne ymage, and to thy selfe, for whose sake thou hast made all thinges, and lykened him vnto the husbandmans seede. Be not wroth at vs, O Lord, but spare thy people, and haue mercy vpon thine owne inheritance: O be mercifull vnto thy creature. Then answered he me and sayd: O thinges presente are for the present, and thinges to come, for suche as be to come. For thou lackest yet muche, seynge thou mayest loue my creature as thou louest me: I haue ofte times drawen nye vnto thee, but neuer to the byrighteous. In this also thou art manye before the best, in that thou haste humbled thy selfe, as it becometh thee, and halt not regarded thine owne selfe, that thou art had in suche honour among the righteous. Therfore shall great wretchednes and misery come vpon them, that in the latter time shall dwell in the woorld, because they haue walked in gret pride. But vnderstand thou for thy selfe, and seeke out glory for such as be like thee, for vnto you is paradise opened, the tree of life is planted, the time to come is prepared, plentifulnesse made readye, a citie is buylded for you, and a reste is prepared, yea, perfect goodness and wisdom: The roote of euill is marked from you, the weakened, and mothe is hid from you, and into hell flyeth corruption in forgetfulness.

Sorrowes are banished away; and in the ende is shewed the treasure of immortalitye. And therefore aske thou no more questions concerning the multitude of them that perishe. For they haue taken libertie, despised the hysell, thought scoone of his lawe, and forsaken his waye. Moreover, they haue troken down his righteous, and said in their heart, that there is no God, yea, and that swittinglye, for they dye. For lyke as the thinge that I haue spoken of, is made ready for you: Euen so is thirste and payne prepared for them. For it was not his will that men should come to naught, but they which be created haue defiled the name of him that made theym, and are vnthankfull vnto him, which prepared lyfe for theym. And therefore is my iudgement now at hand. These thinges haue I not shewed vnto all men, but vnto fewe, namely vnto thee, and to such as be like the. Then answered I and saide: Behold, O Lorde, nowe hast thou shewed me the multitude of the tokens, which thou wilt begin to do at the laste: but at what time and when, thou hast not shewed me.

He answered me then and saide: Measure thou the tyme diligently in it selfe, when thou seest that one part of the tokens come to passe, whiche I haue tolde thee before: So shalt thou vnderstande, that it is the verye same time, wherein the hysell will begynne to visite the woorld, whiche he made. And when there shall be an earthe quake and uproare of the people in the woorld, then shalt thou well vnderstande, that the most hysell spake of those thinges from the dayes that were before thee, euen from the beginning. For like as all that is made in the woorld hath a beginning and ende, and the ende is manifest: Euen so the tymes also of the hysell haue plain beginnings in wonders and signes, and the ende in wyckynge and in tokens. And euery one that shall be saued, and shalbe able to escape by his woorkes and by faith, wherein ye haue beleued, shalbe preserved from the sayd perishe: and shal see my sauoure in my lande, and within my borders, for I haue halowed me from the woorld. Then shall they be carefulnesse, whiche now haue abused my wayes: and they that haue cast them out dyspytfully, shall dwell in payne. For suche as in theyr lyfe haue receaued benefytes, and haue not knowen me, and they that haue abhorred my law, while they had yet freedom, and when they had yet open leysure of amendemente and conuersion, and vnderstoode not, but despyed it, the same muste knowe it after deathe in payne. And therefore be thou nomore carefull, howe the vngodly shalbe punished, and howe the righteous shal be saued, and whose the woorld is, and for whom the woorld, and when it is. Then answered I and said: I haue talked before, and nowe I speake, and will speake also hereafter, that there be many more of them which perishe, then shalbe saued, lyke as the floude is greater then the droppes. And he answered me, saying: like as the field is, so is also the seide, as the floures be, so are the colours also, suche as the woorkeman is, such is also the woorker, and as the husbande man is his selfe, so is his husbanye also, for it was the time of the woorld, And when I prepared for them that are now, or ever the worlde was made, where in they should dwell, then was there no man that withstode me. Now when every one was, and the maker also in the worlde, which is now prepared, and the moneth that ceaseth not, and the lawe, which is vnsearchable, they maners were corrupte. So I considered the worlde, and behold, ther was perill, because of thoughtes that were come into it. And I saue, and spared them greatly, and haue kepte me a wineberye of the grapes, and a plante from amonge manye generations. Let the multitude perishe then, which are growen by in daye, and let my grape and wineberye be kepte: even my plante, for with greute laboure haue I made it by. Neuerthelesse if thou wilt take vpon thee yet leuen dayes moo (but thou shalt not forsake in them) goo thy waye then into the fildes of floures, where no house is builded, and eat onely of the floures of the field, taste not fleshe, drinke no wyne, but eate floures onelye.

 Praye vnto the hest continuallye, so will I come, and talke with thee. So I wente my waye and came into the fildes which is called Ardath (lyke as he commaunded me) and there I sat amonge the floures, and did eate of the herbes of the fildes, and the meate of the same satisfiied me. After leuen dayes I sat vpon the grasse, and my hearte was vexed within me lyke as afore: and I opened my mouth and beganne to talke before the hy-est, and sayde: O LORD, thou that shewest thy selfe vnto vs, thou hast declared and opened thy selfe vnto our fathers in the wilderness, in a place, where no man dwelleth, in a baren place, when they came oute of Egypte, and thou spakest, sayinge, heare me, O Israell, and marke my wordes, thou sedest of Jacob: Behold, I sowe my lawe in you, and it shall bringe fruite in you, and ye shall bee honoied in it for ever. For our fathers which receiued the lawe, kept it not, and obserued not thyn vrbinaunces and statutes, and the fruit of thy lawe was not declared, for it might not, for why it was not thine. For they that re-ceined it, perished because they kepte not the thing that was sown in them It is a custome when the ground receaueth seede, or the sea a ship, or a bessell meate and drinke, that when it perissheth, or is broke, wherein a thing is sown, or wherein any thing is put:

 the thinges also perishe, and are broke, which are sown or put therein.
 But vnto vs it hath not happened: for wee that haue receined the lawe, perishe in sinne, and our heart which also receaued the lawe. Notwithstandinge, the lawe perissheth not, but remaineth in his labour. And when I considered these thinges in my hearte after this manner, I looked aboute me with mine eyes, and vpon the right syde. I sawe a woman, which mourned sore, made great lamentation, and wept with a lowde voyce, her cloathes were rent in pieces, and she hadde ashes vpon her heade. Then let I my thoughtes go, that I was in, and iourned me vnto her, and sayde: wherfore wepest thou? why arte thou so sore, and discomfor-ted? And she sayde vnto me: Syr, let me beswape my selfe, and take yet moze sorowe, for I am sore vexed in my minde, and brought verye lowe.
 And I sayde vnto her: what ayleth thee? Or who hath done any thinge to thee? Tell me. She sayde: I haue bene vnfruitfull and bareyn, and haue hadde an hus bande thirtie yeares.
 And these thirtie yeares I doo no-thinge elles dayes and nyghte, and all howes, but make my prayer to the hest. After thirtie yeares I heard me thy handmayden, and looked vpon my misery, considred my trouble and gaue me a sonne, and I was glad of him, so was my hus bande also, and al my neighbours, and we gaue great honoure vnto the Mightye. And I nourished him with great trausple.
 So when he grew vp, and came to the tyme that he should haue a wife, I made a feast.

AND it happened that when my sonne went into his chamber he fell downe, and dyed: then ouerthrewe we all the lightes, and all my neighbours rose vp to comfort me. Then toke I my rest vnto the seconde day at night: and when they hadde all rested, that they mighte comforte me, I rested and also rose vp by nyghte, and fledde, and am comme hither into this field as thou seest, and am purposed not to come in the citie, but to remayne here, and neyther to eate nor drinke, but continually to mourne and to faste vntill I dye. Then let I my meditations and thoughtes fall, that I was in, and spake to her in displeasure: Thou foolish woman, seest thou our heuines and mourninge, and what happeneth vnto vs: howe Shion our mother is all wofull, and soze, and howe shee is cleane broughte downe and in miserie: seing we be all now in heauyness, and make our mone (for we be all sorowfull.) As for the heuyness that thou takest, it is but for one sonne. Demande the earth, and shee shal tel thee, that it is she which ought (by reason) to mourne, for the fall of so manie that growe vpon her. For from the beginning all men are bozne of her, and other shal come: and behold they walke almoste all into destruction, and manie of them shalbe rooted oute. Whoe shoulde then (by reason) make moze mourninge then she, that hath losse so greet a multitude: and not thou which art soze, but for one. But yf thou wouldest saye vnto me: My mourning is not lyke the mourning of the earth, for I haue losse the fruite of my body, which I bare with heauyness: but the earth is accordinge to the maner of the earth, and the present multitude goeth agayne into her as it is come to passe. Then say I vnto thee: lyke as thou haste bozne with transyle and sorowe, even so the earth also from the beginninge geueth her fruite vnto manne, of him that made her, And therefore withholde thy so-rowe and heauyness by thy selfe, and looke what happeneth vnto thee, bear it stronglye. For yf thou iudgest the marche and ende of God to be righteous and good, and receauest his counsell in time, thou shalt be commended therein. So thy way then into the citty to thy husband. And she said vnto me: that will I not do, I will not go into the citie, but here will I dye. So I commened moze with her and said: Doo not so, but be counselled, and sorrowe me: for howe manie failes hath Shion? We of good comfort because of the sorowe of Ierusalem. For thou seest that our sanctuary is layd waste, & our altar broken, our temple destroyed, our playing of instrumentes and singinge layed downe, the thankes geuing put to silence, our mirth is banished awaye, the lighte of our candlestick is quenched, the arke of the couenante is taken from vs, all our holy thinges are defiled, and the name that is called vpon ouer vs, is dishonoured: our children are put to shame, our priestes are hente, oure Leuytes are carped away into captiuitie, our bygins are defiled, and our wines rauished, our righteous men spoyled, and our children destroyed, our yonge men are brought in bondage, and our stronge woorthies are become weak, and Shion (whiche scale is the greatest of all) is lousd by from her woorthip: for she is deliuered into the handes of them that hate vs. And therefore shake off thy great heauyness, and put awaye the multitude of sorowes: that the mighty may be merciful vnto thee, and that the hest maye geue thee rest from thy labour and transyle. And it happened, that when I was talking with her, her face did shine, and glister, so that I was asrayed of her, and mused what it might be. And immediatlye she cast out a great voice, very fearefull, so that the earth shooke at the noyse of the woman: and I looked, and beholde, the woman appeared vnto me no moze: but there was a Citty builded, and a place was there

4. El. 4. wed from the grounde and foundation. Denne was I afayde, and cryed with a lowde voyce, and sayde: where is Ariell the aungell, whiche came to me at the fyrle? For he hath caused me to come in many considerations and hie thoughtes, and myne end is turned into corruption, and my prayer to rebuke. And as I was speaking these wordes, he came vnto me, and looked vpon me, and I laye as one that had bene deade, and myne vnder-standing was altered, and he toke me by the righte hand, and comforted me, and sette me vpon my feete, and sayde vnto me: what ayleth thee? and why is thyne vnderstandinge vexed? and the vnderstandinge of thy hearte, and wherefore art thou so? And I said: because thou haste forsaken me, and 4. El. 9. I haue done. according vnto thy wor-des, I wente into the fielde, and there haue I seene thinges, that I am not able to expresse. He sayde vnto me: stand vp, and be manly, and I shall geue thee exhortation. Then saide I: speake vnto me my Lord, forsake me not, least I dye in vayne, for I haue seene that I knewe not, and heard that I doo not knowe. Whall my vnder-standing be discaued, and my minde?
 But nowe I beseeche thee, that thou wilt shew thy seruauit of this wonder. He answered me then and saide: heare me, and I shall enfourme thee, and tell thee wherfore thou art afraid, for the hpest hath opened many secrete thinges vnto thee. He hath seene that thy way is right, and that thou takest sorowe continuallye for thy people, and makest great lamentation for Sion: and therfore vnderstand the vision, whiche thou sawest a little while agoe after this maner: Thou sawest a woman mourning, and thou haste comforted her: Neuerthelesse, nowe seest thou the lykenes of that woman no more, but thou thoughtest there was a Citie buried: and lyke as she tolde thee of the fall of her sonne, so is this the answere: The woman whos thou sawest, is Syon, and where as she tolde thee, that she hath bene thy-tie peres vnfruitfull and bareyn, those are the. xxx. peres, wherin there was no offeringe made in her. But after xxx. peres Salomon buylded her, and offered, and then bare the barren a son.

 And where as she tolde thee: that she nourished him with labour, that was the dwellinge of Jerusalem. But where as she tolde thee that her sonne dyed, when she came into her chaumber, that is the fall of Jerusalem. And thou sawest her lykenesse, howe she mourned for her sonne, and what els hapned vnto her, I haue shewed the.
 And nowe God seeth, that thou arte sorpe in thy mynde, and sufferest from thy hert for her, and so hath he shewed thee her clerenesse, and the sayrenesse of her beantie. And therfore I bad thee remayne in the speide where no house is buylded. For I knewe that the hpest would shew this vnto thee, therfore I commanded thee to go into the field wher no foundation nor building is. For in the place where the hpest will shew his citie, there shall be no mas building. And therfore feare not, and let not thyne heart be afayd, but go thy waye in, and see the glorious and sayre buydinge, and howe great it is, & howe great thou thinkest it after the measure of thine eyes, and then shalt thou heare as much as thine eares may comprehend. For thou art blessed aboue many other, and art called with the hpest, as the fewe. But to morow at night thou shalt remaine here, and so shall the hpest shewe thee visions of hie thinges, which he will doo vnto them, that dwell vpon earth in the last dayes. So I slept the same night, like as he commaunded me.

The. xi. Chapter.

Then sawe I a dreame, and behold, there came vyppes from the sea an Egge, whiche hadde. xij. winges, and thre heades. And I saw and beholde, he spredde his wynges ouer all the earth, and all the wyndes of the ayre blew in them, and so they were put together againe. And I be-halde, and out of his feathers there 33 a a. iii. grewe

grew other little contrarie fethers: the heades rested, the head in the midst was greater then the other, yet rested it with the residue. Moreover I saw that the Eagle flew with his wings, and repgned vpon earth, and ouer all theym, that dwell vppon the earth, and I sawe that al thinges vnder heauen, were subiecte vnto him, and no man spake agaynst him, no not one creature vpon earth. I sawe also that the Eagle stode vpon his clawes, and gaue a sounde with his fethers, and a voyce sayinge after this maner: watch not altogether, slepe euery man in his owne place, & watch for a time, but let the heades be preserved at the laste. Nevertheless I sawe that the voyce wente not oute of his heades, but from the midst of his body. And I numbred his contrarie fethers, and beholde, there were eyght of them. And I looked, and beheld vpon the righte syde there arose one fether, and repgned ouer all the earth.

B And it happened, that when it repgned, the ende of it came, and the place therof appeared no more. So the next folowing stode vpon, and repgned, and had a great time, and it happened that when it reigned, the end of it came also lyke as the first, so that it appeared no more. Then came there a voyce vnto it, and sayde: heare thou that halste kept in the earth so longe, this I saye vnto thee, before thou beginnest to appeare no more: There shall none after thee attayne vnto thy time. Then arose the thirde, and repgned as the other arose, and appeared no more also. So wente it with all the residue one after another, so that euery one reigned, and then appeared no more. Then I looked, and beholde, in procelle of tyme the fethers that folowed were set vpon the ryght syde, that they might rule also, and some of them ruled, but within a whyle they appeared no more, for some of them were set vpon, but ruled not. After this I looked, and beholde, the twelue fethers appeared no more, nor the two wynges: and there was no more vpon the gless body, but two heades that rested and syke fethers. Then sawe I also that the syke fethers were parted in two, and remayned vnder the head, that was vpon the righte syde, for the foure continued in their place. So I looked, and beholde, they that were vnder the wings, thoughte to sette vpon theym selues, and to haue the rule. Then was ther one set vpon, but shortly it appeared no more, and the second was sooner away then the first. And I behelde and lo, the two thought also by them selues to reigne, and when they so thought, beholde, there waked one of the heades that were at rest, namely, it that was in the myddest, for that was the greater of the two heades. And thenne I sawe, that the two heades were spyled with him, and the head was turned with them that were by him, and didde eate vpon the two vnder wings, that woulde haue repgned. But this head put the whole earth in feare, and bare rule in it, ouer al those that dwelt vpon earth, with muche labour, and he hadde the gouernance of the world, ouer al the foules that haue bene. After this I looked, and beholde, the head that was in the myddest sodenly appeared no more, lyke as the wings: then came the two heades, which ruled vpon earth, and ouer those that dwelt therein. And I beheld, and lo, the head vpon the ryghte syde, deuoured it that was vpon the lefte syde. And I heard a voyce, whiche sayde vnto me: looke before thee, and consider the thinge that thou seest. Then I sawe and beholde, as it were a lion that rareth, renning hastily out of the wood and he sent out a mannes voyce vnto the Eagle, and sayde: heare thou, I wyll talke with thee, and the wyrd shall saye vnto thee: Is it not thou that halste the victory of the foure beastes, whom I made to repgne vpon earth and in my world, and that the ende of their times might come though them? And the fourth came, and ouerranne all the beastes that were past, and had power ouer the with great fearefulness, and ouer the whole compasse of the earth, with the mosse wicked labour, and so longe time dwelte he vppon the earth with disceate, and the earth haste thou iudged not with trueth. For thou haste troubled the meke, thou hast hurt the peaceable and quiet, thou haste loured spars, and destroyed the dwellings of them that brought forth fruit, and hast cast downe the walles of such as did thee no harme. Therefore is thy worguous dealinge and blasphemie come vnto the hysell, and thy pride vnto the mightye. The hysell also hath loured vppon the proude times, and behold, they are ended, and they abominations are fulfilled. And therfore appeare nomore thou Begle, and thy horrible winges, and thy wicked feathers, and thy vngacious heads and thy sinful clawes, and al thy bain bodye: that the earth maye bee refreshed and come agayne to her self, when she is deliuered from thy violence, and that she may hope for the iudgement and mercy of him that made her.

AD it happened when the Apon spake these wordes vnto the Begle, I sawe, and behold, the head that afoze had the upper hande, appered no more, neither did the four winges appere anye more that came to him, and were sette vp to reygne, and their kingdome was smal and ful of vppsare. And I sawe, and beholde, they appeared no more. and the whole body of the Eggle was byent, and the erth was in great fear. Then awaked I out of the traunce of my mynde, and from great feare, and sayde vnto my spirite. Lo, this haste thou geuen me in that thou searchest out the wayes of the hysell: lo, yet am I depe in my mynde, and very weake in my spirite, and little strengthe is there in me, for the great feare that I receaved this nyght. Therefore wil I that dwell therein, that he wil comforte me vnto the end: and I sayde, Lord, I say, if I have founde graces foze thy sight, and yf I am iustified with thee befoze mani other, and if my prayer be come vp befoze thy face, comfort me then, and shewe mee thy seruante the interpretation and playne difference of this horrible sight, that thou mayest perfecte comfozte my soule: for thou haste iudged me woorthye, to shewe me the lalle of tymes. And he sayde vnto me: this is the interpretation of this sight. The Eagle whom thou sawest come vp from the sea, is the kingdome. which was sene in the vision of thy brother Daniel, but it was not expounded vnto him, for nowe I declare it vnto thee.

Beholde, the dayes comme, that there shall rise vp a kingdome vppon earth, and it shalbe feared aboue al the kingdoms that were befoze it. In the same kingdome shal .xij. kinges reygne, one after another. For the seconde shall begyn to reygne, and shall hatie more time then the other twelue: and this do the twelue winges signify, which thou sawest. As for the voyce that spake, and that thou sawest go oute from the heades, but not from the bodye, it betokeneth, that after the tyme of the Kingdome, there shall aryse great stryuinges, and it shall stande in perill of fallinge: neuerthelesse it shall not yet fall, but shalbe sette into his beginning. And the eyght vnder winges which thou sawest hang vnto the winges of him, betokene, that in him ther shal arise .viij. kings, whose time shalbe but smal, and their peres swift, and two of them shal beare. But whē the middell time cometh, there shall be foure kepte in the time, when this time beginneth to come that it may be ended, but two shalbe kepte vnto the end. And where as thou sawest thre heades resting, this is the interpretation: In his last shall the hysell rayse vp thre kingdomes, and call many agayne into them, and they shall haue the dominion of the earth, and of those that dwell therein, with much labour aboue all those that were befoze theym. Therefore are they called the heades of the Eagle: for it is they that shall bringe forth his wickednes as gayne, and that shall perforce and finishe his laste. And where as thou sauest, that the greates head appeareth no more, it signifyeth, that one of them shall dye vpon his bed, and yet with payne, for the two that remaine, shall be slayn with a sword. For the sword of the one shall deuoure the other, but at the laste shall he fall throughte the sword him self. And wheras thou sa-west two vnder wings vpon the head that is on the right syde, it signifyeth that it is they, whom the hysell hath kept vnto their ende: this is a small kingdome, & full of trouble. The lion whom thou sauest ryling out of the wood, and roaring, and speaking vnto the Eagle, and rebukinge him for his vnrightheousnesse, is the wind, which the hysell hath kept for them, and for their wickednes vnto the ende: he shal reproue them, and rent them aunder before them. For he shall set them sitting before the iudgement, and shall rebuke them: for the residue of my people shall he deliuer with trouble, these that be preserved ouer myne endes: and he shall make them ioyfull vntill the comming of the day of iudgement, wherof I haue spoken vnto thee fro the beginninge. This is the dreame that thou sauest, and this is the interpretation. Thou onely hast bene mere to knowe the secret of the hysell. Therfore wypte all these thinges that thou hast scene in a booke, and hide them, and teache theym the wise in the people, whose heartes thou knowest may comprehende and keepe these secretes.

But wypte thou here thy selfe yet seuen dayes more, that it may be shewed thee, what forer it pleaseth the hysell to declare vnto thee, and with that he went his way. And when all the people perceaued, that the seuen dayes were past, and I not come agayne into the cite, they gathered them all together from the sea, vnto the moaste, and cam vnto me, and sayd: what haue we offended thee, and what wilt thou doe agaynst thee, that thou forsake kest vs, and sittest here in this place?

For of all people thou onely art left vs, as a grape of the vine, and as a can-dell in a darke place, and as an hairen and ship preserved from the tempest.
Haue we not els aduersitee inough, but thou must forsake vs? Were it not better for vs, that we had bene dynt with Sion? For wee are not better then they that dyed there: and they wept with a loude voyce. Then answered I them and sayd: We of good comforte O Israel, and be not heauy thou house of Jacob: for the hysell hath you in remembrance, & the mighty hath not forgotten you in the temptation. As for me, I haue not forsaken you, neither am I departed from you: but am come into this place to praye, because of the misery of Israel, that I might seeke mercy for the low estate of youre Sanctuarie. And now go your way home every man, and after these dayes will I come vnto you.
So the people went theyr waye into the cite, like as I commaunded them: but I remayned still in the field seuen dayes, as the Angell bad me, and dyd eate onely of the flowres of the fildes, and hadde my meate of the hearbes in those dayes.

The. xij. Chapter.

And it happened after the seuen dayes, that I dreamed a dreame by night. And beholde there arose a winde from the sea, that it moued all the cloudes thereof. And I looked, and beholde: the man was stronge and increased with the cloud-es of heuen: and when he turned his countenance to consider, all the thin-ges trembled that were seene vnder him: and when the voyce went out of his mouth, all they dynt that hearde him, like as the earth when it feelth the fire. After those I sawe, and be-holde, there was gathered together a multitude of men out of number from the foure windes of the heauen, to fighte agaynst the man, that came out from the sea. And I looked, and beholde he graued him selfe a greates moou-sayne, and fletwe by bypon it. But I woulde haue scene the bozder oz place, wherout the hill was grauen, and I could not. I sawe after these, that all they which came to fight against him, were soze afrayde, and yet durste they fichte. Neuerthelesse, when he sawe the fearlens and violence of the people, he neither lyfte by his hande nor helde swearde, nor anye weapon, but onely (as I sawe) he sent out of his mouthe, as it had bene a blaste of fyre, and out of his lippes the winde of the flame, and out of his tonge he cast out sparkes and stozmes, and they were all mixte together: the blaste of fire, the winde of the flames, and the great stozme, and fel with a rushe bypon the people, which was pprepared to fichte, and bzente them by euerpechone: so that of the innumerable multitude there was nothing seene, but onely duste and smoke. When I sawe this, I was afrayde. Afterwarde sawe I the same man comme downe from the mountayne, and callinge by to him another peaceable people; and there came muche people vnto him: some were glad, some were sozpy, some of them were bound, so that they were carped and brought forth. Then was I sicke throughte greates feare, and I awaked, and sayde: thou haste shewed thy seruant all thy wonders from the beginninge, and haste counted me wozthye, that thou myghtest receaue my prayer: shewe me nowe yet the interpretation of this dreame. For thus I consider in my vnderstanding: wo by-to them that shalbe left in those dayes, and much moze wo byto them that ar not lefte behinde: for they that were not left, were in heauyness. Now vnder-stand I the thinges that are layed by in the latter dayes which shal happen byto theym, and to those that are not lefte behinde. Wherefore are they come into great perils, and many necessities, like as these dreames declare.

Yet is it easier, than the which suffreth hurte, come in these, then to passe away as a cloude out of the world, and not to see the thinges that shal happen in the last. Then answered he me, and sayde: The interpretation of the sight shall I shewe thee, and I will open vnto thee, the thing that thou hast required. For thou hast spoken of them that are lefte behinde, and this is the interpretation. He that taketh awaye the perill in that time, hath kepte him seife. They that be fallen into harme, are suche as haue woozkes and sayth vnto the mosse mightye. Knowe this therfoze, that they which be lefte be-hinde, are moze blessed, then they that be deade. This is the meaning of the vision. Where as thou sawest a man comming by from the derpe of the sea, the same is he, whom God the byest hath kepte a great season, which by his owne seife shall deliuer his creature, and he shall order them that are left behinde. And where as thou sa-west, that out of his mouth there came a blaste of winde, fyre and stozme, and howe that he lyfte by neyther swearde nor weapon, but that the rusheinge in of him destroyed the whole multitude that came to fight agaynst him: it signifyeth, that the dayes comme, when God will deliuer them that are byon earth, and in a traunce of mind shal he come bypon theym, that dwell in the earth. And one shal vnder take to fight agaynst another, one citie agaynst another, one place agaynst another, one people agaynst another, & one realme agaynst another. When this commeth to passe, then shal the tokens come, that I shewed thee before: and then shal my sonne be declared, whom thou sawest climbe by as a man. And when all the people heare his voyce, euerpe man shal in their owne land leaue the battayle that they haue one agaynst another, and an innumerable multitude shalbe gathered together, as they that be willing to come, and to ouer-come him by fighting. But he shal stande bypon the toppe of the mount Sion. Neuertheles Sion shal come, and shal be shewed, beinge prepared and builded for all men, lyke as thou sawest the hill grauen forth without any handes, But my sonne shal rebuke the people that are com, for their wickednes, with the tempest, and for their euill ymaginations: and they paynes wherewith they shalbe punished, are likened vnto the flame: and without any labour, shall he destroy them, euen by the law, which is compared vnto the fire. And wheras thou sawest, that he gathered another peaceable people vnto him: those are the ten trybes whiche were carped away prisoners oute of theyr owne lande, in the tyme of Oseas the Kinge, whom Salmanasar the kinge of Assyria tooke prisoner, and carped away ouer the water, and so came they into another lande. But they gaue them this counsell, that they shoulde leaue the multitude of the heathen, and to go forth into a farther countrey, wher neuer mankynde dwelte: that they might ther kepe their statutes, which they neuer kept in their owne lande.

And so they entred in at the narrowe passages of the water of Euphrates, and God shewed tokens for theym, and held still the flood till they were passed ouer, for throught the countrey there was a greates waye, namely of a yere and a halfe iourney, for the same region is called Asareth. Then dwelt they there vnto the latter tyme: and when they come south agayne, the hyell shall holde still the springes of the streame agayne, that they maye go throught, therfore sawest thou the multitude with peace. And they that be lefte behinde of thy people, are those that be founde within my bozder.
Now when he destroyeth the multitude that is gathered together, he shal defende his people that remaine, and then shall he shewe them great wonders. Then sayde I: O Lorde, Lorde, shewe me this, wherefore haue I sene the man comming vp from the deepe of the sea? And he sayd vnto me: Like as thou cannest neyther seeke out nor knowe these thinges that are in the deepe of the sea, euen so mayest thou not see my sonne, or those that be with him, but in the time of the day. This is the interpretation of the dreame, which thou sawest, therfore thou only art here lightened: for thou hast forsaken thyne owne lawe, and applied thy diligence vnto myne, and soughte it. Thy life haste thou ob-died in wisdome, and hast called vnderstandinge thy mother, and therefore haue I shewed thee, the treasure of the hyell. After thre dayes I wil shewe thee moze, and talke with thee moze at large, yea heauye and wonderous things wil I declare vnto thee.

Then wente I south into the fielde, geuing praise and thanks greatly vnto God, because of his wonders whiche he did in time, and because he gouerneth the same, and suche as is in time, and there I sat thre dayes.

The.xiiij.Chapter.

Vpon the thirde daye I satte vnder an oke tree, then came there a boyce vnto me oute of the bush, and sayde: Esoas, Esoas: And I sayde: here am I Lorde, and stoode vp vpon my seete. Then spake he vnto me: in the bush did I appere vnto Moyses, and talked with him, when my people serued in Egypte.
And I sent him, and ledde my people out of Egypt, and brought him vpon the mount Sion, where I held him by me a longe season, and told him my wonderous wordes, and shewed him the secretes of the times and the ende, and commaunded him sayinge: These wordes shalt thou declare, and not hide them. And now I say vnto thee, that thou lay vp in thine heart the dreames that thou hast seene, and the interpretations whiche I haue shewed thee: for thou shalt be receaued of all, thou shalt be turned and remaine with my counsell, and with suche as be like thee, vntill the tymes be ended. For the worlde hath losse his youthe, and the times beginne to waxe olde. For the time is deuided into twelue parts and ten partes of it are gone alreadye, and halfe of the tenth part: yet remaineth there that whiche is after the halfe of the tenth parte. Therefore prepare and order thy house, and reforme thy people, comfort such of them as be in trouble, and tell nowe of the destruction, let go from thee mortall thoughtes, cast away the burtheus of man. But of the weake nature: Lape up in some places, the thoughtes that are most heuy vnto thee, and hast thee to flee from these times, for suche euill and wickednesse as thou haste nowe sene happen, shall they doo yet muche woofle. • For the weaker that the woofle and the time is, the more shall syn and wickednes increase, in them that dwell vpon earth. For the truthe is fledde farre awaye, and leaſyng is harde at hande. For nowe hasteth the billion to come, that thou haste seene.

Then answered I befoze thee, & ſayd: Behold Lord, I will go as thou haste commanded me, and reforme the people whiche are preſent. But they that ſhalbe bozne afterward, who will ex-hozte, or rebuke them? Thus the woofle is ſet in darknes, and they that dwell therein, are without lyyghte: for thy lawe is kindled, becauſe no man knoweth the thinges that are done of thee, or that ſhall be done. If I haue ſounde grace befoze thee, ſende the holyghoſt into me, and I ſhall wryte all that hath ben done in the woofle ſence the beginning, which was wrytten in thy law, that men may finde the path, and that they whiche liue in the latter daies, may liue. And he answered me, ſaying: Go thy waye, gather the people together, and ſaye vnto them, that they ſeek thee not for forty dayes, but loke thou gather thee many boxetrees and take with thee Sarea, Dabria, Sclania, Ecanus, and Aſiell, theſe fyue, which are redy to wryte ſwiftly and come hither, and I ſhall lyyght a ſandell of vnderſtandinge in thyne hearte, which ſhall not be put out till the thinges be perſormed which thou ſhalt begyn to wryte. And then ſhalte thou declare ſome thinges openly vnto the perfect, and ſome thinges ſhalte thou ſhew ſecretly vnto the wiſe. To morrow this houre ſhalt thou beginne to wryte. Then went I forth (as he commanded me) and gathered all the people together, and ſayde: Hears theſe wordes, O Iſrael: Our fathers at the beginning, were ſtraungers in Egypt, from whence they were deli-uered, and receaued the lawe of liſe, • whiche they kepte not, which ye alſo haue tranſgreſſed after them. Then was this lande and the lande of Sion parted among you by lotte to poſſeſſe.

But your fathers, and ye your ſelues alſo haue doone vnrighteousneſſe, and haue not kepte the waies, whiche the Lorde commanded you. And for ſo much as he is a righteous iudge, he toke from you in time the thinge that he hadde geuen you. And nowe are ye here, and your bretheren amonge you.
Therefore yf ſo be, that ye will ſub-due your owne vnderſtandinge, and reforme your heart, ye ſhalbe kepte a-lyue, and after deathe ſhall ye obteyne mercy. For after death ſhal the iudge-ment come, when we ſhal liue againe, and then ſhall the names of the righteous bee manifeſte, and the woof-les of the vngodly ſhalbe declared.
Lette no man therefore come nowe vnto me, nor aſke any queſtion at me theſe ſourtie dayes. So I tooke the fyue menne (as he commanded me) D and we wente into the ſelde, and remained there. The nexte daye a voyce called me, ſayinge: Esdras, • open thy mouth, and drinke that I geue thee. Then opened I my mouth, and beholde, he reached me a full cuppe, whiche was full, as it were with water, but the colour of it was lyke ſyre. And I toke it, and dranke. And when I had dronken it, my hearte had vnderſtandinge, and wiſedome grewe in my breaſte: for my ſpírít was kept in remembraunce, and my mouth was opened, and ſhutte no more. The Lorde gaue vnderſtandinge vnto the fyue menne, that they wrote the hye thinges of the nighte, whiche they vnderſtoode not. But in the night they did eate bread: As for me, I ſpake in the daye, and helde not my tongue by nyghte. In forty dayes, they wrote two hundred and foure bookes.

The .iiii. booke

And it happened when the forty daies were fulfilled, that the best spake, saying: The first that thou hast written, spake openly, the worthy and unworthy maye reade it. But kepe the lxx. last, that thou mayest shew it onely to such as be wise among thy people. For in them is the springe of vnderstanding, the fountayne of wisdom, and the streame of knowledge. And I did so.

The .xv. Chapter.

BEholde, spake thou in the eares of my people the wordes of prophete, which I will put in thy mouth, saith the Lord, and cause them to be written in a letter, for it is the trueth. Feare not the ymaginations agaynst thee. Let not the vnfaythfulnes of them trouble thee that speake agaynst thee. For all the vnfaythfull shall dye in their vnfaythfulnes, Behold, sayth the Lord, I will bring plagues vpon the world, the swearde, hunger, death, and destruction, for wickednes hath the upper hand in al the earth, and their shameful wordes are fulfilled. Therefore sayth the Lord, I wil hold my tounge nomore vnto their wickednes, which they doo so vngodly, neyther will I suffer them in the thinges that they deale withall so wickedly. Beholde

Isa. 6. b.

the innocent blood of the troubled crieth vnto me, and the soules of the righteous complayne continuallye, and therfore (sayth the Lord) I will surely auenge, and reueale vnto me al the innocent blood from among them.

Isa. 44. c.

Rom. 8. c.

Behold, my people is led as a flocke of shepe to be slayne, I will not suffer them now to dwell in Egypte, but will bringe them out with a mighty hand, and a stretched out arme, and smite it with plagues as afore, and will destroye all the lande of it. Egypt shall mourne, and the foundations of it shall be smitten with the plague and punishment, that God shall bring vpon it. They that till the ground, shall mourne, for their seedes shall be destrui-

ed throughe the blastinge and hayle, and an horrible starre. Wo worth the world and them that dwell therein, for the swearde and their destruction draweth nye, and one people shall stand by to fight against another, and swerdes in their handes. For men shall be vnstedfaste, and some shall do violence vnto other, they shall not regard their king and princes, the wayes of their doinges & handlings shall be in their power. A man shall desire to go into a citie, and shall not be able. For because of their pride the citie shall be brought in feare, the houses shall shake, and men shall be afraide. A man shall haue no pitie vpon his neighbour, but one shall prouoke another vnto battel, to spoile their goodes because of the hunger of bread, and because of the gret trouble. Beholde, I gather and call together al the kinges of the earth whiche are from the bypyling, from the South, from the East, and Libanus, to turne vnto them, and restore the thinges that they haue geuen them. Like as they do yet this daye vnto my chosen, so wil I do also, and recompence them in their bosome. Thus sayth the Lord God: My right hande shall not spare the sinners, and my swearde shall not cease ouer them, that shed the innocent blood vpon earth. The feare is gone out from his wyathe, and hath consumed the foundations of the earth, and the spynners lyke the strawe that is kindled. Wo worth them that syn, and kepe not my commandementes, sayth the Lord. I wil not spare them. Go your waye ye children from violence, despyle not my Sanctuarie: for the Lord knoweth all them that syn agaynst him, and therefore deliuereth he them vnto death and destruction. For now are the plagues come vpon the world, and ye shall remaine in the, For god shall not deliuer you, because ye haue synned agaynst him. Beholde an horrible vision cometh from the East, where generations of Dragons shall come out, and the people of the Arabes with manie chariots. And the multitudes of them, shall shalbe as the wynde vpon earth, that all they which heare them raginge in theyr wyath may feare, and be asfayd, and as the wild bores out of the wod, so shall they go oute, and with greute power shal they come, and stand synginge with theym, and shall waste the portion of the lande of the Assirians. And then shall the dragons haue the upper hande, not remembrynginge theyr bythe, and shall turne aboute, swearing together in great power, to persecute theym. But these shalbe asfayd kepe silence at theyr power, and shall flee, and one out of the land of the Assirians shall besiege them, & consume one of them, and in their host shall be feare and dzeade, and strife among their kinges. Beholde, cloudes from the East, and from the North vnto the South, and they are very horrible to looke vpon, full of wyath and storme. They shall smyte one vpon an other, and they shall smite at the great starre vpon earth, and theyr starre, and the blood shalbe from the sword vnto the bealy, and the smoke of man vnto the Camelles litter: And there shall be great fearefulness and trembling vpon earth: and they that see the wyath shall be asfayde, and a trembling shall come vpon them. And then shall there come great rayned from the North, and from the North, and parte from the West, and from the stormy winde from the East, and shall shutte theym by agayne, and the cloude whiche he rayned vpon in wyathe, and the starre to cause feare toward the East and West winde, shalbe destroyed, and the great cloude shalbe lye by, and the myghty cloude full of wyathe, and the starre: that they maye make all the earth asfayde, and theym that dwell therein, and that they maye poure out ouer all places an horrible starre, fyre and hople, flying swordes, and many waters: that all fieldes maye bee full, and al rivers, and they shall bryke downe the cities and walles, mountaynes and hilles, all trees, wood, and the grasse of the meadowes, and all their fruite. And they shall go str-

fall vnto Babilon, and make her asfayde: they shall come to her, and besiege her, the starre and all wyath shall they poure out vpon her. Then shall the dust and smoke go by vnto the heu, and all they that bee aboute her, shall be swaple her: and they that remaine vnder her, shall do seruice vnto theym that haue put her in feare. And thou Asia, that comfortest thy selfe also vpon the hope of Babilon, and art a worship of her person: woe bee vnto thee thou wretch, because thou hast made thy selfe like vnto her, and hast deckt thy daughters in whooredome, that they mighte triumphe and please thy louers, whiche haue alway despyed to commit whooredome with thee, thou haste solowed the abhominable cittle in all her workes and inuentions. Therefore sayth God: I will send plagues vpon thee, widowhead, pouertie, hunger, warres, and pestilence, to waste thy houses with destruction and deathe: and the gloype of thy power shalbe dyed by as a snowe, when the heate ryleth that is sente ouer thee. Thou shalt be sicke as a poore wife, that is plagued and beate of women: so that the myghtie and louer shal not be able to recure thee. Woulde I loe hate thee, sayeth the Lord: If thou haddest not alwaye slayne my chosen, exalting the stroke of thy hands, & sayd ouer theyr deathe, when thou wast dyonken, set forth the beautye of thy countenance. The reward of thy whooredome shall bee recompenced thee in thy bosome, therefore shalt thou receiue rewarde. Lyke as thou hast done vnto my chosen (sayeth the Lord) euen so shall God doo vnto thee, and shall deliuer thee into the plague. Thy children shall dye of hunger, and thou shalt fall through the sword. Thy cities shall be broken downe, and all thyne shall perishe with the sword in the field. They that be in the mountaynes shal dye of hunger, and eate theyr owne fleshe, and drinke their owne blood, for very hunger of breade, and thyrst of water. Thou unhappy shalt come through through the sea, and reueale plagues agayne. In the passage they shall cast downe the sayne citie, and shall roote out one part of the lande, and consume & portio of thy gloze. They shall tread thee downe like stubble, and they shall be thy fyre, and shall consume thee, thy cities and thy land, thy wood and thy fruitful trees shall they burne by with the fyre. Thy children shall they carpe awayne captiue, and looke what thou hast, they shall spoile it, and marre the bewtye of thy face.

The.xvi. Chapter.

V To be vnto thee Babilon and Asia, wo be vnto Egypte and Syria, gyde youre selues with clothes of sack, and here, and mourne for your children: bee sorre, for your destruction is at hande. A sword is sent vpon you, and who will turne it backe? A fyre is kindled amonge you, and who will quench it? Plagues are sent vnto you, and what is he that will dyue theyn awayne? May any man dyue awayne an huncrye lyon in the wood? Or may anye man quench the fyre in stubble, when it hath begonne to burne? Maye one turne agayne the arrowe, that is shot of a strong archer. The mighty Lord sendeth the plagues, and what is he that will dyue theyn awayne? The fyre is kindled and gone soozth in his wrath, and what is he that will quench it? He shall cast lightnings, and who shall not feare? He shall thonder, and who shall not be afrayde? The Lord shall threaten, and who shall not bitterly be beaten to powder at his presence? The earth quaketh, and the foundations thereof: the sea aryleth by with waues from the depe, and the fluddes of it are vnquiet, and the fishes thereof also before the Lord, and before the gloze of his power. For stronge is his right hand that holdeth the bowe, his arrowes that he shooteth are sharpe, and shall not misse when they beginne to be shot into the endes of the world. Behold, the plagues are sent, and shall not turne agayne, till they come vpon earth. The fire is kindled and shall not be put out till it consume the foundations of the earth. Like as an arrow which is shot of a mightye archer, returneth not backward: euen so the plagues that shall bee sente vpon Earthe, shall not tourne agayne. Wo is me, wo is me, who shall deliuer me in those dayes? The beginning of sorowes and great mourning, the beginning of dearthe and grate death, the beginning of warres, and the powers shall stand in feare, the beginning of euils and they shall tremble euerie one. What shall I do in these things, when the plagues come? Behold, hunger and plague, trouble and anguise are sent, as scourges for amendmente. But for all these things, they shall not tourne from their wickednes, nor be alwaye mindfull of the scourges. Beholde, dayles shall be so good cheape vpon earth that they shall thinke them selues to be in good case: and euen the shall mischiese grow vpon earth, warres, dearth, and great disquietnes. For many of them that dwell vpon earth, shall perishe for hunger, and the other that escape the hunger, shall the sword destroye: and the dead shall be caste oute as dounge; and there shall be no man to comforte theyn. For the earth shall be swalked, and the Cities shall be caste downe: there shall be no man left to till the earth, and to sow it. The trees shall geue fruite, and who shall pluck them off and gather theyn? The grapes shall be rype, and who shall treade them? For all places shall be desolate of men, so that one man shall desyre to see another, or to heare his voyce. For of one whole citie there shall be ten left, and two in the fildes, which shall hide them selues in the thicke bushes, and in the cresses of stones, like as when there remain thre or foure olives vpon the olive tree, or as when a vineyard is gathered, there are left some grapes of them that diligently sought throught the vineyard. Euen so in those dayes there shall be thre or four left, for them that searche theyn houses with the sword. And the earth shall be left wast and the felde thereof shall waite vpon and her wayes and all her pathes shal growe full of thornes, because no man shal traunple there throughe. The daughters shal mourne, hauing no brydegromes, the women shal make lamentation, hauing no husbands, their daughters shal wepe hauing no helpe of their brydegrome. In the warres shal they be destroyed, and their husbandes shal peryshe of hunger, & ye seruautes of the Lorde, heare these thinges, and marke them. Beholde, the worde of the Lorde, & receaue it: beholde, the plagues vnto we npe, and are not slacke in taryng. Lyke as a traunpling woman, whiche after the ninth monthe bringeth forth a sonne when the houre of the birth is come, an houre, twose or thre afoze that the paines come vpon her body, and when the childe commeth to the byrth, they tarpe not the twinkling of an eye. Euen so shal not the plagen be slacke to come vpon earth, and the wozyde shal mourne, and sorowes shal come vpon it on enery hyde. & my people, heare my word, make you redy to the battell: as in alenil be euen as pylgryms, vpon earth. & he that selleth, let him be as he that fleeth his wyfe, & he that buyeth, as one that wil lele. Who so occupyth marchaundise, as he that wyndeth not, & he that buildeth, as he that shal not dwell therein, he that soweth, as one that shal not reape, he that troweth the vineyarde, as he that shal not gather the grapes, they that marrye, as they that shal get no chyliden: and they that marry not, as the widowes: and therfoze they that labour labour in vayne. For straungers shal reape their frutes, and spoyle they gooden, ouerthowe their houses, and take their chyliden captiue, for in captiuitie and hunger, shal they gette chyliden. And they that occupye their marchaundise with robberye, howe longe deke they their Cities, their houses, their possessions, and persons, the more will I paryshe theym for their synnes, sayeth the LORD. Like as an whooze enupeth an honest woman, so shal righteousnesse hate; iniquitie, when she decketh her selfe, and shal accuse her to her face, when he cometh that defendeth, which shal make inquisition for all synne vpon earthe. And therfoze be not ye lyke therewith, nor to the workes thereof: for of euer it be longe, iniquitie shal be taken awaye out of the earthe, and righteousnesse shal reigne among you. Let not the synner saye, that he hath not sinned, for coles of fyre shal burne vpon his heade, whiche saythe befoze the Lorde God and his glozy: I haue not synned. Beholde, the LORD knoweth all the workes of menne, their ymaginations, their thoughtes, and their heartes. & for he spake but the worde: Let the earth be made, and it was made: Let the heauen be made and it was made. In his worde were the starres made, and he knoweth the number of theym. He searcheth the grounde of the deepe, and the treasures thereof, he hath measured the sea, and what it conteyneth. He hath shut the sea in the midst of the waters, and with his worde hath he hanged the earthe vpon the waters. He spredeth out the heauen lyke a basot, vpon the waters hath he founded it. In the deserte and drye wilderness, hath he made springes of water, and pooles vpon the toppe of the mountaynes, that the floudes might poure downe from the stony rockes to water the earthe. He made manne, and putte his heart in the midst of the body, and gaue him breathe, lyfe, and vnderstandinge: yea, and the spirite of the Almighty GOD, whiche made all thinges, and hath searched the grounde of all the secretes of the earthe. He knoweth all your ymaginations and inuentions, and what ye thinke when ye syn, and would hyde your synnes. Therfoze hath the Lord searched & sought out all your workes, and he shal bewray you all. And when your synnes are broughte forth, yee shalbe ashamed befoze men, and your owne synnes shal be your accusers in that daye. What will ye do? What will ye hyde your synnes befoze God

Gen. 1.8

God and his angels: Beholde, God himselfe is the Judge, feare him, leaue of from your sinnes, and forget your unrighteousnesses, and medle nomore with them: so shall God leade you forth, and deliuer you from all trouble. For beholde, the heate of a great multitude is kindled ouer you, & they shall take away certayne of you, and fede the ydle with ydols, & they that consent vnto them, shalbe had in derision, laughed to scozne, and troden vnder foote. For vnto the places, there shalbe a place, and in the nexte cities a greate insurrection vpon those that feare the Lord. They shalbe like mad men, they shall spare no manne, they shall spoyle and waste suche as feare the Lord, the gooddes shall they take from them, and shut them out of their houses. Then shal it be knowne who are my chosen, and they shall be tried as the gold in the fyre. Heare, O ye my beloued, sayth the Lord, beholde the days of trouble are at hand, but I will deliuer you from the same. Be not ye afraide, despayre not, for God is your captayne. who so keepeth my commandementes and preceptes (sayeth the Lord God) let not your synnes wey you downe, and let not your unrighteousnesse be lyfte vp. Woe be vnto them that are subdued vnto their synnes, and tangled in their wickednes. Lyke as a fyeelde is hedged in with bushes, and the pathe thereof couered with thoznes, that noo man may transyle thowowe: and so is he taken, and cast in the fyre, and byent.

The Booke of Tobias.

The fyrst Chapter.

Tobias was of the tribe and Citie of Nephtaly, whiche lyeth in the hye countreys of Galilee, where Aulon, the way toward the west, hauing the citie of Sephet vpon the lefte syde. Though he was taken prisoner in the days of Salmansar king of the Assyrians, neuerthelesse byng in captiuitie, he forsoke not the way of truth. In somuch, that whatsoener he might get, he parted it dailie with his fellow prisoners & brethren, that were of his kinred. And thogh he were ynger then all they in the tribe of Nephtaly, yet did he not behaue himselfe childishly in his woorkes. And when all the other wente to the golden calves, whiche Jeroboam the king of Israel had made, he him selfe alone fled all their companies, and gat him to Jerusalem, vnto the Temple of the Lord, and there worshipped the Lord God of Israel, saythfully offering of all his fyist frutes and tithes, so that in the thirde yere he ministred all the tythes vnto the strangers and conuertes. These and suche like thinges did he obserue, according to the lawe of God, when he was yet but younge. But when he was a man, he took of his owne tribe, a wyfe called Sara, & of her he gat a son, whome he called Tobias, after his owne name, and taught him from his yowth vp, to feare God, and to refrayne from all synne. Howe when he with his wyfe, bys sounne, and with all his kinred, was come in to captiuitie vnto the citie of Ninne, what time as they all did eate of the meates of the Heathen, he kepte his soule, and was neuer despyled in their meates. And so so muche as he was mindfull of the Lord in all his heart, God gaue him fauour in the sighte of Salmansar the king, whiche gaue him power to go where he woude, and so had he libertie to do what so euer him lyst. So went Tobias vnto all them that were in prison, and comforted them, and gaue them wholsome exhortations. And when he came to Rages, a Citie of the Medes, hauing ten talentes of syluer (of the thinges wherewith the king had bestowed him) and saue among a great company of people of his kynrede, one Tobiah whiche was of his owne tribe) being in necessitie, he gaue him the sayd wyghte of spynner vnder an hande wytyng. After a longe season when Salmanasar the kynge was deade, and Sennacherib his sonne reygned in his stead, which hated the children of Israell. Tobias wente dayly thorowout all his kynred, and comforted them, and gaue of his goodes to cure one of them, as much as he might: he fed the hungrye, clothed the naked, and buryed the deade and slayne, and that diligently. And when Sennacherib the kynge came againe and fled out of Ierowp (what time as God punyshed him for his blasphemie) and in his wrath slewe many of the children of Israell. Tobias buried their bodies. But when it was tolde the kynge he commaunded to slay him, and toke away all his goodes. Neuerthelesse, Tobias with his sonne and with his wife fled his waye, and was hid naked, for there were manye that loued him. But after .xlb. dayes the kynge was slaine of his owne sonnes. Then came Tobias againe to his house, and all his goodes were restozed vnto him.

After these thinges vpon a solemne daye of the Rorde Tobias made a good feaste in his house, and sayde vnto his sonne: Good thy waye and bringe hither some of our tribe, such as feare God, that they maye make mery with vs. And when he was gone, he came agayne, and tolde his father that one of the children of Israell laye slayne vpon the streete. And immediately he lefte from his table, leste the feaste, came fastynge to the deade corse, tooke him, and bare him pryncely into his house, that when the sunne was downe, he might safelye burye him. And when he had hyd the corse, he did eate his meate with mourning and feare, remembryng the wordes that the Rorde sayeth by the prophete Danna: For hye shalles hall be turne to sorrowe and heauyness. But whyle the sunne was downe, he wente his waye and buried him. Then all his neyghbours reyned him, saying: It is not longe, since it was commaunded to slay thee because of this matter, and haste scarce escaped the daunger of death, and buriedest thou the deade agayne? Neuerthelesse, Tobias fearinge G D D more then the kynge, tooke the bodies of the slayne, and hyd them in his house, and buried them at mydnighte. It happened vpon a day, that he had buried the dead, and was werpe, came home, and layed him downe by the wal, and slept. And while he was a slepe, there fell downe vpon his eyes warme donge out of the swalows nest, so y he was blind. His temptation byd God suffer to happen vnto him, that they whiche came after, mighte haue an example of his patience, lyke as of holy Job. For in so much as he euer feared God from his youth by, and kept his commandementes, he grudged not agaynst God, that the plague of blindness chancelled vnto him, but remayned stedfast in the feare of God, and thanked God all the dayes of his lyfe. For lyke as blessed Job was hadde in derision of kynge, euen so was he laughed to scoone of his elders and kynfolkes, whiche saide vnto him: Where is thy hope, for the which thou hast done almes, and buried the dead? But Tobias rebuked them, and spake: Say not so, for we are the children of holy men, and loke for the life, which God shall geue vnto them that neuer turne their belefe from him. Anna his wyfe went daily to the weaning wycke, and loke what linyng she coude get with the labour of her handes, she brought it. And it happened that she toke a kyd, and brought it home. And when her husband herd it cry, he saide: loke that it be not stolen, restoze it agayne to the owners: for it is not lawfull for vs to eat or to touch any thing of thes. Then was his wife angrie and saide: How is thy hope become vaine openly, and thy almes dedes are manifeste, with these and such like wordes byd he call him in the teeth.

The. iij. Chapter.

Then Tobias toke it heartely, & with teares he began to make hys praycr, sayinge: O Lord thou art righteous, and all thy iudgements are true, yea, all thy waies are mercye, faythfulnes and iudgement. And nowe O Lord, be mynde full of me, & take no vengeance of my sins, neyther remember my misdoedes, neyther the misdoedes of my elders. For we haue not bene obediente vnto thy commaundementes, therefore are we spoyled, broughte into captiuitie, into death, into derision and shame vnto all nations, among whom thou hast scattered vs. And nowe, O Lord, thy iudgements are great, for we haue not done according to thy commaundementes, neyther haue we walked innocentely before thee. And nowe, O Lord, deale with me according to thy will, and command my spirite to be receaued in peace, for more expediente were it for me to dye, then to lyue. At the same time it happened, that Sara & daughter of Raguell at Rages, a cite of the Medes was sciaundred of one of her fathers handmaidens, namely, that she shoulde haue hadde seuen husbandes, which as soone as they were gone in vnto her, were slayne of the deuill called Asmodeus. Therefore, when she rejoynded the mayden for her fault, she answered her, saying: God let his neuer see son nor daughter of thee more vpon earth, thou killer of thy husbandes. Wilt thou slaye me also, as thou hast slayne seuen men? At this voyce went Sara into an hys chamber of her house, and three dayes and three nightes she nether eat nor drank, but continued in prayer, and besought God with teares, that he wolde deliuer her from this rebuke. Upon the thirde daye it chaunced, that when she had made an ende of prayer, she prayed the Lord, sayinge: Blessed be thy name, O God of our fathers, whiche when thou art wrothe, shewest mercy, and in time of trouble thou forgettest the finnes of them that call vpon thee. Vnto thee O Lord turne I my face, vnto thee lyfte I my mine eyes. I beseeche thee O Lord, lose me out of the bondes of this rebuke, or els take me utterlye awaye from the earth. Thou knowest Lord, that I neuer had desire vnto man, and that I haue kept my soule cleane from all vncleane lyste. I haue not begite companye with those & passe their time in sport, neyther haue I made my selfe partaker with them that walke in light behanoure. Neuertheless, an husband haue I consented to take, not for my pleasure, but in thy feare. Howe peradventure either I haue bene vniuersallye of them, or els were they vniuersallye for me, or thou happily hast kept me to another husband. For why thy counsell is not in the power of man. But whosoever loueth thee & serueth thee a right, is sure of this, that yf his lyfe be tempted and proued, it standeth in the trynginge, and yf he endure in patience, he shal haue a reward, and be thy lyfe crowned: and yf he be in trouble, that God (no doubt) shal deliuer him: and yf his life be in chastening, that he shal haue leaue to come vnto thy mercye. For thou hast no pleasure in our dampnation: and why after a tyme thou makest the weather saye & still, after weeping & heauynesse, thou graunt great voyce. Thy name, O God of Israel, be prayesd for ever. At the same tyme were both their prayers herd in the sighte of the maiestie of the hys God. And Raphael the holpe Angell of the Lord was sent to helpe theym both, whose prayers came at one time together before God.

So when Tobias thought his prayer to be herde, that he might dye, he called vnto him his sonne Tobias, and said vnto him: My sonne heare the wordes of my mouth, and lay them in thine heart, as a foundation. When God taketh away my soule, bury thou my body, and holde thy mother in honoure all the dayes of thy lyfe. For thou oughtest to remember, what and howe great mercys she suffered for thee in her wombe. And when she also hath fulfilled the time of her life, buy her besyde me. Howe God in thy thought all the dayes of thy lyfe, and besyde, lest at any tyme thou consent vnto sinne, and least thou let slip the commandementes of the Royde our God. Geue aimes of thy goodes, and turn neuer thy face from the poze, and so shall it come to passe, that the face of the Royde shall not be tourned awaye from thee. Be mercifull after thy power. If thou haste muche, geue plesently, if thou haste little, do thy diligence, gladly to geue of that little. For so gaderest thou thy selfe a good reward in the daye of necessitie. For myghte deliuereth from all sinne, and from death, and suffereth not the soule to come into darkness. A great comfort is mercy before the hye God, vnto all them that shewe it. My sonne, keepe thee well from al whoredome, and besyde thy wife. See that no fault be knowne of thee. Let neuer pryde haue rule in thy mynde, nor in thy woode, for in pryde is al destruction. Whosoever worketh any thing for thee, immediately geue him his hye, and take that thy hye seruantes wages remayne not by the ower night. Take that thou neuer do vnto another man, the thing that thou wouldest not another man should do vnto thee. Eat the breade with the hungry and poore, and couer the naked with thy clothes. Set thy bread and wine vpon the buriall of the righteous, and doo not thou eate and drinke therof with the sinners. Take care counsell at the wise. Be alwaye thankfull vnto God, and beseeche him, that he will order thy wayes, and that whosoever thou dealest or takest in hand, it may remayne in him. I certifi thee also my son, that (when thou shalt yet be a babe) I deliuered ten talents of silver vnto Gabelus, at Ragas a cite of the Medes, and his hande wytyngs haue I by me. And therefore seeke some meanes, how thou mayest come by him, and receaue of him the said weight of silver, & geue him his hande wytyngs againe. My sonne, be not greyde: trust it is, we leade here a poore lyfe: but great good shall we haue, yf we feare God, and depart from all sinne, and do well.

C. e. b. Chapter.

Then answered Tobias his father and said: father, al that thou hast commanded me, will I do and that diligently. But how I shall require this money, I canne not tell. Whether doeth he knowe me, nor I him. What token shall I geue him? And as for the way thither, I neuer knowe it. Then his father answered him, & said: I haue his hande wytyng by me, which when thou shewest him vnsapned, immediately he shall paye thee. But go thy waye now, and get thee some saythfull manne to go with thee for an hye, that thou mayest receaue the monye, while I am yet lyving. Then went Tobias oute, and vpon the strete, he found a saye pong man standinge, guided bye, and as it were one readye to take his tourney. And he knewe not that it was an Angel of God, but saluted him, and sayd: From whence art thou, thou good pong man? He answered: Of the children of Israel. And Tobias said vnto him: knowest thou the waye, that ledeth vnto the contry of the Medes? He answered: I knowe it well, and all those stretes haue I gone of tyme, & haue lodged with our byother Gabelus, that dwelleth in Ragas, a cite of the Medes, which lyeth vpon the mounte Egbathanus. Tobias sayde vnto him: I praye thee tarpe for me, till I haue told my father these thynges. Then went Tobias in, and told his father all. At the which his father marueled, and prynced, that he woulde come in vnto him. Nowe when the Angell came in, he saluted him, and sayde: Joy be with thee for evermore. And elde Tobias sayde: What loye can I haue that sit here in darkness, and see not the light of heauen. The pong man shewd vnto him: he of good chere, & good will shewd thee the waye. And Tobias sayde vnto him: Canst thou bring any sonne to Gabelus, & unto the Citle of Rages in Media: And when thou comest agayne, I shall pay thee thy hyre. And the Angell sayde vnto him: I shall leade thy sonne, and bringe him to thee agayne. Then Tobias answered him: tell me I pray thee, of what house or of what tribe art thou? The Angell Raphaell sayde vnto him: I keel thou after the kindred of an hyeling, or seekest thou a gyde for thy sonne to go with him? But that I make thee not carefull, I am Azarias the sonne of great Hananias. And Tobias answered: thou art com of a great kindred: but I pray thee be not displeased, that I despyed to know thy kindred. The Angell sayd vnto him: thy sonne shall I lead forth safely, and bring him whole to thee agayne. Then answered Tobias, and sayd: well, go on your way, and God be in your iourney, and his Angell beare you compagne. So when they hadde prepared all thinges, that they wold take with them in their iourney. Tobias bad his father & his mother fare wel, and they went on their way both together. Now when they were gone: his mother began to weepe, and sayde: The staffe of our age halfe thou taken awaye, and sente him from vs. Wold God that the money had neuer bene, for the which thou hast sent him away. If we had bene content with our povertie, this had bene great riches vnto vs, that we sawe our sonne here. Then sayde Tobias vnto her: weep not, our sonne shall come to vs agayne safe and sound, and thine eye shall se him. For I trust, that the good Angell of God shall beare him downe compagne, and order well all the thinges that he doeth: so that he shall come to vs agayne with ioy. At these wordes his mother left off from weeping, and helde her tongue.

So Tobias went on his waye, & a dog folowed him, and the first night they abode by the water of Erytra. Then went he out to walke his feete, and behold, there came forth an horrible fishe to deuoure him. Of whom Tobias was afrayd, and cryed with a loude voyce, saying: Agyde, he cometh vpon me: And the Angell sayde vnto him: Take him by the gill, and brawe him to thee. And he did so, and brawe him vpon the lande. And the fishe beganne to leape as his feite. Then sayd the Angell vnto him: take out the bowels of this fish, and as for the heart, the gall and the liuer, keepe them by thee. For these thinges are necessary and good for medicine. Tobias did so, and roasted the fishe, and they toke him with them in their iourney: the residue they salted, as much as was sufficient for theym, till they came to Rages a citle of the Medes. Then Tobias asked the Angell, and sayd vnto him: I pray thee brother Azarias, tel me, wherto are these thinges good of the fishe thou hast bidden me keepe? The Angell answered him, and sayde: If thou layest a pike of the berr vpon the coales, the fumes thereof dyueth away all manner of euill spirites, whether it be from man or from woman, so that from thence forth the same shall come no more vnto them. The gall is good to annoyne or to drye the eyes withall, wher as there is any blemishe in them, so that they shal be whole. And Tobias sayde vnto him: where wilt thou that we remaine? The Angell answered and sayd: here is a nye kinsman of thine, one Raguel by name, which hath a daughter called Sara, and hath nyne other sonne nor daughter but her. All his good belongeth vnto thee, and thou shalt marry her, and therefore desyre her of her father, and he shall geue her thee to wife. Then answered Tobias and sayd: As I vnderstande, she hath bene married vnto seven husbandes, and they all are deade: and I haue heard saye, that the deuil dwelleth there. I am afrayd therefore, lest such thinges happen vnto me also, whiche yett come to passe. For I am the only sonne of my father and my mother. I shoulde bringe them to thee age with sorrowe to their graues.

Then saide the angell Raphael vnto him: Heare me, and I will tell thee what they be, of whom the deuill hath power. Namely, they that receaue marriage of such a fashion, that they shut God out from theim, and from their hearts, and geue theim selues to their owne luste, euen as it were an horse and mule, whiche haue no vnderstanding: vpon such hath the deuill power. But when thou takest her, and arte come into the chamber, withhold thy self from her thre daies, and geue thy diligence vnto nothing but vnto prayer with her. And in the fyrste nyght, roske the liuer of the fishe, and the deuill shalbe driuen away. The seconde nyght shalt thou be receaued into the company of the holy patriarkes, The thirde night shalt thou obteyne the blessing of God, so that whole children shall be borne of you. After the thirde night, take the mayden in the feare of God, and more for the desyre of children, then for any fleshely luste: that in the seede of Abraham, thou mayest obteyne the blessing in children.

The. viij. Chapter.

Then went they in to Raguel, which receaued them ioyfully. And when Raguel looked vpon Tobias, he sayde vnto Anna his wyfe: Howe lyke is this yong man vnto my sisters sonne? And when he had spoken this, he saide: Whence be ye good brethren? They said: Of the tribe of Nephthtaly, out of the captiuitie of Ninine. Then said Raguel vnto them: knowe ye my brother Tobias? They saide: yea, we knowe him well. And when they had spokē much good of him, the angell sayde vnto Raguel: Tobias of whō thou askest is this yong mans father. Then Raguel bowed him selfe doونه, & wept, take him about the necke & kissed him, and said: Gods blessing haue thou my sonne; for thou art the sonne of a good vertuous man. And Anna his wyfe, and Sara his daughter wepte also. And when they had talked together Raguel hadde kyll a swether, and to make a feast. And when he prayed the to sit doونه to dynner. Tobias said: I will neyther eate nor drinke here this day, except thou first graunt me my petition, and promise to geue me thy daughter Sara. When Raguel hearde this, he was astonied: for he knewe, what had happened vnto the other seuen men, that wente in vnto her, and hee beganne to feare, that it shoulde chaunce vnto him also in lyke maner. And while he stode so in doubt and gaue the yonge man no answer, the angell said vnto him: Feare not to geue him thy daughter, for vnto this manne that feareth God, belongeth thy daughter to wyfe, therefore mighte none other haue her. Then sayd Raguel: I doubt not, but God hath accepted my prayers and teares in his sight: and I truste he caused you to come vnto me for the same intent, that this daughter of myne might be married in her owne kinned, accordinge to the lawe of Moyses. And now doubt thou not, but I will geue her vnto thee: So hee tooke the ryghte hande of his daughter, and gaue her into the right hande of Tobias, and sayde: The God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob be with you, ioyne you together, and fulfill his blessing in you. And they tooke a letter, and made a writinge of the marriage. And then made they merve, and prayed God. And Raguel called Anna his wife vnto him, and badde her prepare another chamber, and thither he brought Sara his daughter, and shee wepte. Then saide he vnto her: Be of good chere my daughter, the Lorde of heauen geue thee ioy, for the heuiness that thou hast suffered.

The. viij. Chapter.

Now after that they had supped, they broughte the yonge man into her. Then thought Tobias vpon the wordes of the Angel: and toke out of his bagge a piece of the lyuer of the fishe, and layed it vpon the hoate coales. So the Angell Raphael toke holde of the deuill, and sent him away, and bounde him in the wildernes of the hyer Egipte. Then spake Tobias vnto the virgin, & said: My Sara, let vs make our prayer vnto God to daye, to morowe, and ouer morowe: for these three nightes wil we reconcile our selues with god: and when the thirde holy night is past, we shal toyne together in the duty of marriage. For we are the children of holy men, and we maye not come together as the heathen that knowe not God.

When shode they bp both together, and besought God earnestly, that he wold preserue them. And Tobias saide: O Lord God of our fathers, prayed be thou of heauen and earthe, of the sea, welis and floudes, and of all thy creatures that be therin. Thou madest Adam of the mould of the earthe, and gauest him Eua for an helper. And now lord thou knowest that it is not because of voluptuousnes that I take this sister of mine to wife, but onely for the loue of children, in whom thy name be blessed for euermore. And Sara sayd: haue mercy vpon vs (O Lord) haue mercy vpon vs, and let vs both come whole and sound together to a good age. And about the cock crowyng, it happened, that Raguel called his seruantes, and they went with him to make a grane. For he saide: it is chaunced now vnto him peraduenture, as it did vnto the other seuen menne that went in vnto her.

 Now when they had made the grane Raguel came agayne to his wife and said vnto her: send one of thy maides, to loke if he be dead, that I may bury him afore it be light day. So she sente a maiden to see, which when she came into the chamber, founde them whole and sounde, sleeping together. And so she came againe, and brought good ti-dinges. Then Raguell and Anna his wife prayed the Lord, and sayd: praysed be thou, O Lord God of Israel, for it is not happened vnto vs, as we thought. For thou hast dealt mercifully with vs, and put away fro vs the enemye that persecuted vs, and hath shewed mercy vnto yonder two be-leued, O Lord, cause them to magnifye thee more perfectly, and to offer the sacrifice of thy people, and of their belch, that all people maye knowe that thou onely arte God in all the earth. And immediatly Raguell commaunded his seruantes to fyll the grane, that they had made with erth, afore it was light, and had his wife prepare a feast and to make ready al things that wer necessary for meate, to suche as wente by the waye. He caused two fat hyne also, and foure wethers to be slayne, & the meates to be prepared for all his neighbours and frendes. And Raguell charged Tobias to remayne with him two weekes. As for all the good that he had, he gaue Tobias the halfe of it, and made this writing, that the halfe which remained, should fall vnto Tobias after their death.

The .ix. Chapter.

Then Tobias called vnto him the Angell, whom he thought to haue bene a man, and sayde vnto him: Brother Arias, I pray thee hearken vnto my wordes: If I shold geue my selfe to be thy seruant, I shal not deserue thy providence.
 Nevertheless, I beseech thee, that thou wilt take the brailles and the seruan-tes, and go vnto Gabelus in Medes the citee of Medes, and deliuer him his hande writinge, and receaue the money of him, and pray him to com to my marriage. For thou knowest thy selfe, that my father dothe number the daies: and yf I tary one daye longer, he will be sorie in his mynde. Nowe seeest thou howe earnestly Raguel hath required me, soo that I can not saye him nay. Then toke Raphael foure of Raguells seruantes, and two Camells, and went vnto Meges, the Citie of the Medes: and when he had found Gabelus, he gaue him his hande writinge, and receaued all the money. He tolde him also of Tobias the sonne of Tob, howe all thinges hadde happened, and caused him to come with him to the marriage.

Now when he cam into the house of Raguell, he found Tobias sitting at the table, & he leaped vp, and they kissed one another, and Gabelus wepte, and prayesd God, and sayd: The blessing of the God of Israel haue thou, for thou art the sonne of a right vertuous and iust man, and of one that feareth God, and geueth greete almes. And blessing haue thy wife, and your elders, that ye may see your children, and your childrens children, vnto the thirde and fourth generation, and your seede be blessed of the God of Israel, whiche reigneth world without end. And when they all hadde sayd Amen, they went to the feast, but with the feare of the Lord, held they the feast of the mariage.

The .x. Chapter.

NOWE while younge Tobias made long taryng, by reason of the mariage, his father was full of care & heynnes, & thought what should be the cause, that my son taryeth so longe? Or why should he be kept so long there? Peraduenture Gabelus is dead, & no mā wil geue him money. Thus began he to be very sorrowfull, he and Anna his wife with him, and began to wepe both together because their sonne was not come agayne vnto them at the day appointed. As for his mother, she wept with discomfortable teares, and sayde: Wo is me, my sonne: Oh what ayled vs to send thee away into a strange country, thou light of our eyes, thou staffe of our age, thou comforte of our lyfe, thou hope of our generation. Seeing all the things that we haue, are onely in thee, we should not haue sent thee away from vs. Then Tobias comforted her, and sayd: Hold thy tongue, and be not discomforted: our son is whole and sound, the man that we sente him withall, is saythfull ynough. Neuer thelesse, he might in no wise be comforted, but dayly went out, looked about, and went about all the streetes, wherby he thought he should come agayne: that (if it were possible) he might see him comminge a farre off,

But Raguel sayde vnto his sonne in lawe: O tary here, and I shall sende a messenger vnto thy father Tobias, to tell him that thou arte in good health. Tobias sayde vnto him: I am sure, that my father and my mother counte euery day, and that their herts are sorre. So when Raguell prayesd Tobias with many wordes, and woulde in no wise heare him: he deliuered Sara vnto him, and the halfe part of all his good: in seruantes, and handmaydens, in sheepe, in Camels, and in kyne, and muche money, & so sent him away from him with peace and ioye, and sayd: The holy angell of the Lord be with you in your iorney, and bring you sooth safe and sound, that ye may fynd al things in good case with your elders, and that myne eyes maye see your children afoze I dye. So the elders embraced their daughter, kissed her, and let her go, exhorting her to honoz her father and mother in lawe, to loue her hal bande, to rule well her household, to kepe her hous in good order, and to shewe her selfe faultlesse.

AS they nowe were goinge homewarde agayne, vpon the xi. daye, they came to Charra, whiche lyeth in the halfe waye towarde Ninue. And the angel sayde: Brother Tobias, thou knowest howe thou hast left thy father: therefore if it please thee, we two will goe befoze, and lette the household, with thy wyfe and the cattell come soft and faire after vs. And whē Tobias was content that they should goe befoze, Raphael sayd vnto him: Take of the gill of the fishe with thee, for it shal be necessary. So Tobias toke of the gill and they went their way. But Anna, the mother of Tobias sat dayly by the way side, vpon the toppe of an hill, from whence she mighte see farre about her. And while she was waytynge there for his comming, she looked a farre off, and anone she perceaued her sonne comminge, and ranne and told her husband, saying: Behold thy sonne cometh. And Raphael sayde vnto Tobias: As soone as thou comest into the house, immediatly worship the Lord thy God, and geue thanks vnto him: then go to thy father, and kisse him: and strike his eyes ouer with the gail of the fishe that thou hast brought with thee. For be sure, that his eyes shall straight way be opened, and thy father shall see the light of heauen, and shal reioyce at the sight of thee. Then the dogge that had bene with them in their iourney, ran before, and came as a messenger, and wagged with his tayle for gladnesse.

E So the blind father arose, and began to runne, and stumbled with his fete, and gaue a seruauant his hande, ran to mete his sonne, receaued him, and kissed him, he and his wife, and they began to weepe for ioy. Now whē they had worshipped and thanked God, they sat downe. Then tooke Tobias of the fishes gail, and anoynted his fathers eyes, and taried halfe an houre. and then began the blemishe to go out of his eyes, like as it hadde bene the whyte skinne of an egge: which Tobias tooke and dreyde from his eyes, and immediatly he receaued his sight. Then they prayd God, he and his wife, and all they that knewe him.

And Tobias sayde: O Lord God of Israell, I geue thee prayse and thanks, for thou hast chastered me, and made me whole. And lo, now we doo I see my sonne Tobias. After seuen dayes came Sara his sons wife also, whole and sound with all the household and cattell, with camels and much money of his wyues, and with the money that he had receaued of Gabelus; and he tolde his father and his mother all the benefites, which God had done for him, by the man that led him. Achior also and Rabsath Tobias sister sons came, and wer glad and reioyced with him, by reasō of all the good that God had shewed vnto him. And so for the space of seuen dayes they made mery, and were right ioyfull euerychone.

The .xij. Chapter.

Then Tobias called his sonne vnto him, and sayd. What maye we geue this holy manne, that went to thee? Tobias answered his father, and said: Father what reward shall we geue him? O what things can deserue his benefites? He hath bene my gyde, and brought me safe agayne, he receaued the money from Gabelus, he caused me to get my wife, he droue the euill spirite from her, he hath bene an occasion of gladnesse to her father and mother, he deliuered me, that I was not deuoured of the fishe, he hath made thee to see the light of heauen, yea, we all haue receaued great good of him. Howe shoulde we worshiply deserue these thynges vnto him? But I pray thee my father, that thou wilt desire him, yf happely he will vouchsafe, to take with him the halfe of all that we haue brought. So the father and the sonne called him, tooke him aside, and beganne to praye him, that he would be content to take in good worth, the half part of al that they had brought. Then said he secretly vnto them: Praise yet the God of heauen, and geue thanks vnto him before all men liuing, for he hath shewed his mercy vnto vs. It is good to hyde the kinges secretes, but to shewe and to praise the workes of God, it is an honorable thyng. Prayer is good with fasting, and mercy is better, the to hoorde by treasures of golde. For mercy deliuereth from death, cleneth sinne, and causeth to finde euerylastyng lyfe. But they that do sinne and vnrightheousnes, are the enemies of their owne soule. Wherefore I tell you trueth, and will hide nothinge from you. When thou prayest with teares, and buryest the deade, and ledest thy dyner, and hiddest the deade in thy house vppon the daye time, that thou mightest burpe them in the night, I offered thy prayer before the Lord. And because thou was accept and beloued of God, it was necessary, that temptation should trye thee. And now hath the Lord sent me to heal thee, and to deliuer Sara thy sons wife from

D the euill spirits. For I am Raphael an angell one of the seven that stand before God. When they heard this, they were sore afraide, and trembled, and fell downe vpon their faces vnto the ground. Then sayde the Angell: Peace be with you, feare not. Where as I haue beene with you, it is the will of God: geue prayse and thankes vnto him. You thoughte that I did eate and drinke with you, but I use meate that is inuisible, and drinke that cannot be seene of menne. Nowe therefore is the time that I muste turne agayne, vnto him that sente me, but be ye thankfull vnto God, and tel out all his wonderous woorkes. And when he had spoken these wordes, he was taken away out of their sighte, so that they sawe him nomore. Then fel they downe flat vpon their faces by the space of thre houres, and praised God: when they rose vp, they told all his wonderous woorkes.

C The. xiiij. Chapter.

Then olde Tobias opened his mouth and praysed the Lord and sayde: Greate arte thou O Lord for evermore, and thy kingdome worlde without ende: for thou scourgest and healest, thou ledest vnto hel, and bringest out agayne, and there is none that may escape thine hande. O geue thanks vnto the Lord, ye children of Israel, and prayse him in the sight of the heathen. For amonge the heathen which knowe him nor hath he scattered you, to the intende that ye should shewe forth his marvelous woorkes, and cause them for to knowe that there is none other God almighty but he. Hee hath chastened vs for our misdedes, and for his owne mercy sake shal he saue vs. Consider then howe he hath deale with you, and prayse him with feare and drede, and magnify the euerlasting king in your woorkes. I wil prayse him euen in the land of my captiuitie, for he hath shewed his maiesty vnto a sinful people.
Come you therefore, O ye sinners, and do righteousness before God, and be ye sure, that he will shewe his mercy vpon you. As for me and my son, we wil reioyce in God. O prayse the Lord all ye his chosen, hold the dayes of gladnes, and be thankful vnto him.

O Jerusalem thou cite of God, the Lord hath punished thee for the wokes of thine owne handes. O prayse the Lord in thy good things, and geue thanks to the euerlasting God, that he may build vp his tabernacle again in thee, that he may call agayne vnto thee, all suche as be in captiuitie, and that thou mayest haue ioye for euermore. With a fayre lighte shalte thou shine, & at the endes of the worlde shal honoure thee. The people shal come vnto thee from farre, they shal bringe giftes, and worship the Lord in thee, and thy land shal they haue for a sanctuarie, for they shal call vpon the greate name of thee. Cursed shal they bee that despise thee, and all that blaspheme the, shalbe condemned, but blessed shal they be that builde thee vp. As for thee, thou shalt reioyce in thy children, for they all shal be blessed, and gathered together vnto the Lord. Blessed are all they that loue thee, and that be gladd of thy peace.
Prayse thou the Lord, O my soule, for the Lord our God hath deliuered his cite Jerusalem from all her troubles, I will count my selfe happy, yf my seeds remaine to see the clerenes of Jerusalem. The gates of Jerusalem shalbe build with Saphire and Smaragde, and all the compasse of her walles with precious stones. Til her streetes shal be paved with whitte marble stone, and in al the stetes shal Alleluya be songe. Praysed be the Lord, whiche hath exalted her, that his kingdome may be vpon her for euermore. Amen. And so Tobias made an ende of his talking.

C The. xliij. Chapter.

After that Tobias hadde gotten his sight agayne, he liued. xliij. yeares, and sawe his childers children. Nowe whē he was C. and. ij. yeare olde, he dyed, and was buried honozablye in Ninive. For when he was sixe and fifty yeares of age

The first Chapter.

ARphaxat the king of Medes subdued ma-nye people vnto his dominion, & builded a noble strong cite which he called Egbathanis. The wal-les of it made he of fre stone, four squa-red seuentie cubites hie, & thirty cubi-tes brode. He made towres therpon an hundred cubites hie. But vpon the four corners, euery side was twenty fote brode. He made the portes in the height like as the towres. This king trusted in his mighty host, and in his glorious charrets. So in the twelfth yeare of his reigne, it happened, that Nabuchodonosor the king of the Assi-rians, which reigned in the great Cy-tie of Ninue, foughte agaynst Ar-phaxat, and overcame him in the great field called Ragan, besyde Euphrates and Tigris and Tadason in the field of Erioth the kinges of the Gypses.
Then was the kingdome of Nabu-chodonosor exalted, and his heart was lyfte vp, and he sent vnto al them that dwelte in Celicia, in Damascus, in Libanus, and vnto the heathen that dwelte in Carmel and Cedar, and to suche as dwelt in Galile, in the great felde of Elazelon, to all theym that wer in Samaris, and beyond the water of Jordan vnto Jerusalem, and the whole lande of Iesse vnto the mountaynes of Ethiopia. Vnto all these did Nabuchodonosor the kinge of the Assirians sende messangers.
But they al with one consent would not agre vnto him, & sent 4 messengers agayne emptye, and put them awaye without honour. Then Nabuchodo-nosor the kinge tooke indignation at all those lands, & swore by his thron and by his kingdome, that he would be auenged of all those countreys.

age he lost the sight of his eyes, and when hee was thre score yeaere olde, he gat his sight again. The residue of his life led he in ioy, and increfed well in the feare of God, and departed in peace. But in the houre of his death he called vnto him his sonne Tobias and seuen ponge springaldes his son-nes children, and said vnto them. The destruction of Ninue is at hande, for the word of the Lord cannot faile, and our brethren that are scattered out of the lande of Israel, shall come thither again. And the whole land of it that hath bene waste, shalbe filled, and the house of God that was bren in it, shal be builded again, and all such as feare God, shall retorne thither, the hethen also shal forsake their idols, and come to Jerusalem, and dwell there, and al the kinges of the earth shalbe glad of her, and worship the Lord God of Israel. And therefore my children, heare your father. Serue the Lord in the trueth, seeke after his will, and do the thing that pleaseth him. Command your children that they do right, geue alms, be mindful of God, and euer to be thankfull vnto him in truth, and with al their power. Heare me now therefore my children, and abyde not here, but in what daye sooner ye haue buried your mother beside me, get you from hence. For I see, that the wickednes of it shal bring it to destruction and end. After the death of his mother, Tobias departed away fro Ni-nue, with his wife & children, & with his childrens children, & cam agayne to his father and mother in law, & found the whole, & in a good age, & tooke the care of the. And he closed their eyes, & was heire vnto Raguel's goodes, and saw the first generation, and his childers children. And whē he was .xxix. yeare of age, he died in the feare of the Lord, and his kinsfolkes buried him, and all his posterity continued in good life, & holys conuerlation, so that they were loued & accepted both of God & man, and of all the people of the land.

The end of the boke of Tobias.

The .ij. Chapter.

In the thirteenth yere of King Nabuchodonosor, vpon the .xii. day of the first moneth, it was devised in the court of Nabuchodonosor the king of the Assyrians, that he shoulde defende him selfe. So he called vnto him all the elders, all his captaynes, and men of warre, and shewed them his secret counsell, and told them that his purpose was to bringe the whole earthe vnder his dominion. Nowe when they were all content with this saying, Nabuchodonosor the king called Holofernes the chiefe captayne of his warres, and said vnto him: Go thy way forth agaynst all the kingdomes of the west, and specially agaynst those that haue despised my commaundemente. Thou shalt spare no realme, all strong cities shalt thou bringe in subiection vnto mee.

Then Holofernes called together all the captaynes and rulers of all the power in Assyria, and mustred the soldiers vnto the hoste (like as the kinge commaunded him) namely, an hundred and twentie thousand fightinge men vpon foote, and twentie thousand archers vpon horsebacke. All his ordernance sente be before with an innumerable multitude of camelles, so that the hoste was well provided for with oren, and small cattell, and that without number. He caused corne to be prepared out of all Syria for his hoste.

Muche golde and silver also tooke he out of the kinges house. So he tooke his iourney, he and all his hoste, with charrettes, horsemenne, and archers, of whom there were so manye, that they couered the grounde of the lande, lyke the grethoppers. And when he was gone past the borders of the Assyrians he came towarde the great mountaynes of Ange, whiche lye vpon the left side of Celicia: and so went he by into their castels, and wanne euery strong holde. As for the welthy cite of Mochus, he brake it downe, and spoiled all the chylidren of Charlis and the Amarians, which lay toward the wilderness, and vpon the South syde of the lande of Chelon. He wente over

Euphrates also, and came into Mesopotamia, and brake downe all the hye cities that were there, from the brooke of Hambe till a man come to the sea: and he toke the borders in from Celicia vnto the coastes of Taphet toward the Southe. He caried awaye all the Medians, and spoiled all their gooddes, and whosoeuer withstode him, he slew the ym with the swearde. After this he went downe into the fildes of Damascus in the tyme of haruest, and bent by all the corne and all the trees, and caused the vines to be cutte downe. And the feare of him fell vpon all them that dwelt vpon the earth.

The .iij. Chapter.

So the kinges and princes of all cities and landes sent their Embassadors: namely, they of Syria, and Mesopotamia, Siria Sobal, and Libia, and Celicia, which came to Holofernes, and sayd: Let thy wrath cease towarde vs, it is better for vs to serue the great kinge Nabuchodonosor with our lynes, and to be subiecte vnto thee, then that we shoulde dye, and be slayne, and receaue greater hurte. All our cities and possessions, all mountaynes and hylles, all feldes, greates and small cattell, sheepe, goates, hoxes and cammicles, all our gooddes and householdes, be in thy power, vnder thy subiection, be it all together. We oure selues also and our childerene will be thine owne, come vnto vs a peacable Lord, and ble our seruice at thy pleasure. Then came Holofernes downe fro the mountaynes with horsemen & great power, and conquered all strong fenced Cities, and all that dwelte in the lande. And out of all cities he tooke stronge meane, and suche as were meete for the warre to helpe him. There came suche a feare also vpon those countreys, that the indwellers of all the Cities, the Princes, and rulers, and the people together, wet forth to mete him as he came, and receaued him honorably with garlandes & torches, with

With daunces, tabzettes, and pyper. Neuerthelesse, though they did this, yet might they not swage his rygorous stomacke: but he destroyed their cities, and hewed downe their woddes. For Nabuchodonosor the king had commaunded him, that he should roote out all the goddes of the lande, to the intent that he onely mighte be called & taken for the God of the nations, which Holofernes with his power brought vnder him. So wente he thowow Siria Hobal, and thowow all Tppamia, and all Mesopotamia, & came to the Idumeans, in the lande of Gabaa, and Septopolite, and tooke their cities, and remayned there thirtye dayes, wherein he caused all the whole multitude of his hooſte to be gathered together.

The. iij. Chapter.

Vhen the chyldren of Israell that dwelte in Ierowp, heard this, they were soze afrayde of him. Ther came such trembling also and feare vppon them, that they sorowd he shoulde doo vnto the Citie of Ierusalem, and the temple of the Loyde, as he had doone to other cities and their temples. So they sent into all Samaria rounde about vnto Jericho, tooke in, and occupied all toppes of the mountaynes, and made fast the townes with walles, and prepared cozne for theim agaynst the battaile. Eliachim also the Priest wrote vnto all them that dwelt toward Esdolan (whiche lieth ouer agaynst the great field by Dothaim) and vnto all those by whom men might haue passage vnto them, that they should take in the waies of the mountaynes, wherby there might be any waye and passage to Ierusalem, & that they should hold diligent watch where any strait was betwixt the mountaynes. And the chyldren of Israell did as Eliachim the Priest of the Loyd had commaunded them. And all the people cried earnestly, and humbled their soules with fastinges and prayers, they and their women. The Priestes putte on heary clothes, and layde the yonge babes before the temple of the Loyd, and covered the aulter of the Loyde with an heary clothe. And with one accord they cried vnto the Loyde God of Israell, that their chyldren shoulde not be geuen into a praye, and they wyues into a spoyle, that their Citie shold not be layd wast, and that their Sanctuarie shold not be inhallowd, and so they to be a shame and rebuke vnto the heathen. Then Eliachim the hye priest of the Loyd went round about al Israell, and spake vnto them, saying: We ye sure, that the Loyd wil heare your petitions, yf ye continue stedfaste in fastinges and prayers, in the syghte of the Loyde. Remember Mopſes, the seruaunte of the Loyde, whiche ouerthrewe the A malechites (that trusted in their mighte and power, in their hooſte, in their shieldes, in their charettes and hoysmen) not with weapons, but with holpe prayers. Euen so shall all the enemies of Israell be, yf ye continue in this worke that ye haue begonne. So vppon this exhortation, they continued in prayer before the Loyd. In so much that they which offered dyent sacrifices vnto the Loyd, offered the offrings vnto the Loyde beyng arayed in heare chothes, and ashes vpon their heades. And they al besought God from their whole heart, that he would visite his people of Israell.

The. v. Chapter.

Ad worde came to Holofernes the Prince of the warres of the Assyrians, that the chyldren of Israell prepared them selues to make resistance, & how they had stopped the waies betwixt the mountaynes. Then was he exceeding wroth, and called all the Princes of Moab, and the Captaynes of Ammon, and sayde vnto them: Tell me what people is this, that kepeth in the mountaynes? What manner of cities are they? What is their power? What manner of host haue they? Who is their captaine? And why do they despise us more then all those that dwell in the East, and come not forth to meete vs, that they might receaue vs with peace: Then Achioz the captayne of the Ammonites answered, and sayd: Sir if it please thee to heare, I will tell the truth befoze thee, concerninge the people that dwell in the mountaynes, and there shall no lye go out of my mouth. This people is of the generation of the Chaldees, they dwell first in Mesopotamia, for they wold not folowe the goddesses of their fathers that were in the land of the Caldees, and so forsoke they the customes of their forefathers (whiche had manye gods) and worshipped one God, that made heauen and earth: which also commended the, that they shoulde go fro thence, and dwell at Haran. Howe when there camme a dearthe into the whole lande, they went downe into Egypt, and ther they dwell. four. C. yeres, in the which they multiplied so greatly, that they hoost might not be numbyed. And when the King of Egypt oppressed them, and subdued them in building of his Cities with making of clay and bricke, they cryed vnto God their Lord which punished the whole lande of Egypt with dyuers plagues. Howe when the king of Egypt let them go their way, and the plague ceased, and then folowed after them, to take them, and to bring them agayne into his seruice, while they were fleeing away, the God of heuen opened the sea, so that the waters stode fast vpon both the sydes as a wal, and these went through the botome of the sea by thod. In the which place whē an innumerable people of the Egyptians folowed vpon them, they were so ouerwhelmed with the waters, that there remayned not one, to tel the that came after, how it happened. So whē this people was passed through the red sea, they cam into the wilderness of mounte Sinai, where neuer man might dwell afoze, and wher the soules of man had neuer rested. There were the bitter waters made sweete by them, that they might drinke, and fozty yeres had they meat from heauen. Wherefoener they went (without bow and arrowe, without buckler or sword) they God fought for them, and caused them to haue the victorie. Yea, no man was able to hurte this people, except it were so, that they departed vnsaythfullye from the worshipping of the Lord they God. But as oft as they worshipped any other besyde they God, he gaue them ouer to bee spoyled, to be slayne, and to be putte to confusion. Neuerthelesse, as oft as they were forye for departinge from the worshipping of they God, the same God of heuen gaue them power and strength to withstand they enemies. Howe ouer, they slew the kings of the Cananites, Jebusites, Hethites, Hethytes, Hecytes, and Amorites, and of al the mighty in Hesebon and tooke their landes and Cities in possession: and so longe as they sinned not in the sight of they God, it went wel with them, for they God hateth vnrightheousnes. For in times past when they went out of the waye, which God had geuen them, that they shoulde walke in it, they wer destroyed in diuers battels of many nations, and many of them were caried awaye prysoners into a strange countrey. But now lately they haue tourned the selues agayn vnto the Lord their God, & are come together again out of the countreyes where they wer scatred abroad: and thus haue they conquered these mountaynes, and dwell therein: and as for Ierusalem where they Sanctuary is, they haue it agayne in possession. And therfore my Lord, make diligent inquisition, if this people haue done wickednes in the sight of they God, then let vs go by agaynst them. For doubtlesse they God shall deliuer them into thy handes, and subdue the vnto thy power. But if this people haue not displeased they God, we shal not be able to withstand them, for they God shal defend the, and so shall we be a shame to all the world. Howe when Achioz hadde spoken out these wordes, all the great men of Holofermen were wroth, and thought to slay him, and sayd one to another, what is hee which dare saye, that the children of Israel are able to withstand Nabuchodonosor the king and his hoste: where as they are an vnswounded people, withoute strengthe or vnderstanding of the fences of warre: That Achioz therfore may knowe that he hath diseaued vs, we will go by into the mountaynes, and when the mightye men of them are taken, he also shalbe sicke with the sword, that all people may knowe, that Nabuchodonosor is the God of the earth, and that there is none other without him.

The. vi. Chapter.

S When they had lette off speaking, Holofernes toke soze indignation, and sayde vnto Achioz: For so much as thou hast prophesied vnto vs, saying: that the people of Israel shalbe defended of theyr God, I will shewe thee that there is no God but Nabuchodonosor. Yea, when we slaye them all as one manne, thou also shalt perishe with them throughe the sword of the Assyrians, and all Israel shalbe destroyed with thee, and then shalt thou seele that Nabuchodonosor is the Lord of the whole earth. Then shal the sword of my knight-hood go through thy sides, and thou shalt fall downe sicke amonge the woundes of Israel, and shalt not come to thy selfe agayne, but be utterly destroyed with them. But if thou thinkest thy prophesie to be true, why dost thou then change thy colour? why art thou afrayde? Thinkest thou that my wordes are not able to be performed? But that thou mayest knowe that thou shalt seele these things with them, beholde, from this houre forth will I send thee vnto yonder people, that when the punishment of my sword (whiche they haue woorthely deserved) falleth vpon them, thou mayest be punished with them. So Holofernes commaunded his seruantes to take Achioz, and to carrie him vnto Bethulia, and to deliuer him into the handes of the children of Israel: Then Holofernes seruautes toke him, and wente throughe the playne fieldes. But when they dyd come vnto the mountaynes, thelinge came out agaynst them: Nevertheless they gat them asway by the syde of the mountayne, and bound Achioz handes and foote to a tree, and so lette him bounde with withes, and towarde gayne vnto their Lord. Notwithstanding, the children of Israel were done from Bethulia, comme vnto him, lofed him, brought him into Bethulia, sette him in the midst of the people, and asked him, what the matter was, that the Assyrians had bound him bound: Was the sonne of Asichas of the tribe of Simeon, and Chamun (which is also called Githoniel) were the principall rulers at the same time. And when Achioz stood in the midst of the Senators, and before them al he told them what answer he gaue Holofernes, to the thing that he asked him, and how Holofernes people would haue slayne him for so sayinge, and howe Holofernes himselfe was wroth, and commaunded him for the same cause to be deliuered vnto the Israelites: that when he overcame the children of Israel, he might commaunde Achioz also to be put to death with diuers tormetments, because he said: God of heuē is their defender. And when Achioz had plainly told out al these thinges, al the people fell downe vpon their faces, praying the Lord, and poured out their prayers together vnto the Lord, with a general complaynt and weeping, and saide: O Lord God of heauen and of earth, beholde theyr pride, and loke vpon our lowlines, and consider howe it standeth with thy sayntes, and make it to be knowen that thou forsakest not those, which hold them fast by thee, and howe that thou bringest them lowe, that presume of them selues, and make theyr boaste in theyr owne strength. So whē the weeping and prayer of the people (whiche they had made the whole day long) was ended, they comforted Achioz, sayinge

The God of our fathers, whose power and strength thou hast prayed, shall so reward thee, that thou shalt rather see their destruction. When the Lord our God then shall geue his servants this libertie, God be also with thee among vs: so that if it please thee thou with all thine maiest dwell with vs. Now when Ozias had ended the counsell, he tooke him into his house, and made a great supper, called the elders to it, and so they refreshed themselves after the fasting. And afterwards was all the people called together, whiche made their prayers al the night longe in the congregation, and besought the God of Israel for helpe.

The next day, Holofernes commanded his hooke to go by to Bethulia: • There were an hundred & twenty thousand fighting men on foote, and two and twenty thousand horsemen, besyde the preparing of them that were won, and came to them on euery syde out of the countreys and cities whiche he had taken. All these prepared theym selves vnto the battell against the Israelites, and came by the hill side, vnto the top that looketh ouer agaynst Bethulia, from a place whiche is called Belma, vnto Chelmo, that lieth toward Esdelon.

Nowe when the chyldren of Israel saw so great a multitude of the Assyrians, they fell downe flatte vpon the ground, strowed ashes vpon their heads, & prayed with one accord, that the God of Israel wold shew his mercy vnto his people. And so they toke their weapons, and sat betwixt the mountaines in the narrowe place, & kept the way day and night. But while Holofernes was a goyng about, he found the water spring which from the South syde was conueyde into the cite by a Condit, this conmanded he to be destroyed another way, and cutt off the water founteyne. There were welles also not farr from the welles, which they bled secretly, more for pleasure, then for necessity. Then went the Ammonites, and the Moabites vnto Holofernes, and said: the chyldren of Israel trust neyther in speare nor arrowe, but haue taken in, and kept the mountaynes & hills. That thou maist overcome them therfore, without the striking of any battell, let men to kepe the welles, that they draw no water out of them: So shalt thou destroy them without sword, or at the leaste, they shall be so feeble, that they must be sayd to geue ouer the cite: whiche they thinke not able to be won, for so muche as it lieth in the mountaines. These wordes pleased Holofernes well, & all his men of warre, and he sette an hundred at euery well rounde about. And when this watch had endured twenty daies, the Cisternes and all that had water, failed them: & dwelt in the city of Bethulia, so that in the whole cite they had not drinke inough for one day, for the people had water geue them daily in a measure. Then came the men and women, yong persons and chyldren all vnto Ozias, and sayde all with one voyce: God be iudge betwixt vs and thee, for thou hast delte euill with vs, thou woldest not speke pccably with the king of the Assyrians, therfore hath God selde vs in their hands, and there is no man to helpe vs whereas we are brought downe before their eyes in thirst and great destruction. Therfore gather nowe together all the people that be in the city, that we may al yeld our selues willingly vnto the people of Holofernes: for better it is that we be captiue, and prayse the Lord with our lynes, then to be slaine and perishe, and to be laughed to scoone; and shamed of euery man, when we see our wyues & chyldren dye before our eyes. We take heauen and earth this day to recorde, and the God of our fathers, which punisheth vs according to the deserving of our synnes, and geue you swearing that ye geue by the cite now into the power of Holofernes hooke, that our ende maye be shorte with the sword, whiche els shal endure longe, for wante of water, and for thirst.

Ju. 16.8

Ex. 17.8

When

When they had spoken out these woordes, there was a great weeping and howling in the whole congregation, and that of euery man, and they cried an whole howle longe vnto G D with one voyce, saying: We haue sinned with our fathers, we haue doone amisse, we haue delt wickedly. Thou that art gracious, haue mercy vppon vs, punish our vnrightrousnes with thine owne scourge, & geue not those ouer that knowledgeth thee, vnto a people that knowe thee not, least they say amonge the Heathen: Where is their God? And when they were so weeping with this crying and weeping, that they helde their tongues, Drias stode vp with watry eyes, and said: Take good hertes vnto you (deere brethzen) and be of good chere, and let vs wayte yet these fyue dayes for mercy of the L O R D: peraduenture he shall put away his indignation, and geue glory vnto his name. But if he helpe vs not when these fyue dayes are past, we shal do as you haue saide.

The. viij. Chapter.

AND it happened when these woordes came to the eares of Iudith a widowe, which was the daughter of Merari, the sonne of Idor, the sonne of Ioseph, the sonne of Asa, the sonne of Elai, the sonne of Iammoz, the sonne of Iedeon, the sonne of Rapphoim, the sonne of Achitob, the sonne of Melchias, the sonne of Enam, the sonne of Mathania, the son of Salathiel, the sonne of Shimeon, the sonne of Ruben. And her husband was called Manasses, which died in fyue daies of barley harvest. For while he was bynding the sheaves together in the fildes, the heate came vppon his head, and he died at Bethulia his cite and there was he buried beside his fathers. Nowe was Iudith his beloued widow thyr peres, and sixe moorthen. And in the latter partes of her house, she made her selfe a praye chamber, where she dwelte, being closed in with her maidens. She wore a smocke of heare, and fasted all the daies of her

lyfe, excepte the Sabbathes, and the Moones, and the sollemne dayes that the people of Israel kept. She was a very fayre and beaustifull person. Her husband also had left her great riches, plenteous household, gret vnmouable possessions, and manye cattell. This Iudith was of a very good repute with euery one, for she feared the Lord greatly, and there was no body that spake an euill worde of her. When this Iudith heard howe Drias had promised the people, that after the fift day, he woulde geue by the cite vnto the Assirians, she sent for the Elders Chamby, and Harmi, and whene they came to her, she sayd: What thing is this, wherin Drias hath consented that if God helpe not within fyue daies he will geue ouer the cite to the Assirians? What are ye, that ye tempt the Lord? His denise obteyneth no mercy of god, but prouoketh him to wrath and displeasure. Will ye set the mercy of the Lord a time, and appoynt him a daye after your will? Herethels, for so muche as the Lord is patient, let vs rather repent, pouring out teares, and beseeching him of grace. For God threatneth not as a man, neither will he be prouoked vnto wrath as the chyliden of men. And therefore let vs hartly sal downe beseech him, and serue him with a mecke spirite, and with weeping eyes say vnto the Lord, that he deale with vs, accordyng to his owne will and mercye: that like as our heart is now vexed & brought lowe throught the pride of them, it may be so comforted throught his grace: in so muche as we forgoe not the sinnes of oure fathers which forsooke they God, and worshipped other goddes: for the which synne they perished with the swordes, were spoiled, and brought to shame of all their enemies. As for vs, we knowe none other God, but onely him, for which comfort lette vs targe with mekenes. He shal requyre and make inquisition for our bloodes, from the vexations of our enemies, he shal bring downe all the Heathen that ryle vp agaynst vs, and put them to dishonour, euen the D Lord our God. Therefore were brethren, saying ye are the honorable and elders in the people of god, vnto who al the people haue respect, & vpon who the lyfe of the people standeth, lyft by their heartes with your exhortations that they maye call to remembrance, howe our fathers also in times paste were tempted, that they might be proued, yf they worshipped their God aright. They ought to remember how Gen. 22 our father Abraham being tempted, and tried thoroow many tribulations, was found a loue and friend of God.

 So was Isaac, so was Jacob, so was Moses, and al they that pleased God, being tryed thoroowe many troubles, were found stedfast in fayth. Agayne they that receaied not their temptations with the feare of God, but put them selues forthe with inpatience and murmuring agaynst God, perished of the destroyer, and were slayne of the serpent. And therfore should not we undertake to be auenged, for the thinge that is doone vnto vs, but consider, that all these punishmentes are farre lesse then our synnes and misdedes. Belening also that this correction cometh vnto vs (as to the ser-uantes of God) for amendment, and not for our destruction. Then sayde Ozias the elders vnto Judith:
 All that thou speakest is true, & no ma-can reppone thy wordes. Praye thou for vs nowe therefore vnto God, for thou arte an holy woman, and fearest God. And Judith sayde vnto them: Heyng that ye knowe that my wordes are of God, then proue my counsell and deuise, if it be of God, and beseeche God that he will bringe my counsell to good ende. Thus haue I deuised: Ye shall stande this nighte before the porte, and I will go forth with Abimy maiden. Praye ye therefore vnto God, that he will graciously remember his people of Israell within fyue dayes, as ye haue sayde. As for the thinge that I go in hand withall, aske ye no question of it, till I open it vnto you my selfe: do ye nothinge els but pray vnto the Lord your God for me.

 Then Ozias the prince of the people of Iuda saide vnto her: Go thy way in peace, the Lord be with thee, that we maye be auenged of our enemies.
 And so they went from her agayne.

The ix. Chapter.

Nowe when they were gone their way, Judith went into her closet, putte on an hearie smocke, strowed ashes vpon her head, fell downe before the Lord, and cried vnto him, saying: O Lord God of my father. Simeon, which gauest him a Gen. 24 sword for a defence agaynst the enemies that bled violence and wilful-nes, and that rauished the virgin, and put her to dishonestie. Thou that gauest their wiues into a pray, and their daughters into captiuitie, and al their pray for a spoyle vnto thy seruantes, which bare a zeale vnto thee: helpe me a widow, O Lord my God, I beseech thee. For thou hast done all thinges from the beginning: and looke what thou hast taken in hand and deuised, it came euer to passe. For all thy wayes are prepared, and thy iudgements are done in thy eueralstinge for knowledge. O loke nowe vpon the armies of the Assyrians, lyke as it was thy pleasure sometime to loke vpon the host of the Egyptians, when they beyng weaponed, persecuted thy seruantes, and put their trust in their charettes, horsemen, and in the multitude of their men of warre. But thou lookedst vpon their hoolle, castynge a thicke darkenes before them: and when they came into the deepe the waters ouerwhelmed them. Euen so Lord, let it go with these, that trust in the power and multitude of their men of warre, in their charets, arrowes, and speares, and knowe not that thou onely arte our God, whiche destroyest warres from the beginning, and that thou art the Lord. O lift by thine arme nowe, lyke as euer from the beginning, and in thy power bringe their power to naught, cause their might to fal in thy wrath: They make their boaste, that they will vnhalsowe and desyle thy sanctuarie, and to waite the Tabernacle of thy name, and to cast downe the houle of thine Vltare with their swerde. Bynge to passe (O Lorde) that the pride of the enemye maye be cut downe with his owne swerde, that he maye be taken with the snare of his eyes in me, and that thou mayest smite him with the lippes of my loue. C geue me a stedfast minde; that I may despise him and his strength, and that I may destroy him. This shall bring thy name an euermore remembrance, if the hande of a woman ouerthrowe him. For thy power (O Lord) standeth not in the power of men, neither hast thou any pleasure in the strength of horses. There was neuer proude person pleased ther, but in the prayer of the humble and meeke hath thy pleasure bene euermore. O thou God of the heuens, thou maker of the waters, and Lorde of all creatures, heare me poore woman, calling vpon thee, and putting my truste in thy mercye. Remember thy couenaunt, O Lorde, and minister wordes in my mouth, and stablish this deuise in my heart, that thy house maye continue still in holinesse, and that all the heathen may knowe that thou arte God, and that there is none other but thou.

The .x. Chapter.

And when she had leste of crying vnto the Lord, she rose vp from the place where she had lye flatte before the Lorde, and called her mayden. Wente downe into her house, layd the heary clothe from her, put of the garmentes of her widowhood, washed her body, annoynted her selfe with precious thinges, of swete sauour, bydded and platted her heare, set an houe vpon her head, and put on such apparell as belongeth vnto gladnes, slippers vpon her feete, armeletes, spanges, eare rings, syngerringes, and decked herselfe with all her best aray. The Lorde gaue her also a speciall beautie and faynnes (for all this deckinge of her selfe was not doone by any holynesse and pleasure of the fleshe, but of a right discretion and vertue, therfore did the Lorde increase her beautie) so that she was exceeding amiable and well fauoured in all mens eyes. She gaue her mayden also a botle of wine, a pot with oyle, pottage, cakebread and chese, & went to her way. Now when she came to the port of the citie, she found Dians, and the elders of the citie waityng there, whiche whenne they sawe her, they were astonied, and marueled greatly at her beautie. Nevertheless, they asked no question at her, but lette her go, saying: The God of our fathers, geue thee his grace, and with his power performe al the deuice of thy heart that Ierusalem maye reioyceouer thee and that thy name maye be in the number of the holy and righteous. And al they that were there, sayde with one voyce: So be it, so be it. Iudith made her prayer vnto the Lorde, and wente out at the port, she and her mayden. And as she was going downe the mountayne, it hapned that about the syng of the daye, the spyes of the Assurians mette with her, and tooke her, saying: Whence comest thou? O? whither goest thou? She answered: I am a daughter of the Hebrewes, and am fled from theym, for I knowe that they shalbe geuen vnto you to be spoyled: because they thoughte to reide themselves vnto you, that they might finde mercy in your sighte. Therfore haue I deuised by my selfe after this maner: I wil go before the prince Holofernes, and tell him all their secrettes, and will shewe him, howe he maye come by theym, and winne theym, so that not one man of his hoste shall perish. And when these men had heard her wordes, and considered her face, they were astonied (for they wondered at her excellent beautie) and said vnto her: Thou hast saved thy selfe by finding out this deuise, that thou wouldest come downe to our Lord, & be thou sure, that when thou comest vnto him he shall intreate thee wel, & thou shalt please him at the heart: So they brought her into Holofernes pansion, and tolde him of her. Nowe when shee came in befoze him, immediately hee was ouercome and taken with her beautye. Then sayde his seruantes: who would despise the people of the Iewes, that haue so fayre women? D Shoulde we not by reason fight agaynst them for theser? So when Iudith sawe Holofernes sitting in a canopy, that was wroughte of purple, silke, golde, Smaradge and precious stones, she looked fast vpon him, and fell doone vppon the earth. And Holofernes seruantes toke her vp again, at their lordes commaundement.

A Then said Holofernes vnto her: Be of good chere, and feare not in thine heart, for I neuer hurt man that wold serue Nabuchodonosor the king. As for the people, if they had not despised me, I shold not haue lift vp my speare agaynst them. But tell me now, what is the cause that thou art departed from them, & wherfore art thou come vnto vs? And Iudith sayd vnto him: Syr, vnderstande the woordes of thy handmayden: for if thou wilt doo after the woordes of thy handmaiden, the Lord shall bring thy matter to a prosperous effecte. As truly as Nabuchodonosor a Lord of the lande liueth, and as truely as his power liueth, whiche is in thee, to the punishment of all men that goe wrong, all men shall not onely be subdued vnto him throughe thee, but all the beastes also of the fildes. For all people speake of thy prudent activitie, and it hath euer beene reported, how thou only art good & mighty in all his kingdome, and thy discretion is comended in all landes. The thing is manifeste also that Achior spake, and it is well known, what thou commaundest to dooe vnto him. For this is playne, and of a surtie, that our God is so wroth with vs (by the reason of our sinnes) that he hath swad by his Prophetes vnto the people, howe that for theyr synnes hee will deliuer them euer vnto the enemye. And for so much as the children of Israel know, that they haue so displeased theyr God, they are sore afraid of thee. They suffer great hunger also, and for wante of water, they are deade now in a manner. Moreover, they are appointed to sea all their cattel, that they may drinke the bloud of them, and are purposed to spend all the ornaments of their God (whyche he hath forbidden them to touch) for coyne, wyne, and oyle. Seinge now, that they doo these thinges, it is a playne case, that they must needs be destroyed. Whiche when thy handmayden perceaued, I fledde from them, and the Lord hath sent me vnto thee, to shew thee these things. For I thy handmayden, worshippe God euen here now beyside thee, and thy handmayden shall go forth and I will make my prayer vnto God, and he shall tell me, when he will rewarde them theyr synne: then shall I come and shew thee, and bringe thee throughe the middell of Jerusalem, so that thou shalt haue all the people of Israel, as the sheepe withou a shepherd: there shall not so muche as one dogge barke agaynst thee: for these thinges are shewed me by the providence of God: for so muche as God is displeased with them, he hath sente me to tell thee the same. These woordes pleased Holofernes and all his seruantes, whiche maruayled at the wisdom of her, and sayde one to another: There is not suche a woman vppon earth, in beautie and discretion of woordes. And Holofernes sayd vnto her: God hath doone well, that hee hath sente thee hyther befoze thy people, that thou mayest geue them into our handes. And for soo muche as thy promise is good, yf thy God persourme it vnto me, he shall bee my God also, and thou shalt be excellent, and great in the courte of Nabuchodonosor, and thy name shal be spoken of in all the lande.

Then commaunded he her to go in where his treasure laye, and charged that shee shoulde haue her dwellinge there, and appoynted what shoulde be geuen her from his table. Judith answered him, and said: As for the meate that thou haste commaunded to geue me, I maye not eate of it as nowe (leaste I displease my God) but will eate of such as I haue brought with me. Then sayde Holofernes vnto her: If those things that thou haste broughte with thee sayle, what shall we do vnto thee? And Judith sayd: As truly as thou liuest my Lord, thy handmayden shall not spend all this, til God haue brought to passe in my hande, the thinges that I haue deuised. So his seruantes broughte her into the tent, where as he had appoynted. And as she was goinge in, shee desired that she might haue leaue to go forth by night and before daye to her prayer, and to make intercession vnto the Lord. Then commaunded Holofernes his chamberlaynes, that she shoulde go out and in, at her pleasure, to praye vnto God those thre dayes. And so in the night season she went forth into y^e valley of Bethulia & washed her selfe in the well water. Then went she vp, and besought the Lord God of Israell, that he would prosper her way, for the deliuerance of his people. And so she went in, and remayned cleane in her tente, till she tooke her meate in the euening. Upon the fourth day it happened, that Holofernes made a supper vnto his seruantes, and sayde vnto Agao his chamberlayne: Go thy waye, and counsell this Chyuelle, that she may be willing to consent to kepe company with me. For it were a shame vnto all the Assirians, that a woman shoulde so laughe a man to scozne, that she were come from him vnmuddled withall. Then went Agao vnto Judith, and sayd: Let not the good daughter be a frayde, to come into my Lord, that she may be honoured with him, that she may eate and drinke wine, and be me-rye with him. Vnto whome Judith answered: Who am I, that I shoulde saye my Lord maye & what so euer is good before his eyes, I shall do it: and ioke what is his pleasure, that shal I thinke well done, as long as I liue. So she stode vp, and deckte her selfe with her apparell, and wente in, and stode before him. And Holofernes hearte was whole moued, so that he bzent in desire to ward her. And Holofernes, said vnto her: Drinke now, and sit downe, and be mery, for thou hast found fauoure before me. Then sayde Judith: Syr, I will drinke, for my mynde is merier to daye, then euer it was in all my life. And she tooke and did eate, and dranke before him, the thinges that her mayden had prepared for her. And Holofernes was mery with her, and drank moze wine then euer he did afore in all his yle.

Now when it was late in the nighte, his seruantes made haste euery manne to his lodging. And Agao shutte the chamberdores, and went his way, for thei were all overladen with wine. So was Judith alone in the chamber. As for Holofernes, he laye vppon the bed all dzonken, and of very dzonkennes fell a slepe. Then commaunded Judith her mayden, to stand without before the dooze, and to wayte. And Judith stode before the bed, making her prayer with teares, and moued her lyppes secretly, and sayd: Strengthen me, O Lord God of Israell, and haue respecte vnto the woorkes of my handes in this houre, that thou mayest set vp thy Citie of Ierusalem, like as thou hast promised: O graunt that by thee I maye persourme the thinge, which I haue deuised through the beliefe that I haue in thee. And when shee had spoken this, she went to the bedsteeade, and towded the swearde that hanged vppon it, and drew it out. Then tooke she holde of the bearty lockes of his heade, and sayd: Strengthen me, O Lord God in this houre, and with that she gaue him two strokes vpon the necke, and smote of his heade. Then tooke she the canappe away, and rolled the dead bodye asyde. Immediately she gat her forth, and deliuered the heade of Holofernes vnto her mayden, and bad her put it in her wallet. And so these two went forth together after their custome, as though they would praye, and so passed by the hooſte, and came thowowe the valley vnto the port of the citie. And Iudith cryed a farre of vnto the watchemen vpon the wals: Open the gates (saide she) for God is with vs, whiche hath shewed his power in Israel. And when they herd her voyce, they called the elders of the citie together. And they came all to meete her, lyttle and great, yong and olde, for they thought not that she should haue come so sone. So they lighted candelis, and gathered about her euerychone, but she wēt vppre into an hye place, and caused silence to be proclaimed, when euery man nowē helde his tongue, Iudith sayd: O prayse the Lord our God, for he hath not despised nor forsaken thē, that put their trust in him: and in me his handmayden he hath performed his mercede, whiche he promysed vnto the house of Israel: yea, in my hande this same night hath he slaine the enemye of his people. And with that she toke forth the head of Holofernes out of the wallet, and shewed it them, saying: Behold the heade of Holofernes the captayne of the Assyrians, and this is the canappe, wherein he laye in his dyckennes, wher the Lord our God hath slayne him by the hand of a woman. But as truly as the Lord lyeth, his Angell hath kept me, goyng thither, remayning there, and coming hither agayne from thence. And the Lord hath not suffered me his handmaiden to be defiled, but without any filchines of sinne hath he brought me agayne vnto you, and that with great victory; so that I am escaped, and ye deliuered. O geue thanks vnto him euerychone, for he is gracious and his mercye endureth for ever. So they prayed the Lord altogether, and gaue thanks vnto him. And to her they sayde: The Lord hath blessed thee in his power, for thowowe thee he hath brought our enemies to naught. And Ozias the chiefe ruler of the people of Israel sayde vnto her: Blessed arte thou of the Lord the hye God, aboue all women vpon earth. Blessed be the Lord, the maker of heauen and earth, which hath gided thee aright to wold and to smite of the heade of the Captayne of our enemies. For this day he hath made thy name so honorable, that thy prayse shall neuer come out of the mouth of men, which shall alway remēber the power of the Lord, saying thou hast not spared thine owne selfe, but put thee in peoparie, considering the anguisth & trouble of thy people, and so hast helped their sal before God our Lord. And all the people sayde: Amen, Amen. Achioz also was called, and he came. Then saide Iudith vnto him: The God of Israel vnto whom thou gauest witness, that he would be auenged of his enemies, euen he hath this night thowowe my hande smitten of the head of all the vnfaithfull. And that thou mayest see that it so is, beholde this is the heade of Holofernes, which in his presumptuous pryde, despised the God of the people of Israel, and threatened thee with destruction, saying: When the people of Israel is taken, I shall cause thee also to be stricke with the swerde. When Achioz sawe Holofernes heade he fell downe before vpon his face to the grounde for verrye anguisth and feare, so that he lownded withall. But after that he was comme agayne to him selfe, he fell downe before her, and prayed her, sayinge: Blessed arte thou of thy God in all the tabernacles of Jacob: for all the people that heare of thy name, shall prayse the God of Israel because of thee.

this head vpon our walles, and when the Swanne aryleth, take every man his weapon, and falle violently: not as though ye woulde go besyde them, but to renne vpon them, with violence. When the spies in the tentes see this, they shall of necessitie be compelled to flee backward, and to rayse vpon their captayne to the battell. When their captaynes come into Holofernes pavilion, and synde the deade body wapped in the bloud, fearefulness shall fall vpon them: and when ye perceane that they flye, folowe them without all care, for God shall deliuer them vnto you, to be destroyed. Then Achior seeing the power of G O D, which he had shewed vnto the people of Israel, fell off from his heathenish beliefe, and put his trust in God, and let him selfe be circumcised: and so was he numbred among the people of Israel, he and all his posteritie vnto this day. Nowe as sone as it was day, they stricke vpon Holofernes head vpon the walles, and every man toke his weapon, and soo they wente out with an horrible crye. When the spies sawe that, they ranne vnto Holofernes tent. And they that were within the tent, came befoze his chamber, and made a greates rushing to wake him vp, because they thoughte with the noise to haue rayled him. For there durst not one of the Assyrians knock, go in, or open. But when the captaynes and Princes and all the chiefe in the kinge of the Assyrians hoost came together, they sayde vnto the Chamberlaynes: Go pour way in, and wake him vp, for the myle are crepte out of their holes, and dare prouoke vs vnto battell. Then went Agag into his chamber, stode befoze the bed, and clapped with his handes, for he thoughte he had bene sleeping with Iudith. But when he had hearkened perfectly with his eares, and could perceane no sleeping, he wente nyer to the bed, and kiste it vp, and then sawe he the deade body of Holofernes lying there without a head, welked in his blood vpon the carthe. Then cried he: Iudith loude voyce, and with sweeping rent his clothes, and went into Iudiths tent, and founde her not: And so he lept out vnto the people and saide: one woman of the Jewes hath brought al Nabuchodonosors people to shame. For loe, Holofernes lyeth vpon the ground, and hath no head. When the chiefe of the Assyrians hoost heard that, they rent their clothes, and there fell an intollerable feare and trembling vpon them, so that their mindes were soze asrayde. And there was an exceeding great cry in the whole host.

Nowe when all the host herd that Holofernes was beheaded, their mindes and counsell fell from them, and such a feare came vpon them, that they vnderooke to defende theym selues by flying away: one spake not to another, but hanged downe their heades, lest all behinde theym, made haste to escape from the Hebrewes: for they herd that they were halting to come after with their weapons, and so they fled by the wayes of the fieldes, and thowowe all the footpathes of the dales. And when the children of Israel saw that they fled, they folowed vpon them, and went downe with trompettes, blowings, and making a great crye after them. As for the Assyrians, they had no order, and kept not them selues together but fled their waye. Nevertheless, the children of Israel fell vpon theym with one company and order, and discomfited as many as they might get. And Oziar sente messengers vnto all the cities and countreys of Israel. So all the regions and citty sent out their beste men after theym in harnesse, and smote theym with the swerde, tyl they came to the bittermoste parte of their border. And the other that were in Bethulia came into the tentes of the Assyrians, and tooke all, that they which were fled had left behynde theym, and in theyr countreys: greates good. And then that came agayne to Bethulia from the battayle, tooke with theym suche thynges as hadde beene theirs: there was no number of the cattel, and of all costely Jewelles, so that from the lowest vnto the hyest, they were all made riche of the spoyles of theym. And Joachim the hye Pryeste at Ierusalem, came to Bethulia with all the elders, that they mighte see Iudith. Howe when she came oute vnto theym, they beganne all to prayse her with one voice, saying: thou worshippes of the cite of Ierusalem, thou tope of Israell, thou honour of oure people, thou halste doone manye, and thy hearte is comforted, because thou halste loued cleynnesse and chastite, and halste knowen no man but thine owne hand: therfore hath the hand of the Lorde comforted thee, and blessed shalt thou be for ever. And all people sayde: so be it, so be it. In thys wyse they could: the people of Israell scarce gather by the spoyles of the Assyrians. But all that belonged vnto Holofernes, and had bene his, special: (whether it were of golde, of siluer, precious stone, clothinge, and all ornaments) they gaue it vnto Iudith. And all the people reioyced, both women, maydens, and yong people, with pypes and harpes.

The.xvi. Chapter.

Then songe Iudith this songe vnto the Lorde: Beginne vnto the Lorde vppon the tabrettes, singe vnto the Lorde vppon the cimballes. O sing vnto him a newe songe of thankes geuinge, be ioyefull and call vppon his name. It is the Lorde that destroyeth warres: euen the Lorde is his name. whiche hath pitched his tentes in the myddest of his people, that he mighte deliuer vs from the hande of all our ennemyes. Thus came out of the mountaynes of the Mothe in the multitude of his strength. His people stopped the wayes, and their horses covered the valleyes. He purposed to haue them. byente by my lande, and to slaye my yonge menne with the swearde. He woulde haue carped awaye my chyldren and virgynnes into captiuitie, but the almighty Lorde hindered him, and deliuered him into the handes of a woman, whiche broughte him to confusion. For they mighte was not destroyed of the yonge men. It was not the sonnes of Etan that slewe him, neyther haue the greates Gyantes set theym selues agaynste him: but Iudith the daughter of Merari with her sapye betwixte hath discomfited him, and broughte him to naughte. For she layde awaye her wyddowes garmente, and putte on the apparell of gladnesse to the reioysinge of the chyldren of Israell. She annoynted her face, and bound by her heare in an houe to begyle him. Her slippers rauished his eyes, her beautie captiuated his mynde: with the swearde smote she off his necke. The Assyrians were astonied at her stedfastnes, & the Medes at her boldnes. Then howled the armyes of the Assyrians, when my simple daye of thirste appered. The sonnes of the daughters haue pearled theym throughe, and slayne them as fugitive chyldren: they perished in the battayle for the verie feare of the Lorde my God. Lette vs synge a songe of thankes geuinge vnto the L O R D, a newe songe of prayse. Will we synge vnto our God: Lorde, Lorde, thou art a great God, mighte in power, whom no manne maye overcome. All thy creatures shoulde serue thee: for thou spakest but the word, and they were made, thou senest thy spirite, and they wer created, and no man can withstand thy voyce. The mountaynes shal moue from the foundations with the waters, the stonye rockes shal melte before thee like waxe. But they that feare thee shal be great with thee in all thynges. Wo vnto the people that ryle by agaynste my generation, for the almighty Lorde will auenge him selfe of them, and in the daye of iudgement will he visite the daye of iudgement will he visite

The .xi. Chapter after the Latin.

Mardochai the sonne of Jair, the sonne of Semei, the sonne of Cisei of the tribe of Benjamin, a Iew which had his dwel-linge in the Citie of Susis, a man of great reputation and excellent among all them that were in the kinges court. (Nevertheless, he was one of the prisoners, whome Nabuchodonosor the kinge of Babil-lon hadde carped awaye from Jerusalem vnto Babilon with Jeho-nias the kinge of Iuda.) In the seconde yeare of the reygne of greates Artaxerxes in the fyrst daye of the mo-neth Nisan, had this Mardochai such a dreame: He thought he heard a great tempest, horrible thonder claps-pes, earthquakes, and great bypoyse in the land, and that he sawe two greates dragons ready to fight one agaynst another. Their crye was great. At the which roaring and crye al the Iethen were vp to fight agaynst the righteous people. And the same daye was ful of darkenes and verye vnclere, ful of trouble and anguyshe, yea a great fearefulness was there in all the land.
The righteous were amased, for they feared the plage and euil that was deuisid ouer them, and were at a poynt with them selues to dye. So they cryed vnto God: & while they were crying, the litle well grew into a great riner, and into manye waters. And with that it was daye, and the Sunne rose by agayne, and the lowly were exalted, and deuoured the glorious and proude. Nowe when Mardochai had sene this dreame, he awoke, and mused himselfe in his heart, what God wold do: and so he desired to knowe all the matter, and his mind was therupon untill the night.

The.xij. Chapter.

At the same time dwelt Har-docheus with Bagatha and Tares in the Kinges courte, the Kinges chamberlaynes and porters of the palace. But when he heard their deuise, and had diligently considered their pmaginations, hee perceaued, that they went about to laye theyr cruel handes vpon the king Ir-taxerxes: and so he certified the kinge therof. Then caused the kinge to examine the two geiled with torments.
And when they had graunted it, they were put to death. This the Kinge caused to be put in the Chronicles for an eueralkinge remembraunce, and Hardocheus wrote by the same matter. So the kinge commaunded that Hardocheus shoulde remayne in the court, and for this saythfulnes of his he gaue him a rewarde. But Aman the sonne of Amadothu the Agathite, which was holden in greate honoure and reputation in the Kinges courte, vndertooke to hurt Hardocheus and his people, because of the two Chamberlaynes that were put to death.

The.xiij. Chapter.

The greate Kinge Iraxerxes, whiche reygnerh from India and Ethiopia, ouer an hundred and seuen and twenty landes, sendeth his frendlye salutation vnto all the princes and debities of the countreys, which be subiect vnto his dominion.
When I was made Lorde ouer many people, and hadde subdued the whole earth vnder my dominion, my mynde was not with cruelty and wronge to exalt my selfe by the reason of my power, but purposed with equity alway and gentienes, to gouerne those that be vnder my iurisdiction, and wholpe to set the in a peaceable lyfe, and ther-by to bring my kingdome vnto tranquility that men might safely go thorough the on euerye syde, and to renew peace agayne, which al menne desire.
Now when I asked my counsellers how these thinges might be brought to a good ende, there was one by vs excellent in wisdom whose good wil, truth and saythfulnes hath ofte bene shewed and proued, (which was also the principall and next vnto the king) Aman by name, which certified vs, howe that in al landes there was sca-tered abroade a rebellious folke, that made statutes and lawes agaynst al other people, and haue alway despised the proclaimed commaundments of kinges, and howe that for this cause it wer not to be suffred, that such rule shuld continue by you, and not be put downe. Heynge nowe, we perceau the same, that this people alone ar co-trary vnto euery man, vsing straunge and other maner of lawes, and withstande our statutes and doinges, and go about to stablish thesede matters that our kingdome shoulde neuer com to good estate and steadfastnes: Therfore haue we commaunded, that all they that are appoynted in wyptinge, and shewed vnto you by Aman (whiche is ordeyned and set ouer al our landes) and the most principall next vnto the king, and in maner as a father, shall with theyr wiues and children be destroyed and rooted out with the swearde of their enemies and aduer-saries, and that there shal be no mercy shewed, and no man spared. And this shalbe done the.xiij. day of the month (called Adar) of thys yeare, that they which of olde (and now also) haue e-uer bene rebellious, may in one daye with violence be thusse downe into the hel, to thintent that after this maner our empire maye haue peace and traquility. But Hardocheus thoght vpon all the workes and noble actes of the Lord, and made his prayer vnto him, saying: O Lorde, Lorde, thou tespce (O Lord.) Thou knowest all things, thou wotest Lorde that it was nether of malice, nor of presumption, nor for any desyre of glorie, that I would not bowe downe my selfe, nor worship ponde proude presumptuous I man (for I would haue bene contente, and that with good will, yf it might haue done Israell any good, to haue kist euen his fote keppes) but that I did it, because I would not set the honour of a man in the stede of the glorie of God, and because I would worship none but only thee my Lord. And this haue I done in no pride nor presumption. And therfore O Lorde thou God and king, haue mercy vpon my people, or they ymagin howe they maye bringe vs to naughte, yea, they mynde and desire is to destroye, and to ouerthrowe thy people, that hath euer bene thine inheritance of old. O despise not thy portion, whiche thou hast deliuered and brought out of Egypte for thine owne selfe. Heare my prayer, and be merciful vnto thy people whom thou hast chosen for an heritage vnto thy selfe. Tourne oure complaynte and sorowe into ioye, that we maye liue, O Lord, and prayse thy name. O Lorde, suffer not the mouthes of them that praise thee, to be destroyed. Al the people of Israel in like manner, cryed as earnestly as they coulde vnto the Lorde: for their death and destruction stode before their eyes

The .xliij. Chapter.

Queene Esther also bring in the battayl of death, resozted vnto the Lorde, layed away her glorious apparell, & put on the garments that serued for sighinge and mourninge. In the steele of precious ointment, she scattered ashes and donge vpon her heade: and as for her body, she humbled it with fasting, and brought it very lowe. Al the places where she was wont to haue ioy afore, those filled the with the heare that she pluckt of her selfe. She prayed also vnto the Lorde God of Israell with these wordes. O my Lord thou onely art our king, helpe me desolate woman whiche haue no helper but thee, for my miserie and destruction is hard at my hand. From my youth by I haue hearde out of the kindred of my father, that thou tokest Israell from amonge al people (and so haue our fathers of their fore elders) that they shoulde be thy perpetual inheritance, and looke what thou diddest promise them, thou hast made it good vnto the. Nowe Lorde, we haue synned before thee, therfore hast thou geuen vs in to the handes of our enemies, because we worshipped the gods. Lorde, thou art righteous. Nevertheless, is satisfied them not that we are in bitter & heauy captiuitie, & oppressed among them, but thou hast layed their hands vpon the hands of their gods, so that they beginne to take away the thinge that thou with thy mouth hast ordeyned and appointed, & to destroye thine inheritance, to shutte and stoppe the mouthes of them that prayse thee, to quenche the glorie and worshippe of thy house, and thine aultar, and to open the mouthes of the heathen, that they may prayse the power & vertue of the gods, & to magnify the fleshy king for euer. O Lord, geue not thy scepter vnto them y be nothing, least they laugh vs to scoorne in oure miserie and fall, but turne their deuise vpon them selues, and punishe him that hath begon the same ouer vs, and set him to an example. Thinke vpon vs O Lord, and shewe thy selfe vnto vs in the time of our distresse, & of our trouble. Strengthen me, O thou king of gods, thou Lord of al power, geue me an eloquent and a pleasant speche in my mouth before the lion. Turne his heart in the hate of oure ennemys, to destroye him, and all suche as consente vnto him. But deliuer vs with thine hande, and helpe me thy handmayde, which haue no defence nor helper, but only thee Lord, thou knowest all things, thou wotest that I loue not the glorie & worship of the unrighteous, and that I hate & abhorre the bed of the vncircumcised, & of al the hethen. Thou knowest my necessitie, that I hate the token of my preeminence and worship whiche I beare vpon myne head, what time as I must shewe my selfe, and be seene, and that I abhorre it as an vncleane cloathe, and that I sweare it not when I am quiet and alone by my selfe. Thou knowest also that I thy handmaiden, haue not eate at I mans table, and that I haue had no pleasure nor delite in the kinges feast, that I haue not dronke the wine of the drinke offerings, and that I thy handmaiden haue no ioy sence the day thou wast brought hither, vntil this daye, but onely in thee Lord. O thou God of Abraham, O thou mightie God aboue al, heare the voyce of them that haue none other hope, and deliuer vs out of the hand of the wicked, and deliuer me out of my feare.

Mardocheus also bad Esther goe in vnto the kinge, and praye for her people, and for her contrey. Remember (sayth he) the dayes of thy lowe estate, howe thou wast nourished vnder my hande. For I man, which is next vnto the kinge, hath geuen sentence of death agaynst vs. Call thou therfore vpon the Lord, and speake for vs vnto the kinge, and deliuer vs from death. And vpon the thirde daye it hapned, that Esther laid asyde the mourning garmentes, and put on her glorious apparel, and deckt her selfe goodlye (after that she had called vpon God, which is the beholder and sauour of all thinges) toke two handmaidens with her: vpon the one she leane her selfe, as one that was tender, the other folowed her, and bare the trayne of her besture. The shine of her beautie made her face rose coloured. The similitude of her face was cheerefull and amiable, but her heart was sorowefull for greate feare. She wente in throughte all the doores, and stode before the king.

The kinge sat vpon the thzone of his kingedome, and was clothed in his goodly aray, all of golde, and set with precious stones, & he was very terrible. He lift by his face that shone in clerenesse, and looked grunlye vppon her. Then selle the Quene to wne, was pale and saynte, leane her selfe vpon the head of the mayd, that went with her. Accurthelesse, God touched the kinges minde that he was gentill, that he leaped out of his seate for feare, and gate her in his armes, and helde her by, tyll she came to her selfe againe. He gaue her louing wordes also, and sayde vnto her: Esther what is the matter: I am thy brother, be of good chere, thou shalt not dye: for our commaundement toucheth the comons and not thee. Come nye. And with that he helde by his golden rodde, and layde it vpon her necke, and embraced her frendly, and said: Talke with me. Then sayde she: I sawe thee (O Lord) as an Angelle of God, and my heart was troubled for feare of thy maiestie and clerenesse. For excellent and wonderfulle arte thou (O Lord) and thy face is full of amitie. But as she was thus speaking vnto him, she fell downe againe for sayntnesse: for the whiche cause the king was afrayde, and all his seruantes comforted her.

The greate kinge Artaxerxes, which reygneeth from India vnto Ethiopia, ouer an hundred, twentye and seuen landes, sendeth vnto the Princes and rulers of the same landes, suche as loue him, his frendely salutation. There bee many, that for the sundrie frendships and benefites, whiche are diuerselye doone vnto them, for their worship, be euer the moze proude and high minded, and undertake not onely to hurte their Subiectes (for plentiful benefites maye they not suffer, and begynne to ymagine some thinges agaynst those that do them good, and take not onely all vnthankfulness away from men) but in pride and presumption (as they that be vnmindfull and vnthankfull for the good dedes) they go about to escape the iudgement of God, that seeth all thinges, whiche iudgemente hateth and punisheth all wickednesse. It happeneth ofte also, that they whiche be set in office by the hyper power, and vnto whom the busines and causes of the subiectes are committed to be handled, waxe proud, and despyle them selues with shreading of innocent blood, whiche bringeth the to intollerable hurt. Which also with false and disceitfull wordes, and with lying tales, disceane and betray the innocent goodnesse of Princes. Nowe is it profitable and good, that we take hede, make search thereafter, and consider, not only what hath happened vnto vs of olde, but the shamesfull vnholiness, and noysome things, that the debilities haue now taken in hande before our eyes, and thereby to beware in time to come, that we maye make the kingdome quiet and peaceable for all men: and that we mighte sometime draue it to a chaunge: and as for the thing that now is present before our eyes, to withstande it, and to putte it downe, after the most frendly maner. What tyme nowe as Aman the sonne of Amadathu the Macedonian (a stranger berey of the Persians blood and farre from our goodnesse) was come in amonge vs as an aliaunt, and had obteyned the frendshipp that we bear toward al people, so that he was called our father, and had in high honoure of euery man, as the nexte and principall vnto the kinge, he coulde not forbeare him selfe from his pride, hath undertaken, not onely to robbe vs of the kingdome, but of our ipse. With manyfolde disceate also hath he desired to destroye Harbochus our helper and preseruer, whiche hath done vs good in all thinges: and innocent yester the like partaker of our kingdome, with all her people. For his mind was (when he had taken them out of the way, and robbed vs of the) by this meane to translate the king-

dome of the Persians vnto them of Macedonia. But we synde, that the Jewes (whiche were accused of the wicked, that they might be destroyd) are no euill doers, but vse reasonable and right lawes: and that they be the children of the mooste hyge thinge God, by whom the kingdome of vs and our progenitours hath bene well ordeyed hytherto. Wherefore, as for the letters and commandementes, that were put forth by Aman the sonne of Amadathu, ye shal do well, yf ye hold them of none effect: for he that setteth them by and inuented them, hangeth at Susis before the port, with all his kindred, and God (whiche hath al thinges in his power) hath rewarded him after his deseruing. And vpon this ye shall publishe and sette by the copie of this letter in all places, that the Jewes maye freelye and without hinderance hold them selues after their owne statutes, and that they may be helped, and that vpon the xij. day of the. xij. moneth Ader, they may be auenged of them, whiche in the time of their anguysh and trouble, would haue oppressed them. For the God that governeth all thinges, hath turned to ioye the wepe, wherein the chosen people shoulde haue perished. Moreover, amonge the hye solempne dayes that ye haue, ye shall holde this day also with all gladnesse: that now and in time to come, this daye maye be a remembraunce to good, for all suche as loue the prosperitie of the Persians: but a remembraunce of destruction to those that be sedicious vnto vs. All cities and landes that do not this shall horriblelye perishe and be destroyed with the sword and fyre, and shall not onely be no more inhabited of men, but be abhorred also of the wilde beastes and foules.

The ende of the rest of the booke of Esther.

The Booke of Wisedome.

The first Chapter.

Set youre affection vpon righteousnesse ye that be iudges of the earth. Haue a good opinion of the Lord, and seeke him in the singleness of heart. For he will be founde of them that tempt him not, and appereth vnto suche as put their trust in him. As for þe froward thoughts, they separat from God, but vertue (yf it be allowed) resourmeth the vnwise. And why? wisedome shall not enter into a frowarde soule, nor dwell in the body that is subdned vnto synne. For the holy ghoſt abhorreth fained nartur, & withdraueth himseife fro the thoghtes that are without vnderstandinge: and where wickednes hath the vpper hand, he fleeth from thence. For þe spirite of wisdom is louing, gentle, and gracions, and will haue no pleasure in him that speaketh euill with his lips. For God is a witnes of his reines, a true sercher of his heart, and an hearer of his tongue. For the spirite of the Lord filleth the round compassse of the woꝛlde, and the same that vpholdeth all things, hath knowledg also of the voyce. Therefore hee that speaketh vnrighteous things, can not be hid, neither may he escape þe iudgement of reppose. And why? inquisitiō shalbe made for the thoughtes of the vngodly, and the report of his woꝛds shal come vnto God, so that his wickednes shalbe punished. For the eare of ieaalousy heareth al things, and the noyse of the grudgings shall not bee hydde. Therefore, be ware of murmuring, which is nothinge woꝛth, and reſtrayne your tongue from sciaunder. For there is no woꝛde so dark and secrete, that it shall go for naughte, and the mouthe that speaketh lyes, sleaeth the soule. And seeke not your owne death in the erreure of your life, destroye not your selues throughe the woꝛkes of youre owne handes. For God hath not made deth, neither hath hee pleasure in the destruction of the liuing. For he created all things, that they might haue their being: yea, all the people of the earthe hath he made, that they should haue health, that ther should be no destruction in them, and that the kingdome of hell shoulde not be vpon earth (for righteousness is euerlasting and immortal, but vnrighteousnes bringeth death.) Neuertheless the vngodly call her vnto theym both with woꝛdes and woꝛkes, and while they thinke to haue a frende of her, they come to naughte: for the vngodlye that are confederate with her, and take her part, are woꝛthy of death.

The.ij. Chapter.

For the vngodly talke, and imagine thus among theym selues, (but not righte:) The time of our life is but shoyt and tedious, and when a man is gone, he hath nomore ioye nor pleasure, neyther knowe we any mā that turneth again from deth: for we are boine of naught, and we shalbe hereafter as though we hadde neuer beene. For oure breathe is as a smoke in our nosethyles, and the woꝛd as a sparke to moue our heart. As for our body, it shalbe very ashes that are quenched, and our soule shall vanishe as the soft ayre. Dure life shall passe away as the trace of a cloud, and come to naught, as the mist that is driuen away with the beames of the Sunne and put downe with the heat therof. Our name also shalbe forgotten by litle and litle, and no man shall haue our woꝛks in remembrance. For our time is a very shadowe that passeth away, and after our end, there is no returning: for it is fast sealed, so that no man commeth agayn. Come on therefore, let vs enioy the pleasures that there are, and let vs sone be the creature lyke as in youthe. Lette vs fill our selues with good wyne and oynment:

mente, and let there no floure of the time go by vs. Let vs crowne oure selues with roses asoze they be withered. Let there be no saye medow, but our lust go thzough it. Let euery one of you be partaker of our voluptuousnes. Let vs leane some token of our pleasure in euery place, for that is our portion, els get we nothinge. Let vs oppresse the pooze & righteous, let vs not spare the widoow nor old man: let vs not regarde the heades that are gray for age. Let the lawe of vnrighte-ousnes be our auctoritie, for the thing that is feble is nothing worth. Cherfoze let vs defraud the righteous, and why? he is not for our profite, yea, he is cleane contrary to our doinges. He checketh vs for offending agaynst the lawe, and sclandereth vs as trans-gressours of all nurture. He maketh his boaste to haue the knowledge of God, yea, he calleth him selfe Goddes son. He is the bewaier of our thoghtes: It greueth vs also to loke vpon him, for his life is not like other mens, his wayes are of another fashon. He counteth vs but vayne personnes, he withdraweth him selfe fro our wayes as from filthynes, he commendeth greatly the latter ende of the iust, and maketh his boaste that God is his father. Let valse then yf his wordes be true, let vs proue what shal come vpon him: so shall we knowe what end he shall haue. For yf he be the true son of God, he will receaue him, and deliuer him from the handes of his enemys. Let vs examine him with dispytefull rebuke and tozmentinge, that we may knowe his dignitie, and proue his patience. Let vs condemne him with the moste shamefull death: for like as he hath spoken, so shall he be rewarded. Suche thinges doe the vngodly ymage, and go astraye, for their owne wickednes hath blynded them. As for the milkerpes of God, they vnderstand them not: they neither hope for the reward of righteousnesse, nor regarde the woorthippe that holy soules shal haue. For God created man to be vnderstode, yea, after the ymage of his owne likenes made he him. Neuerthelesse, thzough enuy of the deuill came death into the world: and they that holde of his syde, do as he doeth.

The. iij. Chapter.

But the soules of the righteous are in the hand of God, and the payne of death shal not touche theym. In the sighte of the vniuersall they appeared to dye, and then ende is taken for very destruction. The soule of the righteous is iudged to be vnder destruction, but they are in rest. And though they suffer payne before men, yet is they hope full of immortallity.
They are punished but in fewe thin-ges, neuerthelesse in manye thinges shal they be well rewarded. For God proueth them, and synneth them mete for him selfe: yea, as the golde in the foynace doeth he trye them, and receaueth them as a burnt offering, and when the time cometh, they shal be looked vpon. • The righteous shal shine as the sparkes that ren thzough the red bushe. • They shal iudge the nations, and haue dominion ouer the people, and their Lord shal reigne for euer. They that put their trust in him shal vnderstande the trueth, and such as be saythfull, will agree vnto him in lone, for his chosen shal haue gifts and peace. • But the vngodly shal be punished according to their owne ymaginations, for they haue despised the righteous, and forsaken the Lord.
Who so despyeth wisdom and nurture, he is vnhappye, and as for the hope of suche, it is but vayne, their laboures vnfaythfull, and their woordes vnpofitable. They wotnes are vndiscrete, and they children moche vngodly. Their creature is cursed. Blis-sed is rather the baren and vnfeynded which hath not knowen the sinful be-she shal haue fruit in reward of the holy soules. And blessed is the graue, which with his hand hath wrought no vnrighteousnesse, nor ymagined wicked thinges agaynst God. For unto him shalbe gotten the special gift of sapth, and the most acceptable portion in the temple of God. For glorious is the fruite of good laboure, and the roote of wisdom shal neuer fade away. As for the children of aduersers, they shal come to an end, and the sede of an vnrighteous bed shalbe rooted out. And though they lye longe, yet shall they be nothing regarded, and their laste age shall be withoute honour. If they dye hastily, they haue no hope, neither shal they be spoken to in the day of knowledge. For horrible is the deathe and the ende of the vnrighteous.

The. iij. Chapter.

O howe saye is a chaste generation with vertue: The memoriall therof is immortal, for it is known with God & with men. When it is present, men take example therat, and yf it go away, yet they desyre it. It is alwaye crowned and holden in honour, and winneth the reward of the vndefiled battell. But the multitude of vngodly children is vnpofitable: and the thinges that are planted with whoredome shal take no depe roote, nor lay any faste foundation. Though they be greene in the branches for a time, yet they shalbe shaken with the winde: for they stande not faste, and throughte the vehemencie of the winde they shalbe rooted out. For the vnperfect branches shalbe broken, their fruite shalbe vnpofitable and slowe to eate: yea, meete for nothing. And whye: all the children that are borne of the wicked, muste beare reuenge of the wickednes agaynst their fathers and mothers when they be asked. But though the righteous be overtaken with deathe, yet shall he bee in rest. Age is an honorable thing: nevertheless, it standeth not onely in the lengthe of time, nor in the multitude of yeres: but a mans wisdom is the graye haire, and an vndefiled life is the olde age. He pleased God, and was beloued of him, so that wher as he liued among sinners, he translated him. Yea sodenly was he taken away, to the intent that wickednesse shoulde not aulter his vnderstanding, and that hypocrisye shoulde not begyle his soule. For the craftye beswitching of lyes make good thinges darke, the vnstedfastnes also and wickednes of voluptuous desyre, turne aside the vnderstanding of the simple. Though he was soone dead, yet fulfilled he much time. For his soule pleased God: therefore hastened he to take him away from among the wicked. This the people see, and vnderstand it not: they lay not vp such thinges in their heartes, howe that the louing sauour and mercy of God is vppon his saintes, and that he hath respect vnto his chosen. Thus the righteous that is dead, condemneth the vngodly which are liuing: and the youthe that is soone brought to an ende, the longe lyfe of the vnrighteous. For they see the ende of the wise, but they vnderstande not what God hath deuised for him, and wherfore the Lord hath taken him away. And whye: they see him and despise him, therefore shall God also laughe them to scoorne: So that they theym selues shall dye hereafter (but without honour) yea in shame among the dead for euermore. For without any voyce shall he burst those that be pulste vp, and remoue them from the foundations, so that they shalbe layed waste vnto the highest. They shall mourne, and their memoriall shall perithe. So they bryng asfraid, shall remember their sinnes, and their owne wickednes shall bewray them.

The. v. Chapter.

Then shal the righteous stand in great stedfastnes agaynst suche as haue dealt extremelye with them, and taken away their laboures. When they see it, they shalbe vexed with horrible feare, and shal wonder at the hastines of the sodain health, growing for very distress of mind, and shal say within theselues, hauing inward forowe, and mourning for verry anguish of mind. These are they whom we sometime had in derision, and rebed vpon. We foolles thought their lyfe very madnes, and their ende to be without honoure. But loe, howe they are counted amonge the children of God, and their portion among the saintes. Wherefore we haue erred from the way of truth, the light of righteousness hath not shined vnto vs, and ¶ Sun of vnderstanding rose not vpon vs, we haue worried our selues in the way of wickednes and destruction. Euidous wayes haue we gone: but as for the waye of the Lorde we haue not knowen it. What good hath

Our pride done vnto vs? ¶ What profite hath the pompe of ryche-brought vs? All those thinges are passed away like a shadow, and as a messenger running before: as a ship that passeth ouer the waues of the water, whiche, when it is gone by, the trace thereof cannot be founde, neyther the path of it in the fluddes. ¶ As a bird that fleeth through in the ayre, and no man can see anye token where she is flowne, but onely heareth the noyse of her winges, beatinge the lighte winde, parting the ayre through the behemencie of her goyng, and flyeth on shaking her winges, whereas after ward no token of her waies can be founde. ¶ Like as when an arrowe is shot at a marke it parteth the ayre, which immediatly commeth together agayne, so that a man cannot knowe where it went through. Even so we in lyke maner as soone as we were borne, beganne immediatly to drawe to our ende, and haue shewed no token of vertue, but are consumed in our owne wickednesse. Suche wordes shall they that haue sinned speake in the hell, for the hope of the vngodly is lyke a drie thistle floore (or dulle) that is blowen away with the wind: like as a thynscumme that is scattered abroade with the strome: lyke as the smoke whiche is disperfed here and there with the winde, and as the remembrance of a stranger, that tarieth for a daye, and then departeth. But the righteous shal liue for evermore: their rewarde also is with the Lorde, and their remembrance with the hiest. Wherefore shall they receaue a glorious kingdome, and a bewtiful crowne of the Lordes hande: for with his righte hande shall he couer them, and with his owne holpe arme shall he defende theym. His gelousye also shall take awaye the harness, & he shall sweapon the creature to be auenged of the enemies. He shall put on righteousness for a brestplate, and take iudgement in steede of an helmet. He inuincible child of equity shal he take, his cruell wrath shall he sharpen for a speare, and the whole compasse of the world, shall fyghte with him agaynst the vnwise. ¶ How shall the thunderboltes go out of the lightnings, and come out of the rainebow of the cloudes to the place appoynted: out of the hard stony indignation, there shall fall thicke hayles, and the water of the sea shall be wrath agaynst them, and the cloudes shall runne roughly together. Yea, a mightie winde shall stand vpon agaynst them, and a strome shal scatter them abroade. ¶ Thus the vnrighteous dealing of them shal bring all the land to a wilderness, and wickednes shall ouerthrow the dwellings of the mightie.

The. vi. Chapter.

Virtuisme is better then strength, and a man of vnderstandinge is more woorthie then one that is strong. Heare therefore (O ye kinges) and vnderstand: O learne ye that be iudges of the endes of the earth. Gette care ye that rule the multitudes, and deelyte in muche people. For the power is geuen you of the Lorde, and the strength from the hiest which shall trye out your ymaginations. Howe that ye beyng officers of his kingdome, haue not executed iudgement, haue not kepte the lawe of the righteous, nor walked after the will of G D D. Horribly, and that right soone shall he appeare vnto you for an harde iudgement that they haue that beare rule. Wherfore is graunted vnto the simple, but they that be in anchoyritie shalbe soze punished. For God which is Lord ouer all, shall except no mans person, neyther shall he stande in awe of any mans greatnes.

For he hath made the small and great, and careth for al alike. But the mightie shall haue the sozer punishment.
Vnto you therfore (O ye Kinges) do I speake, that ye may learne wise-dome, and not goe amysse. For they that keepe his righteousness, shall bee righteousnesse Iudged, and they that are learned in righteous thinges, shall synde to make aunswere. Wherefore let your luste vppon my wordes, and loue them, so shall ye come by nurture. Wisedome is a noble thinge, and neuer fadeth away: yea, she is caselye lene of them that loue her, and found of such as seeke her. She preuenteth them that despyze her, that she maye sytt shewe her selfe vnto them. Who so awaketh vnto her betymes, shall haue no great trauaile, for he shal find her sytting ready at his doores. To thinke vpon her, is perfect vnderstan-dinge: and who so watcheth for her, shalbe safe, and that soone. For she goeth about, seekinge suche as are mete for her, she weth her selfe chearefully vnto them in their goinges, and meeteth them with all diligence. For the vnsayned desire of reformation is her beginninge: to care for nourture, is loue, and loue is the keepinge of her lawes. Howe the keepinge of the lawe is perfection, and an vncorrupt lye: and an vncorrupt lye maketh a man familiar with God. And so the desire of wisdom leadeth to the kingdome euertlasting. If your delite be then in royall seates and scepters (O ye kynges of the people) let your luste vpon wisdom, that ye maye reigne for euer more. O loue the light of wisdom, alye that be rulers of the people. As for wisdom what she is, and howe she came vp, I will tell you: and will not hide the misteries of God from you, but will seeke her out from the begin-ninge of the natyritie, and bringe the knowledge of her into light, and will not keepe backe the truth. Neyerther will I haue to doe with consuminge entrie, for suche a man shall not be partaker of wisdom. But the multy-tude of the wise is the welfare of the world, and a wise kinge is the vpholdinge of the people. I receyue nurture then through my wordes, and it shal do you good.

The vij. Chapter.

I My selfe am also a mortall man, I like as all other, and am come of the earthie generation of him that was fyrst made, and in my mothers wombe was I fashioned to be fleshe: In the time of ten monethes was I brought together in bloude, through the seide of man, and the commodious appetite of slepe. When I was bozne I receaued lyke ayre as other men, and fell vpon the earth (whiche is my nature) crying and weeping at the fyrst, as all other do. I was wrapped in swadling clothes, and brought vp with greate care. For there is no king that had any other beginninge of byrth. All men haue one entrance vnto lyfe, and one going out in like maner. Wherefore I desired, and vnder-standing was geuen me: I called, and the spirite of wisdom came vnto me.
I set more by her, then by kingdomes and royall seates, and counted riches nothing in comparison of her. As for precious stone, I compared it not vnto her, for all golde is but granel vnto her, and siluer shalbe counted but claye before her sighte. I loned her aboue welfare and beautie, and purposed to take her for my lighte, for her lyghte can not be quenched. All good thinges come to me with her, and innumerable riches through her handes. I was glad in theym all, for this wisdom went before me, and I knew not that she is the mother of all good thinges.
Howe as I my selfe learned vnsayn-edly, so do I make other men parta-kers of her, and hyde her riches from no man: for she is an infinite treasure unto men, whiche who so ble, become partakers of the loue and frendship of God, and are accepted vnto him for the giftes of wisdom. GOD hath graunted me to talke wisely, and conveniently to handle the thinges that he hath graciously lente me. For it is he that leadeth vnto wisdom, and teacheth to vse wisdom aright. In his hand are both we and our words: yea, al our wisdom, our vnderstanding and knowledge of all our woorkes. For he hath geuen me the true science of these thinges: so that I knowe, howe the worlde was made, and the powers of the elementes: the beginning, ending, and middest of the tymes, howe the tymes alter, howe one goeth after another, and how they are fulfilled, the course of the yere, the ordinaunces of the starres, the nature and kindes of beastes, the furiousnes of beastes, the power of the windes, the ymaginations of men, the diuersities of ponge plantes, the vertues of rootes, and all such thinges as are secrete, and not loked for, haue I lerned.

D For the woorkemaster of all thinges hath taught me wisdom. In her is the spirite of vnderstanding, which is holy, manyfold, one onely, subtil, courteous, discrete, quicke, vndeplied, plaine, swete, louing the thing that is good, sharpe, whiche forbiddeth not to doo well, gentle, kind, stedfast, sure, free, hauing al vertues, circumspect in al thinges, receyuing al spirites of vnderstanding, beynge cleane and sharpe. For wisdom is nimbler then al nimble thinges, she goeth throughe and attayneth to all thinges, because of her cleannes. For she is the breath of the power of God, and a pure cleane expressing of the clearenes of almighty God. Therefore can no vndeplied thinge come vnto her: for there is the brightnes of the euerlasting light, the vndeplied mirroure of the maiestie of God, and the ymage of his goodnes. And for so much as she is one, she may doo all thinges, and beynge stedfast her selfe, she renueth all: and among the people conuergeth she her selfe into the holy soules. She maketh Gods frendes and prophetes: for God loneth no man, but him in whom wisdom dwelleth. For she is moze beuotifull then the Sunne, and geueth moze lighte then y starres, and the day is not to be compared vnto her, for vpon the day cometh night. But wickednes can not ouercome wisdom: and foolishnes may not be with her.

The viij. Chapter.

V Wisdom reacheth from one ende to another mightily, and louingly doeth she order all thinges, I haue loued her and laboured for her, euen from my youth vp: I did my diligence to marry my selfe with her, such a loue had I vnto her betwixt. Who so hath the companyes of God, commendeth her nobilitie: yea, the Lord of all thinges him selfe loneth her. For she is the scholl maistrisse of the noulture of God, and the chooser out of his woorkes. If a man would desyre riches in this lyfe, what is ryther then wisdom that woorketh all thinges? Then wille I saye: vnderstanding woorketh, what is it among all thinges, that woorketh moze then wisdom? If a man loue vertue and righteousnes, let him labour for wisdom, for she hath great vertues. And why? she teacheth sobernes and prudence, righteousnes and strenght, whiche are suche thinges as men can haue nothing moze profitable in their life. If a man desire much knowledge, she can tel the thinges that are passe, and discern thinges yet to come, she knoweth the subtilties of woordes, and can expounde darkel sentences. She can tel of tokens of wonderful thinges, or ener they come to passe, and the endes of all times and ages. So I purposed after this manner I will take her vnto my company, and come louingly with her, no doubt she shall geue me good counsell, and speake comfortably vnto me in my sorowfulnes and griefe. For her sake shall I be wel, and honestly taken among the commons and Lordes of the counteyll. Though I be yonge, yet shall I haue sharpe vnderstanding, so that I shalbe meruitous in the sight of great men, and the faces of princes shall wonder at me. When I holde my tongue, they shal abide my leisure. When I speake they shall loke vpon me, and if I talk muche, they shal lay their handes vpon their mouth. Moreover, by the meanes of her, I shall obtayn immortallitie, and leaue behynde me, an euerglasting memorialis among them that come after me. I shal sette the people in order, and the nations shalbe subdued vnto me. Horrible tyrants shall be afraid, when they doo heare of me: among the multitude I shalbe counted good, & mightye in battaile. When I come home, I shall finde rest with her: for her company hath no bitterness, and her fellowship hath no tediousness, but mirth and ioye. Howe when I considred these thinges by my selfe, and pondered them in my heart, how that to be ioyned vnto wisedom is immortalitie, and great pleasure to haue her friendship, howe that in the woorkes of her handes are infinite riches: howe that who so keepeth companye with her, shalbe wise, & that he which talketh with her, shall come to honoz. I went about seeking to gather her vnto me: for I was a ladde of a ripe wit, and had a good vnderstandinge. But when I grewe to moze vnderstanding, I came to an vndeuyled body. Neuerthelesse when I perceiued that I coule not kepe my selfe chaste, except God gaue it me (and that was a pointe of wisedom also, to knowe whose gifte it was) I stepped vnto the Lord, & besought him, & with my whole heart I saide after this maner.

Chapter.

O God of my fathers, & Lord of mercyes (thou that hast made all thinges with thy word, and ordeined man throug thy wisedom, that he should haue dominion ouer the creature which thou haste made: that he should order the world according to equitie and righteousness, and execute iudgement with a true heart) geue me wisedom, whiche is euerglasting.

about thy seat, and put me not out from among thy children: for I thy seruant and sonne of thy handmaiden am a feeble person, of a short time, & to ponge to the vnderstanding of iudgement, and the lawes. And though a man be neuer so perfect among the children of men, yet yf thy wisedom be not with him, he shalbe nothing regarded. But thou hast chosen me, to be a kinge vnto my people, and the Judge of thy sonnes and daughters. Thou haste commaunded me to builde a Temple vpon thy holpe mount, and an altar in the Citie wherein thou dwellest, a lykenesse of thy holy tabernacle, whiche thou haste prepared from the beginninge, and thy wisedom with thee, whiche knoweth thy woorkes, which also was with thee, whet thou madest the worlde, and knewe what was acceptable in thy sight, and right in thy commaundementes. I sende her out of thy holy heauens, and from the throne of thy maiestye, that shee maye be with me, and labour with me, that I maye knowe what is acceptable in thy sighte. For she knoweth and vnderstandeth all thinges: and shee shall leade me soberly in my woorkes, and preserue me in her power. So shall my woorkes be acceptable, and then shall I gouerne thy people righteously, & be worthy to sit in my fathers seate. For what man is he, that mai know the counceyl of god? Or who can thinke what the will of God is? For the thoughts of mortall men are measurable, and our forecastes are but vncertain. And why? a mortal and corruptible body is heauy vnto the soule, & the earthly mansion keepeth downe that vnderstanding that museth vpon many thinges. Very hard it can we discern the thinges that are vpon earth, and great labour haue we: for we can finde the thinges whiche are before our eyes: who will then seke out the ground of the thinges that are done in heauen? O Lord, who can haue knowlege of the vnderstanding and meanyng, except thou geue him wisdom, and send thy holy ghost

Gen. 2.20 But as for such as take hede vnto wis-cause of his brothers wrath, wisdom led him the righte waye, shewed him the kingdom of god, gaue him knowledge of holy thinges, made him riche in his laboures, and brought to passe the thinges that he wente aboute. In the discretiounes of suche as descanded him, she stode by him, and made him riche. She saved him from the enemyes, and defended him from the disceauers. She made him stronge in battayle, and gaue him the victorie, that he might knowe, how that wis-dome is stronger then all thinges. • When the righteous was solde, she forsooke him not, but deliuered him from sinners. She went down with him into the dongeon, and sayled him not in the bandes: till he had brought him the scepter of the realme, a power agaynst those that oppressed him. As for them that had accused him, she declared them to be lyars, and brought him to perpetual worship. • She deli-uered the righteous people and faultlesse seede, from the nations that oppressed them. She entred into the house of the seruant of God, and stode by him in wonders and tokens agaynst the horrible king. She gaue the righteous the rewarde of their laboures and led them forth a marvelous way: on the daye time she was a shadowe vnto them, and a lighte of starres in the night season. • She brought them throughe the red sea, and caried them throughe the great water. She dyuined their enemyes in the sea, and brought them out of the depe. So the righteous tooke the spoiles of the vngodly, • and prayed thy holy name, O Lord, and magnified thy victorious hande with one accord. • For wisdom openeth the mouth of the dowe, and maketh the tongs of the babes to speake.

The .xi. Chapter.

She ordred their woorkes in the shandes of the holy prophet: • so that they went throughe the wilderness that was not inhabited, and pitched their tentes in the waste deserte. They stode agaynst their enemyes, and were auenged of them vnder sayres. • When they were thursty, they called vpon thee, and water was geuen them out of the most hye rocke, and their thirste was quenched out of the harde stone. For by the strength where throughte their enemies were punished, were the children of Israel helped in their nede, to their comfort. For vnto the enemies thou gauest mans bloud in steade of yuyng water. And whereas they had scarcenes in the rebuke, when the children were slayne, thou gauest vnto thine owne a plenteous water buloked for, declaringe by the thirste that was at that time, how thou wouldest bring thine owne vnto honoure, and slaye their aduersaries. • For when they were tryed and nourtured with fatherly mercy, they knowledged how the benignly were iudged, and punished thorough the wrath of God. These hast thou exhortes as a father, and proued the: but vnto the other thou hast bene a boysterous king, layde hard to their charge, and condemned them. Whether they were absent or present, their punishment was alike. For their grieve was double: namely, mourning and the remembrance of things past. But when they perceived that their punishments did them good, they thought vpon the Lord, and wondered at the ende. For at the laste they held much of him, of whom in the out castinge they thought scozne, as of an abiecte. Nevertheless, the righteous did not so when they were thirske: but even lyke as the thoughtes of the foolish were, so was also their wickednes. • Whereas certains men now (through error) did worship dombe serpentes and vaine beastes, thou sendest a multitude of dombe beastes vpon them for a vengeance, that they might knowe, that loke where with all a manne synneth, by the same also shall he be punished. • For vnto thy almightie hand, that made the world of naughte, it was not impossible, to send among them an heape of Beares, of wood Lions, or cruell beastes of a strange kind, such as are vnknewen of spoute fyre, or caste out a smoking breath, or those horrible sparkes out of their eyes, whiche might not onely bedestroye them with hurtinge, but also kill them with their horrible sighte. Yea withoute these beastes mighte they haue bene slayne with one winde, being persecuted of theys owne workes, and scatered abrood thorough the breath of thy power. Nevertheless, thou hast ordred all thinges in measure number and weighte. For thou hast euer had great strength and might, and who maye withstande the power of thine arme? And why lyke as the small thinge that the balauance weith, so is the world before thee: yea as a droppe of the morning dewe, that falleth downe vpon the earthe. Thou hast mercye vpon all, for thou hast power of all thinges: and makest thee as though thou sawest not the synnes of men, because they shoulde amende. For thou louest all the thinges that are, and hatest none of them, for whom thou hast made: neither diddest thou ordeyne or make any thinge, of euill will. Howe might any thing endure, if it wer not thy will? Or how could any thing be preserved, except it were called of thee? But thou sparest all, for all are thine (O Lord) thou louer of soules.

O Lord howe gracious & sweete is thy spirite in all thinges. Therefore chastekest thou them measurably that go wrong, and warnest them concerninge the thinges wherein they offend: thou speakest vnto them (O Lord) and exhortest them to leaue their wickednesse, and to put their truste in thee. • As for those olde inhabitoures of thy holpe lande, thou mightest not awaye with them, for they committed abhominable workes agaynst thee, as witchecraft, sorcery, and Idolatrie, they slewe their owne children without mercy, they did eate by mens bowels, and deuoured the bloud: yea, because of suche abominations, imphelenees and offerings, thou slewest the fathers of the desolate soules by the handes of our fathers: that the lande whiche thou louest as none all other, mighte be a dwelling for the children of God. Nevertheless

Exo. 23d thou sparedst them also as men) & sendest the fore runners of thyne host even hoznettes to destroye them out by lytle and lytle. For that thou wast vnable to subdue the vngodlye vnto the righteous in battaile, or with cruell beastes, or with one rough worde to destroye them together: • But thy minde was to driue them out by lytle and lytle, geuyng them time and place to amend: knowing well, that it was an vnrightheous nation and wicked of nature, and that their thought might neuer be altered. For it was a curled seede from the beginning, and feared no man: Yet haste thou pardoned their synnes. For who will saye vnto thee: why haste thou done that?

• Or who wil stand agaynst thy iudgement? • Or who will come before thy face an auenger of vnrightheous men? • Or who wil blame thee, yf the people peryshe, whom thou haste made? For there is none other God but thou,

1 Pet. 9a • that carest for all thinges, that thou maigest declare howe that thy iudgement is not vnrighr. There dare neither kinge nor tyrante in thy sight require accomptes of them who thou hast destroyed. For so muche then as thou art righteous thy selfe, thou ordrest all thinges righteouslye, • and punishest euen him that hath not deserved to be punished, and tokest him for a straunger and an aleaunt in the land of thy power. For thy power is the beginning of righteousnesse, and because thou art Lord of all thinges, therefore arte thou gracious vnto all.

Job. 9. a When men thinke thee not to be of a full strength, thou declarest thy power, and boldly deliuerest thou them out that knowe thee not. But thou Lord of power iudget quietelye, and ordrest vs with greare worshippe, for thou maigest doo as thou wilt. By suche worckes nowe haste thou taughte thy people, that a man also should be iust and louinge, and haste made thy childre to be of a good hope: for euen whē thou iudget, thou geuest rest to amend from synnes. For in so muche as thou hast punished, and with suche diligence deliuered the enemies of thy seruantes, whiche were worthy to dye (where thoughe thou gaue them time and place of amendement, that they might turne from their wickednes) with howe greate diligence then punishest thou thine owne childre, vnto whose fathers thou haste swozne and made conenantes of good promises: So where as thou dost but chasten vs, thou punishest our enemies diuers wayes, to the intent that when we punish, we should remember thy goodnes: and when we our selues are punished, to putte our truste in thy mercy. Wherefore, where as men haue liued ygnorantlye, and vnrightheouslye, thou haste punished them sore, euen through the same thinges that they worshipped. • For they went astraye verie longe in the waye of error, and held the deastes (which euen their enemies despised) for goddes, ymaging as children of no understanding. Therefore haste thou sent a scofnfull punishment among them: as among the children of ignorance. As for such as would not be reformed by those scoznes and rebukes, they felt the worthy punishment of God, for the thinges that they suffered, they bare them vnpaciently, being not content in that, but briswilling. And when they perished by the same thinges that they tooke for goddes, they knowledged them, that there was but one true God, whom asofe they would not knowe, therfore came the end of their dampnation vpon them.

The .xiiij. Chapter.
V Byne are all men, which haue not knowledge of God: • as were they that out of the good thinges whiche are seene, knewe not him, that of him selfe is euertlasting. Meryther toke they so muche regard of the worckes that are made, as to knowe who was the crafterman of them, but some toke the fyre, some the wynde of ayre, some the course of the starres, some the water, some toke the sunne and moone, for the lightes of heauen which rule the earth for gods. But though they had such pleasure in their bewtie that they thought them to haue bene goddesses, yet should they haue knowen howe muche more sayper hee is that made them. For the maker of bewtye hath ordeyned all these thinges. And if they merueled at the power and wozkes of them, they should haue perceyued thereby, that he which made these thinges, is mightyer then they. For by the greatnes and bewtye of the creature, the maker thereof may playnly be knowen. Forwithstandinge they are the lesse to be blamed, that seeke God, and woulde fynde him, and yet mysse. And whye for so muche as they go about in his woorkes, and seeke after them, it is a tokē, that they regard and holde muche of his woorkes that are sene, howbeit they are not wholly to be excused. For if their vnderstanding and knowledge be so greate, that they can discerne the woylde and the creatures, whye dooe they not rather find out the Lord therof? But vnhappye are they, and amonge the deade is their hope, that call theym Goddesses, which are but the woorkes of mennes handes: gold, siluer, and the thing that is found out by cunninge, the similitude of beastes, or any bayne stoane that hath bene made by þ hand of oid.

• Or as when a carpenter cutteth downe a tree out of the wood, and pareth off the bark of it cunningly: and so with the one parte maketh a vessel to be vsed, and dyeth meate with the residue. As for the other parte that is left, which is profitable for nothinge, (for it is a crooked pece of wood and full of knobbes) he carueth it diligentely throughe his vanitie, and accordyng to the knowledge of his cunninge) he geueth it some proportion, fashioneth it after the similitude of a man, or maketh it like some beast, straketh it ouer with redde, and painteth it, and looke what soule spot is in it, hee carueth some colour vpon it. Then maketh he a conueniēt tabernacle for it, setteth it in þ wal, & maketh it fast with yon, prouiding so for it, least it happen to fall: for it is wel knowen, that it can not helpe it selfe. And whye it is but an ymage, and must of necessity be helped. Then goeth he and offereth of his goodds vnto it, for his children and for his wife, he seeketh helpe at it, he asketh counsell at it, he is not ashamed to speake vnto it, that hath no soule: For heaith he maketh his petition vnto him that is sicke: for lyfe, he prayeth vnto him that is deade: he calleth vpon him for helpe that is not able to helpe him selfe, and to send him a good tourney, he prayeth him that may not go. And in all the thinges that he taketh in hād (whether it be to obtayn any thing, or to woork) he prayeth vnto hym, that can do no maner of good.

A Bayne, an other man purposinge to take his tourneye throughe the raging sea, calleth for helpe vnto a stocke, that is farre weaker then the tree that bereth him. For as for it, couetousnes of money hath found it out, and the craftisman made it with his cunning. But thy prouidence, O father, gouerneth all thinges from the begynninge.

• For thou hast made a waye in the sea, and a sure pathe in the middest of the waues: declaringe thereby, that thou hast power to helpe in all thinges: yea, though a man went to the sea withoute shippe. Nevertheless, that the woorkes of thy wisdom should not be bayne, thou hast caused an Arke to be made: and therefore doo menne committe theyr lyues to a small pece of woodde, passinge ouer the sea in a shippe, and are saued. • For in the olde time also when the proude Gyautes perished, hee (in whome the hope was left to encrease the woylde) went into the shippe, whiche was gouerned throughe thy hande, and so left seede behinde him vnto the woylde. For happy is the tree, where throughe righteousnesse commeth:

Psal. 115 but cursed is the ydoll that is made with hands, • yea, both it, and he that made it. He, because he made it, and it because it was called God, where as it is but a fragile thing. • For the vngodlye and his vngodlynes are bothe like abhominable vnto God. Euen so the woꝝke and he that made it also, shalbe punished together. Therefore shal there a plague com vpon the ydols of the hethen: for out of the creatures of God they are become an abhominacion, and temptation vnto the soules of men, and a snare for the feete of the vnwise. And why, the seeking out of ydols is the beginning of whoꝝdome and the bꝛynging by of them is the destruction of life. For they wer not from the beginning, nether shall they continue for euer. The wealthy ydlenes of men hath founde them out bypon erth, therfore shal they com shortly to an ende. When a father mourned for his sonne that was taken away from him, hee made him an ymage in al the hault of his dead sonne, and so he began to worship him as God, which was but a dead man, and ordeined his seruants to offer vnto him. Thus by procelle of time, and through an vngodlye custome, this error was kept as a law, and tyrannites compelled men by violence to honour ymages. As for those that were so farre of, that men might not worship them presently, their picture was brought from farre (like the ymage of a King, whom they would honour) to thintent that with great diligence they might worship him which was farre off, as though he had bene present. Agayne, the singular conninge of the craftes man gaue the ignorant also a great occasion to worship ymages. For the woꝝkman willing to do him a pleasure that let him a woꝝk, laboured with all his cunning to make the ymage of the best fashion. And so (thorow the bewtye of the woꝝke) the common people was disceaues, in so much that they tooke him no we for a God, which a litle afoze was not honoured as a manne. And this was the error of mans life, when men either for to serue their owne affection, or to do some pleasure vnto kinges, ascribed vnto stones and stockes the name of God, which ought to be giuen vnto no man. Moreover, this was not ynoughe for them that they erred in the knowledge of God: but when they lined in the great warres of ignorance, those many and great plagues called they peace. For either they slue their owne children, and offered them, or did sacrifice in the night season, or els held vnreasonable watchen: so that they kept neither life nor marriage cleane: but eyther one slue another to death maliciously, or els greued his neighbour with aduoutye. And thus wer all thinges mixt together, bloud, manslaughter, theft, dissimulation, corruption, unfaithfulness, sedition, periury, disquieting of good men, vnthankfulness, despyling of soules, chaunging of byrth, bultedfastnes of marriage, misorder, of aduoutye and uncleannes. And why: the honoring of abhominable ymages is the cause, the beginning & end of all euill. For they that worship Idols, eyther they are mad when they be merke, or prophesye lyes, or lyue vngodlye, or els lyghthe forswere them selues. For in so much as they trust in the ydols (whiche haue neyther soule nor vnderstanding) thoughte they sweare falsely, yet they thinke it shal not hurt them. Therefore cometh a grete plague bypon them, and that woꝝthei: for they haue an euil opinion of God, giuinge heede vnto Idolles, swearing vniustlye to disceane, and despyling righteousness. For they swearing is no vertue, but a plague of them that sinne, and goeth euer with the offense of the vngodlye.

B At thou O our GOD arte sweete, long suffering and true, and in mercie ordelle thou all thinges. Though we synne, yet are we thyne, for we knowe thy strengthe. If wee synne not, then are we sure, that thou regardest vs. For in knowe thee, is perfect righteousness. Yea, to knowe thy righteousness and power, is the roote of immortallitie. As for the thing that men haue found out through their euill science, it hath not deceined vs, as the painting of the picture (an vnprofitable labour & carned image, with diuers colozs, whose sight enriceth the ignorant, so that he honoureth and loneth the picture of a dead image that hath no soule. Neuer thelesse, they that loue such euill thinges, or worship of deth, they that trust in them, they that make the, they that loue them, and they that honour them. The potter also taketh and tempereth soft earth, laboureth it, and geueth it the fashion of a vessel, what so euer serueth for our vse, and so of one piece of claye, he maketh some cleane vessel for seruice, and some contrary. But wherto euery vessel serueth, that knoweth the potter himselfe. So with his baine labor, he maketh a god of the same clay, this doeth euen he, whiche a litle afore was made of earthe himselfe, and within a litle while after, (when he dieth) tourneth to earth againe. Notwithstanding, he careth not the more, because he shall labour, nor because his life is short: but strueth to excell goldsmithes, the siluer smithes, and coppersmithes, and taketh it for an honour, to make vayne thinges. For his heart is ashes, his hope is but baine earth, and his life is more hyle then clay, forsomuch as he knoweth not his owne maker, that gaue him his soule to worke, and breathed in him the breath of lyfe. They count our lyfe but a pastime, and oure conuersation to be but a market, and that men shoulde euer be getting, and that by euill meanes. Now he that of earth maketh fragile vessels, and ymagines, knoweth him selfe to offende adone all other. All the enemyes of the people, and that holde them in subiection, are vniuersally vnhappy, and exceeding proude vnto their owne soules, for they iudge all the gods of the heathen to be gods, whiche neyther haue eye sight to see, nor noses to smell, nor ears to heare, nor fingers or handes for to grope, and as for their feete they are to slowe to go. For man made the, and he that hath but a borrowed spirit fashioned them. But no man can make a God like vnto him: for seeing he is but mortall himselfe, it is but mortall that he maketh with vnrightheous handes. He himselfe is better then they whom he worshippeth: for he liueth, though he was mortall, so did neuer they. Yea, they worship beastes also, which are most miserable, for compare things that can not feele vnto them, and they are worse then those. Yet is there not one of these beastes, that with his sight can beholde any good thing, neyther haue they geuen praise nor thanges vnto God.

For these and such other things haue they suffered woorthie punishment, and through the multitude of beastes are they rooted out. In stede of the which punishments, thou hast graciously ordered thin owne people, & geuen them their desire, that they longed for: a newe and strange taste, preparing them quailles to bee their meat, to the intent (by the thinges which were shewed and sent vnto them) they that were so greedy of meat, might be withdrawen euen from the desire that was necessarye. But these within short time were brought vnto pouertie, and tasted a newe meat. For it was requisit that (without any excuse) destruction shold come vpon those which bled tyrany, and to shewe only vnto the other, howe their enemyes, were destroyed. For when the cruel woudnes of the beasts came vpon them, they perished through the stinges of cruel serpentes. Notwithstanding thy wrath endured not perpetuallye, but they were put in feare for a litle season, that they might be reformed, hauing a token of saluation, to remember the commaundement of thy lawe. For hee that conuerted, was not healed by the thing that he sawe, but by thee, O Saviour of all. So in this, thou shewdest thine enemyes, that it

For it was a wonderous thinge that fyꝛe might doo moꝛe then water which quencheth all thinges: but the woꝛlde is the auenger of the righteous. Sometime was the fyꝛe so tame, that the beastes which were sente to punish the vngodlye, byente not, and that because they shoulde see and knowe, that they were persecuted with the punishmente of God. that the fyꝛe burning in the hoyle and rayne, destroyed the fruite of the enemyes: the fyꝛe also forgot his strength agayne, that the righteous might be noꝛished. For þe creature that serueth thee (whiche art the maker) is ferre in punishinge the vnrigheteous, but is easy & gentle to do good vnto such as put their truste in thee. Therfoꝛe did all thinges alter at the same time, and were all obedient vnto thy grace, which is the nurse of all thinges: according to the desire of them that had nede therof, that thy childꝛe, O Loꝛd, whō thou louest, might knowe • that it is not þe nature and the growinge of frutes that fedeth men, but that it is thy woꝛde, which pꝛeseruethe the, that put their trust in thee. For loke what might not be destroyed with the fyꝛe, as lone as it was warmed with a litle sunne beame, it melted: that al men might knowe, that thanks ought to be geue vnto thee, befoꝛe the sunne rise, & that thou oughtest to be woꝛshipped befoꝛe the day spring. For the hope of the vnthankfull shall melte away as the wynter yfe, and perishe as water, that is not necessary.

The .xviij. Chapter.

Great are • thy iudgements (O Loꝛd) and thy counceils cannot be expelless: therfoꝛe men do erre, that will not be refoꝛmed with thy wis dom, • for when the vnrigheteous thought to haue thy holye people in subiection, they were bounde with bandes of the darknes and long night, that vnder the rooꝛe, thinkinge to escape the enerlastinge wisledome. And while they thought to be hyd in the darknes of their sinnes, they wer scattered abrode in the very middes of the darke coueringe of forgetfulness, put to horrible feare, and wonderfull yfe vexed: for they hadde no coꝛner where they might keepe them from feare (because the sounde came doꝛne and vexed the) yea, many terrible and straunge visions made them astrap, No power of the fyꝛe might geue the light, neither might the cleare flames of the starres lighten that horrible night enchauntment that they bled, it came to derision, and the proude wisdome was brought to shame. For they that promised to drowne awaye the fearefulnes and dyede from the weake soules, were sick for feare of them selues, and that with scoorne. And though none of the wonders feared theym, yet were they afrayd at the beastes which came vpon them, and at the hyllinge of the serpentes. In so much that with tremblinge they sowned, and sayde they sawe not the ayre, whiche no man yet C maye escape. For it is an heauy thing, when a mans owne conscience beareth recozde of his wickednesse, and condempneth him. And why a vexed and wounded conscience, taketh euer cruell thinges in hande, - fearfulness is nothinge elles, but a declaring that a man seeketh helpe and defence, to an-swere for him selfe. And looke howe muche lesse the hoape is within, the more is the vncertentie of the matter, for the whiche he is punished. But they that came in the mightie nighte, slepe the slepe that fell vpon them from vnder and from aboue, sometime were they afrayde thoroowe the feare of the wonders, and sometime they wer so weake that they sowned with all, for an hasty and sodayne fearefulnes came vpon them. Afterwarde, yf any of them had fallen, he was kepte and shutte in prison, but withoute chepnes. But yf any dwelt in a village, yf he had bene an hearde or husbandman, he suffred intollerable necessities, for they were al bound with one chayne of darkenes. Whether it were a blasing winde, or a sweete songe of the byrdes amonge the thicke brannches of the trees, or the vehemencie of hasty runninge water, or greate or the playng and running of beastes whom they sawe not, or the mightie noyse of roaring beastes, or the sounde that aunswereth agayne in the highe mountaines, it made them slowe for verie feare. For all the earthe shined with cleere light, and no man was hindered in his labour. Only vpon them there fell a hewpe nighte, an ymage of darkenes that was to come vpon the.

Yea, they were vnto them selues the most heauy and horrible darkenes.

sought thee, O God, that there might burning pillar of fyre to leade them Exod. 14 in the vnknewen waye, and thou gauest them the Sunne for a free guide without any hurt. Reason it was that they should want light, and be put in the prison of darknes, which kept thy children in captiuitie, by whom the vi-corrupt life of the lawe of the worlde was for to be geuen. When they thoght to slea the babes of the righteous (one beynge layde out, and preserued ghtest oute the whole multitude of the children, and destroyedst these in the myghtie water. Of that nighte were our fathers certified afore, that they knowing vnto what othes they had geuen credence, might be of good cheere. Thus thy people receaued the health of the righteous, but the vngodlye were destroyed. For lyke as thou haste hurte our enemies, so haste thou promoted vs, whome thou cal-ledst afore. For the righteous chy-dren of the good men offred secretly, and ordeyed the lawe of righteousnes vnto vntie, that the iuste should receaue good and euill in like manner, synging praises vnto the father of all men. In gain, there was herd an vnconuenient crye for children that were bewailed.

C The maller & the seruante were punnished in lyke maner. For they altogether had innumerable that died one death. Neither were the living sufficient to bury the dead, for in the swinking of an eie the noblest nation of the was destroyed. As oft as God helped them afoze, yet wold it not make them beloeie, but in the destruction of þ first bozne they knowledged, that it was the people of God. For while al thin-ges were still, and when the night was in the middell of her course, the Almightie worde (O Lord) leape do wne from heauen out of thy royall thronie, as a rough man of war, in the middell of the land that was destroyed, and the sharpe sword performed thy straye commandement, standing and spilling al thinges with death: pea it stode vpon the earth and reached vnto the heauen. Then the sighte of the euill dreames vexed them sobenly, and fearfulness cam vpon them bnauares.
D Then lay ther one here, another there halfe dead, halfe quick, and shewed the cause of his death. For the visions that vexed theym shewed theym these thinges afoze, so that they were not ignorant wherfoze they perished. The tentations of death touched the righteous also, and among the multitude in the wildernes there was insurrection, but thy wraoth endured not long.
 For the blamelesse man went in al the haste, and toke the battell vpon him, brought forth the weapon of his mi-nistracion: euen pzaier, & the censours of reconcilyng, set him selfe agaynst the wraoth, and so brought the misery to an ende, declaring thereby that he was thy seruante. For he overcame not the multitude with bodely power nor with weapons of might: but with the worde he subdued him that vexed him, putting them in remembrance of the othe and couenaunt made vnto the fathers. For when the dead were fallen down by heapes one vpon another, he stode in the middell, pacified the wraoth, and parted the waye vnto liuing. And whye in his long garnise was all the besotype, and in the turn-rowes of the stones was the glory of the fathers gracen, and thy maieste was writte in the croon of his head.

 Vnto these the destroyer gaue place, and was afraid of the, for it was only a temptation worthy of wraoth.

The. xix. Chapter.

As for the vngodly, the wraoth came vpon them without mercy vnto the ende. For he knew befoze what shold happen vnto them: howe that (when they had consented to let them go, and had sent out with great diligence) they woulde repent, and solo we vppon them. For when they were yet mourning and making lamentation by the graues of the dead they deuised another solishnes, so that they persecuted them in their flying, whome they had caste out afoze with prayer. Worthy recellitie also brought them vnto this end, for they had clean forgotten the thinges that happned vnto them afoze. But the thinge that was wanting of their punishment, was requisite, so to be fulfilled vppon them with tormentes, that the people might haue a maruillous passage therowe, and that these mighte fynde a strange death. Then was euery creature fashioned agayne of newe, according to the will of their maker, obeyinge thy commandementes, that thy children might be kept without hurt.
 For the cloude ouersadowed their tentes, and the dype earthe appeared, wher afoze was water, so that in the redde sea, there was a waye without impediment, and the greates deepe became a grene speide, wherethrough all the people wente that were be-sende with thy hands, seeing the wonderous and maruelous woorkes.
 For as the hoxles, so were they fide, and leapt like lamber, passing the (O Lord) which hadde deliuered them: and whye they were yet mindefull of the thinges, that hapned while they dwelt in the lande, howe the ground brought forth fies in stede of cattell: and howe the river scrawled with the multitude of frogs in stede of hydes.
 But

Pro. 16 c. But at the laste, they sawe a newe Ps. 118 creation of birdes, what time as they were discaued with lust, and desired delicate meates. For when they were speaking of theyr appetite, the quay-les came by vnto them from the sea, & punishmentes came vpon the sinners, not without the tokens which came to passe afoze by the behemency of the streames: for they suffered worthele accordyng to their wickednesse, they dealt so abhominably and churlishly with strangers. Some receyued no unknowne gesses, some brought the strangers into bondage, that did them good. Besyde all these thinges, there were some, that not onely receyued no strangers with their willes, but persecuted those also, and did them much euill that receyued theym gladly.
 Therefore were they punished with blindnesse, like as they that wer co-uered with sodayn darknes at the dores of the righteous, so that euery one sought the entrance of his doze. Thus the elements turned into them selues like as when one time is changed vpon an instrument of musike, and yet at the residue kepe their melody: whiche may easely be perceiued by sight of the thinges that are come to passe.

 The dry land was turned into a wa-terpe, and the thinge that afoze swam in the water, went now vpon the dry ground. The fyre had power in the water (contrary to his owne ver-tue) and the water forgot his owne kinde to quenche. Agayne, the flames of the noysome beastes hurte not the fleshe of them that went with theym, neither melted they the yse, which elles melteth lightlye. In all thinges haste thou promoted thy people (O Lord) and brought theym to honour: thou haste not despised theym, but al-way, and in all places, thou hast stand by them.

The ende of the booke of Wisedome.

The booke of Iesus the sonne of Syrach, which is called in latin, Ecclesiasticus.

The prologue of Iesus, the sonne of Syrach vnto this booke.

Many & great men haue declared wisdom vnto vs out of law, out of prophets, & out of other that folowed them. In which things Israel ought to be comended, by reason of doctrine & wisdom: Therefore, they that haue it & rede it, should not only themselves be wise therthrough, but serue other also, with teaching & writing. After that my grandfather Iesus had geue diligent laboz to reade law, & prophets, & other booke, & wer left vs of our fathers, & had well exercised himselfe therin, he purposed also to wyte somthing of wisdom & good maners, to that intent that they which were willing to lerne & to be wise, might haue more vnderstanding, & be the more apt to lead a good conuersation. Wherefore I exhort you to receiue it loningly, to rede it with diligence, & to take it in good worth, though our wordes be not so eloquent as the famous orators. For that thing is writte in Hebrew tong, soundeth not so wel whē it is translated to an other spech. Not only this boke of mine, but also the law, & prophets, & other booke sound far other wise, then they do, whē they are spoke in their own language. Now in that xxxviij. yere, when I came into Egypt in the time of Ptolomee Euergetes, & continued there al my life, I gat libertie to rede & write many good thinges. Wherefore I thought it good and necessary, to bestow my diligence & trauayl to interprete this boke. And considering that I had time, I labored & did my best, to perforce this boke, and to bring it vnto light: that the strangers also which are disposed to lerne, might apply them selues vnto good maners, and liue accordyng to the law of the Lord.

Eccelesiasticus.

The first Chapter.

3 Me. 3. b

Al wisdome cometh of god the Lord and hath bene ever with him, and is before all tyme. Who hath numbred & said of the sea, the drops of the rayne, and the dayes of tyme? Who hath mesured the height of heauen, the breadth of the earthe, and the depenes of the sea? Who hath soughte out the ground of Goddes wisdome, whiche hath bene before all thinges? Wisdome hath bene before all thinges, and the vnderstandinge of prudence from euerlasting. (Gods word in the height is the wel of wisdome, and the euerlastinge commaundementes are the entraunce of her.) Vnto whom hath the rote of wisdome bene declared? Or who hath knowen her wit? Vnto who hath the doctrine of wisdome bene discovered and shewed? and who hath vnderstande the manyfold entraunce of her? There is one: even the Highest, the maker of all thinges, the Almighty, the king of power (of whom men ought to stand greatly in awe) whiche syteth vpon his throne, beinge a God of dominion. He hath created her throughe the holpe ghost: he hath seene her, numbred her, and mesured her: he hath poured her out vpon all his workes, and vpon all fleshe accordyng to his gift: he geneth her richely vnto them that loue him. The feare of the Lord is worshippe and triumphe, gladnesse and a ioyefull crowne: The feare of the Lord maketh a mery hert, geneth gladnes, ioye and longe life. Who so feareth the Lord, it shall go well with him at the laste, and in the day of his death he shall be blessed. The loue of God is honorable wisdome: loke vnto whom it appeareth, they loue it, for they see what wonderous thinges it doeth,

• The feare of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom, and was made with the saythfull in the mothers wombe, it shall go with the chosen women, and shall be knowen of the righteous and saythfull. The feare of the Lord is the righte Gods seruice, that preserveth and instructeth the hearte, and geneth mirth and gladnesse. Who so feareth the Lord shall be happye, and when he hath neede of comforte, he shall be blessed. To feare God is the wisdom that maketh riche, and bringeth all good with her. She filleth the whole house with her giftes, and the garners with her treasure. The feare of the Lord is the crowne of wisdome, and geneth plenteous peace and helth. Wee hath seene her and numbred her, (both these are the giftes of God) knowledge and vnderstanding of wisdom hath he poured out as rayne, and them that heid her fast, hath he brought vnto honour. The feare of the Lord is the rote of wisdome, and her branches are longe lyfe. In the treasures of wisdom is vnderstanding, and deuotion of knowledge, but wisdome is abhorred of sinners. The feare of the Lord driueth out sinne: for he that is without feare cannot be made righteous, and his wilfull boldnes is his own destruction. A patient man will suffer vnto the tyme, and then shall he haue the reward of ioy. A good vnderstanding will hide his wordes for a tyme, and many mennes lippes shall speake of his wisdome. In the treasures of wisdom is the declaration of doctrine, but the sinner abhorreth the wordshippe of God. My sonne, if thou desire wisdom, kepe the commaundement, that God shall geue her vnto thee: for the feare of the Lord is wisdom and nurture, he hath pleasure in sayth and louing meekenesse, and he shall fill the treasures thereof. Be not obstinate and vnsaythfull to the feare of the Lord, and come not vnto him with a double hearte. We not an hypocrite in the sight of me, and take good hede what thou speakest. Marke well these thinges, least thou happen to fall and bring thy soule to dishonour, and so God diu uer thy secretes, and caste thee downe in the midst of the congregation, because thou woldest not receaue the feare of God, and because thy heart is full of saynednes and discreate.

The.ij. Chapter.

My sonne, if thou wilt come into the seruice of God, stand faste in righteousnesse, and feare, and arme thy soule to tentation: sette thine heart and be patient, bowe downe thine eare, receaue the wordes of vnderstanding, and shyinke not away, when thou art enticed. Holde thee fast vpon God, loyne thy self vnto him, and suffer that thy lyfe maye encrease at the laste. Whatsoeuer happeneth vnto thee, receaue it: suffer in heauyness, and be patient in thy trouble. • For lyke as gold and syluer are tried in the fyre, euen so aue acceptable men in the foynace of aduersitie. Beleue in God, and he shall helpe thee, order thy waye aright, and putte thy trust in him. Holde fast his feare, and growe therein. • Ye that feare the Lord, take sure holde of his mercye, shyinke not awaye from him, that ye fall not. • Ye that feare the Lord, beleue him, and your rewarde shall not be emptye. • Ye that feare the Lord, but your trust in him, and mercye shall come vnto you for pleasure. • Ye that feare the Lord, set your loue vpon him, and your hertes shalbe lightned. Consider the old generations of men (• Ye chyldren) and marke them wel: • Was there euer any one confounded, that put his trust in the Lord? • Who euer continued in his feare, and was forsaken? • Of whom did he euer despise, that called saythfullye vpon him? • For God is gracious and mercifull, he forgyneth synnes in the time of trouble, & is a defender of all them that seke him in the trouth. Wo be vnto him that hath a double heart, spicked lips and euill occupied handes, and to the sinner & goth two maner of waies. Wo be vnto them that are loose of hert, which put not their trust in God and therfore shall they not be defended of him. Wo be vnto them that haue lost pacience, forsake the right wayes, and are tounred backe into frowarde wayes. What will they do, when the Lord shall beginne to visite them? • They that feare the Lord, will not mistrust his word, and they that loue him, will keepe his commandement. • They that feare the Lord, will seeke out the thinges that are pleasaunte vnto him, • and they that loue him, shall fulfill his lawe. • They that feare the Lord will prepare their heartes, and humble their soules in his sight. • They that feare the Lord, keepe his commaundementes, and will be patiente tyll they see him selfe, saying: • better it is for vs to fall into the handes of the Lord, then into the handes of men, for his mercye is as great as him selfe.

The chyldren of wisdomme are a congregation of the righteous, and their exercise is obedience and loue. Heare me your father (• my deare chyldren) and doo thereafter, that ye maye be safe. • For the Lord will haue the father honoured of the chyldren, and loke what a mother commaundeth her chyldren to doo, he will haue it kepte. Who so honoureth his father, hys synnes shall be forgynen him, • and he that honoureth his mother is lyke one that gathereth treasure together. Who so honoureth his father, shall haue ioye of his owne chyldren: and when he maketh his prayer he shalbe herd. • He that honoureth his father, shall haue a long life, and he that is obedient for the Lordes sake, his mother shall haue ioye of him. • He that feareth the Lord honoureth his father and mother, and doth therein seruice, as it were vnto the Lord him selfe. Honour thy father in dede, in word, and in all pacience that thou mayest haue Gods blessinge, and his blessinge shall abyde with thee at the laste. • The blessinge of the father, buydeth by the house of the chyldren, but but the mothers curse rooteth out the foundations. Reioyce not when thy father is rejoyced, for it is not honour vnto thee, but a shame. For the woorthip of a mans father is his owne woorthippe, and where the father is with- out honour, it is the dishonour of the sonne. My sonne, make muche of thy father in his age, and greete him not as longe as he liueth. And yf his vnderstanding faile, haue patience with him, & despise him not in thy strength. For the good dedde that thou shewest vnto thy father, shall not be forgot- ten, and when thou thy selfe wantest it shall be rewarded thee (and for thy mothers offence, thou shalt be recom- pensed with good: yea, it shall be founde for thee in righteousness) & in the daye of trouble thou shalt be remem- bred, thy sinnes also shall melt away, like as the yce in the sayre warme we- ther. He that forsaketh his father, shall come to shame: and he that desiet his mother, is cursed of God. My sonne, persourne thy woorkes with louing mekeness, so shalt thou be loued aboue other men. The greater thou arte, the moze humble thy selfe (in all thinges) and thou shalt find fauour in the sight of God. For greate power belongeth onely vnto God, and he is honoured

C of the lowlye. • Seeke not the things that are aboue thy capacite, and serch not the grounde of suche thinges as are to mightie for thee: but loke what god hath comanded thee, thinke vpon that alway, and be not curious in manny of his woorkes. For it is not needefull for thee to see with thine eyes, the thinges that are secrete. Make not thou too muche searche in superfluous thinges, and bee not curious in manny of his woorkes. For manny thinges are shewed vnto thee alredy, whiche bee aboue the capacite of men. The medling with such hath begyled many a man, and tangleth they switte in banitie. How he that loneth perill, shall perishe therein. In harde heart shall fare euill at the last (and he that loneth daunger, that perishe therein) an heart that goth twa waies, shall not prosper, and he that is frowarde of heart, shall euer be woofe and woofe. A wicked heart shall be laden with sorrowe, and the vngodlye synner shall heape one sinne vpon another. The counsell of the proude hath no health, for the plante of synne shall be rooted out in theym, and not knowne. The heart of him that hath vnderstanding shall perceauie hye thinges, and a good care will gladlye hearken vnto wisdom. An heart that is wise and hath vnderstanding, will abstaine fro synnes, and increase in the woorkes of righteousness. Water quengeth burnynge fyre, and mercye reconcyleth synnes. God hath respect vnto him that is thankfull: he thinketh vpon him agaynst the time to come, so that when he falleth, he shall finde a strong holde.

My sonne, • defraude not the poope of his almes, and turne not awaye thine eyes from him that hath nede. Despile not an hye gyfte soule, and despye not the poope in his necessitie: greete not the heart of him that is helpelesse, and withholde not the gifte from the needefull. Refuse not the prayer of one that is in trouble, turne not awaye thy face from the needy. Caste not thyne eyes asyde from the poope, for any euill will, that thou geue him none occasion to speake euill of thee. For yf he complayne of thee in the bitterness of his soule, his prayer shall be heard, euen he that made him, shall heare him. Be courteous vnto the compaignie of the poope, humble thy soule vnto the elder, and bowe doorne thy head to a man of worship. Let it not greue thee to bowe doorne thine care vnto the poope, but paye thy debt, and geue him a frendly answer, and that with mekenesse. • Welcom him that suffereth wronge from the hand of the oppressour, & be not hurt- berthed when thou sittest in iudgement. Be mercifull vnto the fatherlesse as a father, and be in steade of an husband vnto their mother: so shalt thou be in an obedient sonne of the Hyell, and he shall loue thee more then thy mother doth: wisdometh dyetheth life into her children, receaureth them that seke her, and will go before them in the way of righteousness. He y loueth her, loneth lyfe: and they that seke her diligently, shall haue great ioye. They that kepe her, shall haue the heritage of life: for where she entreth in, there is the blessing of God. They that honoure her shall be the seruantes of the holy one, and they that loue her, are beloned of God. Who soo geureth care vnto her, shall iudge the Heathen: and he that hath respect vnto her, shall dwell safe.

Ely. He that beloueth her, shall haue her in possession, and his generation shall endure: for when he falleth, she doeth go with him, and cholet him among the beste. Feare, dyede, and temptation shall he bying vpon him, and trie him in her doctrine, till she haue so proued him in his thoughtes, that he commit his soule vnto her. Then shall she stablish him, bying the right way vnto him, make him a glad man, shewe him her secrettes, and heape vpon him the treasures of knowledge, vnderstanding and righteousness. But if he go wrong, she shall forsake him, and geue him ouer into the handes of his enemye. My sonne, make much of thy tyme, eschewe the thinge that is euill, and for thy life, shame not to saye the truth. For there is a shame that bringeth synne, and there is a shame that bringeth worship and sauoure. Accept no person after thine owne will, that thou be not confounded to thine owne decaye. Be not ashamed of thy neyghbour in his aduersitie, and kepe not backe thy counsell when it maye do good, neither hide thy wisdom in her bewtie. For in the tonge is wisdom knownen, so is vnderstanding, knowledge, and learninge in the talking of the wise, and stedfastnesse in the workes of righteousness. In no wise speake against the word of truth, but be ashamed of the lies of thine owne ignorance. Shame not to confesse thine error, and submit not thy selfe vnto euery man because of sinne. Withstand not the face of the mightie, & strue thou not agaynst the streame. But for righteousness, take paynes with all thy soule, and for the truest strue thou vnto death, and God shall fight for thee agaynst thine enemies. Be not hastie in thy tongue, neyther slacke and negligent in thy workes. Be not as a lyon in thine owne house destroying thy household folkes, and oppressing them that are vnder thee. Let not thine hande be stretched out to receaue, and shut when thou shouldest geue.

but the mothers curse rooteth out the foundations. Reioyce not when thy father is reppoued, for it is not honour vnto thee, but a shame. For the wor- ship of a mans father is his own wor- shippe, and where the father is with- out honour, it is the dishonour of the sonne. Whv sonne, make much of thy father in his age, and greene him not as longe as he liueth. And yf his vnderstanding faile, haue patience with him, & despise him not in thy strength. For the good dede that thou shew- est vnto thy father, shall not be forgot- ten, and when thou thy selfe wantest it shall be rewarded thee (and for thy mothers offence, thou shalt be recom- pensed with good: yea, it shall be found- ed for thee in righteousness) & in the daye of trouble thou shalt be remem- bered, thy sinnes also shall melt away, like as the yse in the fayre warme we- ther.

Che that forsaketh his father, shall come to shame: and he that defieth his mother, is cursed of God. Whv sonne, persourne thy workes with louing mekeness, so shalt thou be loued aboute other men. The greater thou arte, the moze humble thy selfe (in all thinges) and thou shalt find fauour in the sight of God. For greate power belongeth onely vnto God, and he is honoured of the lowlye. • Seke not the things that are aboute thy capacite, and serch not the groundes of suche thinges as are to mightie for thee: but loke what god hath comanded thee, thinke vpon that alway, and be not curious in man- ny of his workes. For it is not nede- ful for thee to see with thine eyes, the thinges that are secreete. Make not thou too muche searche in superflu- ous thinges, and bee not curious in manny of his workes. For manny thinges are shewed vnto thee alre- dy, whiche bee aboute the capacite of men. The medling with such hath be- gyled many a man, and tangleth theyr wyre in banitie. Now he that loneth perill, shall peryshe therein. In harde heart shall fare euill at the last (and he that loneth daunger, shall perishe there- in) an heart that goth two waies, shall not prosper, and he that is frowarde of heart, will euer be woyle and woyle. A wicked heart shall be laden with sorrow, and the vngodlye synner will heape one sinne vpon another. The counsell of the proude hath no health, for the plante of synne shall be rooted out in theym, and not knowen. The heart of him that hath vnderstanding shall perceau hve thinges, and a good care will gladlye hearken vnto wise- dome. An heart that is wise and hath vnderstanding, will abstaine fro syn- nes, and increase in the workes of righteousness. Water quenchech burnyng fyre, • and mercye reconcileth synnes. If thou haste vnderstanding, shape thy neighbour an aunswere: If no, laye thine hande vpon thy mouth, least thou be trapped in an vndiscrete worde, and so confounded. Honour and worshippinge is in a mans wise talking, but the tong of the vndiscrete is his owne destruction. • Be not a pteu accuser as long as thou liuest, and ble no sleaunders with thy tonge. For shame and sorow goeth ouer the chefe, and an euill name ouer him that is double tonged: but he that is a pteu accuser of other men, shalbe hated, enuyed, and confounded. See that thou tustify the smal and great alphe.

The. vi. Chapter.

BE not thy neyghbours enemye for thy frends sake: for who so is euill, shall be the heyre of rebuke and dishonoure, and whosoever beareth enuy and a double tong offendeth. • Be not proude in the deuise of thine owne vnderstandinge (leske thy strengthe be hurte by foolishnes, and) leske thy leaues wyther, and thy fruite be destroyed, and so thou be left as a dry tree in the wilderness. For a wicked soule destroyeth him that hath it, maketh him to be laughed to scoyne of his enemies, and bringeth him to the portion of the vngodly. • A swete worde multiplieth frendes, and pacifieth them that be at variaunce, and a thankfull tonge will be plenteous in a good man. Holde frendship with many, neuertheles haue but one counseller of a thousande. If thou gettest a frend, • proue him first, and be not hasty to geue him credence. For some man is a frende but for a time, & will not abyde in the daye of trouble. And there is some frende that turneth to enemitie, and taketh part against thee: and yf he knowe any hurte by thee, he telleth it out. • Agayne, some frend is but a companion at the table, and in the daye of neede he continueth not. But a sure frend wilbe vnto thee, eue as thyne owne selfe, and deale faithfully with thine housholde folke. If thou suffer trouble & aduersitie, he is with thee, and hydeth not him selfe from thee. Depart from thine enemies yea, and beware of thy frends. I sayth C full frende is a strong defence, who so syndeth suche one, syndeth a treasure. I saythfull frende hath no peere, the weight of golde and syluer is not to be compared to the goodnesse of his faith. I saythfull frend is a medicine of lyfe, and they that feare the Lorde, shall synde him. Who so feareth the Lorde, shall prosper with frendes: and as he is him selfe, so shall his frend be also. My sonne, receaue doctrine from thy youth by, so shalt thou finde wisdom till thou be olde. Go to her as one that ploweth and soweth, and swayte patiently for her good frutes. For thou shalt haue but lytle labour in her worke, but thou shalt eate of her frutes right sone. Whosoe exceeding sharpe is wisdom to blesse men: an vnstedfaste body will not re- nayne in her. Vnto suche she is as it were a touch stone, and he casteth her from him in all the haste, for wisdom is with him, but in name, there be but fewe that haue knowledge of her. (But with them that knowe her, she abyedeth euen vnto the appearinge of God.) Geue eare (my sonne) receaue my doctrine, and refuse not my coun- cel. Put thy fote into her linkes, and take her poke vpon thy necke: bowe downe thy shoulder vnder her, heare her patiently, and be not wery of her bandes. Come vnto her with thy whole hert, and kepe her waies with all thy power. Seke after her, and she shall be shewed thee, and when thou hast her, forlake her not. For at the laste thou shalt synde reste in her, and that shalbe turned to thy great ioye. Then shall her setters be a strong defence for thee, and her poke a glorious rayment. For & bewty of life is in her and her bandes are the couplinge together of saluation. Yea, a glorious rayment ment is it, thou shalt put it on, and the same crowne of toy shalt thou weare. My son, yf thou wilt take hede, thou shalt haue vnderstanding, and yf thou wilt applye thy minde, thou shalt be wise. If thou wilt be wise downe thine eare, thou shalt receaue doctrine, and yf thou deelyte in hearinge, thou shalt be wise. Stande with the multitude of such elders as haue vnderstanding, and consent vnto their wisdom with thine heart, that thou mayest heare all godly sermons, and that the woozthy sentences escape thee not. And if thou seest a man of discrete vnderstanding, get thee soone vnto him, and lette thy foote treade vppon the steppes of his doctes. ¶ Let thy mind be vpon the commandments of god, and be earnestly occupied in his lawes, so shalt he stablish thy heart, and geue thee wisdom at thyne owne desyre.

Do no euill, so shall there no harme happen vnto thee. Departe awaye from the thinge that is wicked, and no misfortune shall medle with thee. My sonne, sowe no euill thinges in the sowowes of vnrightheousnes, so shalt thou not reape them seuen folde. Laboure not vnto man for any lordship, neyther vnto the king for the seate of honour. Iustice is not thy selfe before God (for he knoweth the heart) and desyre not to be repented wise in the presence of the king. Make no labour to be made a iudge, except it so wer, that thou couldest mightely put downe wickednes: for yf thou shouldest stande in awe of the presence of the myghtye, thou shouldest sayle in geuinge sentence. Offende not in the multitude of the cite, and put not thy selfe amonge the people. ¶ Binde not two sinnes together, for in one sinne shalt thou not be vnpunished. Say not: I tush, God will loke vpon the multitude of my oblations, and when I offer to the hiest God, he will accept it. We not saynte herres, when thou makest thy prayer, neyther slacke in geuinge of almes. Laugh no man to scoorne in thy beautines of his soul, for God (which seeth all thinges,) he is that canne bringe downe, and let vp agayne. Accepte no leasing agaynst thy brother, neyther do the same agaynst thy frend. Use not to make any manner of lye, for the customes therof is not good. Make not many woordes when thou art amonge the elders: and when thou prayest, make not muche babling. ¶ Let no laborious worke be tedious vnto thee, neyther the husbandrie whiche the almighty hath created. Make not thy boist in the multitude of thy wickednes, but humble thy selfe, euen from thine hearte, and remember that the wrath shall not be longe in tarrying, and that the vengeance of the fliche of the vngodlye is a verpe fyre and swoyme. Gue not ouer thy frende for any good, nor thy faithfull brother for the best gold: Depart not from a discrete, and good woman, that is fallen vnto thee for thy portion in the feare of the Lord, for the gift of her honestie is aboue golde. Whereas thy seruaunt woozkerth truclie, intreate him not euill, nor the hyzeling that is faithfull vnto thee. Loue a discrete seruaunt as thine owne soule, defraud him not of his libertie, neyther leaue him a poore man. ¶ If thou haue cattel, looke wel to them, and yf they be for thy profite, keepe theym. ¶ If thou haue sonnes, bringe theym vp in nurture and learninge, and holde theym in awe from their youth vp. If thou haue daughters, keepe their bodye, and shewe not thy face chersful toward them. Marrye thy daughter, so shalt thou perfoyme a weightye matter: but geue her to a man of vnderstanding. If thou haue a wyfe after thine owne minde, forsake her not: (but committe not thy selfe to the hatefull.) ¶ Honour thy father from thy whole heart, and forgette not the sowowfull transyle, that thy mother had with thee, remember that thou wast borne through theym, and how canst thou recompence them the thinges that they haue doone for thee? Feare the Lord with all thy soule, and honoure his ministers.

thou goest in the midst of snares, and vpon the bulwarke of the citie.
Beware of thy neighbour as nigh as thou canst, and meddle with suche as lustre men be thy gesses, let thy mirthe be in the feare of God, let the remem brance of God be in thy minde, and let all thy talking be in the comman dementes of the hieft. In the handes of craftesmen shall the woorkes be com meded, so shal the princes of the pro ple in the wisdomes of their talking.

A man full of wordes is perillous in his citie: and he that is rashe in his talking, shalbe abhoyred.

The x. Chapter.

A wise iudge will order his pro ple with discretion: and where a man of vnderstandinge bea reth rule, there goeth it well. As the iudge of the people is himseife, such so are his officers: and loke what maner of man the ruler of the citie is, such ar they that dwell therein also. An vn wise kinge destroyeth his people, but where they that be in authoritie are men of vnderstanding, there the citie prospereth. The power of the earth is the hand of God (and all iniquitie of the people is to be abhoyred) and whē hys tyme is, he shall sette a profyta ble ruler vpon it. In the hande of God is the power of man, and vpon the scribes shal he lay his honour. Re member no wrong of thy neighbour, and meddle thou with no vnrighte ous woorkes. Pride is hateful before God and man, and all wickednesse of the heathen is to be abhoyred. Be cause of vnrighteous dealing, wrong, blasphemies, and diuers disceates, a realme shalbe translated from one peo ple to another. There is nothinge woorse then a couetous man. Whye art thou proude, O thou earth and ashes?

Ther is not a more wicked thing, the to loue money. And whye? suche one hath his soule to sel: yet is he but fyl thy dong while he liueth. And though the phisitions shewe his helpe neuer so long, yet in conclusion it goeth af ter this maner, to dape a kinge, to mo rowe dead. For when a man dieth, he is the heyre of serpentes, beasts, and wormes. The beginning of mannes pride, is to fall awaye from God: and whye his heart is gone from his ma ker, for pride is the original of all syn.

hath brought them to naughte, and made the memoriall of them to crasse from out of the earth. (God hath destroyed the name of the proude, and left the name of the humble of mind.) Pryde was not made for man, neyther woorthfulnes for mens children. The seede of men that feareth God shalbe brought to honour, but the seede which transgresseth the commandments of the Lord, shalbe shamed. He that is the ruler amonge brethren, is holden in honour among them, and he regardeth such as feare the Lord. The glory of the riche, of the honorable, and of the poore, is the feare of God. Despise not thou the iust poore man, and magnifye not the riche vngodly. Great is the iudge and mighty in honour, yet is there none greater then he that feareth God. • Unto the seruauant that is discrete, shall the free do seruaice. • He that is wyse and wel nurtured, will not grudge when he is reformed, and an ignorant bo-dye shall not come to honour. • Be not proud to do thy worke, and despayre not in the time of aduersitie. • Better is he that laboureth, & hath plenteousnes of all things, then he that is gorgeous & wanteth bread. My sonne, kepe thy soule in mekenes, and geue her her due honor. Who shal iustifie him, & sin neth against him self. Who wil honor him that dishonoreth his own soule? The poore is honoured for his saythfulnes and trueth, but the riche is had in reputation because of his goodes. He that ordereth him selfe honestly in pouertie, howe much more shal he be-haue him selfe in riches. And who so ordereth him selfe vnhonestly in ry-ches, how much more shal he behaue him selfe vnhonestly in pouertie.

The wisdom of hym that is broughte losse, shall lift vp his head, and shal make him to fyt amonge greate men. Commende not thou a manne in his beaultie, neyther despise a man in his better appearance. The Bee is but a smale beast among the soyles, yet is her fruite exceedinge swete. • Be not proude of thy rayment, and exalte not thy selfe in the daye of thy honor: for the workes of the best onely are wonderful: yea, glorious secrete and vnknewen are his workes. Many tyrantes haue bene sayne to sitte downe vpon the earth, and the vnykyte hath woone the crowne. Many mightie men haue ben brought lowe, and the honorable haue bene deliuered into other mennes handes. • Condemne no man, before thou haue tried out the matter: and when thou halte made inquisition, then reforme to righteouslye. • Geue no sentence, before thou halte hearde the cause, but first let men tel out their tales. Strive not for a matter that toucheth not thy selfe, and stande not in the iudgement of spynners. My son, meddle not with many matters: and yf thou wilt be riche, thou shalt not get it, and though thou runnest thy waye afoze, yet shalt thou not escape. • There is some man that laboureth, and the more he swei-eth him selfe, the lesse he hath. Againe, some man is slouthfull, hath neede of helpe, wanteth strength, & hath great pouertie, & Gods eye loketh vpon him to good, setteth him vp from his losse state, and lifteyth vp his head: so that manye men maruell at him, and geue honour vnto God. • Prosperitie and aduersitie, lyfe and death, pouertie and riches, come all of the Lord. Wisdome, nurture & knowledge of the lawe, are with God: loue and the waies of good are with him. Errour & darkenes are made for sinners (& they that exalt themselves in euill, ware old in euill.) The gift of god remaineth for & righteous, & his good will shall geue prosperitie for euer. Some man is riche by lining nygardy, & that is the portion of his rewarde, in that he sayth: nowe have I gotten reste, and nowe will I eat and drinke of my goodes my selfe alone. And yet he considereth not, that the tyme draweth nye (and death approacheth) that he must leaue all these thinges vnto other menne, and dye him selfe. Stande thou faste in thy covenante, and exerce thy selfe therin, and remayne in the woꝝke vnto thy age. Continue not in the woꝝkes of sinners, but putte thy truste in God, and hyde in thine estate: for it is but an easie thing in the sight of God, to make a poore man riche, and that sodenly. The blessing of God hasteth to the rewarde of the righteous, and maketh his frutes soone to flourish and prosper. Saye not, what helper hath me: and what shall I haue? the whiler I gayne, saye not: I haue ynough, howe can I wante? When thou art in weelfare, forget not aduersitie, and when it goeth not wel with thee, haue a good hope, that it shalbe better. For it is but a small thing vnto God, in the day of death to reward every man accordyng to his wayes. The aduersitie of an houre maketh one to forget all pleasure, and when a man dyeth, his woꝝkes are discouered. Maye no bodie before his death, for a man shalbe knowen in his chyldren. Bynge not every man into thine house, for the disceatfull layeth wayte diuerslye. A lyke as a partriche in a maund, so is the hearte of the proude: and lyke as a spyte that looketh vpon the fal of his neighbour. For he turneth good vnto euill, and standeth the chosen. If one sparke is made a great fire (and of one disceatfull man is bloud increased) and an vngodlye man layeth wayte for bloud. Beware of the disceatfull man, for he ymagineth wicked thinges, to brynge thee into a perpetuall shame. If thou takest an aleaunt vnto thee, he shal destroy thee in vnquietnes, and dyue thee from thine owne wayes.

Vhen thou wilt dooe good, knowe to whom thou doest it, and so shalt thou be greatlye thanked for thy benefites. ¶ Doo good vnto the righteous, and thou shalt finde great rewarde, though not of him, yet (no doubte) the Lord him selfe shall rewarde thee. See standeth not in a good case that is alwaye occupied in euill, and getteth no sleep, for the best hateth the sinners and hath mercy vpon them that shew the woꝝkes of repentaunce. Geue thou vnto such as feare God, and receaeue not a sinner. As for the vngodly and sinners, he shall recompence vengeance vnto them, and kepe them to the day of wꝛath. Geue thou vnto the good, and recceue not the sinner: do wel vnto him that is lowly, but geue not to the vngodlye. Let not the bread be geuen him, that he be not mightier the thy selfe therin. For so shalt thou receaeue twyle as muche euill, in all the good that thou doest vnto him. And wherhyest hateth sinners, & shal re-ward vengeance to the vngodly. In prosperitie a frend shal not be knowen and in aduersitie an enemy shal not be hid. For when a man is in wealth it greueth his enemies, but in heynenes and trouble a man shal knowe his frend. Truste neuer thine enemy, for lyke as an yron rusteth, so doth his wickednes. And though he make muche crouching & kneling, yet kepe wel thy mind, & beware of him. Set him not by thee, nether let him sit at thy right hand, least he turne him, get into thy place, take thy rowme & seke thy seat, and so thou at the laste remember my woꝝdes, and be pricked at my saynges. Bind not two synnes together, for there shall not one be unpunished: who will haue pittie of the charmer, that is stinged of the serpent, or of all suche as come npe the beastes. Euen so is it with him that kepeth company with a wicked man, and lappeth him selfe in his synnes. For a season wil he hide with thee, but if thou soble, he tarieth not. An enemy is swete in his lippes, he can make many woꝝdes, and speake much good thinges: yea, he can wepe with his ries, but in his hert he ymagineth how to thꝛow thee into the pit, and yf he may synde oportunitie, he will not be satisfied with bloud. If aduersitye come vpon thee, thou shalt finde him there firste, and though he pretende to doo thee helpe, yet shall he vndermine thee. He shall shake his heade, and clappe his handes ouer thee for very gladnes:

Vho so toucheth pitch, shall be fyled withall, and hee that is familiar with the proude, shall clothe him self with pryde. He taketh a burthen vpon him, that accompani-eth a more honorable man then hym with one that is richer then thy selfe.

How agree the kettle and the pot together: for yf the one be smittē against the other, it shall be broken. The rich dealeth vnrighteouslye, and threate-neth withall, but the pooze being oppressed and wrongefully dealt with-all, suffereth scarcenes, and geueth fair wordes. If thou be for his profite, he bseth thee, but yf thou haue nothing, he shall forsake thee. As long as thou hast any thing of thine owne, he shall be a good fellow with thee, yea he shall make thee a bare man, and not be fory t thee cleane vpon thyse of thyse, and at ceaued and brought down in thy sim-dome, least when thou art broughte lowe, thou be disceaued through foo-lishnes. If thou be called of a mighty man, absente thy selfe, so shall he call thee to him the more ofte. Deceafe not thou vnto him, that thou be not shut out, but go not thou farre off, least he forget thee. Withdawe not thy selfe fro his speche, but belene not his many wordes. For with much communication shall he tempt thee, and with a pryuy mocke shall he question thee of thy secretes. The vnnmercifull mynde of his shall marke thy wordes, he shall not spare to do thee hurte, and to put the in prison. Beware, and take good hede to thy selfe, for thou walkest in perill of thy ouerthrowinge. Note when thou hearest his wordes, make thee as though thou werest in a dyeme and wake vp. Loue God all thy lyfe longe, and call vpon him in thy nerde.

Euery beast loueth his like, euen so let euery man loue his neighbour.
All fleshe will resorte to their lyke, and euery man will keepe companye with such as he is him selfe. But as the wolfe agreeth with the lambe, so doth the vngodly with the righteous.
What felowshipp shoulde an holy man haue with a doge? Howe can the riche and the pooze agree together?
The wilde Ass is the Lyons pray in the wilbernesse, euen so are poze men the meate of the riche. Like as the proude mape not awaye with lowly-nes, euen so doeth the riche abhorre the pooze: If a rich man sal, his fren-des set him vp agayne: but when the pooze faileth, his acquayntaunce forsake him. If a riche man fall into an errour, he hath many helpers, he speaketh proude wordes, and yet men instispe him. But if a pooze manne goo wronge, he is punished: yea though he speake wislye, yet can it haue no place. When the riche man speaketh, euery man holdeth his tongue, and loke what he sayeth, they praye it vnto the cloudes. But yf the pooze man speake, and saye: what fellowe is this? and yf he do amisse, they shall destroy him. Riches are good vnto him that hath no sinne in his conscience, and pouertie is a wicked thing in the mouth of the vngodly. The hart of a manne chaungeth his countenance, whether it be in good or euil. A cher-ful countenance is a token of a good heart, for els it is an harde thinge to knowe the thought.

The xiiij. Chapter.

Blessed is the man, that hath not fallen with the word of his mouth, and is not pricked with the conscience of sinne. Happye is he that hath no beuines in his mind, and is not fallen from his hope. It becometh not a covetous man and a niggard, to be riche, and what shoulde a niggard do with golde? He that with all his carefulnesse heapeth together brighteousnesse, gathereth for other folkes, and another manne shall make good chere with his goodes. He that is wicked vnto him selfe, how shoulde he be good vnto other men? How can suche one haue anye pleasure of his goodes? There is nothinge worse, then when one disfauoureth him selfe, and this is a rewarde of his wickednes. If he do any good, he doeth it not knowinge thereof, and agaynste his will, and at the last he declareth his vngaciousnes. A niggard hath a wicked eye, he turneth away his face, and despiseth his owne soule. A covetous mans eye hath neuer ynoughe in the portion of wickednes, vntill the time that he wither awaye, and haue loste his owne soule. A wicked eye spareth bread, and there is scarcenes vpon his table. My sonne, do good to thy selfe of that thou haste, and geue the Lord his due offerings. Remember that death taryeth not, and howe that the covenant of the graue is shewed vnto thee: for the covenant of this world shall dye the deathe. Do good vnto thy frende before thou dye, and according to thy abilitie reache oute thine hand, and geue vnto the poore. Be not disapointed of the good daye, and let not the portion of the good daye ouerpasse thee. Shalte thou not leaue thy traualles and laboures vnto other men? In the deuoting of the heritage geue and take, and sanctifie thy soule. Worke thou righteounes before thy death, for in the hell there is no meate to finde. All fleshe shall fade awaye like grasse, and like a flourishing leafe in a greene tree. Some growe, some are cast downe, euen so is the generation of al fleshe and blud, one cometh to an end, another is bozne. All transitorye thinges shall faile at the last, and the worker thereof shall goe withall. Every chosen worke shall be iustified, and he that medled withall, shall haue honour therein. Blessed is the manne that keepeth him in wisdom, and exersiseth him selfe in vnderstandinge, and with discretion shall he thinke vpon the foreknowledge of God. Whiche considereth the wayes of wisdom in his heart, hath vnderstanding in her secretes, goeth after her (as one that seeketh her out, and continueth in her wayes. He loketh in at her windows, and hearkeneth at her doores. He taketh his rest beside her house, and fasteneth his stake in her walles. He shall pitche his tente nye vnto her hande, and in his tent shall good thinges rest for euermore. He shall set his children vnder her coueringe, and shall dwell vnder her branches. Vnder her couering shall he be defended from the heat, and in her glozp shall he rest.

The .xv. Chapter.

He that feareth God, will doo good, and who so keepeth the lawe, shall obtayne wisdom. As an honorable mother shall she mete him, and as a birgyn shall she receaue him. With the bread of life, and vnderstanding shall she fede him, and geue him the water of wholsome wisdom to drinke. If he be constant in her, he shall not be moued, and yf he holde him faste by her, hee shall not come to confusion. She shall bringe him to honour among his neighbours, and in the middell of the congregation shall she open his mouth. With the spirite of wisdom and vnderstandinge shall she fill him, and clothe him with the garment of glozp. She shall heape the treasure of myrrh and ioy vpon him, and geue him an everlasting name to heritage. Foolishe men will not take holde vpon her, but such as haue vnderstanding, wil mete her. Foolishe men shall not see her, for she is farre from pryde and disceit. When that go about with lyces, with not remember her, but men of trouth shall be found in her, and shall prosper euen vnto the beholding of God. Playse is not seemely in the mouth of the vngodly, for he is not sente of the Lord. For of God cometh wisdom, and

and the prayse shall stand by the wisdom of God, and shall be plenteous in a faithful mouth, and the Lord shall geue her vnto him. Say not thou: It is the Lords fault that I am gone by, for thou shalt not do the thinge that God hateth. Saye not thou: he hath caused me to do wrong, for he hath no neede of the vngodlye. God hateth all abhominacion of errour, and they that feare God will loue none such. • God made man from the beginninge, and lefte him in the hande of his counsell. He gaue him his commaundementes and preceptes: if thou wilt obserue the commaundementes, and keepe acceptable faithfulness for ever, they shall preserve thee. • He hath set water and fire before thee, reache out thine hande vnto which thou wilt. Before man, is life and death, good and euill, looke what him lyketh, shall be geuen him. For the wisdom of God is greates and mighty in power, and beholdeth all men continually. The eyes of the Lord are vpon them that feare him, and he knoweth all the woorkes of man. He hath commaunded no man to do vngodly, nether hath he geuen any man space to sinne.

Delire not thou in the multitude of vngodly children, and haue no pleasure in them, yf they feare not God. Truste not thou to their life, and regarde not their labours, for one sonne that feareth God is better, then a thousande vngodlye. And better it is for a man to dye with out children, then to leaue behind him such children as are vngodly. For by one that hath vnderstanding, maye a whole cite be vpholden, but though the vngodly be manye, yet shall it be waisted throught them. Manye suche thinges hath mine eye sene, & greater things then these haue I heard with mine eares. • In the congregation of the vngodlye shall a fyre burne, and amonge vnfaithfull people shall the wrath be kindled. • The olde giantes obtayned no grace for their sinnes, whiche were destroyed, trustinge to their owne strength. Nether spared he them amonge whom both whiche was a stranger, but smote them and abhored them, because of the pride of their wordes. He had no pittie vpon them, but destroyed all the people, that were so stout in sinne. • And for so much as he ouersaw not the sixe hundred thousande, that gathered theym selues together in hardness of their heartes, it were maruell if one bringe hardnecked, should be free. • For mercy and wrath is with him: he is both mighty to forgive, and to powere out displeasure. Lyke as his mercy is great, euen so is his punishment also, he iudgeth a man accordinge to his woorkes. The vngodly shall not escape in his spoyle, and the long patience of him that sheweth mercy, shall not byde behinde. All mercy shall make place vnto euery man accordinge to the worthynesse of his woorkes, and after the vnderstanding of his pilgrimage. Saye not thou: I will hide my selfe from God, for who will thinke vpon me from aboue? I shall not be knowen in so great a heape of people, for what is my soule among so many creatures? Behold, the heauen, yea, the heauen of heauens, the deepe, the earth, and all that therein is, shall be moued at his presence: the mountaynes, the hilles, and the foundations of the earth shall shake for feare. When God visiteth them. These thinges doeth no hearte vnderstand, but he vnderstandeth euery heart, and who vnderstandeth his wayes? No man seeth his stopmes, and the mooste parte of his woorkes are secreete. Whoo will declare the woorkes of his righteousness? Who shall be able to abide them? For the couenaunte is farre frome some, and tryinge oute of men is in the ende. He that is humble of hearte, thinketh vpon suche thinges: but an vnwise and erroneous man casteth his minde vnto foolish thinges. My sonne herbi thou vnto me, and learne vnderstandinge, and marke my woordes with thine hert. I wil geue thee a sure doctrine, & playnely shall I instruct thee, (marke (marke my wordes then in thyn heart: for in righteousnes of the spirite doo I speake of the wonders, that God hath shewed among his woorkes from the beginninge. And in the truthe do I shew the knowledge of him.) God hath set his woorkes in good order fro the beginning, and part of them hath he sundred from the other. He hath garnished his woorkes from euery thinge, and their beginninges according to their generations. None of the hindered an other, neyther was anye of them disobedient vnto his woorkes. After this, God looked vpon the earth, and fylled it with his goodes. With al manner of living beastes hath he covered the ground, and they all shall be turned vnto earth agayne.

God shope man of the earth, and made him after his owne ymage, and turned him vnto earth agayne, and cloathed him with his owne strenght. He gaue him the number of daies and certayne time, yea and gaue him power of the thinges that are vpon earth. He made al felles to stand in awe of him, so that he had the dominion of all beastes and fowles. He made out of him an healer like vnto him selfe, and gaue them discretion and tongue, eyes and eares, and a heart to vnderstande, and fylled them with instruction and vnderstandinge. He created for them also the knowledge of the spirite, fylled their hearts with vnderstanding, and shewed them good and euill. He set his eye vpon their heartes, declaring vnto them his great and noble woorkes: that they should prayse his holy name together, reioyce of his wonders, and be telling of his noble actes. Beside this, he gaue them instruction, and the lawe of life for an heretage. He made an everlasting couenaunt with them, and shewed them his righteousnesse and iudgements. They sawe his glory with their eyes, and their eares heard the maiestie of his voyce. And he said vnto them, Beware of all vnrighteous thinges. He gaue every man also a commandemente concerninge his neighbour. Their waies are euer before him, and are not hidde from his eyes. He hath set a ruler vpon every people, but Israel is the Lordes portion. All their woorkes are as the sunne in the sighte of God, and his eyes are alway looking vpon their waies. All their vnrigheteousnesse are manifeste vnto him, and all their wickednesse are open in his sighte. The mercye that a manne sheweth is as it were a purse with him, and the grace that is geuen to man, preserveth him as the apple of an eye. At the laste shall he awake, and rewarde every man vpon his heade, and shall turne them together into the nethermost partes of the earth. But vnto them that will repent, he hath geuen the way of righteousnes. As for suche as be weake, he comforteth them, sustenteth them, & sendeth them the portion of the veritie. Turne then vnto the Lord, forsake thy synnes, make thy prayer before the Lord, doo the lesse offence, turne agayne vnto the Lord, forsake thine vnrigheteousnes, be an utter enemye to abhominacion, learne to knowe the righteousnesse and iudgements of god, stand in the portion y is set forth for thee, and in the prayer of the most hye god: go in the portion of the holpe worlde, with suche as be livinge and geue thanks vnto God. Who will prayse the Lord in the hell: abyde not thou in the error of the vngodly, but geue him thanks before death. As for the deade, thankfulness perserveth from him as noothinge. Geue thou thanks in thy lyfe, yea, whyle thou arte livinge and whole, shalte thou geue thanks and prayse God, and reioyce in his mercy. Howe greates is the louinge kindness of the Lord, and howe mercifull goodnesse vnto suche as tourne vnto him: For all thinges may not be in man: and why? the same of man is not immortall, and hee hath pleasure in the hanitye of wickednesse. What is more cleere then the Sonne?

I laboure

A Labouring man that is geuen vnto dyonhennes, shall not be riche, and he that maketh not much of small thinges, shall fall by little & little. • Wine and women make wise men rennagates, and put men of vnderstanding to reprove, and he that accompanieth adnouterers, shall become a wicked manne. • Whores and woozmes shall haue him to heritage, yea, he shall be set by to a greater example, and his soule shall be rooted out of the number. • He that is hasty to geue credence, is lighte minded, and doeth agaynst him self. • Who so reioyseth in wickednes shall be punished, he that hateth to be reformed, his life shall be shortned, and he that abhorreth babbling of woozdes, quencheth wickednes. • He that offendeth agaynst his owne soule, shall repent it, and he that reioyceth in wickednes shall be punished. • Hearse not a wicked and churlyshe woode twyle, and thou shalt not be hindred. • Shewe thy secretes neyther to frende nor foe, and if thou hast offended, tell it not oute. • For he shall hearken vnto thee and marke thee, and when he findeth opportunitye, he shall hate thee (and so shall he be alwaye about thee). • If thou haste heard a woode against thy neighbour, let it be dead within thee: and be sure, thou shalt haue no harme thereby. • A foole tranapleth with a woode, like as a woman that is payned with bearing of a child. • Like as an arrowe shot in a dogges thighe, so is a woode in a foolles heart. • Tell thy frende his fault, least he be ignorant and saye: I haue not done it, or if he haue spokē, that he do it no more. • Reproue thy neighbour, that he keepe his tongue, and yf he haue spoken, that he say it no more. • Tell thy neighbour his fault, for oft times an offence is made, & geue not credence to euery woode. • A mā falleth somtime with his tongue, but not with his will. • For what is he, that hath not offended in his tongue: geue thy neighbour warning, before thou threaten him, and geue place vnto the lawe of the Lord, The fear of God is all wisdome, and hee that is a rightwise man, keepeth the lawe. As for the doctrine of wickednes, it is no wisdome, and the yudges of sinners is no good vnderstanding, it is but wickednes and abhominatiō and a blaspheming of wisdome. • A simple manne of small vnderstandinge that feareth God, is better then one which hath much wisdome, and transgresseth the lawe of the hiest. • A crafty subtil man can be wise, but he is vnrighteous, and with giftes hee wasteth the open and manifest lawe. • A wicked man can behaue him selfe humblye, and canne duce with his heade, and yet is hee but a disceauer within. • He hideth his face, • and disguiseth it, and because he shoulde not be knowen, hee preuenteth thee. • And though hee be so weake that he can do thee no harme, yet when he maye find opportunitye, he shall doo some euill. • A manne may be knowen by his face, and one that hath vnderstandinge, maye be perceaued by the looke of his countenance. • A mannes garment, laughter, and goinge, declareth what he is.

The .xx. Chapter.

Some man reproveth his neighbour oft times, but not in due season: • Againe some man holdeth his tongue, and hee is wise and discrete. • It is muche better to geue warninge and to reprove, then to beare euill will, for he that knowledgeth him selfe openly, shall be preserved from hurt & destruction. • Like as when a gelded man throughe desire and lust desyleth a mayden, euen so is it with him that vseth violence, and vnrighteousnes in the lawe. • How good a thing is it, a mā that is reprovued, to shew openly his repēitance, for so shalt thou escape wilfull sinne. • Some man kepeth silence, and is found wise, but he that is not ashamed what he sayth, is hatefull. • Some man holdeth his tongue, because he hath not the vnderstandinge of the language, and some man kepeth silence, waiting a consequence.

The Booke

Ecl. 3. 8. convenient time. • A wise man will holde his tonge til he see oportunitie, but a wanton and vndiscrete bodie shall regarde no time. He that bleseth many woordes, shall hurte his owne soule: and he that taketh auctoritie vpon him vnrighteouslie, shall be hated. Some man hath ofte times prosperitie in wicked thinges. A gayne some man getteth muche, and hath harme and losse. There is some gifte that is nothing worth: A gayne there is some gifte whose rewarde is double. Some man getteth a sal for being to proude, and some cometh to ship from losse estate. Some man buyeth muche for a litle price, and muste paye for it seuen folde. • A wise man with his woordes maketh him selfe to be loued, but the fauoure of fooles shall be poured out: the gifte of the vnwise shall do thee no good, for his eyes are seuen folde. • He shall geue litle, and say he gaue much: he openeth his mouth and cryeth out, as it were one that cryeth out wine. • To daye he leueth, to morowe asketh he agayn, and suche a man is to be hated. • He foole sayeth: I haue no frende, I haue no thanke for al my good dedes: yea, euen they that eat my bread, speake no good of me. • How oft, & of how many shall hee be laughed to scozne? • He taketh a more perillous sal by such woordes, the yf he fell vpon the grounde: euen so shall the sal of wicked men come haste-lye. In the mouth of him that is vntaught, are many vncouenient and vnnete woordes. A wise sentence shall not be alosed at the mouth of a foole, for he speaketh it not in due season.

Ecl. 6. 2

Some man sinneth not, because hee hath not wherewithall, and in his rest hee shall be stinged. Some man there is that destroyeth his owne soule with shame, and for an vnwise bodys sake destroyeth he it, and with acceptyng persons shall he vndo him selfe. Some man prouisseth his frend a gift for very shame, and getteth an enemy of him for naughte. A lye is a wicked shame in a man, yet shall it be euer in the mouth of the vnwise, • these is better, then a man that is accustomed to lye, but they bothe shall haue destruction to heritage. • The conditions of lyers are vn honest, and their shame is euer with them. A wise man shall bring him selfe to honoure with his woordes, and hee that hath vnderstanding, shall be set by amonge great men. • He that tilleth his lande shall encrease his heape of corne: hee that woorketh righteousnesse, shall be exalted, and he that pleaseeth gret men shall escape muche euill. • Rewarden and giftes blind the eyes of the wise, and made him domme, that he cannot tell men their fautes. • Wisdome that is hid, and treasure that is hoarded by, what profite is in them bothe? Better is he that keepeth his ignoraunce secret, then a man that hideth his wisdom.

The. xxi. Chapter.

Mylonne, yf thou hast sinned, do it no more: but praye for thy forgesinnes: that they may be forgiven thee. Flee from sin, euen as from a serpent: for yf thou comest to nigher her, she will bite thee. • The teeth therof are as the teeth of a lion to sleie the soules of menne. • The wickednes of man is as a sharp two edged sword, which maketh such woundes that they cannot be heale. • Strife and wrongeous dealing shall waste awaye a mannes goodes, and through pryde a riche house shall be broughte to naughte: so the riches of the proude shall be rooted oute. • The prayer of a poore goeth out of a mouth, and cometh vnto the eares of God, and his vengeance (or defence) shall come, and that hastely. • who so hateth to be reformed, it is a token of an vngodly person: but he that fereth God will remember him selfe. • A mightie man is knowen a far off by his tonge, but he that hath vnderstanding, perceaueth that he shall haue a fall. • who so buildeth his house with other mens cost, is like one that gathereth stones in winter. • • The congregation of the vngodly is like stubble gathered together, their ende is a flame of fire.

The way of the vngodly is set with bones, but in their ende is hell, darkenes, and paynes. He that keepeth the lawe, wil hold fast the vnderstanding therof, and the end of the feare of God is wisdome and vnderstanding. He that is not wise, will not be taughte in good: but the vnwise man abouteth in wickednes, and where bitternes is, there is no vnderstandinge.

The knowledge of the wise, shal flow like water that runneth ouer, and his counsel is like a fountaine of life. The heart of a foole is like a broken vessell, he can kepe no wisdome. When a man of vnderstanding heareth a wise word, he shall commend it, and make much of it. But yf a voluptuous man heare it, he shal haue no pleasure therin, but cast it behinde his backe. The talking of a foole is lyke an heauye burthen by the waye: but to heare a wise man speke, it is a pleasure. Where about is in the congregation, it is ascribed at the mouth of the wise, and they shall ponder his wordes in their herts.

Like as is a house that is destroyed, euen so is wisdome vnto a foole. As for the knowledge of the vnwise, it is but darke wordes. Doctrine is vnto him that hath no vnderstanding, euen as letters aboute his feete, and lyke manicles vpon his righte hande.

A foole listeth vp his voyce with laughter, but a wise man shall scarce laugh secretly. Learning is vnto a wise man a Jewell of gold, and like an armelette vpon his right arme. A foolish mans foote is sone in his neighbours house, but one that hath experience, shall be ashamed at the person of the mightie.
A foole will peepe in at the window into the house, but he that is wel nurtured, will stande without. A foolish man standeth harkening at the doore, but he that is wise, will be ashamed.

The lippes of the vnwise wil be tel-linge foolish things, but the wordes of such as haue vnderstanding, shall be weied in the balance. The heart of fools is in their mouth, but the mouth of the wise is in their heart. When the vngodly curseth the blasphemer, he curseth his owne soule. A pryncie accuser of other men, shall despyle his owne soule, & be hated of every man: (but he that kepeth his tongue, and is discrete, shall come to honour.)

¶ The xxij. Chapter.

A slouthfull bodye is moulded of a stone of claye, and every manne will speake to his dis-praise. A slouthfull bodye is made of the donge of oxen, and every one that toucheth him, muste walhe his hands agayne. A misnurtured sonne is the dishonour of the father. A foolish daughter shall be little regarded. A wyfe daughter is an heritage vnto her husbande: but she that cometh to dishonestie, bringeth her father in heuines.
A daughter that is past shame, dishonoareth both her father & her husbando: the vngodly shal regarde her, but they both shall despise her. The playng of Musike is not mete where heauynesse is, euen so is the correction and doctrine of wisdome, euer vnplea-saunt vnto fooles. Who so teacheth a foole, is euen as one that gleweth a potsharde together: as one that telleth a tale to him that heareth him not, and as one that rayseth a man out of an heuy slepe. Who so telleth a foole of wysedome, is euen as a man, whiche speaketh to one that is a slepe. Whē he hath told his tale, he saith: what is the matter? When one dyeth, lamentation is made for him, because the light sayleth him: euen so let men mourne ouer a fool, for he wanteth vnderstanding.
Make but litle weeping, because of the dead, for he is come to resse, but the lyfe of the foole is worse thenne the death. Seuen daies do men mourn for him that is dead, but the lamentation ouer the vnwise and vngodly shoulde endure all the dayes of their lyfe.

¶ Take not much with a foole, and go not with him that hath no vnderstanding. Beware of him, lest it turne thes to trauayle, and thou shalte not be de-spyled with his sinne. Depart from him, and thou shalte fynde resse, and shalt not be drawen back into his foo-lishnes, what is heavier then lead?

¶ Ant

And what should a foole be called els but leader. • Hande, salte, and a lumpe of yron is easer to beate then an vn-wylle, foolishe, and vngodly man. Like as the band of woodde bound together in the foundation of the house can not be loosed: euen so is it with the heart that is stablished in the thoughte of councell. The thoughte of the wyse shall neyther feare, nor be offended at any time. Aske as a fayre playstere wall in a winter house, and an high bapding, maye not abyde the wynde and foyne: euen so is a foolles heart afrayde in his imagination, he feareth at euery thing, and can not endure. (A swaering hearte in the ymagination of a foole will not euer stand in awe, he that abideth in the commaundemen-tes of God, will alway feare.) He that nyppeth a mans eye, byngeth forth teares, and he that pricketh the heart, byngeth forth the mening & thought.
Who so casteth a stoane at the bydes, frayeth them away: and he that blasphemeth his frend, byketh the frendship: though thou drawest a swearde at thy frend, yet despaye not, for thou maiest come againe to thy frend. If he speake so wysely, feare not, for ye maye be agreed together againe: except it be that thou blasphemeth him, disdayne him, open his secretes, and wounde him trayterously, for all suche thinges shall dye awaye a frende. Be fayth-full vnto thy neighbour in his pover-tie, that thou maiest reioyce with him also in his prosperitie. Abye stedefast vnto him in the time of his trouble, that thou maiest be heyre with him in his heritage. Like as the vapour and smoke goeth out at the ouen befoze the fyre, euen so euill wordes, rebukes and threatninges go befoze bloodshedding.
Be not ashamed to defende thy frend: as for me, I will not hyde my face from him, though he shoulde doo me harne. Who so euer heareth it, shall beware of him. • Who shall sette a swatche befoze my mouth, and a sure scale vppon my lippes, that I fall not with theym, and that my tongue destroy me not.

Ps. 141

The xxij. Chapter.

Lord, father and gouernour of my life, leue me not in their imagination and counsel. Wh let me not fall in suche reproche. Who will kepe my thought with the scourge and the doctrine of wisdom in mine heart: that he spare not mine ignorance, that I fall not with them, lest mine ignoraunces increase, that mine offences be not many in number, and that my sinnes exceede not, lest I fall befoze mine enemies, and so my aduer-sarie reioyce. O Lord, thou father and God of my life, leaue me not in their imagination. O lette me not haue a proude looke, but turne away all de-luptuousnes from me. Take from me the lustres of the body, let not the desyes of vncleennes take holde vpon me, and geue me not ouer into an vnchastite and obstinate mind. Heare me (O ye chylzen) I will geue you a doctrine howe ye shall order your mouth: who so kepeth it, shall not perishe thowse his lippes, nor be hurte thowse witked woordes. As for the synner, he shall be taken in his owne vanitie, he that is proude and cursed, shall fall therin. • Let not thy mouth be accused with swearing, for in it there are many failes. Let not the naming of God be continually in thy mouth: (and meddle not with the names of saintes, for thou shalt not be excused of them) for like as a seruaunt which is ofte punished, can not be without some soze, euen so whatsoeuer he be, that sweareth, and nameth God, shall not be cleane purged from synne. A man that bseth much swearing, shall be fylled with wickednesse, and the plague shall neuer go from his house.
If he beguyle his brother, his familie shalbe vpon him: if he knowledg not his synne, he maketh a double offence, and if he sweare in bayne, he shal not be found righteous, for his house shall bee full of plague. • The woordes of the swearer byngeth death.
(God graunte it be not founde in the house of Iacob.) But they that feare God, eschew al such, and lye not with synning

Eph. 5. trying in sinne. • Use not thy mouth so vn honest and fylthie talking, for in it is the woꝛde of synne. Remember thy father and thy mother when thou art set among great men: lest God soz-get thee in their sight, and lest thou do ting in thy custome, suffer rebuke, and wylthe not to haue bene doꝛne, and so an. 16 b curse the daye of thy natiuitie. • The man that is accustomed with the woꝛ-des of blasphemie, will neuer be re-fourmed all the dayes of his lyfe. To sinne twise is to muche, but the thirde D bringeth wꝛath and destruction. In hote stomacke cannot be quenched (euen lyke a burning fyre) till it haue swallowed by somethinge: euen so an vnchast man hath no rest in his flesh, till he haue kyndled a fyre. If bread is swete to an whor monger, he will not leane of, till he haue his purpose. A man that breaketh wedlocke, and regardeyth not his soule, but sayeth: • an. 29 a Cushe, who seeth me? I am compassed about with darkenes, the walles couer me, no body seeth me: who nede I to feare? The hyest will not remember my synnes. He vnderstandeth not that his eyes see all thinges, for all sache feare of men driueth a waye the feare of God from him: for he feareth onely the eyes of men, and considereth not that the eyes of the Loꝛde are clearer then the sunne, beholding all the wayes of men and the ground of the depe, and loking euen to mens heries in secrete places. The Loꝛde God knewe all thinges oz etur they wer: made, and after they be brought to passe also he loketh vpon them all.
an. 20 b • The same man shalbe openly punian. 22 b shed in the stretes of the cite, and shal be chased abroade lyke a ponge hoꝛse foale, and when he thinketh least bypon it, he shalbe taken. Cushe shal he be put to shame of every man, because he would not vnderstande the feare of the Loꝛde. And thus shal it goo also with every wyfe, that leueth her husbande, and getteth enheritaunce by a strange maryage. • Fyfte, she hath bene vnfaithfull vnto the lawe of the Lorde. Seconde, she hath forsaken her owne husband. Thirde, she hath played the whoꝛe in aduoutrie, & gotten her childꝛen by another man. She shal be brought out of the congregation, and her childꝛen shalbe lothed bypon. Her childꝛen shal not take rote: as for fruite, her brāunches shal byng foorth none. A shamefull repozte shal she leaue behinde her, and her disho-noure shal not be put out. And they that remayne, shal knowe, that there is nothing better, then the feare of God: and that there is nothing swe-ter then to take hede vnto the commaundementes of the Loꝛde. A great woꝛ-ship is it to folow the Loꝛde, for longe lyfe shalbe receaued of him.

The .xxiij. Chapter.

V Wisdome shall praise her selfe, & and be honoured in God, and reioyce in the middelt of his people: In the congregations of the hyest shal she open her mouth, and triumphe in the beholding of his power.
In the middelt of her people shal she be exalted, and wondꝛed at in the holy sunnelle. In the multitude of the chosen she shalbe commended, and among sache as be blessed she shalbe praysed, and shal saye: I am come out of the mouth of the hyest, fyrst boꝛne befoꝛe al creatures. I caused the light that sai-leth not to arise in y^e heauen, & couered all the earth as a cloud. My dwelling is aboue in the height, and my seate in the pyller of the cloude. I my selfe alone haue gone round about the compasse of heauen, and pearsed the ground of the deepe: I haue walked in the floudes of the sea, and haue stande in all landes: my dominion is in every people and in every nation, and with my power haue I troden downe the herthes of all, both hye and lowe. In al these thinges also I sought reste, and a dwelling in some enheritaunce. So the Creatour of all thinges gaue me commaundement: and he that made me: appoynted me a tabernacle, and sayde vnto me: Let thy dwelling be in Iacob, and thine inheritaunce in ffell. i. Israel,

The booke

Exo. 3. c Israel, & rote thy selfe among my chosen. • I was created from the beginning, and besoze the woorld, and shall not leaue of vnto the woorld to come.

Exo. 3. 18 • In the holy habitation haue I ser-Psal. 132 ued besoze him, and so was I stabi-shed in Syon. In the holpe citie rested I in lyke maner: and in Ierusalem was my power. I tooke roote in an honozable people, cuen in the portion of the Loyde, and in his heritage, and kept me in the fulnes of the sain-tes. I am set vp an hpe lyke a Cedar vpon Libanus, and as a Cypres tree vpon the mount Hermon. I am exalted lyke a palme tree in Cadex, and as a rose plant in Iericho. As a saype Olive tree in the fiede, and am exalted lyke a plantayne tree by the water syde. I haue geuen a smell in the C stetes, as the Cynamon and Balme, that hath so good a sauoure: yea, a swete odour haue I geuen as it were Myrr of the best. I haue made my dwellings to smell as it were of Rosyn, Galbanum, of Cloves, and inscense, and as Libanus when it is not heuened downe, and myne odour is as the pure Balme. As the Cerebinte haue I stretched oute my bzaunches and my bzaunches are the bzaunches of honour and louing sauour.

Joh. 14. a • As the vyne haue I brought forth fruite of a swete sauour, and my floures are the fruite of honour and ryches. I am the mother of bewtie, of loue, of feare, Joh. 14. a of knowledge, and of holy hope. • In me is al grace of life and truth. In me is all hope of life and vertue. Come vnto me all ye that be despyous of me, and fill your selues with my frutes, for my spirite is sweeter then hony, and so is my inheritaunce moze then the hony combe: the remembraunce of me endureth for euermoze. They that sate me, shall haue the moze hunger, and they that drinke me, shall thirste the moze. Who so herkeneth vnto me, shall not come to confusion: and they that woork in me, shall not offende.
They that make me to be knowne, shall haue euerlasting lyfe, the con-sement of the hiest, and the knowledges of the truth. • Moyses commended the lawe in the preceptes of righte-ousnes for an heritage vnto the house of Jacob, and committed the promise vnto Israel. • (Out of Dauid by seruant he ordeined and rayed vp a most mightie king, spitting in the seate of honour for euermoze.) This spileth with wisdom lyke as the flood of Egipt, when the newe frutes are a growing. • This bringeth a plenteous vnderstanding like Euphrates: and spileth it vp, as Iordan in the tyme of haruest. This maketh noueltie to brenke forth as the lighte, and as the water of Gion in the haruest. The first hath not knowen her perfectiye, no moze shall the laste seeke oute the ground of her. For her thought is full er then the sea, and her counsel is pro-founder then the great derpe. I wis-dome haue caste out floudes. I am as a great water brooke out of the ryuer.

I am as the ryuer Doxir, and as a water condite am I come out of the garden of pleasure. I sayde: I will water the garden of my yong plantes, and fill the fruite of my bytch: Samp water brooke became exceeding great, and my ryuer appoched vnto the sea.
For I make doctrine to be vnto all men as lyght as the saype morning, and I shall make it to be ener the cle-rer. I will pearle throught al the lower partes of the earth. I will loke vpon all suche as be aslepe, and lighten all them that put their truste in the Loyd. I shall yet poure out doctrine, lyke as prophetic, and leaue it vnto such as seeke after wisdom, and their generations shall I neuer sayle, vnto the holy euerlasting woild. • Behold, howe that I haue not laboured for my selfe onely, but for all them that seeke after the truth.

The xxb. Chapter.

Three thinges there are, that my spirit sauoureth, which be also allowed besoze God and ma. • The vnitie of bytchen, and the Eccl. 40. d. Ioue of neighbours. a man and wife that agree well together. Thre thin-ges there be whiche my soule hateth, ¶ I biterly abhorre the life of the. A pooze man that is proude. A rich man Gen. 13b that is a liar. ¶ an old body that doteth, and is vnchast. If thou hast gathered nothinge in thy yowthe, what wilt thou finde then in thine age? O howe pleasant a thinge is it, when grape headed menne are discrete, and when the elders can geue good coun-cell: O howe comely a thinge is wifdome vnto aged men: yea, vnderstanding and counsell is a glorious thing.

The crowne of olde men is to haue much experience, and the feare of God is their worship. There be nine thin-ges which I haue iudged in my heart to be happye, and the tenth will I tel forth vnto men with my tong. A man that while hee lyueth, hath ioye of his chyldren, and seeth the fall of his e-nemyes. Well is him that dwelleth with an houswife of vnderstanding, Gen. 19. c. and that hath not fallen with his tonge, and that hath not bene sayne to serue such as are vnmete for him. Wel is him: that findeth a faithfull frende, and well is him whiche talketh of wisdom to an eare that heareth him.
O howe greates is hee that fyndeth wisdom and knowledge? Yet is he not aboue him, that feareth the Lord.
The feare of God hath set it selfe aboue al thinges. Blessed is the man vnto whome it is graunted to haue the feare of God. Vnto whom shall he be likened, that kepeth it fast? The care of God is the beginning of his loue, and the beginning of fayth is to cleaue fast vnto it. The heynesse of the heart is all the punishment, and the wickednes of a woman goeth aboue all. All punishment and plage is nothing in comparison of the plage of the heart, euen so al wickednes is nothing to the wickednes of a woman.
Whatsoeuer happeneth vnto a man is nothing in comparition of it, that his euill willers do vnto him: and all vngainance is nothing to the vengeance of the conuynce. There is not a more wicked heade then the heade of the serpente, and there is no wozath aboue the wozath of a woman. I will rather dwell with a tyon and dragon, then to keepe house with a wicked wife. The wickednesse of a woman chaungeth her face, shee shall mouffe her countenance as it were a Were, and as a sacke shall she be w it among the neighbours. Her husbände is brought to shame amonge his neighbours, and when he heareth it, it ma-keth him to sighe. All wickednes is but litle to the wickednes of a woman, the portion of the vngodly shall fall vppon her. Like as to climbe vps sandy way is to the feete of the aged, euen so is a wife full of wozdes to a still quiet man. Loke not to narrowly vpon the besyrt of a woman, lest thou be prouoked in desyre towarde her.

The wozath of a woman is dishonour and greates confusion. If a woman get the masterye, then is she contrarye to her husbände. A wicked wife ma-keth a sorpe hearte, an heauy countenance and a dead woord. Weake han-des and feeble knees is a woman that her husbände is not the better for. Of the woman came the beginnynge of synne, and throught her we al ar dead.
Geue thy water no passage, no not a lyttle, neyther geue a wicked woman her will. If she walke not after thy hande, she shall confounde thee in the sight of thy enemyes. Cut her off then from thy fleshe, that she do not alwaye abuse thee.

The xxvi. Chapter.

Happy is the man that hath a vertuous wife, for the nuber of his yerres shalbe double. An honest woman maketh her husbände a ioyfull man, and she shall fill the yerres of his life in peace. A vertuous woman is a noble gift, which shalbe geuen for a good portion vnto such as feare God: whether a man be riche or pooze, he may haue euer a mery heart, and a cheerefull countenance.

There be thre thinges that my hert feareth, and my face is aſtrayde of the fourth. Treason in a citie, a ſedicious people, and noysome tonges, all theſe are heauyer then deathe. But when one is gelous ouer his wiſe, it bringeth payne and ſorowe vnto the hert. and a woman that telleth out al thinges, is a ſcourge of the tongue. When one hath an euill wyſe, it is euen as when an vnlike payze of oxen muſte

W of a woman may be knowen in the pryde of her eyes and eye liddes. • If thy daughter bee not ſhamefaſt, holde her ſtraytly, leaſt ſhe abuſe her ſelfe thorough ouer muche libertie. Beware of all the diſhoneſtie of her eyes, and maruel not if ſhe do agaynſt thee. Like as one that goeth by the waye and is thirſtie, ſo ſhall ſhee open her mouth and drinke of euery nexte water that ſhe may get. By euery hedge ſhal ſhe ſit her downe, and open her quiver agaynſt euery arowe. A louing wyſe reioyceth her huſband, and ſedeth his bones with her wiſedome. A woman of fewe wordes is a gift of God, and to all well nurtured mindes may no thinge be compared. An honeſt and manerly woman is a gift aboue other giſtes, and there is no wight to bee compared vnto a minde that can rule it ſelfe.

E Like as the Sunne when it ariſeth, is an ornament in the hie heauen of the Lord, ſo is a vertuous wiſe the beſt of all her houſe. Like as the clere light is vpon the holpe candleſticke, ſo is the beſt of the face vpon an honeſt bodie. • Like as the golden pillers are vpon the ſockettes of ſiluer, ſo are the fayre legges vpon a woman that hath a conſtant minde.

D Perpetuall are the foundations that be layed vpon a whole ſtony rocke, ſo are the commaundementes of God vpon the heart of an holy woman. There be two thinges that grieve my hert, and in the thirde is a diſpleaſure come vpon me. When an experte man of warre ſuffereth ſcarlenes and pueritie. When men of vnderſtanding and wiſdome are not ſet by: And whē one departeth from righteousnes vnto ſinne. Who ſo doth ſuche, the Lord hath prepared him vnto the ſwearde. There be two maner of thinges, whiche me thinke to be harde and perilous. A marchaunte cannot lightly kepe him from wrong, nether a tanner him ſelfe from ſinne.

The .xxvij. Chapter.

Beaue of pouerty haue manye one offended: and he that ſeeketh to be riche, turneth his eyes aſyde. Like as a naye in the wall ſticketh faſte betwixte two ſtones, euen ſo doth ſinne ſticke betwixt the byer and the ſeller. If he hold him not diligent ly in the feare of the Lord, his houſe ſhall ſoone bee onerthrowen. Like as when one ſitteth, the filthynes remaineth in the ſiene: So remaineth there ſome vncleane thinge in the thought of manne. The onen proueth the potters beſſell, • ſo doeth temptation of ſhadow trouble trye righteous menne. • The tree of the ſield is knowen by his fruit, ſo is the thought of a mān heart knowen by his wordes. Prayle no man except thou haue hearde him: for a man is knowen by his wordes. If thou ſoloſweſt righteousneſſe, thou ſhalt get her, and put her vpon thee as a fayre garment. And thou ſhalt dwell with her, and ſhe ſhal defend thee for euer, and in the daye of knowledge thou ſhalte finde ſtedfaſtneſſe. The byrdes reſorte vnto their like, ſo doth the trueth tourne vnto them that be occupied withal. The lyon wayeth the praye, ſo do the ſinners lurke vpon the workers of wickednes. The talkinge of him that feareth God, is nothing but wiſedome: as for a ſoule he chaungeth as the Moone. If thou be amonge the vndiscrete, keepe thy wordes vntill a conuenient time, but amonge ſuche as be wiſe, ſpeake out hardily. deth no frend after his will. None thy frende, and binde thy selfe in faithfulnes with him: but yf thou beswapest his secretes, thou shalt not get hym agayne. For like as the man is, that destroperh his enemye, so is he also that dealeth falsely in the frendship of his neighbour. Like as one that letteth a byrde go out of his hande, can not take her agayne. Euen so thou, yf thou geue our thy frende, thou canst not gette him agayne. Yea, thou canst not come by him, for he is so farre off. He is vnto thee as a Roe escaped out of the snare, for his soule is wounded. As for woundes, they may be bounde by agayne, and an euill worde may be reconciled: but who so beswapesth the secretes of a frende, there is no more hope to be hadde vnto him. • He that winketh with his eyes, ymagineth some euill, and no man shall take him from it. When thou art present, he shall highly commend and prayse thy wor-des, but at the last he shall tourne his tale, and sciaunder thy saying. Many thinges haue I hated, but nothing so euill, for the Lord him selfe also abhorreth suche a one. Who so casteth a stone on hye, it shall fall vpon his own heade: and he that smiteth with gyle woundeth him selfe. • Who so diggeth a pit shall fall therein (and he that laiceth a stone in his neighbours waye, shall stumble thereon) and he that layeth a snare for another, shall be taken in it that seeketh vengeance, shall synde vengeance of the Lord, which shall surely kepe him his synnes. • Forgeue thy neybour the hurte that he hath done thee, and so shall thy synnes be forgiven thee also, when thou prayest. I manne that beareth hatred agaynst another, howe dare he desire forgiveness of God? He that sheweth no mercy to a man whiche is lyke him selfe, howe darre he aske forgiveness of his synnes? If he that is but fleshe, beareth hatred and kepeth it, who will intreate for his synnes? Remember the ende, and let enmity passe, which seeketh death and destruction, and abide thou in the commaundementes. Remember the commaundementes, so shalt thou not be rigorous ouer thy neighbour. Thinke vpon the coneuant of the best, and forgeue thy neighbours ignorance.

• Beware of stryfe, and thou shalt make thy synnes fewe. For an angrie man kyndleth variaunce, and the vngodly disquieteth frendes, and putteth disorde among them that be at peace.

• The more wodge there is, the more beheiment is the fyre: and the mightier that menne be, the greater is the wrath: and the longer the strife endureth, the more it burneth. In halfe brawling kyndleth a fyre, and an angry strife sheddeth bloud. A tonge also that beareth false witness, kyndeth death. If thou blow the sparke, it shall burne. If thou spit vpon it, it shall go forth, and both these out of the mouth.

• The slaunderer and double tonged is cursed, for many one that be fren-des setteth he at variaunce. The third tonge hath disquieted many one, and dyuen them from one lande to another. Strong cities of the ryche hath it broken down, and ouerthrowen the houses of great men. (The strength of the people hath it brought downe, and ben the decay of mighty nations) The third tonge hath cast out many an honest woman, and robbed them of their labours. Who so herkeneth vnto such shall neuer synd rest, and neuer dwell safely. The stroke of the rod maketh edders, but the stroke of the tong smiteth the bones in sander. Ther be many that haue perished with the sword but many mo through the tonge. Well is him that is kept from an euill tong, and commeth not in the anger therof, which draweth not the poke of suche, and is not bounde in the bandes of it. For the poke therof is of yron, and the bande of it of stele. The death therof is a very euill death: hell were better for one, then such a tonge. But the fire of it may not oppresse them that feare God, and the flame thereof may not burne them. Such as forsake the Lord shall fall therin, and it shall burne the, and no man shall be able to quenche it. It shall fall vpon them as a Lion: and deuour them as a leopard. Thou hedgest thy goodes with thornes: why dost thou not rather make dozes and barres for thy mouth? Thou wepest thy golde and spluer: why dost thou not wepe thy wordes also vpon thy balance? Beware, that thou slyde not in thy tonge, and so fall before thine enemies, that lay waite for thee, (and thy fall be incurable, eue vnto death.)

The xxix. Chapter.

V Who so wil shewe mercy: let him lend vnto his neighbour: & he that is able, let him kepe the commaundement. Lende vnto thy neighbour in time of his nede, & pay thou thy neighbour agayne in due season, Kepe thy worde, and deale faithfully with him, and thou shalt alway synde the thinge that is necessarie for thee. There haue bene many, that when a thing was lent them, rekened it to be sounde, and made them trasnable and labour, that had helped them. Whyle they receaue any thing, they kille the handes of such as geue them, and for their neighbours good they humble their boyce. But when they shoulde paye agayne, they kepe it backe, and geue euill wordes, and make many excuses by reason of the time; and though he be able, yet getteth he scarce the halfe agayne, and recheneth the other to be found. And yf he withholde not his money, yet hath he an enemy of him, and that vnderferued. He payth him with cursing and rebuke, and geueth him euill wordes for his good dede. There be many one which are not glad for to lende, not because of euill, but they feare to lese the thinge that they lend. Yet haue thou patience with the simple, & withholde not thy mercy from him. Helpe the poore for the commaundements sake, and let him not go emptye from thee, because of his necessitie. Lese thy money for thy brother and neighbours sake, and burpe it not vnder a stone, where it rusteth and corrupteth. Gather thy treasure after the commaundement of the Highest, and so shall it bringe thee moze profyte then golde. Lay by the almes in the hande of the poore, and it shall kepe thee from all euill. A mans almes is as a purse with him, and shall kepe a mans fauoure as the apple of an eye: and after ward shall it arise and paye euery man his rewarde vpon his heade. It shall fight for thee agaynst thyne enemies, better then the shield of a gyant or speare of the mightie. A good honest man is suretie for his neyghbour, but a wicked person letteth him come to shame. Forget not the frendship of thy suertie, for he hath geuen his soule for thee. The vngodly despiseth the good dede of his suertie, and the vnthankfull and ignorant leaueth his suertie in danger. Some man promiseth for his neyghboure: and when he hath losse his benefite, he shall forsake him. Suertieshippe hath destroyed many a ryche man, and remoued them as the swanes in the sea. Mightie people hath it byguen awaye, and caused them to swander in straunge countreys. In vngodly man transgressing the commaundemente of the Lord, shall fall into an euill suerteship: and though he force him selfe to gette out, yet shall he fall into iudgement. Helpe thy neyghboure out after thy power, and

 What thinge created is worse then a wicked eye: therfore wepeth it before euery mans face: Lape not thine hand vpon euery thing that thine eye seeth,

 Wonder by thy self what thy neighbour woulde sayne haue, and be discrete in euery poynt. Eate the thinge that is set before thee manerly, as it becometh a man, and eate not to much, least thou be abhorred. Leane thou off firste of all, because of nourtoure, least thou be he, whom no man may satisfy which may turne to thy decay. When thou sittest among many men, reache

A sweete wholesome sleepe shall such

 But an vn-satiabie eater sleperth vn-body. If thou feellest that thou haste eaten to much, arise, go thy way, cast it out of thy stomack, & take thy rest, and it shall ease thee, so that thou shalt bring no sickness vnto thy bodye. My sonne, heare me, and despise me not: and at the laske thou shalt finde as I haue tolde thee. In all thy woorkes be diligente and quicke, so shall there no sickness happen vpon thee. Who so is liberall in dealing out his meate, many men shall blesse him, and prayse him with their lippes, and the same is a sure token of his loue and saythfulnesse. But he that is vn-saythfull in meat, the whole citie shall complayne of him, and that is a sure experience of his infidelitie and wickednes. Be not thou a wine bibber, for wine hath destroyed many a man. The fyre pro-ueth the hard yron, euen so doth wine proue the hartes of the proude, when they be dronken. Wine soberly dronken, quickeneth the life of man. If thou drinke it mesurably, thou shalt be temperate. What life is it, that may continue without wine? (What taketh away the life: euen death.) Wine was made from the beginninge to make men glad, and not for dronkennes. Wine mesurably dronken is a reioyng of the soule and bodye. (A mesurable drinking is health to soul and bodye.) But if it be dronken with excelle, it maketh bitternes and sor-rowe vnto the minde. Drunkenesse filleth the minde of the foolish with shame and ruine, minisheth the strengthe, and maketh woundes.

 Rebuke not thy neighbour at the wyne, and despise him not in his mirth. Geue him no despitefull wo-right well. Hinder not musike.

Speake not, where there is no audi-there take thy pastime, and do what thou wilt: so that thou doo no euill, goue thanks, vnto him that hath Made thee, and replenished thee with his goodes. Who so feareth the Lord, will receaue his doctrine, and they that get theym to him betimes, shall shall be filled withall. If for him that is but sayned, he wil be offended ther-at. They that feare the Lord shall finde the iudgement, and their righteousnes shall be kindled as a light. A vngodly man will not be reformed, but can helpe himselfe with the example of other in his purpose. A man of vnderstanding despiseth no good coun-cell: but a wild and proude body hath no feare. (Yea, euen when he hath dealt rashely with another man, but his owne doings shall be his rebuke.) My sonne, do nothinge without aduiselement, so shall it not repent thee after the dede. Go not in the way wher thou mayest fall, nor wher thou mayest stumble agaynst the stone. Gene not thy selfe into a laborious slippery way, and beware of thine owne children, (and take hede of them that be of thine owne householde.) In all thy wozkes put thy truste in God, from thy whole hearte, for that is the keeping of the commaundementes. Who so beleueth Gods woꝛde, taketh hede to the commaundementes: and he that putteth his truste in the Lord, shall want nothing.

The xxxij. Chapter.

There shall no euill happen vnto him that feareth God: but when he is in temptation, the Lord shall deliuer him, and kepe him from euill. A wise man hateth not the lawe, but an ypocryte is as a shippe in raging water. A man of vnderstanding geueth credence vnto the lawe of God, and the lawe is saythfull vnto him. Be sure of the matter, then talke therof. Be firste well instructe, then mayest thou geue aunswer. The hert of the foolishhe is like a cartwhele, and his thoughtes runne aboute like the axell tree. Lyke as a wilde horse that nepeth vnder currye one that sitteth vpon him, so is it with a scozefull frende. Why doeth one day excell another, seinge all the dayes of the yere come of the Sunne? The wisdom of the Lord hath separated theym a sun-

The soder, the whip, and the burthen belongeth vnto the Mee: Heat, correction, and wozyke vnto the seruant. If thou set thy seruaut to labour, thou shalt fynde rest. But if thou lette him go ydle, he shall seke libertie. He poked and the whip bove downe the harde necke, but tame thou thy euill seruant with bondes and correction. Sende him to labour, that he go not ydle. For ydlenes bringeth much euill. Set him to wozyke, for that belongeth vnto him, and becommeth him well. If he be not obedient, bynd his feete; but do not to miche vnto him in anye wyse, and without discretion do nothinge. • If thou haue a faythfull seruaut lette him be vnto thee as thyne owne soule: (intreate him as a brother: (for in bloud haste thou gotten him. If thou haue a seruante, holde him as thy selfe, for thou hast nede of him as of thy self. If thou intrestest him euill, and kepest him harde, and makest him to be proude and to renne away from thee, thou cannest not tell what way thou shalt seke him.

The xxxiij. Chapter.

Ecc. 4. d. V A wise people begyle theym selues with vayne and deceitfull hope, and foolles trust in dreames. Who so regardeth dreames, is lyke him that will take holde of a shadowe, and folowe after the wind: Euen so is it with the appearinges of dreames. Befoze the face is the likeness of a face. Who can be censed of the vncleane? What truth can be spoken of a lyar? Soothsayinge, witchcraft, sorcerye, and dreameinge is but vanitie: like as when a woman traualleth with childe, & hath many fantasies in her heart. Where as such visions come not of God sette not thine hearte vpon them: For dreames haue disceaused many a man, and they sayled, that put their trust therein. He lawe shalbe fulfilled withoute lyes, and wisdom is sufficient to a faithfull mouth. What knowledge hath he that is not tryed? A wise man that is well instrutte, vnderstandeth much: and he that hath no experience knoweth litle: and he that erreth, causeth much wickednes. He that is not tryed what thynges knoweth hee? Who so foloweth no rule, is ful of wickednes. When I was yet in erreure, I learned much also: yea, I was so learned, that I conlde not expelle it all, and came ofte in perill of death therfoze, til I was deliuered from it, thorough the grace of god: Now I see that they feare God haue the right spirit and without discretion do nothinge. • If thou haue a faythfull seruaut lette him be vnto thee as thyne owne soule: (intreate him as a brother: (for in bloud haste thou gotten him. If thou haue a seruante, holde him as thy selfe, for thou hast nede of him as of thy self. If thou intrestest him euill, and kepest him harde, and makest him to be proude and to renne away from thee, thou cannest not tell what way thou shalt seke him.

For they hope standeth in him, that can helpe theym. And the eyes of the Lord are on them that loue him. Who so feareth the Lord standeth in awe of no man, and is not afrayd, for the Lord is his hope and comforte. Blessed is the soule of him that feareth the Lord: In whom putteth he his trust: Who is his strengthe: For the eyes of the Lord haue respect vnto them that loue him. He is their mightie protection and stronge ground: A defence for the heate, a refuge for the hote noone day, a succour for stumbling, and an helpe for falling. He setteth vp the soule, and lightneth the eyes. He geueth life and blessing. He that geueth an offering of vnrighteous good, his offering is refused: and the scornfull dealings of the vnrighteous please not God. (The Lord is theirs onely that patiently abide him in the way of the trueth, and of righteousness. The highest doeth not allowe the giftes of the wicked.)

And • God hath no delite in the offerings of the vngodly, neither may sin be reconciled in the multitude of oblations. Who so byngeth an offering out of the goodes of the poore, dothe euen as one that killeth the sonne before the fathers eyes. The bread of the needfull is the life of the poore: he that defraudeth him thereof, is a manne of blood. Who so robbeth his neighbour of his lyving, dothe as great a synne, as though he slewe him to death. • He that defraudeth the laborer of his hire is a bloodshedder. When one buildeth and another breaketh downe, what profit haue they then but labour? When one prayeth, and another curseth, whose voyce wil the Lord heare? • He that washeth him selfe because of a deaddody, and then toucheth the dead agayne, what dothe his washynge? • So is it with a man that fasteth for his synnes, and dothe them agayne: Who wil heare his prayer? Or what doth his fasting helpe him?

VWho so kepeth the lawe byngeth offerings ynoughe. He that holdeth fast the commaundement, offereth the right health offering. He that is thankfull, and recompenseth, offereth synne flower. • Who so is mercifull and geueth almes, that is the right thankeoffering. God hath pleasure when one departeth from synne, and to forlake vnrighteousnes, reconyleth vs with him. • Thou shalt not appere empty before the Lord, for all suche is doone because of the commaundement of God. • The offeringe of the righteous maketh the altar fatte, and a swete smell is it before the high. The offeringe of the righteous is acceptable vnto God, and shall neuer be forgotten. Geue God his honour with a cherefull hart, and kepe not backe the fyrlings of thy handes. • In all thy giftes shewe a mercifull countenance, and halowe thy tythes vnto God with gladnes. Geue vnto God according as he hath enriched and prospered thee: and loke what thyne hand is able, geue with a cherefull eye: for the Lord recompenseth, and geueth thee seven times as muche agayne. Geue no vnrighteous giftes, for suche will he not receyue. Beware of wrongfull offerings, for the Lord is a righteous Judge, and regardeth no mans person. He accepteth not the person of the poore, but he heareth the prayer of the oppressed. • He despyseth not the desyre of the fatherlesse, nor the wydowe, when shee poureth oute her prayer before him. Doothe not God see the teares that renne downe the cheekes of the widdowe? Or heareth he not the complaynt ouer suche as maketh her to weepe. For from her cheekes doo the teares go vp vnto heauen, and the Lord whiche heareth them, dooth accepte them: Who so serueth God after his pleasure, shall be accepted, and his prayer reacheth vnto the cloudes. • The prayer of him that humbleth him selfe, goeth thorough the cloudes til he come nye: he will not be comforted, nor go her way.

And the Lord will not be slacke in comming, nor tary longe: till he haue smitten in sunder the backes of the vnmercifull, and auenged him selfe of the Heathen: till he haue taken away the multitude of the cruell, and broken the scepter of the vnrighteous, till he geue enery man after his woorks, & reward them after their doinges, till he haue deliuered his people, maynteyned their cause, and reioyced them in his mercy. O howe saye a thing is mercy in the time of anguish and trouble: It is lyke a cloude of of rayne that commeth in the time of a drought.

H Aue mercy vpon vs, O Lord, thou God of all things. Haue respect vnto vs, shewe vs the light of thy mercies, and send thy feare among the hethen and strangers, whiche seeke not after thee, that they may knowe, howe that there is no God but thou, and that they may shewe thy wonderous woorks. Lift vp thyne heade ouer the outlandishe Hethen, that they may lerne to knowe thy mighte and power. I lyke as thou art halowed in vs before the, so bring to passe, that thou maiest be magnified also in them before vs: that they may knowe thee, lyke as we knowe thee. For there is none other God, but onely thou O Lord. Renewe the tokens, and chaunge the wonderous woorks. Shewe thyne hand, and thy righte hande gloriously. Rayse vp thy indignation, and poure out thy wrath Take away the aduersarie, and smite the enemy. Make the time shorte, remember thy couenant, that thy wonderous woorks may be prayfed. Lette the wrath of the fyre consume them that liue so carelesse: and let them perishe that do thy people hurte. Smite in sunder the head of the princes, that be our enemies, and say there is none other but we. Gather all the tribes of Iacob agayne, that they may know how that there is none other God but onely thou, that they maye shewe thy wonderous woorks, and be thou thy peoples heritage, lyke as from the beginning. O Lord haue mercy vpon thy people that hath thy name, and vpon Israell, whom thou hast lykened to a fyrr bozne sonne. O be mercifull vnto Ierusalem, the cite of thy Sanctuarie, the cite of thy rest. Fill vpon with thy vnspokeable vertues, and thy people with thy glozpe. Geue witnes vnto thy creature, whom thou madest from the beginning, and rayse vp the prophetes that haue bene shewed in thy name. Rewarde theym that saye for thee, that thy prophetes maye be founde saythefull. O A D R D E heare the prayer of thy seruantes, according to the blessing of Aaron ouer thy people, (and gude thou vs in the way of righteousness) that all they whiche dwell vpon the earthe maye knowe, that thou arte the Lord the eternal G O D, which is from euertlasting. The belly deuoureth all meates, yet is one meate better then an other. C Like as the tongue tasteth benyson, so dothe an heart of vnderstandinge marke false woordes. A froward heart getteth heuynes, but a manne of experience lysteth him vppe agayne. The woman receyuethe enery man, yet is one daughter better thenne an other. I saye wyfe reioycest her husband, and a man loneth nothing better. If she be louing and vertuons withall, then is not her husbände lyke other men. He that hath gotten a vertuons woman, hath a goodly possession: she is vnto him an helpe, and pyller, wher vpon he resteth. Where no hodge is, there the gooddes are spoiled, and wher no huswife is, there the trennelle mourneth. I lyke as there is no credence given to a robber, that goeth from one cite to another: So is not the man beleued, that hath no rest, and muste tourne in, wher he may abyde in the nighte.

The xxxvii. Chapter.

Every frende sayeth: I will be frendlye vnto him also. But there is some frend, whiche is onely a frend in name. Rema-neth there not heines vnto deth, whē a companion and frend is turned to an enemye? Most wicked presumption: from whence arte thou sponge bp, to couer the earth with falshoode and disceite? There is some companion whiche in prosperitie reioyceth with his frende: but in the time of trouble, he taketh parte agaynst him. Ther is some companion that mourneth with his frend for the belly sake, but when trouble commeth, he taketh hold of the shield. Forget not thy fred in thy mynde, and thinke vpon him in thy riches. Seke no counsell at thy kinsmen, and hide thy counsell from suche as beare thee no good will. Eccl. 6. b Eccl. 8. c.
Eccl. 9. f.
Every counsellor bringeth sooth his counsell. Neuertheless, there is some that counsaileth, but for his own profite. Beware of the counsellor, and be aduised afoze whereto thou wilt vse him, for he will counsell for himselfe. Lest he cast the lot vpon thee, and sape vnto thee: Thy waye and purpose is good, and after ward he stand agaynst thee, and looke what shall become of thee. Aske no counsell at him that suspecteth thee for an enemy, and hyde thy counsell from suche as hate thee.

Aske no counsell at a woman concerning the thinges that he longeth for, nor at a feareful and saynt hearted body, in matters of warre: or at a war-chaunt how deare he will cheape thy swares toward his: or at a byer, of selling: Or at an enuious man, of than-kesgeuing: Or at the vnmereyfull, of louing kindnes: Or (at the vn honest man, of honestie.) Or at the slothful, of working: Or at an hyeling whiche hath no house, or profit or welth. A ydle body would not gladly here speake of much labour. Take no such folkes to counsell, but be diligente to seke counsell at a vertuous man that feareth God, suche one as thou kno-west to be a keeper of the commaundementes, which hath a minde after thine owne minde, and is sozpe for thee when thou stumblest. And holde thy counsell faste in thine heart: for there is no man moze saythful to kepe it, then thou thy selfe. For a mannes minde is sometime moze disposed to tell out, then euen watchemenne that sit aboue in an hye place loking about theym. And aboue all this, praye the hyest, that he will leade thy waye in faithfulnes and truty. Befoze all thy wozkes aske counsell first: and oz euer thou doest any thinge, be well aduysed. There be foure thinges that declare a chaunged heart, wherout there springeth euill and good, deathe and lyfe, and a maiesterfull tonge that babbleth much. Some man is apt & well instruct in many thinges, and yet very vnprofitable vnto himselfe. Some man there is that can geue wise and prudent counsell, and yet is he hated, and cotinueth a begger: for that grace is not geuen him of God to be accepted. In other is robbed of all wise-dome, yet is he wise vnto him selfe, and the fruite of vnderstandinge is commendable in his mouth. A wise manne maketh his people wise, and the fruites of his wisdome saple not.

A wise man shalbe plentiously blessed of God: and all they that see him, shall speake good of him. The lyfe of manne standeth in the number of the dayes, but the dayes of Israel are innumerable. A wise man shall obtayne faithfulnes and credence amonge his people, and his name shall be perpetual. My son, proue thy soule in thy lyfe, and yf thou see any euill thinge, geue it not vnto her. For all thinges are not profitable for all men, neither hath enery soul pleasure in euery thing We not gredey in euery eating, and be not hasty vpon al meates. For excelle of meates bringeth sickness, and gluttonie cometh at the last to an vnmea-surable heate. Thorough surfete haue many one perished, but he that dieteth him selfe temperatly, prolongeth his lyfe.

Honoure the Whisition, ho-noure him because of necessitie. God hath created him (for shall receaue giftes of the king. The wisedome of the Whisition bringeth him to great worship, and in the sight of the greates men of this worlde, he shall be honozably taken. The Lord hath created medicine of the earth, and he that is wise, will not abhorre it.

Was not the bitter water made swete with a tree: that men might learne to knowe the vertue thereof. The Lord hath geuen men wisedome and vnder-standing, that he might be honoured in his wonderous workes. With such doeth he heale men, and taketh awaye their paynes. Of such doeth the Apotecarye make a confection, yet can no man perfourme all his workes. For of the Lord cometh prosperous welth ouer all the earth. My sonne despise not this in thy sicknes, but pray vnto the Lord, and hee shall make thee whole. Leauie off from sinne, and order thy handes arighte, cleanse thyne heart from all swickednesse. Geue a swete sauoured offering, and the fyne floure for a token of remembraunce: make the offering fat, as one that geueth the first frutes, and geue rowm to the Whisition. For the Lord hath created him, let him not go from thee, for thou haste nede of him. The houre may come, that the sick may be helped through them, when they praye vnto the Lord, that he may recouer and get health to liue longer. He that sinneth handes of the Whisition. My sonne, bring forth the teares ouer the dead and begin to mourne, as if thou haddest suffered great harme thy selfe, and then couer his body after a conuenient maner, and despise not his burpall.

ty greueth the heart in temptation and dyeue it awaye, and remember the last thinges. Forget it not, for there is no turning agayne. Thou shalt doo him no good, but hurte thy selfe. Remember his iudgement, thine also, shalbe likewise: vnto me yester day, vnto thee to day. Let the remembraunce of the dead cease in his rest, and comfort thy selfe agayne ouer him, seeing his spirit is departed from him. The wisedome of the scribe is at conuenient tyme of reste, and he that ceaseth from exercise and labour, shalbe wise. He that holdeth the ploughe, and hath pleasure in plodding, and dyuinge the oxen, and goeth about with such workes, he can spake of oxen: He setteth his heart to make sowes, and is diligent to geue the kyne fodder. So is euery carpenter also and workemaster, that labour-eth still night & day, he carueth, graueth, cutteth out, and his desire is in sundry cunning thinges, his heart pe-magineth, how he may cunningly caste an ymage, his diligence also and watching perfourmeth the worke. The prousmith in lyke maner bideth by his stithye, and doeth his diligence to laboure the yron. The vapoure of the fire brenneth his fleshe, and he must fghte with the heate of the fornae.

The noyse of the hammer soundeth euer in his eares, and his eyes looke still vpon the thing that he maketh.
He hath set his minde ther vpon, that he wil make out his worke, and therefore he watcheth howe he maye set it out, and bring it to an ende. So doeth the potter sitte by his worke, he turneth the wheele aboute with his fete, he is diligent and careful in al doings and his labour and worke is without number. He fashioneth the clay with his arme, and with his fete he tempereth it. His heart ymagineth how he may make it pleasaunte, and his diligence is to cleanse the oven. All these hope in their handes, and enuerie one thinketh to be cunning in his worke.
Without these maye not the cities be maintained, inhabited nor occupied: yet they come not hye in the congregation neyther yet they vpon the iudgement seates: they vnderstand not the conuenant of the law: they can not declare equity & iudgment: they can not finde out the dark sentences, but thorow the shal the creature of the world be maintained, their prayer conserueth only in worke and labour of cunning.

The xxxix. Chapter.

HE that appieth his minde to vnderstande the lawe of God, dothe diligently seeke out the wisdom of them of the olde time, & exerciseth him selfe in the Prophetes. He kepeth the sayings of famous men and preaseth to the vnderstanding of darke sentences of wisdom. He seeth out the misterie of secrete sayings, and exerciseth him self therein continually. He doth seruice among great men, and appeareth befoze the prince. He goeth into a straunge country, and traueyleth thorow it: loke what good or euill is among men, he proueth it and sekereth it out. He purposeth in his heart, to resort earely vnto the Lorde that made him, and to praye befoze the hiest God. He openeth his mouth in prayer, and prayeth for his synnes. When the great Lorde will, he shal be fylled with the sprete of vnderstanding, that he may then poure out wise sentences, and geue thanks vnto the Lorde in his prayer. He shall order his deuiſe, and lead his knowledge aright and geue him vnderstanding of secrete thinges. He shall shewe forth the science of his learning, and reioyce in the conuenant of the law of the Lorde. The whole congregation shall commend his wisdom, and it shall neuer be put out. The remembrance of him shall neuer be forgotten, and his name shall continue from one generation to an other. His wisdom shall be spoken of among the peple, and the whole congregation shall openly declare his prayse. Whyle he lyueth, he hath a greater name then a thousande besyde: and after his death, the same name remayneth vnto him. Yet will

I speake of mo men of vnderstanding. for I am full as the Moone. Herken vnto me (ye holy vertuous childzen) bringe forth fruite, as the Rose that is planted by the brokes of the fildes, and geue ye a sweete smell as Libanus. Flourishe as the rose garland, syng a song of prayse. O geue thanks vnto God ouer all his workes. Geue glorie and honoz vnto the Lorde, shew his prayse with your lippes. Yea, euen with the songe of your lippes, with harpes and playing, and in geuing thanks vnto him, saye after this manner. All the workes of the Lorde are exceeding good, and all his commandments are mete and conuenient in due season. A man nedeth not to saye: what is that? what is that? for at time conuenient they shal all be sought. At his commaundement the water was as a wall, and at the worde of his mouth the water stode still. In his commaundement is euery thinge acceptable, and reconciled, and his heath can not be minished. The workes of all fleshe are befoze him, and there is nothing hid from his eyes. He seeth from euertlasting to euertlasting, and there is nothing to wonderfull or hye vnto him. A man nedeth not to saye then: what is this, or that? for he hath made all things to do good vnto man. His blessing shall runne ouer as the streame, and moysture the earth lyke a floode of water. As he maketh the water for drought, soo shall his wrath fall vpon the heathen. His waues are playne and righte vnto the iust, but the vngodly stumble at them. For the good, are good things created from the beginning, and euill thinges for the vngodly. All things necessary for the life of man, are created from the beginning, water, fyre, yron, and salte, meale, wheat, and hony, milke & wyne ople and clothing. At these things are created for the beste to the saythfull. But to the vngodly, shal al these thinges be turned to their hurt and harme. There be spirittes that are created for vengeance, and in their rigorouſnes haue they fastened their tormentes.

The teeth of wild noysome beastes, the scorpions, serpents, and the sword are created also for vengeance, to the destruction of the vngodly. They shall be glad to do his commaundementes, and when neede is, they shall be ready vpon earth: and when their houre is come, they shall not ouerpasse the commaundement of the Lorde. Therefore haue I taken a good courage vnto me from the beginning, and thought to put these thinges in writing, and to leaue them behind me. • All the woorkes of the Lorde are good, and he geueth euery one in due season, & when neede is, so that a man neede not to saye: This is worse then that. For in due season, they are all pleasant and good, and therefore prayse the Lorde with whole hert and mouth, and geue thanks vnto his name.

The. xl. Chapter.

A Great trouaile is created for all men, and an heuy yoke vpon all men childzen, from the day that they go out their mothers wombe, tyll they be buried in (the earthe) the mother of all thinges.

Namely their thoughtes and ymaginations, feare of the hert, counsel, meditations, longing and desyre, the day of death: from the hyst that sitteth vpon the glorious seate, vnto the lowest and mozte simple vpon the earth from him that is gorgeously arayde, and weareth a crowne, vntil him that is but homely and symple cloathed. There is nothing but wrath, zeale, fearefulness, vnquietnes, and feare of death, rigorous anger, and strife. And in the night, when one shoulde rest and slepe vpon his bed, the slepe chaungegeth his vnderstanding and knowledge. A litle or nothing is his rest in the sleepe, as well as in the daye of labour. He feareth, and is disquieted in the vision of his heart, as one that runneth oute of a batayle:

and in the time of health he awaketh and marueleth that the feare was no- thinge. Suche thinges happen vnto al flesh, both man and beast, but tenfold to the vngodly. Whereouer, death, bludshedding, strife and swearde, oppression, hunger, destruction and punishment: these thinges are al created agaynst the vngodly, and for their sakes came the floude also. • All that is of the earth shall turne to earth againe, and all waters ebbe agayne into the sea. All bribes and vnrighteousnes shall be put away, but faithfulness and truthe shall endure for ever. The substance and goods of the vngodly shall be dried by and sinke away as a water floud, and they shall make a sounde lyke a greate thonder in the rayne. Like as the righteous reioyseth when he openeth his hande, so shall the transgressours be faint, when their goodes vanishe and consume away. • The childzen of the vngodly shall not obtayne many branches, and the vnclene rootes vpon the highe rockes shall be rooted oute before the grasse by the water side, and vpon the ryuer bankes. Friendlines, and liberalite in the increase and blessing of God, is lyke a Paradise and garden of pleasure: such mercy also and kindness endureth for ever. To labour and to be contented with that a man hath, is a swete pleasant life: and that is to find a treasure aboue all treasures. To beget childzen and to repayre the cite, maketh a perpetual name: but an honest woman is moze worthy, then them bothe. Wine and minstrelly reioyce the heart, but the loue of wisdom is aboue theym bothe. Ppyng and harpinge make a swete noyse, but a frendly tonge goeth beyonde them both. • A hime eye desireth fauour and besotie, but a grene seede time, rather then they both. A frend and companie come together at oportunitie, but aboue them both is a wyfe that agreeth with her husbände. One brother helpeth another in the tyme of trouble, but almes shall deliuer moze then them both. Gold and siluer fasten the feet, fete, but a good counsell is moze pleasant then they both. Tempozall substaunce and strength lift vp the mind: but the feare of the Lord moze then they both. The seat of the Lord wanteth nothing, and nedeth no help. The feare of the Lord is a pleasant garden of blessing, and nothing so bewettable as it is. My sonne, leade not a beggers lyfe, for better it were to dye then to begge. Who so loketh to another mans table, taketh no thought for his owne liuing, howe to vphold his life, for he fedeth him selfe with other mennes meate. But a wise and well nourtured man will beware thereof. Begging is swete in the mouthe of the vnshamefast, but in his belly there burneth a fyre.

Death, howe bitter is the remembrance of thee, to a man that seeketh reste and comfort in his substance and ryches, vnto the man that hath nothing to vexe him, and that hath prosperitie in al thinges, yea, vnto hym that yet is able to receaue meate: O death, howe acceptable and good is thy iudgement vnto the nedefull, & vnto him whose strength faileth, and that is now in his late age, and that in all thinges is full of care and fearefulness: vnto him also that is in dyspayre, and hath no hope of patience: Be not thou afrayed of death: remember them that haue bene before thee, and that come after thee: this is the iudgement of the Lord ouer all fleshe. And whye wouldest thou be agaynst this pleasure of the dyest? whether it be ten, an hundred, or a thousande yeres, death asketh not howe long one hath lyued. The chyldren of the vngodly are abhominable chyldren, and soe are they that kepe company with the vngodly. The enuirtuance of vngodlye chyldren shall come to naught, and their posteritie shall haue perpetuall shame and confusion. The chyldren complayne of an vngodly father, and why? for his sake they are rebulged and despised. Who be they? O ye vngodly which haue forsaken the lawe of the dyest God: yf ye be bozne, ye shal be bozne to cursynge, yf ye dye, the curse shalbe your portion. All that is of the earth, shal turne to earth agayne: so go the vngodlye also out of the curse into destruction. The sorow of menne is their bodye: but the name of the vngodly shal be put oute, for it is nothinge woorth. Labour to get thee a good name, for that shall continue suer by thee, then a thousande great treasures of golde. A good life hath a number of days, but a good name endureth euer. My chyldren, kepe wisdom in peace: for wisdom that is hid, and a treasure that is not sene, what profite is in them bothe. A man that hydeth his foolishhenes, is better then a man that hideth his wisdom. Therfore be ye turned at my wordes: for it is not good, in all thinges, and alway to be ashamed. True sayth must proue and measure it. Be ashamed of whozdome, before father and mother: be ashamed of lesing, before the prince and men of aucthoritie: Of sinne, before the iudge and ruler. Of offence, before the congregation and people: Of vnrighteousnes, before a companion and frende: Of theste, before thy neyghbours. For the trueth of God and his couenaunt, be not ashamed thereof. Be ashamed to lye with thine elbowed vpon the bread: Be ashamed to looke vpon harlots: Be ashamed to turne away thy face from thy frende. Be ashamed to take and not to geue: Be ashamed also to loke vpon another mans wyfe, and to make manye tryflinge wordes with her mayden, or to stande by her bedside. Be ashamed to vpbreade thy frende: when thou guesst any thinge, calte him not in the teeth withall.

It is better to be with an euill manne, then with a frendely wyfe that putteth one to shame and rebuke. I will remember the weakes of the Lorde, and declare the thing that I haue seene. In the wordes of the Lorde are his workes. The sunne ouerlooketh all thinges with his shine, and all his Workes are full of the clerenes thereof. Hath not the Lorde brought to passe that his saintes should tell out all his wonderous workes whiche the Almighty Lorde hath stablished? Al thinges endure in his glozpe. He seareth out the grounde of the deepe, and the heart of men, and he knoweth al their ymagination and wisdom. For the Lorde knoweth all science, and he looketh into the token of the time. He declareth the thinges that are past, and for to come, and discloseth thinges that are secreete. • No thought maye escape him, neyther maye anye wyde be hid from him. He hath garnished the hye excellent workes of his wisdom, and he is from euerlasting to euerlasting. Vnto him maye nothing be added, neyther can he be minished, he hath no neede also of any mannes counsell. • Howe amiable are all his workes, and as a sparke to loke vpon? They ipe all, and endure for euer, and whensoever neede is, they are all obedient vnto him. They are all double, one agaynst another: he hath made nothing that hath faulte or blemish. • He hath stablished the goodes of euery one: and who maye be satisfied with his glozpe, when he seeth it?
The xliij. Chapter.

The glozpe of the height, is the saye and cleere firmament, the bewty of the heuen is his glorious clearenes. The sunne when it appeareth, declareth the day in the going out of it, a marueylous worke of the hiest. At noone it burneth the erth and who may abide for the heate thereof? Who so keepeth an ouen when it is whote, three times more dothe the sunne burne vpon the mountaines, when it breatheth out the ferye bemes and shineth, with the brightnes of it, it blindeth the eyes. Greater is the Lorde that made it, and in his commandement he causeth it to runne hastily. • The moone also is in all, and at convenient season it sheweth the tymes, and is atoken of the time. • The robe of the solempne feast is taken of the spoone, a hyght that satisfieth and increaseth agayne. The month is called after the Moone, it groweth wonderfully in her changing. The armye of heauen also is the height in the firmamente of heauen it getteth a cleare and glorious shine. This is the cleanness of the starres, the bewtiful apparel of heauen, the apparel that the Lord lighteth in the heygth. In his holpe worke they continue in the order, and not one of them faileth in his watch.

Gen. 9. d. • Looke vpon the rayne bowe, and prayse him that made it: very bewtiful is it in his shyne. Hee compasseth the heauen about with his clerenesse and glory, the hands of the hysell haue benuded it. Through his commaundement he maketh the snowe to fall, and the thonder of his iudgement to smite hastely. Through his commaundement the treasures are opened, and the cloudes flye as the foules. In his power hath he strengthened the cloudes, and broken the hyle stones. He mountaynes melt at the sight of him the winde bloweth accordyng to his will. The sounde of his thonder beareth the earth, and so doeth the storme of the North: the whirle winde also lighteth downe as a feathered foule, casteth oute and spreadeth the snowe abroad: and as the grethoppers that destroye all, so falleth it downe. The eye marueyleth at the bewtye of the whyteneesse thereof, and the harte is strayed at the rayne of it. He poureth out the frost vpon earth, like salt, and when it is frosen, it is as sharpe as the picke of a thulle. When the cold north wind bloweth, hard Chyshall cometh of the water. He lighteth downe vpon all the gatheringes together of water, and putteth on the waters as a hysell plate. He deuoureth the mountaynes, and burneth the wyldernes: and loke what is grene he putteth it out like fire. The medicine of all these is, when a cloud cometh hastely, and when a dewe cometh vpon the heate, it shalbe refreshed agayne. In his woordes he stilleth the winde: In his counceill he setteth the deepe, and (the Lord) Iesus planted it. They that sayle ouer the sea, tell of the perilles and harmes thereof, and when wee heare it with oure eares, we maruel therat. For they be strange wonderous woordes, diuerse maner of nice beastes and whale fishes.

Through him are all thinges sette in good order, and performed, and in his woordes all thinges endure. I speake much, but I can not sufficiently attayne vnto it, for he him selfe onely is the perfection of all his woordes. D We shoulde prayse the Lord after all oure power, for he is greates in all his woordes. The Lord is to be feared, yea very great is he, and maruelous in his power. Prayse the Lord, and magnify him as muche as ye maye: yet doth he farre excede al prayse. D magnify him with all your power, & labour earnestly, yet are ye in no wise able sufficiently to prayse him. • Who hath sene him, that he might tell vs: who can magnify him so greatly as he is: for there are hid yet greater thinges then these be: as for vs, we haue sene but fewe of his woordes. For the Lord hath made al thinges, and giuen wisdom to such as feare God.

enemies, withhelde the people from synne, and killed the wicked murmuring. And of sixe hundred thousande people of foote, they two were preserved, to bringe them into the heritage, namely, a lande that floweth with mylke and honye. • The Lorde gaue strength also vnto Caleb, whiche remayned with him vnto his age: so that he wente by into his place of the lande, and his seede conquered the same for an heritage: that all the children of Israell might see, howe good a thing it is, to be obedient vnto the Lorde. And the iudges of rulers, (euery one after his name) whose heart went not a whozing, nor departed from the Lorde, and that forsoke not the Lorde vnfaythfully, whose remembraunce hath a good reporte. Yea their bones flourish out of their place: & their names shall neuer be changed, (but honour remaineth still with the children of those holy men.) Samuell the prophet beloued of the Lorde his God, ordeined a king, and annointed the princes ouer þe people. In the law of the Lord ruled he, & iudged the congregation, and the Lorde had respecte vnto Jacob. The prophet was found diligent in his faithfulness: yea, and he is knowne faithfull in his wordes, because he sawe the God of light. • He called vpon the Lord the almighty, when the enemies pleased vpon him on euery syde, what tyme as he offered the suckinge lambes. And the lord thondred from heuen, & made his voyce to be heard with a great noyse. He discomfited the princes of Egipte, and all the rulers of the Philistines. • Before his laste ende he made protestation in the sight of the Lorde, and his annointed, that he tooke neyther substaunce nor good of any man, no not so much as a shoe, and no manne might accuse him. After this he tolde, that his ende was at hande, and shewed the king also his end and death, and from the earthe yfte he vypp his voice in the prophesie, that the vngodly people should perishe.

Afterward in the time of king David, there rose vp a prophet called Nathan: for like as the fat is taken away from the offering, so was David chosen out of the children of Israell. He tooke his pastyme with the lions, as with kiddes, and with bears lyke as with lambes. • Shewe he not a gyant when he was yet but yong, and toke awaye the rebuke from his people: what time as he toke the stone in his hande, and smote downe proude Goliath with the sling? For he called vpon the hiest Lorde, whiche gaue him strength in his righte hande, so that he ouerthrewe the mighty giunt in the battaile, that he might sette by the hozne of his people agayne. • Thus brought he him to worship aboue all princes, and made him to haue a good reporte in the prayse of the Lord, that he shoulde weare a crowne of glorie. • For he destroyed the enemies on euery syde, rooted out the Philistines his aduersaries, and brake their hozne in sunder, like as it is broken yet this day. In all his workes he prayed the hiest and holiest, and ascribed the honour vnto him. With his whole herte did he prayse the Lorde and loued him that made him. • He set syngers also before the alter, and in their tyme he made sweete songes. He ordeyned to kepe the holy daies worshipfully, and that the soleinne feastes throught the whole yere should be honorable holden, with prayspunge the name of the Lorde, and with synging betwixen in the morning in the Sanctuarie. • The Lorde toke awaye his synnes, and exalted his hozne for ever. He gaue him the couenant of the kyngdome, and the throne of worshippe in Israell. • After him there rose by the wyse sonne called Salomon, and for his sake he droue the enemies awaye far of. This Salomon reigned with peace in his tyme (for God gaue him rest from his enemies on euery syde, that he might build him an house in his name, and prepare the Sanctuarie for ever) lyke as hee was well

Instruct in his yowth, and filled with wisdomme and vnderstandinge, as it were a water floud. He couered & filled the whole lande with similitudes and wise prouder sentences. His name went abroad in þe Isles, because of his peace he was beloued. All lands meruailed at his songes, prouerbes, similitudes, and at his peace, & at the name of the Lord God, which is called the God of Israel. He gathered gold as tinne, and he had made as much siluer as lead. He was moued in inordinate loue toward women, and was ouer-come in affection. He slayned his ho-noure and worship, yea his posteritie defiled he also, in bringing the wrath of the Lord vpon his children, and so-rowe after his daye: so that his kingdome was decided, and Ephraim be-cam an vnfaithful and an vncon-stant kingdome. He neuertheless God forsoke not his mercy, nether was he vtterly destroyed because of his workes, that he should leaue him no posterity.
As for the seede that came vpon him, which he loued, he brought it not vtterly to naughte, but gaue yet a remnant vnto Jacob, & a roote vnto Da-uid out of him. Thus rested Salomō with his fathers, and out of his seede he left behinde him a very foolishnes of the people, and suche one as hadde no vnderstanding: cūe. Roboā, whiche turned awaye the people through his counceyl: and Jeroboam the sonne of Nabat, whiche caused Israel to sinne, & shewed Ephraim the way of vngodlynes: In so muche that their sinnes and misdeedes had the vpper hande so sore, that at the last they wer dynen out of the lande for the same.
Yea, he sought out and brought vppe all wickednes, till the vengeaunce came vppon them.

The xlvij. Chapter.

Then stode vp. Elias the Prophet as a fyre, and his woorde went like a cresset. He brought an hunger vpon them, and in his zeale he made them fewe in number. For they might not awaye with the commaundements of the Lord. Through the woorde of the Lord he shut the he-uen, & thre times brought he the fyre down. Thus becam Elias honorable in his wonderous deedes. Who maye make his boast to be like him?

One that was drede rayled he vppe from deathe, and in the woord of the hpest he brought him out of the graue again. He cast downe kinges and destroyed them, and the honorable from their seate. Vppon the mount Sina he heard the punishment, and vppon Horeb the iudgement of the venge-aunce. He prophesied recompencing vnto kings, & ordeyned prophetes after him. He was taken vp in the skyme of fyre, in a charet of horses of þe Lord.
He was ordeyned in the reprobings in time, to pacify the wrath of the Lord, to turne the herts of the fathers vnto the children, and to set vp the tribes of Jacob agayne. Blessed were they that sawe the, and were garnished in loue: for we liue in life (but after deeth we shall haue no such name). Elias was couered in the skyme, but Heliseus was filled with his spirite.
While he liued, he was afraide of no prince, and no man might overcome him. There coulde no woorde deceyue him, and after his deathe, his bodye was prophesied. He did wonders in his life, and in deathe were his woordes meruailous. For all this, the people amended not, neither departed they from their sinnes, till they were ca-ryed awaye prisoners out of the lande, and were scattered abroad in all coun-treys, so that of them there remained but a very litle people, and a prince vnto the house of David. Howbeit, some of them did right, and some heaped vp vngodlynes. Hzekias made his citie stronge, conueyed water into it, digged through the stony rocke with yron, & made vp a wel by þe water side. In his time cam Sennacherib vp, & sent Rabshakes to lift vp his had against Sion, & defied the with gret pride. Then trembled their heartes and hands, so that they sorowed like a woman trauailing with childe.

C The .xlj. Chapter.
The remembraunce of • Josias is like as when the Apothecary maketh manye pzeious sweete smellinginge thinges together. His remembraunce shalbe swete as honny in all mouthes, & as the playng of Musike at a banket of wine. He was appointed to turne the people agayne, & to take away al abominations of the vngodly. He directed his hearte vnto the Lord, and in the tyme of the vngodlye he set vp the worshippe of God agayne. All kinges (except Dauid, Iezekias and Josiah) committed wickednes, for euen the kinges of Iuda also forsake the law of God. For they gaue their hozars vnto other, their honoure and worship also to a strange people. Therfoze was the elect Citie of the Sanctuary bzent with fyre, • and the stretes therof lay desolate and wast, for they intreated Jeremy euill, which neuer thelesse was a Prophete ordeyned from his mothers wombe, that he might rote out, breake of, • and destroy: and that he might builde vp and plant agayne. • Ezechiel saw the glory of the Lord in a vision, which was shewed him vpon the charette of the Cherbins. For he thought vpon the enemyes in the rayne, to do good vnto such as had ordezed their wayes aright. And the bones of the twelue prophetes flourish from out of their place, for they gaue confort and consolation vnto Jacob, and deliuered the faythfull ye. • Howe shall we prayse Jozobabell, which was a ringe in the right hand? • So was Iesus also the sonne of Iosedec: these men in their times builded the house and set vp the Sanctuary of the Lord again, which was prepared for an euerlasting worship. • And Nehemias is alway to be commended, • which set vp for vs the walles that were broken down, made the portes and barres agayne, & builded our houses of the new. • But vpon earth is there no man created like Enoch, for he was taken vp from the earth. • And Joseph, which was lord of his byethzen, and the vpholder of his people: his bones were couered and kepte. Seth and Sem were in great honoure among the people, and so was Adam about all the beastes, when he was created.

C The .l. Chapter.
Simeon • the sonne of Onias the hye priest, whiche in his lyfe set vp the house agayne, and in his dayes made faste the temple. The heygth of the temple also was founded of him, the double buildinge, and the hye walles of the temple. In his daies the welles of water flowed out and were exceeding full as the sea. He toke care for his people, and deliuered them from destruction. He kepte his Citie and made it strong, that it shold not be besieged. He dwelte in honour and worshippe amonge his people, and enlarged the entraunce of the house, and the courte. He gaue lighte as the morninge starre in the middert of the cloudes, and as the mone when it is full. He shined as the sunne in the temple of God. He is as brighte as the raine bow in the saye cloudes, and flourishd as the floures and reles in the springe of the yere, and as
